And that we worshyp Saintes for feare lest they should be displeased and angry with vs and plague vs or hurt vs, as who is not afrayed of S. Laurence? who dare denye. S. Anthony a flese of woll for feare of his terrible fire or lest hee sende the pore among our shepe) is heathē imageseruice & cleane agaynst the first cōmaundement which is. Heare Israell, the Lord thy God is one God. Now God in the Hebrew is called El or Elohim in the plurall nūber, strength or might. So that the cōmaundement is, Heare Israell he that is thy power and might, thy swoorde & shield is but one, that is, there is none of might to helpe or hurt the saue one, whiche is all together thyne and at thy commaundemēt if thou wilt heare his voyce. And all other might in the world, is borowed of hym. And he will lend no might agaynst the contrary to his promises: keepe therefore his commaundemeuues and he shall kepe thee. And if thou haue broken them, and he haue lent of his power agaynst thee, repent and come agayne vnto thy profession and he will returne agayne vnto his mercy & fetch his power home agayne, which he lent to vexe thee, because thou forsookest hym and brakest his commaundementes. And feare no other creature, for false feare is ỹ cause of all Idolatrie.

If we harken to the voyce of God, he is mighty and of power to helpe vs.

Moreouer all we that are Baptised in Christ haue professed to do good for euil and not to auenge our selues. And many of vs come vnto such perfection that we can be prouoked by no temptation to desire vengeaunce, but haue compassion and meekely pray for them that slay vs.

We must do good for euill.

How wicked a thyng then is it to thinke that the Saintes plague vs, because we do thē not such superstitious honour whiche is their dishonour and our shame? It is verely a popish imagination, & euē to describe the Saintes after the nature of our Prelates which be meeke and lowly till they be where they would be. But when they be once a loft they play the tormentours if we will not honour them and do whatsoeuer they commaunde, more earnestly then that whiche God him selfe hath commaunded, and feare them aboue God hym selfe.

A popish imagination

And it can be but like abhommination also, that we choose of a fleshly mynde euery man his seueral Saint or rather seuerall God, to be our aduocates, attorneys, mediatours (when there is but one. i. Timo. ij.) and intercessours, and call them our aduourys, whē we might better call them our adulterers, and serue thē or rather a paynted post in their stede, with our imageseruice, therwith to bynde them for to helpe vs whēsoeuer and for whatsoeuer we call vnto them, and to saue our soules ther to with their prayers and merites, and will yet neither heare ỹ doctrine or folow the exāple of liuing (which is their onely honour in the spirite of any saint whose doctrine & liuyng is autentike.

Aduourtes.

Idolatry.

For

God hath promised to geue vs whatsoeuer we aske in Christes name, & for Christes sake.

For first, God whiche alone hath power to helpe or hurt, hath made appointment betwixt hym & vs in Christes bloud and hath bound hymselfe to giue vs whatsoeuer we aske in hys name, testifyng therto that there is no other name to be saued by; and that he wilbe a father vnto vs & saue vs both in this lyfe and in the lyfe to come, and take vs from vnder the damnation of the law, and set vs vnder grace & mercy, to bee scholers onely to learne the law, and that our vnperfect dedes shal be taken in worth, yea and though at a tyme we marre all through our infirmitie, yet if we turne agayne, that shal be forgeuen vs mercifully, so that we shalbe vnder no damnation: which testament is confirmed with signes and wonders wrought thorough the holy ghost. Now this indented obligation layde apart, we make an other of our owne imaginatiõ betweene the Saints and vs, in their merites for our image seruice. which can be but a false fayth, seyng it hath not Gods woorde (vnto which alone we ought to cleaue) but is also cleane contrary therto.

The saintes were not saued by their owne merites, but by Christes merites.

And agayne the Saintes were not saued through their owne merites, but through Christes. Neither were their dedes which they dyd after they were receaued vnder grace sufficiẽt in them selues to fulfill the law for the present time, saue as Christes merites did supply ỹ imperfectnes of thẽ, and ỹ which was lackyng on their part thorough their infirmities. And therefore as the Saintes holy workes made no satisfaction for the sinne they dyd before they were receaued vnder mercy, euen so made they none for the deadly synnes which they did vnder mercy: seyng the dedes were vnperfect, and had sinne annexed vnto thẽ by reason of the flesh, and were insufficient to excuse theyr owne maisters. What merites haue they in store for vs then, seeing by all mens confession they now merite not? If the most obedient child in the world disobey his fathers cõmaundementes, his fore good deedes cannot make that disobedience no sinne, or to be a satisfaction, that the childe should presume in the confidence of his olde dedes, and think his father should do him wrong to punishe him. But hee must knowledge his fault, and that he hath deserued punishmente, and desire forgeuenes, vnto the glory of his fathers mercifulnesse, and not of his olde dedes, though his olde obedience be a great presumption that he sinned of frailtye, and not of purpose. Euen so if I being as holy as euer was Paul in his most holinesse, sinne this day thorough the frailtie of my flesh, mine olde dedes cã be no satisfaction: but I must knowledge my sinne vnto my Father, and graunt that I haue deserued damnation, and meekly desire forgeuenes, and challenge it by the obligation, wherin God hath bound him selfe to me, vnto the glory of the mercy of God, & not to the glory of my holy dedes: for if my dedes saue me, it is my glory. But if he forgeue vs freely without respect of my dedes, then it is the glory of hys mercye, by Paules doctrine vnto the Romanes.

The Angels serue vs.

Moreouer if the saintes be in heaue, then can they be there in none other case then the Aungels, in which state Christ testifyeth they shall be in the resurrection. Now the Angels are ministers sent of God, to do seruice vnto the electe, which shall be saued. Heb. 1. And God hath bound himself, that if I come in the right way, by the dore of Christes bloud and aske helpe, that he will send me if need be, an hundred legions of Angels or saintes. But when God hath bound himself to sende me angels or saintes, or an angell or saint, he hath not promised to send this Angell or that, or this or that sainte. And therfore when I appoynt God whom he shall send, and binde him, where he hath not bound himselfe, to sende me what sainte I will, I tempt God. And thus this chosing of seuerall saintes is but tempting of God. And yet wee do worse then this: for we leaue ỹ way of Christs bloud, & go not to God thorgh him: but run to the saintes in a testament of our owne making, and will that they eyther saue vs themselues for our imageseruice, or compell God for merites sake to saue vs. why goest thou not vnto thy Father thine owne selfe? I am a sinner, will they say, and dare not. If thou go in the right way, thou hast no sinne. Christ hath taken all thy sinnes from thee, and God hath no rod in his hand, nor looketh sowre, but merily, that it is a lust to beholde his chearfull countenance, and offreth thee his hande. But this way is stopped vp through vnbeleefe, and therefore we seek an other which is no way to life, but vnto euerlasting death. We will not looke on the law with open eyes, and therfore haue we no due repentaunce, and so no lust to harken vn to the gospell of glad tydings in Christes bloud. And where the right way is set before vs, and we of malice will not walke therin, God can not but let the deuil play with vs, and iuggle our eyes to confirme vs in blindnesse.

Howe Christ prayeth for vs

But after what maner doth Christ pray for vs? Verily Christ in the dayes of his mortall flesh suffred and prayed for all that shal be saued, and obtayned and was heard, and had his petitions graunted. And he made satisfaction, & purged, and purchased forgeuenes, euē then for all the sinne that euer shall be forgeuen: And his praying for vs, and being a mediatour now, is that the remembraunce of all that he did for vs, is present in the sight of God the Father, as fresh as the houre he did them, yea the same houre is yet present, and not past in the sight of God. And Christ is now a King, and raigneth, and hath receaued power of all that he prayed for, to do it himselfe. And that whensoeuer the elect cal for ought in his name he sendeth help euē of ỹ power which he hath receaued: yea ere they aske, he sendeth his spirit into their harts to moue them to aske. So that it is his gift that we desire ought in his name. And in all that we do or thinke well, he preuēteth vs with his grace: yea he careth for vs, ere we care for our selues, and when we were yet euill, he sendeth to call vs, & draweth vs with such power that our hartes cannot but consent and come. And the Angels stande by, and behold the testament of the elect, how we shall be receiued into their fellowshippe, and see all the grace that Christ shall poure out vpon vs. And they reioyce and prayse God for his infinite mercy, and are glad, and long for vs, & of very loue are ready against all houres whē we shall call for help in Christes name, to come & helpe. And Christ sendeth them whē we cal in his name, and ere we call, euen while we be yet euill, and happely persecute the truth of ignorance, as Paule did, the Angels wayte vpon vs to keepe that the deuils slay vs not, before the time of our calling be come.

Christ is a kyng and hath power him selfe to forgeue vs, and to receaue vs vnto hym selfe.

All the blessed company of heauē reioyse and are glad to haue vs to be with them, that we might ioye together.

Now if an Angell shoulde appeare vnto thee, what wouldest thou say vnto him? If thou prayedst him to helpe, he would aunswere: I do. Christ hath sent me to helpe, and beleeue that the Angels be euer about thee to helpe. If thou desiredst him to pray for thee to obtayne this or that, he woulde say: Christ hath prayed, and his prayer is heard for whatsoeuer thou askest in his name, and woulde shewe thee all that God woulde do to thee, and what he would also haue thee to do: and if thou beleeuest, so were thou safe. If thou desiredst him to saue thee with his merites. He would aunswer that he had no merites: but that Christ onely is Lord of all merites: not saluation, but that Christ is Lord of saluation. Wilte thou therfore be saued by merits, wold the Aungell say: then pray to God in Christes name, and thou shalt be saued by the merites of him, and haue me or some other thy seruaunt immediatlye to help thee vnto the vttermost of our power, and to keep thee and bring thee vnto the rewarde of his merrites. If thou wouldest promise him to worship him with imageseruice, that is, to sticke vp a candle before his image, or such an image as he appeared to thee in. He would aunswer that he were a spirite, and delighted in no candleight but would bid thee geue a cādle to thy neighbour that lacked, if thou hadst to many. And so would he aunswer thee if thou wouldest put money in a boxe for him, or cloth his image in cloth of gold, or put golden shoes vpon his Images feete. If thou saydest that thou wouldest build a chappel in his name, he would aunswer that he dwelt in no house made with stones, but wold bid thee goe to the churches that are made already, and learne of the Preachers there how to beleeue, and how to liue, and honour God in the spirite, for the which cause churches were chiefly buildeded, and for quietnesse to pray. And if there be no church, then to geue of that thou maist spare to help that one were builded to be a preaching and a praying house, and of worshipping God in the spirite, and not of imageseruice.

Christ prayeth for vs and hys prayer is heard.

Imageseruice is abhorred of God.

God hateth superstition.

Churches were ordeined for preachyng and callyng on the name of God.

And if Paule appeared vnto thee, what other thing could he aunswer also, then that he were a spirite, & would refuse all thy imageseruice. And if thou speake to Paule of his merites, he can none otherwise aunswer thee, then he aunswered his Corinthians: That he dyed for no mans sinnes, and that no mā was baptized in his name to trust in his merites. He would say, I builded all men vppon Christes merites: preaching that all that repented and beleued in his name, should be saued, and taken from vnder the wrath, vengeaunce, and damnation of the law, & be put vnder mercy and grace. And by this fayth was I saued from damna-tion, and put vnder mercy and grace, and made one with Christ, to haue my part with him, and he with me, or rather to make a chainge that he shoulde haue all my sinnes, and I his mercye and the giftes of his grace, and become glorious with the ornamentes of hys riches. And of my sauiour Christ I receaued this lawe, that I shoulde loue my brethren all Gods elect as tenderly as he loued them. And I consented vnto this law, for it seemed right, and became a scholler to learne it. And as I profited in the knowledge, faith, and loue of Christ, so I grew in the loue of my brethren, and suffred all things for their sakes, and at the last waxed so perfect, that I wished my selfe damned (if it might haue bene) to saue my brethrē. And al my brethrē that receaued Christ receaued the same commaundement, & grew therein. And they that were perfect loued me and all their other brethren, no lesse then I loued them. And looke with what loue I ministred the giftes of grace, which I receaued of Christ for the edifying of his congregation, vpon my brethren, with the same loue did they minister their giftes agayne on me, which they had and I lacked: and so loue made all common. And moreouer if they call my workes my merites, I bestowed all my workes vpon my brethren to teach them, and reaped the fruite thereof, euen my brethrens edifying and soules health, yea and reape daily, in that I left my doctrine & ensample of liuing behinde me, by which many are conuerted vnto Christ daily. If thou desire therfore to enioy part of my merite, goe & read in my Gospel, and thou shalt finde the fruite of my labour, the knowledge of Christ, the health of the soule, and euer lasting life.

Loue maketh all thynges common.

And as I loued my brethren whē I liued so I loue them still, & now more perfectly. Howbeit my loue then was paynfull: for the more I loued the more I sorowed, feared and cared for them to bryng them into the knowledge of the truth, and to kepe them in vnitie of faith lest the false prophetes should deceaue them, or their owne infirmities should breake peace & vnitie, or cause them to fall into any sinne.

S. Paule was a louyng and carefull preacher.

But now my loue is without paine. For I see the will and prouidence of God, and how the end of all thynges shalbe vnto hys glory & profite of the elect. And though I see the elect shall sometime fall, yet I see how they shall arise agayne & how that their fall shalbe vnto the glory of God & their owne profect. And we that are in heaue, loue you al a like: neither we loue one more & an other lesse. And therfore if ye loue vs more one thē an other, that is fleshly as mine old Corinthias once loued, and I rebuked them. Neither can we bee moued to come more to helpe one thē an other. But we wayte whē God will send any of vs vnto the elect that call for helpe in Christes name. wherfore if thou wilt be holpe of any of vs pray in Christes name. And God shall send one of vs, an Aungell or a Saint, to keepe the power of the deuils from you: but not whō thou wouldest chose temptyng God: but whom it pleaseth God to send.

And if your preachers loue you not after ỹ same maner, to edifie you with the true doctrine of Christ and example of liuing therafter, and to kepe you in vnitie of fayth and charitie, they be not of Christes Disciples, but Antichristes which vnder ỹ name of Christ, seeke to raigne ouer you as temporall tyraunes. And in like maner if this be not written in your hartes, that ye ought to loue one an other as Christ loued you, and as ye had example of vs his Apostles, ye go astray in vanities and are not in the right way.

And hereby are we sure that we knowe hym, if we keepe his commaundementes.

This is cleane agaynst ỹ doctrine of them which say that we can not know whether we be in the state of grace or no. John sayth if we keepe his commaundementes, then we be sure that we knowe Christ is euerlastyng lyfe Johñ. xvij. Then cōtrary to the pope: Christen men haue doctrine to know whether they be in grace or no.

The state of grace.

The kepyng of Gods commaundementes certifieth vs that we be in the state of grace. But our Doctours haue no doctrine to know when a man is in the state of grace, wherfore it is manifest that they kepe not Gods cōmaūdementes, nor be in state of grace, but of all vngratiousnes.

They that keepe the cōmaundementes are in the stat of grace.

Our Doctours know not whether they be in state of grace. Our doctours kepe mens cōmaūdements, Ergo mēs commaundemētes certifie not that we be in state of grace. Though thou haue a deuotion to sticke vp a candle before a post, and so forth, yet thou canst neuer

When we do good to our neighbour, then we may be assured that we are in the state of grace.

ner be sure thereby that thou art in the fauour of God. But if thou haue deuotion to helpe thy brother in all his misfortunes, because hee is the image of God and price of Christes bloud, then thy deuotiō certifieth the that thou art in the fauour of God or state of grace.

He that sayth I knowe hym and yet keepeth not hys commaundementes, is a lyer, and the truth is not in hym.

A sure argument to know false Prophetes by.

When our Phariseis say, do as we byd you and not as we do, they testifie that they keepe not Gods commaūdementes, vnto whiche testimonie our eyes also beare recorde: And they that keepe not Gods commaundementes, be lyers & haue no truth in them. And then when they preach, they cā not but preache lyes. And then though they preach Christ, they preach hym falsly, vnto their deadly vaūtage and not our soules health. And for as much as we may haue no felowshyp with thē that kepe not Gods commaundementes. i. Cor. v. and in as much as all such are false Prophetes voyde of all truth, it foloweth that we ought to geue our Doctours none audience, though their defenders stode by them with theyr swoordes drawen, but rather to laye downe our heades and stretch foorth our necckes, to be slayne.

He that keepeth his woorde: in hym verely is the loue of God perfect, and hereby knowe we that we are in hym.

To be in God is to beleue in the mercy of God.

A rule to know whether we loue God or loue him not.

That is, he that keepeth his commaundemētes, loueth vnfainedly, and is therby sure that he is in God. For to be in God is to beleue in ỹ mercy of God: And to beleue in mercy is cause of loue, & loue cause of worckyng. And therefore hee that worcketh for Goos sake, is sure that he loueth and that hee trusteth in God: which is to be in God or in Christ. And as by wilfull keping of the commaundemēt we be sure that we loue God and beleue in God, euen so thorough wilfull breakyng of them we may bee sure that we neither loue nor beleue in him, and therfore that we be not in hym.

He that sayth he abydeth in him ought to walke as he walked.

All that be Baptised in Christ, are washed in hym, to put of pride, wrath, hate and emule, with all their old conuersatiō by which they oppressed theyr neighbours, and haue promised to become euery man euen as Christ hym selfe vnto his brethren in loue & kyndnes both in woord & deede. They therfore whiche resist Christes Testament and will not let it be knowen, & walke in the Testament of the Pope, with vnions pluralities, and totquots, some one of them robbyng. x. parishes of the tenth of all their yearely increase, and withdrawing from them Gods woord, the foode of their soules, and from the poore their dayly sustenaunce, whiche ought to haue their part in the tythes and other rentes, when the preacher & other necessarie Ministers haue out their partes, a due and lawfull stipend: are not in Christ. For Christ neither so walked not so taught.

They that be enemies to the Testament of Christ, and are teachers of mans inuentions are not in Christ.

Brethren I write no newe commaundement vnto you, but an old commaundement which ye had at the begynnyng. For an olde commaundement is the word which ye heard from the begynnyng.

I write no new precept, but onely put you in remembraunce of that old which was taught you when ye were first Baptised in Christ, to loue eche other as he did you. which is an old cōmaundement and was ginē at the begynnyng of the world, and hath euer since bene writtē in the hart of all that put their hope in God.

And old cōmaundement is the woorde which ye heard from the begynnyng.

Agayne, a new commaundemēt I write vnto you, whiche is true in him and also in you: for the darkenesse is past and the true light now shyneth.

The deuill hath sowen his darknes in the field where this commaundemēt should grow and the weeds of mens traditiōs had ouergrowen the corne of this old cōmaundement: so that it was antiquate & cleane out of knowledge. But Christ ỹ light of all true doctrine now shyneth, & hath scattered the darknesse and plucked vp the weeds by the rootes & restored this old commaūdement agayne. And in hym it is a true commaundement, for he loued truly. And in you it is a true commaundement for ye for his sake, loue one an other truly also. And by the reason of this renewyng, it is called a new commaundement, as it is now called new learnyng, & may well so be: for it hath lyen long in darknes, and that in such darknes, that many be shryned for holy Saintes, whose dedes & liuing, whē thou lookest vpon them in the light of this old doctrine that now shyneth a gayne out of darknes, are more abhominable then the deedes and liuyng of him, whiche of late for all his exaltyng his throne and swearyng by his highe honour, and for the worthyp of his hat and glory of his precious shoes when hee was payned with the colicke of an euill conscience hauyng no other shift, because his soule could finde no other issue, tooke him self a medicine, vt emitteret spiritum per posteriora.

Sic transit gloria mūdi.

This was Cardinall Wolsey.

He that sayth hee is in the light: and yet hateth hys brother: is in darknesse.

For whosoeuer feleth his owne dāmation vnder the law, & beleeueth in the mercy that is in Christ, the same cā not but loue Christ and his neighbour for his sake. And therefore hee that hateth his brother for any offence done to him the same seith not what Christe hath done for him, but is in darkenes still.

He that hateth hys brother, is in darknes and seeth not Christ.

He that loueth his brother: abydeth in the light: and there is none offendyng in hym.

To abyde in the light is to abyde in ỹ knowledge of Christ.

Abydeth in the light, that is continueth in the knowledge of Christ. And there is none offending in him, that is. First he will willingly do nothyng either in word or in dede that shal offēde his brother. For loue will not let hym. And secondarily if ought bee done or sayd, that may be well done or sayd, he taketh it to the best and is not offēded. And thus ye see that the knowledge of Christ is cause of all goodnesse, and the ignorance of Christ cause of all euill. And so the doctrine of thē is not false, whiche say that fayth in Christ is roote of all godly vertue and the cause of kepyng the commaundementes: & where fayth is, there to be no sinne, nor damnation: and that say, vnbeleefe to be the mother of all vice, and cause of breakyng the commaundementes, and to keepe men in sinne and dāmation onely, as fayth onely loseth vs thence.

Faith in Christ is the roote of all goodnes.

And he that hateth hys brother is in darkenesse: and walketh in darkenesse and knoweth not whether he goeth. For darkenesse hath blynded his eyes.

He that hateth his brother, is in the ignorauncе of Christ, and of his owne sinne, and without repentaunce & faith that his sinnes be forgeuen him in Christ, and therefore is mercilesse vnto hys brother, whom Christ commaunded him to pitie and loue. And in that ignorauncе he walketh: that is, worketh euill, and loueth the thinges of the worlde, and seeketh in them the lustes of the flesh, which are the quenching of the spirite, and death of the soule, & for loue of them hateth his brother. And this ignorauncе of Christ which is vnbeleef, is the cause of all the wickednes that we do vnto our brethrē.

He that hateth hys brother is in ignorauncе.

Ignorance

I write vnto you little children, that your sinnes are forgeuen you for hys names sake. I write vnto you fathers, that ye know him that was from the beginning. I write vnto you yong men, how that ye haue ouercome the wicked.

I write vnto you that are yong in the fayth and yet weake, and therefore fall now and then, how that your sinnes are forgeuen you, as soone as ye repent and reconcile your selues vnto your brethren whom ye haue offended euen for his names sake onely, and not for our owne deedes whether afore or after, or for any other mans deedes or satisfaction, saue for his onely.

When we haue offended our brother, if we reconcile our selues vnto hym agayne, thē are our sinnes forgeuen.

I write vnto you that are fathers in the doctrine of God to teach other how that ye know him that was from the begynnyng & is no new thing, though he newly receaued our nature. And through knowledge of him which is the onely light, and the dore vnto the knowledge of God, ye are become fathers in the Scriptures. Or els ye had neuer vnderstand it, though ye has studied neuer so much, as it appeareth by the indurate Iewes, and also by oure owne new Pharisies, which persecute the scripture, and the true sence therof, because they be drowned in the ignorauncе of Christ, as their deedes and contrary liuing well testifie.

I write vnto you yong mē that are strong in suffering persecutions, and fight for your profession, not with the sword, but with suffering, how that ye haue ouercome that wicked which poysoned the worlde at the beginning, and yet worketh in the children of darknesse, and vnbeleefe: and that in beleeuing men, that ye be strong: and the woorde of God dwelleth in you, and that ye haue ouercomme the wicked.

We can not know the father, but by the sonne.

I write vnto you yong children, how that ye know the Father, whome yee loue thorough knowledge of the Sonne, or els you had neuer knowne him as a father, but as a Iudge and a tyrant, and had hated him. I write vn fathers of all trueth in knowing the Sonne. Or els ye had euer continued

Fayth in Christ ouercommeth the worlde.

I write vnto you yong men, how ye

Loue not the worlde, nor the thinges that are in the worlde. If a man loue the worlde, the loue of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the worlde, as the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of good, are not of the Father, but are of the world. And the worlde vanisheth away and the lust thereof. But he that doth the will of God abideth euer.

The loue of the world quencheth the loue of God. Balaam for the loue of the world, closed his eyes at the cleare light which he well saw. For loue of the world the olde Pharisies blaspheme enemies vnto the truth and most cruel agaynst it. They know the truth but they loue the worlde. And when they Thomas Wolffey late Cardinall of England.

By the lust of the flesh is vnderstād lechery whiche maketh a man altogether a swine, and by the lust of the eyes is vnderstoode couetousnes, which is the roote of all euil, and maketh to erre from the fayth. 1. Tim. vi. And then followeth pride: whiche three are the world, and captaines ouer all other vices, and occasions of all mischief.

Lechery.

Couetousnes.

Pride.

And if pride, couetousnes, and lechery be the worlde, as S. Iohn sayth, then turne your eyes vnto the spiritualtie: vnto the pope, cardinals, bishops, ab-bates, and all other prelates, and see whether suche dignities bee not the world, and whether the way to them be not also the world. To get the olde abbats treasure I thinke it be the readiest way to be the newe. How fewe come by promotion, except they buy it, or serue long for it, or both? To be wel skilled in war and in polling, to maintaine war and lustes, and to be a good ambassadour, is the onely way to a bishoprycke, or to pay truely for it. See whether pluralities, vnions, totquots and chainging the lesse benefice & bys-shoprike for the greater (for the contrary chainge I trow was neuer sene) may be without couetousnes & pride.
And then if such thinges be the world, and the world not of God, how is our spiritualtie of God? If pride be seking of glory, and they that seeke glory can not beleue. Ioh. 5. How can our spiritualty beleue in Christ? If couetousnes turne men from the fayth, how are our spiritualty in the fayth? If Christ when the deuill proferred hym the kyngdomes of the world and the glorie thereof, refused them as thynges vnpossible to stande with hys kyngdome, whiche is not of the worlde:
of whom are our spiritualtie whiche haue receyued them? If couetousnes be a traytour, and taught Judas to sell his maister: how should he not in so long time teache oure spiritualtie the same craft? namely when they be of all kinges secretes and the ambassadours of their secretes, and haue thereto thoroughout al Christēdome a secret cōsell of their own of the which neuer lay man was partaker, and with which they turne the end of all appointments vnto their owne honour and profite? Couetousnes hath taught thē to bring in damnable sectes, according vnto the prophecy of Peter, and to corrupt the Scripture with false gloses, & to turne euery good ordinaunce that had a vertuous begynnyng vnto vicious ende.

The promotions of the spiritualtie corrupt their myndes.

The promocions of the spiritualtie corrupt their mindes while they be yet in the shel and vnhatched. For they come thether but for couetousnes, and to anoyd the crosse of Christ in the worlde: except them that be compelled of their frendes, or be so simple that they mark not their falshode beforehande. Who knowing the truth & louing it, would put his head in the popes halter that so moseleth mens mouthes that they can not open them to defend any truthe at all: when the temporall kinges were in their hye authoritie, then the generall Counsell repressed the enormities of the spiritualtie. But since the Pope, cardinals and bishops were exalted, & the emperour and kings became their seruauntes: they would suffer nought to be determined in their counsels that should reforme the worlde of their deuilish pride, insatiable couetousnes, & stinckyng lechery, which may stand wt no godly vertue. But the world which is not of God, shall at the last haue an end with confusion, and they onely abide that do ỹ will of the Father, which will is, that we beleeue in the Sonne, and loue one an other. Let them therfore that haue ỹ worlds good (I might say the worldes God) vse it, but not loue it, that they may be ready to bestow it at the pleasure of God. And let them which haue it not, desire it not, for it blindeth the eyes of the seeing: Deut. 17. But let them put their trust in God, which shal not fayle them, nor leaue them destitute of rayment and foode, which Paule counselleth to be content with. The ritch (as James sayth) persecute the true beleuers. The ritch will neuer stand forth openly for the woorde of God. If of x. thousand there spring one Nichodemus, it is a great thing.

Popes and Bishops will suffer nothyng that shall restrayne their pride and couetousnes.

Riches and couetousnes, blyndeth the eyes of the seyng.

Little children it is now the last houre, and as ye haue heard that Antichrist shoulde come: euen so now are many Antichristes come already: whereby we know that it is the last houre. They went out of vs, but were none of vs: for had they bene of vs, they had continued with vs. But that fortuned that it might appeare, how they were not all of vs.

Houre is here taken for tyme: the last houre is as much to say, as the last tyme. Though the Apostles might not know when the last day shalbe & how long the world should endure yet this was shewed them, and vs by thē, that Antichrist should first come, & not onely come but also preuayle and be receaued after a worldly maner and raigne ouer all, and set vp a long continuyng kyngdome with damnable sectes and wonderfull kyndes of hypocrisie that is to say, falshead cloked vnder a contrary pretence as testifieth Paule and also Peter. Houre.

Antichrist.

Whiche Antichrist began with the Apostles and sue his doctrine among the doctrine of the Apostles, preachyng many thynges as the Apostles dyd and addyng euer somwhat of his owne, that the weeds might euer grow vp together with the corne. Of which John gathered a signe, that the last day drew nye, though he could not be sure how long it were therto.

Antichrist is one of the first that seeth the light and commeth, and preacheth Christ a while, and seeketh his glory in Christes Gospell. But when hee espyeth that there will no glory cleaue vnto that preachyng, thē he getteth him to the cōtrary partie and professeth hym selfe an open enemy, if hee can not disguise him selfe and hide the angle of his poysoned heresie vnder a bayte of true doctrine.

The worldlings loue the Gospell, so long as it bryngeth gayne.

The Apostles were cleare eyed and espied Antichrist at once, and put hym to flight and weeded out his doctrine quickly. But whē charitie waxed cold, and the preachers began to seke them selues and to admit glory and honour of riches, then Antichrist disguised him selfe after the fashion of a true Apostle and preached Christ wyfely, bryngyng in now this tradition and now that, to darke the doctrine of Christ, and set vp innumerable ceremonies and Sacramentes and imagerie: giuyng them significations at the first: but at the last the significations layd a part, preached the worke as an holy deede, to iustifie and to put away sinne and to saue the soule, that men should put their trust in workes & in whatsoeuer was vnto his glory and profite, and vnder the name of Christ, ministred Christ out of all together and became head of the cōgregation him selfe.

The Pope hath put Christ frō his rule & gouernement.

The Pope made a law of hys owne to rule his church by, and put Christes out of the way. All the Bysshops swere vnto the Pope, and all Curates vnto the Bysshops, but all forswere Christ and his doctrine.

Antichrist hath bene long amōg vs.

But seing Iohn tooke a signe of the last day that he saw Antichrist begyn, how nye ought we to thinke that it is, whiche after viij. hundreth yeares raigning in prosperitie, see it decay agayne, and his falshead to be disclosed and him to be slayne with the spirite of the mouth of Christ: that is, with that old doctrine that proceded out of Christes mouth? for Paule sayth whē Antichrist is vttered, thē commeth the end.

But ye haue anoyntyng of that holy, and knowe all thyng. I write not vnto you, as though ye knewe not the truth, but as vnto them that know it, and how that no lye is of truth.

Christ one-ly is called holy.

Anoynted.

Christ in the Scripture is called the holy, because he onely sanctifieth & haloweth vs. And he is called Christ: that is to say, annoynted, because he annoynteth our soules with ỹ holy ghost and with all the giftes of the same. Ye are not annoynted with oyle in your bodyes, but with the spirite of Christ in your soules: which spirite teacheth you all truth in Christ and maketh you to iudge what is a lye and what truth, and to know Christ from Antichrist. For except he taught your soules within, the powring in of woordes at your eares were in vayne. For they must be all taught of God. Iohn. vj. And the thyngs of God no man knoweth, saue the spirite of God: and the carnall man knoweth not the thinges of the spirite of God: when contrary the spirituall that is annointed with the spirite, iudgeth all thynges. i. Cor. ij. And therfore we are forbidden to call vs any Master vpon earth. Math. xxiij. seyng we haue all one Master now in heauen, which onely teacheth vs with his spirite though by the administration and office of a faithfull preacher. whiche preacher yet can not make hys preachyng spryng in the hart, no more then a sower can make his corne grow, nor can say this man shall receaue and this not: but soweth the word onely & committeth the growyng to God whose spirite bryetheth where hee listeth and maketh the grounde of whose hart he lusteth fruteful, and chooseth whom he will at his own pleasure, and for no other cause knowen vnto any man.

Who is a lyer but he that denyeth that Iesus is Christ? The same is Antichrist that denyeth the father and the sonne.

Antichrist who it is.

For asmuch as Antichrist and Christ are two contraries, & the study of Antichrist is to quēch the name of Christ, how can the Pope & his sectes be Antichrist, when they all preach Christ? How was say I agayn so thee, Pelagius whose doctrine the Pope defendeth in the highest degree, Antichrist, and all other heretickes? Verely Syr the Pope seketh hym selfe as all heretickes dyd and abuseth the name of Christ, to gather offerynges, tithes and rētes in his name, to bestow them vnto his owne honour and not Christes, and to bryng the conscience of the people into captiuitie vnder hym through superstitious feare, as though he had such authoritie giuen hym of Christ. And euery sillable that hath a sounde as though it made for his purpose, that he expounded fally and fleshly, and therwith iuggleth & bewitcheth the eares of the people & maketh them his owne possession, to beleue what hym lusteth, as though it made no matter to them whether hee preached true or false, so they beleue and do as he bidden them. But all the textes that shew his dutie to do, he putteth out of the way, and all the textes therto that set the consciences at libertie in Christ & prouoke our saluation to be in Christ onely. And with Pelagius hee preacheth the iustifying of workes, whiche is the denying of Christ. He preacheth a false bynding and losing with eare confession whiche is not in the trust and confidence of Christes bloud shedyng. He preacheth the false penaūce of dedes, not to tame the flesh that we sinne no more, but to make satisfaction & to redeme the sinne that is past. which what other cā it be saue the denying of Christ, whiche is the onely redemption of sinne. He maketh of the workes of the ceremonyes, which were wont to be signes and remembraunces of thinges to be beleued or done, ymageseruice vnto God & hys Saintes whiche are spirites, to purchase with the merites of them, whatso euer the blynd soule imagineth whiche all are the denying of Christ. For if thou wilt receaue any annoynting of grace or mercy any whence, saue of hym, he is no longer Christ vnto thee.

Iesus. Christ is called Iesus, a Sauiour, he is Christus. called Christus, kyng annoynted ouer all men of whom they must hold, and whose benefite must all they haue. He Emanuel. is called Emanuel, God is with vs. For he onely maketh God our God, our strength, power, sword and shield, & shortly our father. He is called San-Sanctus. ctus, that is, holy that haloweth, sanctifieth, and blesseth all natiõs. And these be his names for euer, & be no names of hypocrisie, as we some time call him
Thomas Curteise, a churle. Thomas Curteis, which is but a churle: and as we call them Curates whiche care for their Parishes as the wolfe for the flocke, and them Byshops that are ouerseers, which will so ouer see, that they will suffer nought to be prosperous saue their owne cõmõ wealth:
Dead men & as some call them selues dead which Poore mẽ. liue in all voluptuousnes, and as some call them selues poore without hauing any thing proper, and yet lyue in all aboundance: and as they shaue and disguise them selues with garmentes and ornamentes, to signifie euer a contrary thyng then that they be.

Christ is no disguised person. Nay Christ is no hypocrite, or disguised that playeth a part in a play and representeth a person or state which he is not: But is alway that his name signifieth, he is euer a Sauiour, & euer annoynteth with grace, & euer maketh God with vs, and euer sãctifieth. Neither is there any other to saue and sanctifie frõ sinne or annointe with grace, or to set God at one with men. And these thynges which his name signifie doth he euer vnto all that haue trust & confidence in his blond, allone as they repẽt of the sinne whiche they desire to be saued and sanctified from.

The Pope and his shauelynges are right Antichrists Now though the Pope & his sectes glue Christe these names, yet in that they robbe hym of the effect, and take the significations of his names vnto them selues, and make of hym but an hypocrite, as they them selues be, they be right Antichristes and deny both the father and sonne. For they deny the witnesse that the father bare vnto his sonne, and depryue the sonne of all the power and glory that hys father gaue hym.

Whosoeuer denyeth the sonne, the same hath not the father.

For no man knoweth the father but the sonne & to whom the sonne sheweth hym. Math. xj. Moreouer if thou knowe not the mercy that God hath shewed thee in Christ, thou canst not know hym as a father. Thou mayst wel besides Christ know hym as a tyraunt. And thou mayst know hym by his woorkes as the old Philosophers did, that there is a God, but thou canst neither beleue in his mercy, nor loue his lawes, which is his onely worshyp in the spirite, saue by Christ. To know God.

Let therefore abide in you that which ye heard at the beginning. If that which ye heard at the beginning shall remayne in you, then shall ye continne in the Sonne, and in the Father. And this is the promise that he hath promised vs, euerlasting life.

If we abide in thold doctrine which the Apostles taught, and harken to no newe: then abide we in the Sonne (for vpon the Sonne build they vs) and in the Father thorough confidence in the Sonne, & are heires of euerlasting life. The Apostles doctrine ought we to abide by.

These thinges haue I written vn to you because of them that deceiue you. And the anoynting that ye receiued of him dwelleth in you and ye need not that any man teache you, but as that annoynting teacheth you of all thinges, and is true, and is no lye: Euen as it hath taught you, so abide therein.

When a true preacher preacheth, the spirite entreth the hartes of the elect, and maketh them feele the righteousnes of the law of God, and by the law the poyson of their corrupt nature, and thence leadeth them thorough repentaunce vnto the mercy that is in Christes blond, and as an oyntment healeth the body: euẽ so the spirite thorough confidence and trust in Christes blond healeth the soule, and maketh her loue the law of God, and therfore is called annoynting or an oyntment, and may well be signified by the oyle of our sacrament. But outward oyle can neyther Annoynting.

ther heale the soule, nor make her feele saue as a signe, or as a bush at a tauern doze quencheth a mans thirst, neither is it a thing to put trust in. Let vs ther foze folow the teaching of the spirite, which we haue receiued (as Paule sayeth) an earnest, to certifie our hartes, and to make vs feele the thinges of God, and not cleaue to the traditions of men, in which is no feeling, but that one sayth so, and an other thus, confirming their assertions with glozious persuasions of wisedome, but not after the wisedome of God, whiche reasons an other denyeth with cõtrary sophismes: & so riseth brauling about vayne wozdes without all certaintie.

And now litle children abide in hym, that when hee shall appeare we may haue confidence, and not bee made ashamed of hym at hys commyng.

We must cleaue to the doctrine of the Apostles.

Here are .iij. thinges to be marked: one, if we cleaue vnto Christ after the doctrine of the Apostles, and as they built vs vpon him, we shall be bolde & sure of our selues at his comming. As a seruaunt which in his maisters absence doth onely his maisters commaũdements, cannot be confounded at his comming home againe. But and if we folow mens doctrine, how can we be bolde yea how should we not be ashamed with our teachers, vnto whome thẽ he shall say (whẽ they boast thẽ selues how ỹ they haue bene his vicars,) I know you not, depart from me ye that haue wrought wickednes, and vnder my name haue brought in damnable sectes, and haue taught your disciples to beleue in other thinges then in me. Now the summe of all that the Apostles taught, and how they built vs vpon Christ is the new testament. But the popes doctrine is not there found, but improued. Confounded therefore shall he be, which witting and willing shutteth his eyes at the true light, and openeth them to beleue his lyes.

A fore saying to all hypocrites and teachers of false doctrine.

An other thing is this, all the scripture maketh mentiõ of the resurrectiõ & comming againe of Christ: & that all men, both they that go before, and they that come after, shall then receiue their rewardes together, & we are cõmaunded to looke euery houre for that day. And what is done with the soules frõ their departing their bodies vnto that day, both the Scripture make no mentiõ, saue onely, that they rest in ỹ Lord, & in their faith. wherfore he that determineth ought of the state of them that be departed, doth but teach the presumptuous imaginations of his owne braine: neither can his doctrine be any article of our fayth. what God doth with them is a secreat layd vp in the treasury of God. And we ought to be patient, being certefied of the scripture that they which dye in the fayth, are at rest, & ought no more to search that secret, thẽ to search ỹ houre of the resurrection whiche God hath put onely in his owne power. But this remember that the whole nature of mã is poysoned, & infected with sinne. And ỹ whole life of sinne must be mortefied. And the roote of al sinne and first vice we were infect with, is that we would be wise where God hath not taught vs, as ye see how Eue would haue ben as God in the knowledge of good & bad. And therefore hath God hid many thinges in his power, and commaunded that we shall search none of his secrets further, then he hath opened them in his scripture, to mortefy this poyson of all poysons, the desire to appeare wise, & that we be ashamed to be ignorannt in any thing at all. wherfore they that violently make articles of the fayth with out Gods word, are yet alive in the roote of all sinne and vice, and grow out of the deuill, and not out of Christ. And their articles are of the blindnes of the deuill, and not of the light of Christ, for Christes light hath testimonie of the scripture euery where.

We must beleue the resurrectiõ & not to be curious to vnderstand the state of the soules departed, where they are, nor what they do.

If ye know that he is righteous, know that all that woorke righteousnes are borne of him.

Our nature is to worke wickednes and so blinde therto that it can see no rightcousnes. And then it followeth that we must be borne a new in Christ ere we can either do or yet know what is righteous. And in him we must first be made righteous our selues ere we can worke righteous woorkes, which conclusion is contrary vnto the Pope, for he sayth that the woorkes do make the man righteous. And Christes doctrine sayth that the man maketh the workes righteous. A righteous man springeth out of righteous woorkes, sayth the Popes doctrine. Righteous works spring out of a righteous man, and a righteous man springeth out of Christ, sayth Christes doctrine. The workes make ỹ man righteous which before was wicked, sayth the Pope. The woorkes declare that the man is righteous, sayth Christes doctrine: but the man was first made righteous in Christ, and the spirite of Christ taught him what righteousnes was, and healed his hart, & made him consent therto, & to haue his lust in righteousnes, and to woorke righteouslie.

The thyrd Chapter.

BEholde what loue the Father hath shewed vs, that we shold be called the sonnes of god. For this cause the worlde knoweth you not, because it knoweth not him. Dearely beloued now wee are the sonnes of God, though yet it appeareth not what we shall be. But we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is.

The loue of God to vs ward is exceeding great, in that he hath made vs his sonnes without al deseruing of vs and hath geuen vs his spirite through Christ, to certifie our hartes thereof, in that we feele that our trust is in God, & that our soules haue receaued health, and power to loue the law of God, which is a sure testimonie, that we are sonnes, & vnder no damnation. Neyther ought it to discourage vs, or to make vs thinke we were lesse beloued because the worlde hateth vs, and persecuteth vs, for the worlde knoweth vs not. Neyther any maruell, for ỹ worlde could not know Christ him selfe for all his glorious commyng with miracles and benefits in healing the sicke, and rayling the dead. But for al the oppression of the worlde, we are yet sure that we are Gods sonnes. And in like maner, though the glory that we shall be in appeare not: yet we are sure that we shall be like him, when he appeareth. As darknes vanisheth away at the cõming of the sunne, and the worlde receaueth a new fashion, and is turned in to light, and suddenly made glorious: Euen so when he appeareth, and we shall see him as he is, we shal with the sight of him, be chaunged into the glory of his image, and made like him. And then shall the worlde both know him, and vs, vnto their shame and confusion.

The worlde could not knowe Christ.

The worlde shall know Christ.

And all that haue thys hope in him, purge thẽselues as he is pure.

The sayth and hope of a Christen man, are no dead, idle, or barren thinges, but liuely woorkes and fruitfull. For when the law through conscience of sinne, hath slayne the soule, thẽ hope and trust in Christes bloud thorough certefying of the conscience, that the damnation of the law is taken away, quickeneth hir agayne, & maketh hir to loue the law, which is the purifying of the soule, and hir life, and seruing the law in the inner man. And then the sayde giftes of hope and sayth stretch them selues forth vnto the members, dead with naturall lust, consent, and custome to sinne, and quickeneth them and purgeth them, with the holesome penaunce of Christes doctrine, & make them serue the law outward, and beare holesome frute of loue vnto the profect of their neighbours, according to Christes loue vnto vs. For if the spirite of Christ with whiche God annoynteth vs and maketh vs kynges, and sealeth vs and maketh vs his sure and seuerall kyngdome, & whiche he giueth vs in earnest. 2. Cor. 1. And with whiche hee chaungeth vs into the Image of Christ. 2. Cor. 4. dwell in our soules through sayth, the same spirite can not but quicken the members also, & make them fruteful. Rom. viij. Wherfore the sayth and hope of the Pope whiche by their owne confession, may stand with all wickednes and consent vnto all euill & be without repentaunce toward Gods lawe (as it appeareth by their three capitall sinnes touched of Iohn a litle aboue: pride, couetousnes and lecherie) are no true sayth and hope: but vayne woordes and visures onely, according to his other disguising and names of hypocrisie.

A Christen mans faith and hope are not idle.

The sayth of a Christen man.

The popes sayth.

All that committe sinne, committe vnrighteousnes, for sinne is vnrighteousnes.

That the English calleth here vnrighteousnes the Greeke calleth Anomia, vnlawfulnes or breakyng ỹ law. So that all sinne is breaking of Gods law, & onely the trãsgression of Gods law is sinne. Now all Gods lawes are contained in these two pointes, beleue in Christ, and loue thy neighbour. And these two poyntes are the inter-

pretyng and expoundyng of all lawes, so that whatsoeuer edifieth in faith and loue, is to be kept, as lōg as it so doth. And whatsoeuer hurteth faith or loue, is to bee broken immediatly: though Kyng, Emperour, Pope or an Aūgell commaunde it. And all indifferent thynges that neither helpe nor hurt fayth and loue, are whole in the handes of Father, Mother, Master, Lord and Prince. So that if they will sinne agaynst God and ouerlade our backes, we may well runne away, if we can escape, but not aduenge ouer selues. But and if they will breake into thy conscience, as the Pope doth with his dome traditions, and sayth, to do this saueth thy soule, and to leaue it vndone loseth thy soule, thē defie them as the workes of Antichrist, for they make thee synne agaynst the fayth that is in Christes bloud, by which onely thy soule is saued, and for lacke of that onely dāned. And howe loue breaketh the law take an example. It is a good law that mē come to the Church on the Sondayes to heare Gods worde and to receaue the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ, in remembraūce of his benefites and so to strengthen thy soule, for to walke in his loue and in the loue of our neighbour for his sake &c. yet if my father, mother, or any other that requireth my helpe bee sicke, I breake that good commaundement, to do my dutie to myne elders or my neighbour. And thus all lawes are vnder loue & giue roome to loue. And loue interpreteth them, yea and breaketh them at a time, though God hymselfe cōmaunde them. For loue is Lord ouer al lawes.

Loue breaketh the law.

And ye know that he appeared to take away our sinnes, and there is no sinne in him.

Christ dyed not alone to purchasse pardon for our foresinnes, but also to slay all sinne and the life of sinne in our members. For all we that are Baptised in the name of Christ sayth Paule. Rom.6. are Baptised to dye with hym concernyng sinne, and that as he after his resurrection dyeth no more, so we after our Baptisme should walke in a new life and sinne no more. Our mēbers are crucified with him, in all that pertayneth vnto the lyfe of sinne. And if in Christ be no sinne, then how can therbe wilfull sinne in the fayth that is in hym, or in the quicke members that through fayth grow out of hym? Euery man therefore that hath the true fayth of Christ, purgeth hym selfe, as he is pure.

We are baptised to dye with Christ concernyng sinne.

All that abyde in him sinne not. And al that sinne haue neither sene him nor knowen him.

As there is no sinne in Christ the stocke, so can there be none in ỹ quicke members that lyue and grow in hym by fayth. And they that giue them selues to sinne haue neither sene, knowē, or felt by fayth ỹ mercy that is in hym. Our holy father then which forbiddeth Matrimonie and giueth his Disciples licences with his holy blessing to kepe whores: and pluralities, vnions, and totquots, to robbe the Parishes, hath neither sene nor knowen Christ, no more haue his Disciples that consent vnto his iniquitie. And if they know him not, they cā not truly describe him vnto vs. It foloweth then, that their preachyng is but hypocrisie.

Litle children let no man beguile you. He that worketh righteousnes is righteous, as he is righteous.

Iudge men by their deedes. For whosoeuer hath the light of God in his soule, he will let his light shyne, that men shall see his good woorkes. And therfore where ye see not the righteousnes of woorkes in the members outward, there, be sure, is no righteousnes of fayth in the hart in ward. Let no man mocke you with vayne wordes. whosoeuer preacheth Christ in worde & deede, him take for Christes Vicare. And them that would proue them selues his Vicares with Sophistrie, and when it is come to the poynte make a sword onely their mighty arguments, and line cōtrary to all his doctrine, and in all their preachinges blaspheme and rayle on his blessed bloud, take for the Vicares of Antichrist.

Where true fayth is there procedeth good workes.

He that preacheth Christ in worde and deede, hym take for Christes vicare.

He that sinneth is of the deuill, for the deuill sinneth from the begynneth. But for this cause appeared the sonne of God: Euen to destroy the woorkes of the deuill. All that are borne of God do no sinne, for his seede abideth in them and they can not sinne, because they be borne of God: And hereby are the sonnes of God knowen, and also the sonnes of the deuill.

God and the deuill are two contrary ry fathers two contrary fountaines, and two contrary causes: the one of all goodnes, the other of all euil. And they that do euill are borne of the deuill and first euil by that byrth, yer they do euil. For yer a man do any euill outward of purpose, he conceaued that euill first in his mynde and cõsented vnto it, and so was euil in his hart yer he wrought euill, and yer he conceiued euill in hys hart he was borne of the deuil and had receaued of his seede and nature: By the reason of which nature, seede and byrth, he worketh euill naturally, and cã do no other. As Christ saith John 8. ye are of your father the deuill & therefore will do the lustes of your father.

The man is first euil.

And on the other side, they that do good are first borne of God and receaue of his nature & seede, and by the reason of that nature and seede, are first good yer they do good by ỹ same rule. And Christ which is cõtrary to the deuill came to destroy the workes of the deuill in vs & to giue vs a new byrth, a new nature, and to sow new seede in vs, that we should, by the reasõ of that byrth, sinne no more. For the seede of that byrth, that is to wete the spirite of God and the liuely seede of his word, sowen in our hartes, kepeth our harts that we can not consent to sinne, as the seede of the deuill holdeth the hartes of his, that they can not consent to good.

The Popes doctrine.

This is cõtrary vnto the Pope in two poyntes, in one that he sayth, that our good deedes make vs first good, and teacheth vs not to beleue in Christes bloud, there to be washed & made first good. And in an other, that he sayth, God choseth vs first for our good qualites & properties and for the enforcement and good endeuour of our free will. what good endeuour is there where the deuill possesseth the whole hart, that it can consent to no good.

The Popes doctrine.

The faythfull and vnfaithfull sinne diuersly.

And finally there is great difference betwene the sinne of them that beleue in Christ vnfaynedly, and the sinne of them that beleue not. For they that beleue, sinne not of purpose and of cõsent to wickednesse that it is good, castyng and compassyng afore hand without grudge of cõscience to bryng their purpose about. As ye see our hypocrites haue vexed all Christendome this. xx. yeares to bryng a little lust to effect. Their fathers conceiued mischief. viij. hundreth yeares ago. And the sonnes consent vnto the same & haue no power to depart therefrom. And therfore their sinne is deuilishe and vnder the damnation of the law. But if he that beleueth, sinne: he doth it not of purpose, or that he consenteth vnto the life of sinne: But of infirmitie, chaũce, and some great temptation that hath ouercome him. And therefore his sinne is veniall and vnder mercy and grace, though it be murther, theft, or adultetie: and not vnder the dãnation of the law. So that his father shall scourge hym, but not cast hym away or damne hym. Marke in the sinne of Saule & of Dauid. Saule euer excused his sinne, and could not but persecute the will of God. And Dauid confessed his sinne, with great repentaũce at the first warnyng, whensoeuer he forgot him selfe.

All that worke not righteousnes are not of God. Nor hee that loueth not his brother. For this is the tydinges which ye heard at the begynnyg, that we should loue one an other, and not be as Cain which was of the deuill and slew his brother. And wherefore slew he him? for his deedes were euill and hys brothers righteous. Maruell not my brethren thoughe the worlde hate you.

The law of righteousnes is, that we loue one an other as Christ loued vs, and he that hath not this law liuyng in his hart, and when the tyme is, bringeth not forth the frutes therof, the same is not of God, but of the deuill whose byrth and properties of the same ye see described in Cain, how he resisted God and persecuted the childrẽ of God for their beleefe & workes therof. And as ye see in Cain and his brother Abell, so shall it euer continue betwene the childzen of God and of the deuill vnto the worldes ende. wonder not therefore thoughe the worlde hate you.

We know that we are translated from death to life, because we loue the brethren. He that loueth not his brother, abydeth in death. All that hate theyr brethren are murtherers, and ye know that no murtherer hath eternall lyfe abydyng in hym.

If thou loue thy brother in Christ, and art ready to do & to suffer for him as Christ dyd for thee, then thou art sure thereby that thou art the sonne of God and heyre of life and delinered frō death and damnation. So haue Christen men signes to know whether they be in the state of grace or no. And on the other side he that hath no power to loue his brethren, may be sure that he is in the state of death and damnation. An other is this, let euery man looke vpō his hart, and be sure that he which hateth his brother hath slayne hym before God & is a murtherer. And murtherers shal not obteine the kingdome of God. Gala. 5. But are Caines brethren and the deuils children, and are heyres of death and euer vnder damnation. Compare the regiment of the spiritualtie, which haue had the temporall sword in their handes now aboue viij. hundreth yeares vnto this doctrine of John, & Iudge whether they haue led vs truely after the steppes of Christes doctrine.

God

Hereby we are assured of loue, because hee left his lyfe for vs, and therfore ought we to leaue our lyues for our brethren. He then that hath the substaunce of the worlde, and seith his brother haue neede and shutteth vp his compassion frō him, how dwelleth the loue of God in hym?

If we felt the loue of Christes death, it would sure set our hart on fire to loue hym agayne and our brethren for his sake, and should neuer cease to slay our resisting members vntill we could not onely be wel content, that our brethren were in a more prosperous state then we, but also vntill we could blesse them when they curse vs, and pray for them when they persecute vs, and to suffer death for thē, to testifie the worde of their soules health vnto them, and with loue to ouercome them, and to wynne them vnto Christ. If now euery Christen man ought to haue this rule of his profession before his eyes to learne it, that hee should loue his brother as Christ dyd hym, to depart with his lyfe for his brothers example, how farre are they of from good scholers, that can not finde in their hartes to depart with a litle of the aboundaunce & superfluitie of their temporall goodes, to helpe their neighbours neede?

We must recompence euill with goodnes.

My litle children let vs not loue in worde nor with the toung, but with the dede and of a truth. For thereby we know that we be of the truth, and so shall we certifie our hartes in his sight.

If we haue power to worke, then doth the worke certefie our hartes that our fayth in Christ, and loue to God, and our neighbour for his sake are vnfayned, and that we are true children, and no hypocrites. And then are we bold in our cōscience before God. And this is it that Peter meaneth. 2. Pet. 1. where he biddeth vs minister in our fayth vertue, godly liuing, and all maner of good workes, and therwith to make our vocation and election, or our calling and choising sure. For the sight of the worke doth certify vs, that God hath called vs, and chosen vs vnto grace and mercy.

But and if when the time of worcking is come, I fly and haue no power to worke, then will our conscience accuse vs of sinne and transgressiō within the hart before God, and so for feare of the rodde we dare not be bolde, but draw backe and stand aloofe.

Let a childe haue neuer so mercifull a father, yet if he breake his fathers cōmaundementes, though he be not vnder damnatiō, yet is he euer child and rebuked, and now & then lasshed with the rod: by the reason wherof he is neuer bold in his fathers presence. But ỹ childe that kepeth his fathers commaūdements, is sure of himselfe, and bolde in his fathers presence, to speake & aske what he will. They that minister well get them good degree and great confidēce in the fayth that is in Christ Iesu, sayth Paule. 1. Tim. 3. He that worketh, is bold before God and man. For hys conscience accuseth hym not within, neither haue wee ought to wyte hym withall or to cast in his teeth. And as without the sight of the woorkes Iacob the Apostle can not see thy fayth Iaco. 2. no more shalt thou euer be sure or bold before God or man.

But if our hartes condemne vs, God is greater then our hart, and knoweth all thyng.

If our conscience accuse vs of sinne, God is so great and so mightie that it can not be hid.

Dearely beloued if our hartes condemne vs not, then we trust to Godward. And whatsoeuer wee aske, that shall we receaue of him, because we keepe his commaundementes and do the thynges whiche are pleasaunt in his sight.

Keepyng of the commaundementes maketh a man see his fayth and to bee bold therein. And fayth when it is without conscience of sinne, goeth into God boldly, and is strong and mighty in prayer to conjure God by all hys mercyes, & therewith obtayneth what soeuer hee asketh, of all his promises. And the text sayth, because we kepe his commaundementes. Yea verely hys commaundemētes make vs bold. But the keepyng of mens traditions and domme ceremonies make vs, not bold before God, nor certifie our conscience that our faith is vnfayned. Thou shalt not know by sprynkling thy selfe with holy water, nor kyssing the pax, nor with takyng asshes, or though thou were annoynted with all the oyle in Thames strete that thy fayth is sure. But and if thou couldest finde in thyne hart to bestowe both lyfe and goodes vpon thy neighbour in a iust cause, and hast proued it: then art thou sure, that thou louest Christ, and feelest that thou hast thy trust in his bloud.

And this is his commaundemēt that wee beleue in his sonne Iesus Christ, and loue one another, as he gaue commaundement.

Fayth is the roote of all commaundementes.

Fayth is the first and alse the roote of all commaundementes. And out of fayth springeth loue: and out of loue workes. And when I breake any commaundemēt I sinne agaynst loue. For had I loued I had not done it. And when I sinne agaynst loue I sinne agaynst fayth. For had I earnestly and with a full trust remembred the mercy that Christ hath shewed me, I must haue loued. wherefore when we haue broken any commaundement, there is no other way to bee restored agayne, thē to go through repētaunce vnto our fayth agayne, and aske mercy for Christes sake. And assoone as we haue receaued faith that our sinne is forgiuen, wee shall immediatly loue the commaundemēt agayne, and through loue receaue power, to worke.

And he that keepeth his commaundemētes abideth in him, and he in hym. And hereby we knowe that there dwelleth in vs of hys spirite which he gaue vs.

Through the woorkes we are sure that we continue in Christ, and Christ in vs, and that his spirite dwelleth in vs. For his spirite it is that kepeth vs in fayth, and through fayth in loue and through loue in woorkes.

The fourth Chapter.

DEarely beloued beleue not euery spirit, but proue the spirits whether they bee of God. For many false Prophetes are gone out into the world.

Spirites.

Spirites are taken here for preachers, because of the preachyng or doctrine, which if it be good, is of the spirite of God: and if it be euill, of the spirite of the deuill. Now ought we not to beleue euery mans doctrine vnadui sedly, or condemne any mans preachyng yer it be heard and sene what it is. But a Christen mās part is to examine, iudge & trie it, whether it be true or no. Quench not the spirit saith Paul 1. Thess. the last. Neither despise prophesynges, but proue all thyng, and kepe that whiche is good. Destroy not the giftes of the spirite of God, but trie whether they be of God, and good for the edifiyng of his congregation: and keepe that whiche is good and refuse that whiche is euill. And suffer euery person that hath any gift of God, to serue God therin, in his degree and estate, after a Christen maner and a due order. Why shall we try the doctrines? Verely for there bee many false Prophetes abroad already. we told you before that Antichrist should come, as our master Christ told vs that he should come. But now I certify you that Antichristes kyngdome is begon already. And his Disciples are gone out to preache. Trie therefore all doctrine. wherewith shall we trie it? with the doctrine of the Apostles, and with the Scripture which is the touchstone: ye and because ye loue compendiousnes, ye shall haue a short rule, to trie them with all.

We may not beleue euery doctrine that is taught and preached, but we must first examine it with the touch stone of Gods word, and so either receaue it or reiect it.

The triall of all doctrine.

Hereby knowe ye the spirite of God. Euery spirite that confesseth that Iesus Christ is come in the flesshe is of God. And euery spirite that cōfesseth not that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God. And the same is that spirite of Antichrist, of whō ye haue heard that he should come: And euen now he is in the world already.

is

Antichrist will not cōfesse that Christ is come in the flesh.

Whatsoeuer opinion any member of Antichrist holdeth, the ground of all his doctrine is to destroy this article of our fayth, that Christ is come in the flesh. For though the most part of all heretickes confesse that Christ is come in the flesh after their maner, yet they deny that he is come, as the Scripture testifieth & the Apostles preached hym to be come. The whole study of the deuill and all his members is to destroy the hope and trust that we should haue in Christes flesh, and in those thynges which he suffered for vs in his flesh, & in the Testament and promises of mercy which are made vs in his flesh. For the scripture testifieth that Christ hath taken away the sinne of the world in his flesh, and that the same houre that he yelded vp his spirite into the hands of his father, hee had full purged and made full satisfaction for all the sinnes of the world. So that all the sinne of the worlde, both before his passion and after, must be put away through repentaunce toward the law and fayth and trust in his bloud, without respect of any other satisfactiō, sacrifice or worke. For if I once sinne, the law rebuketh my conscience, and setteth variaunce betwene God and me. And I shal neuer be at peace with God agayne vntill I haue heard the voyce of hys mouth, how that my sinne is forgiuen me for Christes bloud sake. And assoone as I that beleue, I am at peace with God. Rom.v. and loue his law agayne, and of loue worke.

And that Christ hath done this seruice in his flesh, deny all the members of Antichrist. And hereby thou shalt know them. All doctrine that buildeth thee vpon Christ, to put thy trust and confidence in his bloud, is of God and true doctrine. And all doctrine that withdraweth thyne hope and trust frō Christ, is of the deuill and the doctrine of Antichrist. Examine ẏ Pope by this rule, and thou shalt finde that all hee doth, is to the destructiō of this article. He wresteth all the Scriptures & setteth them cleane agaynst the woll, to destroy this article. He ministreth the very Sacramentes of Christ vnto the destruction of this article: and so doth he all other ceremonies, and his absolution, penaunce, purgatorie, dispensations, pardōs, vowes, with all disguisings. The Pope preacheth that Christ is come to do away sinnes, yet not in the flesh but in water, salt, oyle, cādles, bowes, asshes, friers coates, and monkes cowles, and in the vowes of thē that forswere matrimonie to keepe whores, and swere beggerie, to possesse all the treasure, riches, wealth & pleasures of the world: and haue vowed obedience, to disobey with authoritie, all the lawes both of God and man. For in these hypocritish and false sacrifices, teacheth he vs to trust for the forgiuenes of sinnes, & not in Christes flesh.

Doctrine that is of God.

Doctrine that is of the deuill.

The Popes doctrine of Christ.

Ye are of God litle childrē, and haue ouercome them. For greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the world.

He that dwelleth in you, and worketh in you through fayth, is greater then he whiche dwelleth and worketh in them through vnbelefe. And in hys strength, ye abyde by your profession, and cōfesse your Lord Iesus, how that he is come in the flesh and hath purged the sinne of all that beleue in his flesh. And through that fayth ye ouercome them in the very tormentes of death. So that neither their iugglinges, neither their pleasures, neither their thyrst nynges, or their tormentes, or the very death wherewith they slay your bodies, can preuayle agaynst you.

God is the worker in vs by fayth that we haue in him.

They be of the world, and therfore they speake of the world, and the world attēdeth vnto them. We bee of God: and hee that knoweth God heareth vs. And he that is not of God heareth vs not. And hereby we know the spirit of truth and the spirite of errour.

There be and euer shalbe two generations in the world: one of the deuill, which naturally hearken vnto the false Apostles of the deuill, because they speake so agreable vnto their naturall complection. And an other of God, which hearken vnto the true Apostles of God, & consent vnto their doctrine. And this is a sure rule to iudge spirites with all, that we iudge them to haue the spirite of truth, which hearkē vnto ẏ true doctrine of Christes Apostles: & them to haue the spirite of errour which hearken vnto worldly and deuilish doctrine, abhorryng the preachyng ching of the Apostles. And looke bether the Popes doctrine bee worldly or no, if pride and couetousnes be worldly, yea and lecherie to. For what other is all his doctrine then of benefices, promotions, dignities, bysshoprikes, cardinallshyps, vicarages, parsonages, prebendes, chaunge of bisshoprikes, and resignyng of benefices, of vnions, pluralities, totquots, and that which cõmeth once into their handes, may not out agayn: yea and of whores and concubines, and of captiuyng of consciences for couetousnes, & all that hearken to that doctrine abhorre the doctrine of the Apostles and persecute it, and them that preach it.

The Popes doctrine is worldly.

Dearely beloued let vs loue one an other, for loue is of God. And all that loue are borne of God, and knowe God. And he that loueth not, knoweth not God: for God is loue.

John singeth his old song agayne, and teacheth an infallible and sure token which we may see and feele at our fingers endes, and therby be out of all doubt, that our fayth is vnfayned and that we knowe God and be borne of God, and that we hearkẽ vnto the doctrine of the Apostles purely and godly & not of any curiositie, to seke glorie and honour therein vnto our selues, & to make a cloke therof to couer our couetousnes, and filthy lustes. whiche token is, if we loue one an other. For the loue of a mans neighbour vnfaynedly springeth out of the vnfayned knowledge of God in Christes bloud. By which knowledge we be borne of God & loue God and our neighbours for his sake. And so he that loueth hys neighbour vnfaynedly, is sure of him selfe, that he knoweth God, and is of God vnfaynedly. And contrarywise, he that loueth not, knoweth not God. For God in Christes bloud is such a loue that if a man saw it, it were impossible that he should not breake out into the loue of God agayne & of his neighbour for his sake.

He that loueth God, is borne of God.

The fountaine of loue.

Herein appeared the loue of God vnto vs warde, because God set his onely sonne into the world, that we should liue through hym. Herein is loue: not that we loued God, but that he loued vs, and sent hys sonne, a satisfaction for our synnes.

If a man had once felt within in his conscience the fierce wrath of God towarde sinners and the terrible & most cruell damnation that the law threatneth: and then beheld with the eyes of a strong fayth, the mercy, fauour and grace the takyng away of the damnation of the law and restoryng agayne of life, frely offred vs in Christs bloud, he should perceaue loue, and so much the more, that it was shewed vs, when we were sinners and enemies to God. Roma. 5. and that without all deseruyngs, without our endeuouryng, enforcyng and preparyng our selues, and without all good motions, qualities & properties of our frewill. But when our hartes were as dead vnto all good worckyng, as the mẽbers of him whose soule is departed, whiche thyng to proue, and to stoppe the blasphemous mouthes of all our aduersaries, I will of innumerable textes rehearse one in the beginnyng of the second chapter to the Ephes. where Paule sayth thus. Ye were dead in trespasse & sinne in which ye walked accordyng to the course of the world and after the gouernour that ruleth in the ayre, the spirite that worketh in the children of vnbeleke, amõg which we also had our conuersation in tyme past, in the lustes of our flesh: and fulfilled the lustes of the flesh and of the mynde (so that the flesh and the mynde were agreed both to sinne, and the mynde consented as well as the flesh) and were by nature the children of wrath, as well as other. But God beyng rich in mercy, through the great loue wherwith he loued vs, euen whẽ we were dead in sinne, hath quickened vs with Christ: for by grace are ye saued: and with hym hath rayled vs vp and with him hath made vs sit in heauenly thynges through Jesus Christ, for to shew in tyme to come the exceeding riches of his grace, in kyndnes to vs ward in Jesus Christ. For by grace are ye saued through fayth, & that not of your selues: for it is the gift of God, and commeth not of workes, lest any man should bost him selfe. But we are his workemanshyp created in Christ Jesu vnto good workes, vnto whiche God ordeined vs before that we shuld walke in them. The text is playne, we were stone dead and without lyfe or power to do or consent to good. The whole nature of vs was captiue vnder the deuill and led at his will. And we were as wicked as the deuill now is (Except that hee now sinneth agayne

God first loued vs before we could loue hym.

Herein appeareth the great and louing mercy of almightie God toward vs, when we were yet sinners.

the holy ghost) and we consented vnto sinne, with soule and body and hated the law of God. But God of his grace onely quickened vs in Christ, and raysed vs out of that death and made vs sit with Christ in heauenly thynges. That is, he set our hartes at rest and made vs sit fast in the lyfe of Christes doctrine, and vnmouoable frō the loue of Christ. And finally we are in this our second byrth Gods workemāshyp and creation in Christ: so that as hee which is yet vnmade, hath no life nor power to worke, no more had we till we were made agayne in Christ. The preachyng of mercy in Christ quickened our hartes through faith, wrought by the spirit of Christ which God powred into our hartes, yer we wist.

Dearely beloued, if God so loued vs, then ought we loue one an other.

If we felt the loue of God in Christes blood, we could not but loue agayne, not onely God and Christ, but also all that are bought with Christes blood. If we loue God for the pleasures that we receaue, then loue we our selues. But if we loue hym to do hym pleasure agayne: that can we no otherwise do, then in louing our neighbours for his sake, them that are good, to continue them in their goodnes, & them that are euill, to draw them to good. Loue is the instrument wherewith sayth maketh vs Gods sonnes & fashioneth vs lyke the image of God, and certifieth vs that we so are. And therfore commaundeth Christ. Math. v. Loue your enemyes, Bleſſe the that curse you, pray for them that persecute you, that ye may be the sonnes of your heauenly father, whiche maketh his sunne rise ouer good and bad, and sendeth his rayne vpon iust and vniust: ye whiche made the sunne of his mercy shyne vpō vs and sent the rayne of the blood of his deare and onely childe vpon our soules, to quicken vs and to make vs se loue to loue agayne.

Loue maketh vs the sonnes of God.

No man hath at any tyme sene God. If we loue one an other God dwelleth in vs, and his loue is perfect in vs.

No man hath sene God.

Though we can not see God, yet if we loue one an other, we be sure that he abydeth in vs, and that his loue is perfect in vs: that is, that we loue hym vnfaynedly. For, to loue God truly & to giue him thankes, is onely to loue our neighbour for his sake. For vppon his person thou canst bestow no benefite. And for as much as we neuer saw God, let vs make no image of him nor doe hym any imageseruice after our own imagination, but let vs go to the scripture that hath sene hym, and there wete what fashion he is of and what service he wilbe serued with. Blind reason sayth God is a serued post and wil be serued with a candle. But Scripture sayth God is loue & wilbe serued with loue. If thou loue thy neighbour thē art thou the image of God thy self, and he dwelleth in the liuing temple of thine hart. And thy louing of thy neighbour for hys sake, is hys seruice and worshyp in the spirite, and a candle that burneth before hym in thyne hart and casteth out the light of good workes before the world, & draweth all to God, and maketh his enemyes leaue their euill, and come and worshyp him also.

The scripture hath sene God.

Hereby we know that we abyde in him, and he in vs. For he hath giuen vs of his spirite.

He that hath not Christes spirit, the same is none of his. Roma. 8. If we haue the spirite of God, then are we sure. But how shall we know whether we haue the spirite? Aske John and he will say, if we loue one an other.

By this badge of loue, we are knowē to haue the spirite of God.

And we haue sene and do testifie that the father hath sent hys sonne, the sauiour of the worlde. Whosoeuer confesseth that Iesus is the sonne of God, in hym dwelleth God, and he in God. And we haue knowne and beleued the loue that God hath to vs.

First the Apostles taught no fables, but that they saw and receaued of God by the witnesse of his spirite. Secondaryly John ascēdeth vp steppe higher, from loue to fayth, and sayth he that beleueth that Iesus is Gods sonne, hath God in hym. And I doubt not but the Pope and his defēders will answere John and say, then the deuil hath God in hym, and is also in God. For other fayth then such as the deuill hath, felt they neuer any. But John preuenteth them, we haue knowē and beleued the loue that God hath to vs. That is, we beleue not onely with story fayth, as men beleue old Chronicles, but we beleue the loue and mercy that GOD shewed vs, and put our trust and confidence therein (And so taketh Scripture beleue) we beleue that Jesus is the sonne of God, made man and slayne for our sinnes, which is a token of great loue. And that loue beleue we & trust therto. where Paule sayth. i. Cor. xij. No man can cal Jesus Lord except the holy ghost had taught hym. But thorough the holy ghost he meaneth not with the mouth onely, but in the hart with vnfayned fayth, putting his hope & trust in the Lordshyp which he hath ouer sinne, damnation, hell, and death. For so could no man call Jesus Lord, except the holy ghost had taught hym, as Christ saith Math. xvi. flesh & blood shewed thee not that.

But yet how shall I see my fayth: I must come downe to loue agayne, & thence to the workes of loue, yer I can see my faith. Not alway but sometime thou shalt feele thy fayth without the outward deede, as in great aduersitie and persecution when the deuil assaulteth thee with desperation, and layeth thy sinnes before thee, & would beare the in hād that God had cast the away and left the succourles, for thy synnes sake. Then commeth fayth forth with her shielde, and turneth backe agayne the dartes of the deuill, and aunswereth: Nay for Jesus is ỹ sonne of God: yea and my very God and my very Lord, and hath takē away my sinnes & all dānation. And this trouble & aduersitie which is come vpō me by settyng of thee and on of thy lymmes, is onely to make me feele the mercy of my father and his power and helpe within in my soule, and to slay the rest of the poyson which remaineth in the flesh.

Fayth taketh hold of Christes death and deserupng.

God is loue and he that abydeth in loue, abydeth in God, and God in hym.

This haue we heard aboue and it is easie to be vnderstand.

Herefore is loue perfect with vs, that we should haue confidence in the day of Iudgement.

Howsoeuer this text sounde, this me thinketh should be the meanyng: that we should prouoke eche other to loue, and euer haue those examples of edifieng before our eyes that should most moue vs to loue. For perfite loue seruеth to make a man bold, because it is the kepyng of the cōmaundements. And therfore he that is perfect in loue, when hee seith hym selfe yet in this worlde to be vnto his neyghbour as God is vnto hym, and to be lyke hys heauenly father in all example of kyndnesse, is bold in the presence of God: yea though he come to iudge synners. when on the other side, they that continue euer in their wickednes & grow not in loue, fall often. And therefore their cōscience euer accuseth them and putteth them in feare, by the reason of the fresh memory of the offence, that they can not at once be bold, though they haue neuer so great promises of mercy.

Loue maketh the faythfull & Christian man to be bold.

There is no feare in loue. But perfect loue casteth out feare. For feare hath paynefulnes. He therefore that feareth, is not perfect in loue.

Loue is not paynefull but maketh all thyng easie and pleasaunt: feare of punishmēt for ỹ trespasse newly committed is paynefull: Therfore where loue is perfect there is no such feare. Loue is the fulfillyng of all commaundementes. And therfore where loue is perfect, there is no sinne. And where conscience doth not accuse of sinne, there is faith bold to go into God & to stand before hym, and looke hym in the face, and to coniure him by all his mercies, and to aske the petitions of his desire. Lacke of loue is the breakyng of the commaundements and cause of sinne. And where the conscience accuseth of sinne, their fayth is abashed, dismayed, ashamed & affrayed to go in, for feare of rebuke. Loue therefore seruеth to make a man bold in the day of iudgement and in all temptations.

Loue.

John speaketh not generally of all maner feare, but of that onely whiche the conscience of sinne putteth a man in. For diuers feares there be that accompany loue and grow as the doth. The more a woman loueth her child, the more she careth for it and feareth lest ought should chaunce it a misse. Euen so the more we loue our brethren, the more we care for them, and feare lest any temptation should trouble them. As Paule sayth. ij. Cor. xj. who is sicke and I am not sicke: who is offended or hurt and mine hart burneth not: How cared he for Timothe, for Titus, and for all that were weake, & for the Corinthians, Galathiās, and for all congregations: and how diligently wrote he to them in his absence: and the more

The more we loue God, the more diligent we are to do his will.

we loue God, the more diligent and circumspect are we, that we offēde hym not. And tell me I pray thee, whosoeuer hast had experience, what a payne and grief, yea and what a freasyng coresey is it vnto the hart of a true louer of God, to here the poyson generation of vipers, the pestilent sect of hypocritish Pharisens, wittingly and willingly to blaspheme and rayle on the open and manifest truth of the holy ghost?

If ye will see how bold loue is: go to Moyses, Exod. 32. and Numeri. 14. And there behold how hee coniureth God and amōg all sayth: Forgiue this people or put me out of the booke that thou hast written. As who should say, they be thy people and thou commaūdest me to lōke them. And for thy sake I loue them and teach them and care for them, as a mother that had borne them and loue them no lesse then my selfe. wherfore if thou loue me as thou promisest me, then saue them with me: or if not, thē cast me away with them, and let me haue such part as they take. And Paule sayd asmuch. Roma. ix. Looke vpō worldly loue, and see what pageantes she playeth now and then and how dronken a thyng it is: and be sure, where the loue of God is perfect, she will not onely go betwene bodely death and her louer, but also betwene hym and hell. If a man would take of this, that a man might be so perfect in this lyfe, that he might not be perfecter, it would not folow. For though the spirite at a tyme get the vpper hand of the flesh, & wynneth her selt to God, that she can not tell whether she be in the body or no: yet the flesh will pull her downe agayn and not let her continue, and now and thē plucke of some of her feathers, for mountyng so hygh againe. For Moses fell through vnbelefe well inough after that feruentnes.

Where perfect loue is there is no feare.

We loue hym, becauſe he loued vs firſt.

We deserue not ỹ loue of God first, but he deserueth our loue, and loueth vs first, to wynne vs and to make vs his frendes of his enemyes. And as soone as we beleue his loue, we loue agayne. And so fayth is mother of all loue. And as great as my fayth is so great is loue, though fayth can not be perfectly seue, but through the workes of loue and in the fire of temptation.

Fayth is the mother of loue.

If a man say, I loue God, and hateth his brother: he is a lyer. For how cā he that loueth not his brother whom he seeth, Joue God whō he seeth not? And this commaūdemēt haue we of him: that he which loueth God, louc his brother also.

A sure rule

To loue a mans neighbour in God is a sure rule to know that we loue God: and not to loue him, is a sure token that we loue not God: and to hate our neighbour is to hate God. For to loue God is to do hys commaundements as Christ sayth John. xv. ye are my louers if ye do those thinges which I haue commaūded you: and the commaūdemēt is to loue our neighbours: then he that loueth not his neighbour, loueth not God. And likewise to hate the commaundement, is to hate God that commaunded it: and the cōmaundement is to loue our neighbours: hee then that hateth his brother whō God biddeth hym loue, hateth God.

If we loue God, we must do his commaundementes, & his commaundement is to loue our neygh bours.

The fift Chapter.

ALl that beleue that Iesus is Christe are borne of God. And al that loue him whiche begat, loue hym that is begotten of him. In this wee knowe that wee loue the sonnes of God, when we loue God and kepe his commaundementes. For this is the loue of God that we kepe his commaundementes.

This is a sure cōclusion that we be borne of God through fayth. And that fayth maketh vs Gods sonnes, in that we beleue that Jesus is Christ: as the first chapter of John also testifieth, hee gaue them power to be the sonnes of God, in that they beleued in his name.

Fayth maketh vs Gods sonnes.

What it is to beleue that Jesus is Christe, may bee vnderstand by that which is aboue rehearsed. It is a farre other thyng then as the deuill beleued it agaynst his will and to hys greate payne, or as they beleue it which to fulfil their sinne, enuie the glory of Christ and persecute his Gospell, forbydding to preach it or to read in it. To beleue that Jesus is Christe, is to beleue in Christ: that is, to beleue earnestly, and to put all thy trust therein, and to lay the price of thy soule therupon: that the sonne of Marie whom the aungell cōmaunded to be called Jesus because he

What it is to beleue that Jesus is Christ.

Iesus the true Messias and the Sauiour of the world from their sinnes.

shuld saue his people frō their sinnes, is that Christ, that Messias, and that annoynted whiche God promised the fathers shuld come and bielle all nations and annoynt them with the oyle of his spirite, & with mercy and grace, and to deliuer them frō death of their soules, whiche is the consentyng to sinne, and to make them a lyue with consentyng vnto the law of God, and in certifiyng thē that they be the sonnes of God: And to put the whole trust in all that he suffred in his flesshe for thy sake and in all promises of mercy that are in hym and that thou be full persuaded that there is no other name vnder heauen giuen vnto men to be saued frō sinne by, or to purchase forgiuenesse of the least synne that euer was cōmitted.

All that loue God loue all that beleue in him.

An other conclusion is this: whosoeuer loueth God, loueth all that beleue in God. For all that loue hym that begetteth, loue them that are begotten of him: and all that beleue in God are begotten of God through that belefe, and made his sonnes: thē al that loue God, loue all that beleue in God.

He that loueth God, loueth also the sonnes of God.

An other conclusion is this. When we loue God and his law, thē we loue the sonnes of God. Which is this wise proued: The loue of God, is to keepe the law of God, by the text before and after the law of G O D is to loue our neighbours & therfore if we loue God in keepyng his lawes we must needes loue the sonnes of God.

But Iohn should seme to be a very negligēt disputer to many men in that he here certifieth vs of the loue of our neighbours by the loue of God, when aboue hee certifieth vs that we loue God because we loue our neighbours. Hee semeth to doe as I heard once a great Clerke in Oxford stand halfe an houre in a pulpit to proue that Christ was a true Prophet by the testimonie of Iohn Baptist and an other halfe houre to proue Iohn ỳ Baptist a true Prophet by the authoritie of Christ, as we say clawe me, clawe thee: and as euery theie might lightly proue him selfe a true man, in bearyng recorde to an other as false as he and takyng recorde of the same agayne. Which kynde of disputyng schole men call Petitio principij, the prouyng of two certaine thynges, eche by the other, and is no prouyng at all, as our holy father proueth the authoritie of Scripture by hys decrees (for the Scripture is not autentike but as his decrees admit it) & to make his decrees shyne and appeare glorious, and to obtaine authoritie, he alleageth the Scripture after his iugglyng maner, to make fooles starke mad.

But it is not so here, for both the demonstrations are certaine, both the proffe of the loue of God and his law by the loue of my neighbour, and the proofe of the loue of my neighbour by the loue of God and his law. For whē ỳ. thynges are so ioyned together that they can not be separated, then the presence of the one vttereth the presence of the other, whether soeuer thou first seest. As if I see fire I am sure that some thyng doth burne. And if I smell burnyng, I am certified of fire. Euen so the loue of God is the cause why I loue my neighbour: and my loue toward my neighbour is the effect of the loue of God. And these two loues are euer inseperable, so that whether soeuer I feele first, the same certifieth me of the other.

The loue of God and the loue of my neighbour are inseperable.

Iohn calleth the loue of a mās neighbour the deedes of loue, after the Hebrue speach, as to helpe at neede. For the deede declareth what the man is within. Neither can my loue to God & fayth be seene to the world, saue thorough the workes. And by the workes doth Christ commaunde vs to iudge. So that if a mā haue euill workes and continueth therin, he loueth not God nor knoweth God, no though he call hym selfe master doctour, or Gods vicare. Neither vnderstandeth he Gods word for all his high diuinitie: but is in all hys preachyng an hypocrite, a false prophet, and a lyer though hys preachyng please the world neuer so well. Neuertheles a man is certified that he loueth God yer he come at the worke, by the testimonie of the spirite which is giuē him in earnest. The spirite sayth Paule. Roma. viij. testifieth vnto our spirite, that we be the sonnes of God: and then it testifieth that we beleue in God: for thorough fayth are we sonnes. And then it certifieth me that I loue God. For fayth and loue are inseparable. The spirite thorough fayth certifieth my conscience that my sinnes are forgiuē, and I receaued vnder grace and made the very sonne of God, and beloued of God. And thē naturally myne hart breaketh out into the loue of God agayne, & I seke how to vtter my loue, and to do God some pleasure. And because I can neither do seruice or pleasure vnto his owne person, my neighbour is set before me, to do God seruice and pleasure in him &

Workes set forth & declare fayth.

To doe good to my neighbour is to do God good ſeruice.

to be to him as Chriſt is to me, becauſe he is my brother, bought with Chriſts bloud as I am. And I conſent vnto that law, and loue it yer I come at the dede, and long after the dede. And then whē I loue my neighbour in the deede accordyng to this law, I am ſure that I loue hym truly. Or els if I examined not my loue by this law, I might be deceaued. For ſome loue their neighbours for pleaſure, profite, glorie and for their doyng ſeruice onely, as our ſpiritualtie loue vs, and of that bleſſed loue, do their buſie cure to keepe vs in darkenes: which loue is a ſigne that a man hateth God and hys neighbour therto, and loueth him ſelfe onely. But Gods law is that I ſhould abſteine from myne owne pleaſure and profite, and become my neighbours ſeruaunt, and beſtow lyfe and goodes vpō hym, after the example of Chriſt. Wherfore if I loue my neighbour out of the loue of Chriſt and after the example of hys law, I am ſure that I loue him truly.

And his commaundementes are not greuous. For all that is borne of God ouercommeth the worlde: and this is the victory that ouercommeth the world, euē our faith.

To loue is not paynefull: the commaundementes are but loue: therfore they be not greuous, becauſe loue maketh the commaundements eaſie. The ſeruice that a mother doth vnto her child is not greuous, becauſe ſhe loueth it. But if ſhe ſhould do the tenth part vnto one that ſhe loued not, her hart would braſt for impacience. Unto a mā that feeleth not the loue of Chriſt it is as impoſſible to keepe the commaundementes, as for a Camell to enter through the eye of a nedle. But impoſſible is poſſible and eaſie to, where the loue of Chriſt is beleued. For it followeth, all that are borne of God, ouercome the worlde: that is to wete, the deuill which is the ruler of the worlde: and his diſciples which haue their luſt in hys gouernaunce & cōſent to ſinne, both in body and ſoule, and giue them ſelues to folow their luſtes without reſiſtence: and their owne fleſh which alſo cōſenteth to ſinne, do they ouercome with al that moueth to ſinne. By what victory? Verely through fayth. For if our ſoules be truly vnderſet with ſure hope and truſt, and continuall meditations of Chriſtes loue, ſhewed alreadi, and of ſuccour, helpe and aſſiſtence that is promiſed in his name, and with the continuall memorie of their examples which in tymes paſt haue fought through fayth and ouercome: thē were it impoſſible for the worlde with all his chiualrie, to ouerthrow vs with any aſſault or with any ordinaunce that hee could ſhoote agaynſt vs. For if ỳ fayth & meditation were euer preſent in vs, then loue thorough that fayth, ſhould eaſily ouercome what ſoeuer peril thou couldeſt imagine. Read in the Bible and ſee what conqueſtes fayth hath made, both in doyng & alſo ſufferyng. The xj. chapter vnto the Hebrues miniſtreth the examples aboundauntly. How mighty was Dauid when hee came to fight, and how ouercame hee thorough fayth? And how mightyer was he when he came to ſufferyng, as in the perſecution of the kyng Saul? In ſo much that when he had his moſt mortall enemy kyng Saul, that twelfe yeares perſecuted him againſt al right, in his handes to haue done what hee would with him, through faith he touched hym not, nor ſuffred any man els to do, though he was yet all his lyfe a man of warre and accuſtomed to murther and ſhedyng of bloud. For he beleued that God ſhould auenge hym on his vnrighteous kyng, vpō whom it was not lawfull to auēge himſelfe.

A goodly ſimilitude.

All that are borne of God ouercome the worlde.

Who is it that ouercommeth the world, but he that beleueth that Ieſus is the ſonne of God?

If to beleue that Jeſus is Gods ſonne be to ouercome the worlde, then our Prelates vnderſtand not what belief is, which affirme that the beſt belefe and the worſt mā in the worlde may ſtand together.

This is he that came by water and bloud Ieſus Chriſt: not by water onely but by water and bloud. And it is the ſpirite that teſtifieth, becauſe the ſpirite is truth. For there are three that beare witneſſe in heauen. The father, the worde, and the holy ghoſt. And theſe three are one. And there are three which beare recorde in earth the ſpirite water and bloud, and theſe three are one.

Chriſt had three witneſſes.

Chriſt came with three witneſſes, water, bloud and ſpirite. He ordeined the Sacrament of Baptiſme to be hys witwitnesse vnto vs. And he ordeined the Sacramēt of his bloud, to be his witnes vnto vs. And he powreth his spirite into the harts of his, to testifie and to make them feele that the testimonie of those two Sacramēts are true. And the testimonie of these three is, as it after followeth, that we haue euerlastyng life in the sonne of God. And these iij. are one full witnes sufficiēt at the most that the law requireth, whiche sayth ij. or. iij. at the most is one full sufficient witnes. But alas we are not taught to take the Sacramēts for witnesses, but for imageseruice, & to fore the worke of them to God, with such a minde as the old heathen offred sacrifices of beastes vnto their Gods. So that what soeuer testifieth vnto vs, that we haue euerlastyng lyfe in Christ, that mouth haue they stopped with a leuended maunchet of their Pharisaicall glosses.

The true doctrine of the Sacramentes is away from vs.

If we receaue the witnesse of mē, the witnesse of God is greater. For this is the witnesse that God hath borne of his sonne.

If the witnesse of men, so they be iij. is to be receaued, much more is the witnesse of God to be receaued. Now the witnesse that these iij. water bloud, & spirite beare, is the witnesse of God & therfore the more to be beleued.

He that beleueth in the sonne of God hath witnes in him selfe. And he that beleueth not God, maketh him a lyer, becawse he doth not beleue the witnesse that God hath testified of his sonne. And this is the witnesse, that God hath giuen vs eternall lyfe: and this lyfe is in hys sonne. He that hath the sonne, hath lyfe. And he that hath not the sonne of God, hath not life.

The faythfull haue the true witnes of God in their harts

The true beleuers haue the testimonie of God in their hartes, & they glorifie God witnessing that hee is true. They haue the kingdome of God within them and the temple of God within them, and God in that temple, & haue the sonne of God & lyfe through hym. And in that temple they seke God, and offer for their sinnes ỹ sacrifice of Christes bloud, and the fatte of his mercies in the fire of their prayers, and in the confidence of that sacrifice go in boldly to God their father.

But the vnbeleuers blaspheme God and make him false, describyng him after the complection of their lyeing nature. And because they be so full stuffed with lyes that they cā receaue nothing els, they looke for the kyngdome of God in outward thynges and seeke God in a temple of stone where they offer their imageseruice and the fate of their holy bedes: in confidence wher of they go into God and trust to haue euerlastyng lyfe. And though the text testifieth that this lyfe is onely in the sonne, yet they will come at no sonne shynyng but as vncleane byrdes hate the light.

The vnfaythfull, worshyp God in imageseruice and outward Popery.

These thynges haue I written vnto you that beleue in the name of the sonne of God, that ye may know that ye haue euerlasting life, & that ye may beleue in the sonne of God.

The Apostles haue not the sayth of the Apostles neither do they know and therefore they rayle on it.

They that haue the sayth of Christes Apostles, know that they haue eternal lyfe. For the spirite testifieth vnto their spirites that they are ỹ sonnes of God. Roma. viij. and receaued vnder grace. Our Doctours say they can not know whether they be in the state of grace: therefore they haue not the sayth of the Apostles. And that they know it not, is the cause whey they rayle on it.

This is the confidence that we haue in hym, that if we aske ought accordyng to his will, he heareth vs. And if we know that he heareth vs, whatsoeuer we aske, we knowe that we haue the petitions that we aske of hym.

To aske in Christes name what it is.

Christ sayth Math. vij. aske & it shal be geuen you. And John in the. xvj. chap. whatsoeuer ye aske in my name, he shall giue it you. To aske in ỹ name of Jesu Christ & accordyng to his will be both one, and are nothyng elles but to aske the thynges contayned in the promises and Testamēt of God to vs warde, that God wilbe our father and care for vs both in body and in soule: and if we sinne of frailtie & repent forgiue vs, and minister vs all thynges necessarie vnto this life, & kepe vs that we be not ouercome of euill &c. Now if they which beleue in Christ are bold with God that he heareth them & sure that he graunteth their petitions, it followeth that they whiche are not bold that he heareth them nor sure that hee graunteth their petitions, do not beleue in Christ. They that go to dead Saints with which they neuer speake not wotte where they be, be not bold that God wil heare them, nor sure that he will graunt their petitions therfore they beleue not in Christ. That they be neither bold nor sure, appeareth first by their deedes, and secondarely by their owne confession: for they say what should God heare them or graūt them ought seing they be vnworthy, yea and they confirme it with a similitude of worldly wisedome, that they should be put backe for their malapertnes, and fare the worse, as if a rude felow shuld breake vp into the kyngs priuie chamber, and presse vnto his owne person without knockyng or speakyng to any other officer: so that they beleue it an augmentyng of sinne, to go to God thē selues in the cōfidēce of Christes bloud as he bad them.

If a man see his brother sinne a sinne not vnto death, let him aske: and he shall giue hym life for them that sinne not vnto death. There is a sinne vnto death, and for it say I not that thou shouldest pray. All vnrighteousnes is sinne. And there is a sinne not to death.

whatsoeuer sinne we see in ỹ world, let vs pray and not dispayre. For God is the God of mercy. But for the sinne to death whiche is resistyng grace and fightyng against mercy and open blasphemyng of the holy ghost, affirmyng that Christs miracles are done in Beelsabub, and his doctrine to be of the deuill, I thinke that no Christen man if he perceaue it, can otherwise pray, then as Paule prayed for Alexander the Coppersmith the .ij. Timo. the last: that God would reward hym accordyng vnto his workes. They that go backe agayne after they know the truth, and giue them selues willingly to sinne, for to folow it and persecute the doctrine of truth by profession to mayntein falshead for their glorie and vauntage, are remedylesse: as ye may see. Hebr. vj. and .x. Balaam so sinned: the false Prophetes in the old Testament so sinned the Pharisees so sinned: Alexander so sinned: & now many so sinne: folowyng their pride & couetousnes.

We know that all that are borne of God sinne not: But he that is borne of God kepeth him self, and the wicked touche hym not.

As thou readest in the third chapter, they that are borne of God can not sinne, for the sede of God kepeth them. They cannot cast of the yocke of Christ and consent to cōtinue in sinne nor refuse his doctrine, nor persecute it, for to quench it or to mayntein any thyng contrary vnto it. But in whatsoeuer captiuitie they be in ỹ flesh, their harts yeld not: but imagine to breake lowse and to escape, and flye away, vnto the partie & standart of their Lord Christ. And as men of warre they euer keepe watche and prepare them selues vnto warre, and put on the armure of God, the which is Gods word, the shield of fayth, the helmet of hope, and harnesse thē selues with the meditation of those thynges which Christ suffred for vs, & with the examples of all the Saintes that folowed him, and thinke earnestly that it is their part to lyue as purely as the best & come after as fast as they can. And yet in all their workes they knowledge them selues sinners vnfaynedly, as long as one iote of the perfectnes that was in ỹ deedes of Christ, is lackyng in theirs. So that the deuill can not touch the hartes of them, neither with pride or vayne glorie of pure lyuing, neither to make them consentyng vnto the flesh in grosse sinnes, if at a tyme they be taken tardy & ketche a fall. Whatsoeuer chaunce them, the deuill can ketch no hold of them, to keepe them still in captiuitie: but they will breake lose agayne, and repent and do penaunce, to chast their flesh that they come no more vnder ỹ deuils clawes.

All that are borne of God cā not sinne.

The armour of a Christen man.

We know that we be of God, and that the whole world is set on mischief.

They that beleue: that is to say, put their trust in Christ, see both their owne glorious state in God, and also the wretched estate of ỹ world in their wickednes. But the worlde as they knowe not God, nor the glory of the sonnes of God: Euen so they see not their owne miserable estate in wickednes and damnation vnder the law of God, but the worse they are, the bolder they be and the surer of themselues, the further from repentaūce and the more standyng in their owne conceites, for the darkenes that is in them. And therfore say our Doctours, a man can not knowe whether hee be in the state of grace or no nor needeth to care therfore. And they be therefore the blynd leaders of the blynd.

The world seeth not the thynges that are of God.

We

We know that the sonne of God is come, and hath giuen vs vnderstandyng to know him that is true: and we be in the truth thorough Iesus Christ. He is very God and eternall lyfe.

Christ onelye is the fountaine and fulnes of all good giftes.

Christ is all and the fountaine of all and of his fulnesse receaue we all. And as hee powreth the giftes of his grace vpon them that beleue in hym so he giueth them vnderstanding to know the very God, and that they be in the very God and that they haue obtained that through his purchasing: and leaueth not his sheepe in darkenes. And the same Iesu Christ is very God and eternall life: God and eternall lyfe was he from the begynnyng, and became man for the great loue he had to vs, for to bryng vs vnto his eternall life. And he that hath any other way thether, whether his own workes or other mēs, or workes of ceremonies, or sacraments, or merites of Saintes, or of ought saue Iesu Christ onely, shall neuer come thether. The world seith the Pope, and seith that they which be in the Pope, be Lordes in this world: and therfore they care to be in the Pope: but whether they be in God or not they say, it is not necessarie to know.

He that seketh any other way to eternall saluation, then by Christ, shal neuer come there.

Litle children beware of Images.

Serue none Image in your harts.

Idolatrie is Greeke, and the English is imageseruice: And an Idolater is also Greke, and the English an imageseruaunt. Be not Idolaters nor committe Idolatrie, that is be none image seruauntes, nor do any imageseruice, but beware of scruyng all maner images. And thinke it not inough to haue put all the Images of false Gods out of the way, if ye now set vp the Image of very God and of his true Saints in their rowmes, to doe the same seruice vnto thē, which ye dyd vnto the other. For ye may do as strong imageseruice vnto the Image of GOD and of hys Saintes, as vnto the Images of false Gods: yea thou maist commit as great Idolatrie to God, and yet before none outward Image, but before the image which thou hast fained of God in thine hart, as thou mayst before an outward Image of the deuil. The Iewes in the tēple of God where was none Image of God, dyd as great imageseruice to God, as the heathen vnto their false Gods: yea the Iewes in doing to God the thynges which God commaunded them, dyd committe worse Idolatrie & sinned more grieuously agaynst God, thē ỹ heathē did in offering vnto their false Goddes, which thyng to be true, the Prophetes testifie. For when the Iewes dyd their ceremonies and sacrifices: the meanyng & signification lost, and the cause forgotten which God ordeined them for: to flatter and please God with the glorioustes of the deede in it selfe, and to purchase ought of him for the costlynes or propernes of the present, what other made they of God in their imaginatiō, then a child whom if he crye or be displeased, men stil with a popet, or if we will haue hym to doe ought, make him an horse of a sticke.

Idolatrie.

Idolater.

As great Idolatry may be cōmitted to the Image of a Saint as was by the Gentiles committed vnto Idoles.

Ceremonies.

Sacrifices.

If thou bryng a bolle of bloud and set it before God, to flatter hym, to stroke hym, and to fory and claw hym, as he were an horse, and imaginest that he hath pleasure and delectation therin, what better makest thou of God, then a butchers dogge? If thou bryng the fat of thy beastes to God, for the same imaginatiō, what makest thou of God, but one that had neede of grease to grease shoes or sineere bootes? If thou burnest bloud and fatte together to please God, what other thyng doest thou make of God, then one that had lust to smell to burnt flotesse?

Grosse worshypping of God.

God commaunded a curtesie of all first ripe frutes to be offered; not to be an imageseruice, but a witnesse and testimony that he had made them grow, that the people shuld not forget God, but thinke on his benefites and loue him and of loue kepe his commaundementes. And likewise if any had sinned agaynst Gods law God commaunded that they should repēt, and then bryng a beast and slye it and offer the bloud and ỹ fat of the inwardes: not to make satisfaction, but to testifie onely that God was pleased, and had of his mercy at the repentaunce of the hart forgiuen the sinne. The sacrifices of bloud were ordeined partly to be a secret prophesyeng of Christes bloudshedyng, & partly to be a testimonie and certifyeng of our hartes, that the sinne was forgiuen and peace made betwene vs and God, and not to be a satisfaction. For that were imageseruice, and to make an image of God.

We read in the hystories that when a loue day or a truce was made betwene man and man the couenauntes were rehearsed: and vppon that, they slue beastes in a memoriall and remembraūce of the appointemēt onely. And so were the sacrifices signes and memorials onely, that God was at one with vs. For the Iew could beleue no wordes though an aungell had spoke, without a toke, as we hold vp our fingers and clappe handes. And likewise whatsoeuer they were bidde to do, they must haue had a toke of remembraunce, though it had ben but a ring of a rush, as it is to see in the Bible.

The Iewes could beleue nothyng without tokes.

Euen so our images, reliques, ceremonies and Sacramentes were our memorials & signes of remembraunce onely. And he that giueth in his hart more to them then that, is an imageseruaunt. But when God is a spirite and worshypped in the spirite, we for lacke of fayth, beyng spiritelesse, and hauyng no power to desire of God any spiritual thing, serue God in the body, with imagined seruice, for such worldly thinges as our profession is to desire. Who kisseth a relique or beholdeth an image for loue of the Saintes liuyng, to folow the example? May we will fast the Saintes Euens & go barefoote vnto their Images and take payne, to obtaine greater pleasure in the world, and to purchase worldly thyngs as to mainteine the body in lustes that the soule can not once wishe for power to liue as the Saintes liued or to long for the life to come. If we went in pilgrimage to kepe the remembraunce of the Saintes liuing in minde for our exãple, and fasted and went barefoote to tame ỹ flesh that it should not lust after such worldly thinges whiche we now desire of the Saintes, then did our fastyng and pilgrimage goyng serue vs, yea & the Saint were yet our seruaunt to edifie vs in Christ with the remembraunce of his life left behind, to preach and to prouoke vs to folow the example. For our bodely seruice can be no seruice vnto the Saint which is a spirite, except we imagine him to be an Image.

Sacraments and ceremonies were ordeined onely for remembraunces.

Idolatry.

Saint white must haue a chese once in a yeare, and that of the greatest sorte which yet eateth no cheese. It shalbe giuen vnto the poore in her name say they. First that to be false we see with our eyes. Secõdarely Christ cõmaundeth to care for the poore, and giue thẽ all that we may spare in his name: saying that what is giuen them is geuen him, and what is denyed them is denyed him. If the law of Christ be written in thine hart, why distributest thou not vnto thy brethren with thine own hãdes, in the name of thy Sauiour Iesu Christ which dyed both for them & thee, as thou hast vowed and promised to him in thy Baptisme.

We ought to be trãse and to distribute to our poore brethren, such as God hath sent vs.

It is giuen vnto Saint whites chapleyne. Saint whites chapleyne hath a stipend already sufficient for a Christen man, and ought to receaue no more, but therwith to be content and to be an example of despising couetousnes. Moreouer that Priest that would folow the lyuyng of Iesu Christ as Saint white did, and teach his Parisshens to do so, were a right chaplayne of Christ. And they haue a promise to be fead & clothed as well as euer was their master in the name of Christ. And so be they and euer were, so that they nede not to begge in the name of saint white.

Superstitious Popery are Idolatry.

What shall Saint white do for thee againe for that great cheese? (for I wot well it is not giuen for nought) Giue aboundaunce of milke to make butter and chese? All we that beleue in Christ, are the sonnes of God, and God hath promised to care for vs, as much as we care for the keepyng of his cõmaundements, and hath promised that we shal receaue what soeuer we aske to his honour and our nede, of his hãd. If then we be the natural sonnes of God, why runne we from our father, a beggyng to Saint white? Saint white sendeth no rayne vppon the earth nor maketh the sunne shyne thereon nor maketh the grasse grow. Neither is there any Gods worde that he will now do so much for vs at her requeste. But God hath promised if we will keepe hys lawes to doe so much for vs at our own requeste, for the bloud of his sonne Iesu. what other thing then is thy seruing of Saint white, thẽ lacke of faith & trust to Godward in Christs name, and a false fayth of thine owne fayning to Saint whiteward for thine imageseruice or seruyng her with cheese, as though she were a bodely thyng? And like disputatiõ is it of all other saintes.

In all our needes wee must call vpon God in the name of Iesu Christ & he will heare vs.

And as we worship the Saintes with imageseruice to obtaine temporal thinges: euen so worship we God. And as the Iewes turned their sacrifices vnto imageseruice whiche were giuen thẽ of God to be signes to moue them to serue God in the spirite: Euen so haue we our Sacramentes. And for an exãple let vs take the Masse, which after the Popes abuse of it, is the most damnable imageseruice that euer was sence it began. Christ accordyng to the testimonie of the Scripture, made in the dayes of his flesh, satisfaction for al the sinne of them that had or should be leue in his name, & obtained that they should be the sonnes of God, and taken from vnder the damnation of the law and put vnder grace and mercy, & that God should henceforth deale with them as a mercyful father dealeth with his children that runne not away from him, no though ought be at a tyme chaunced amisse: but tary euer still by their father and by his doctrine, & confesse their trespasse, and promise henceforth to inforce them selues vnto the vttermost of their power that they doe no more so negligently. And this purchase made he with the thinges whiche he suffered in his flesh, & with the strōg prayers which he prayed. And to kepe his Testamēt, euer fresh in minde, that it were not forgot, he left with vs the Sacrament or signe of his body and bloud, to strength our faith and to certifie our cōscience, that our sinnes were forgeuen alloone as we repented and had reconciled our selues vnto our brethren: and to arme our soules, through the continuall remembraunce of Christes death, vnto the despising of the world, mortifying of the flesh, & quenching of the lustes and thyrst of worldly thinges. As they which haue dayly conuersation with the sicke and miserable and are present at the deathes of men, are moued to defie the world, and the lustes therof.

We must euer cleaue vnto God and submit our selues to his mercy.

And as Christ had institute the Sacrament of his body and bloud, so the Bishoppes in processe of time, set signes of all the rest of Christes passion, in the ornamentes and gestures of the Masse: so that the whole passion was dayly described before our eyes, as though we had presently looked vppon it.

The masse at the first was a declaration of Christes passion.

And that thou mayst see for what cause they came vnto the Sacrament, they reconciled them selues ech one to other, if any man had offēded his brother, ere they were admitted into the congregation or body of Christ to be members of ech other knit together in one fayth and loue to eate the Lordes Supper (as Paule calleth it) for the cōgregatiō thus gathered is called Christes body and Christ their head. And likewise if a man had ben taken in opē sinne, agaynst the profession of his Baptisme, he was rebuked openly. And he confessed his sinne openly, and asked forgiuenes of God and of the congregation whom he had offended with the example of his euill deede: and tooke penaunce as they call it, of the congregation, that is, certaine discreet iniunctiōs how he should liue and order him selfe in tyme to come & tame his flesh, for the auoyding of the sayd vice: because his confession and repentaunce which he semed to haue, should be none hypocrisie, but an earnest thing. For if an open sinner be founde among vs, we must immediatly amende him or cast him out of the congregation with defiaunce and detestation of his sinne, as thou seist how quickly Paule cast out the Corinthian, that kept his fathers wife, and when he was warned would not amend. Or els if we suffer such to be among vs vnrebuked, we can not but at once fall from the constancie of our profession, and laughe and haue delectation and cōsent vnto their sinne, as it is come to passe throughout all Christendome. which is ten thousand tymes more abhominable then if we sinned our selues. For the best man in the world that hateth sinne, might at a tyme throughe frayltie of the flesh be drawne to sinne. But it is altogether deuilish and a sure token that the spirit of Christ is not in vs, nor the profession of our Baptisme written in the hart, if we laughe at an other mans sinnes, though we our selues abstaine for shame or feare of hell or for what so euer imagination it be, or that we be so blind that we see no other sinne in vs, then our outward deedes. And the penaunce enioyned frayle persons that could not rule them selues was vnder the authority of the Curate, and the sad and discrete mē of the Parish, to release part or all at a tyme if necessitie required, or when they sawe the person so growne in perfectnes that he neded it not. But see wherto it is now come, & after what maner our holy father that is at Rome dispenseth withall togeather? And see what our Bishops officers do, and where the authoritie of the Curate and of the Parish is become. If in ten Parishes round there be not one learned and discret to helpe the other, thē the deuil hath a great swynge among vs: that the Bishops officers that dwell so farre of, must abuse vs as they do. And if within a Diocese or an whole land, we can finde no shift, but that the Pope that dwelleth at the deuill in hell, must thus mocke vs, what a stroke thinke ye hath Sathan among vs? And all is because we be hipocrites and loue not the way of truth, for all

The description of the parces of the masse

And to begyn withall, they sayd Cõfiteor, and knowledged them selues to be sinners. And then the Priest prayed in generall for all estates and degrees and for encrease of grace, and in especially, if neede required: vnto whiche prayers the people hackened and sayd Amen. And then the Gospell and glad tydinges of forgiuenes of sinnes was preached, to styre our fayth. And then the Sacrament was ministred for the confirmation of the fayth of the Gospell, and of the Testament made betweene God and vs of forgiuenes of sinnes in Christes bloud, for our repẽtaunce and faith: as ye see how after all bargaynes there is a signe therof made, either clapping of hãdes, or bowyng a peny or a groate, or a peece of gold, or giuing some earnest, and as I shewed you, how after a truse made they slewe beastes, for a confirmation. And then men departed, euery man to his busines, full certified that their sinnes were forgiuen, and armed with the remembraunce of Christes passion and death for the mortifieng of the flesh all the day after. And in all these was neither the Sacrament, neither other ceremonies of the Masse, imageseruice to God, and holy deedes to make satisfaction for our sinnes, or to purchase such worldly thinges as the Gospell teacheth vs to dispise. And now compare this vse of the Masse to ours, and see whether the Masse be not become the most damnable Idolatrie & image seruice that euer was in the world.

The abhominable vse of the masse

We neuer reconcile our selues vnto our brethren which we haue offended: we receaue vnto our Masse open sinners, the couetous, the extorcioners, the aduliter, the backbiter, the common whore, and the whore keper, whiche haue no part in Christ by ỹ Scripture, ye such are suffred to say the Masse, as the vse is now to speake, ye such are we cõpelled with the sword to take for our pastors and Curates of our soules and not so hardy to rebuke them. Neither do they repent and confesse their sinnes, and promise amendement, or submit them selues to holesome iniunctiõs for the aduoyding of such sinnes, and tamyng of their flesh. We say Confiteor and knowledge our selues to be sinners in Latin, but neuer repent in English. The Priest prayeth in Latin and saith euermore a still Masse, as we say. For though he sing and streine his throate to cry loude vnto them that be by him, yet as long as no man woteth what he prayeth, or whether he blesse or curse, he is dome and spechles. And so in that part we abide fruteles and vntaught how to pray vnto God. And the Gospell is song or layd in Latine onely and no preachyng of repentaũce toward the law & fayth toward Christ had. And therfore abide we euer faythles and without studieng to amẽd our liuinges. And of the ceremonies of the Masse we haue no other imagination, then that they be an holy seruice vnto God which he receaueth of our hands and hath great delectation in them and that we purchase great fauour of God with them, as we do of great men here in the world with gifres and presẽtes. In so much that if ỹ Priest sayd Masse without those vestimentes or left the other ceremonies vndone, we should all quake for feare, & thinke that there were a sinne cõmitted enough to sinke vs all and that the priest for his labour were worthy to be put in the Popes purgatory & there to be brent to ashes.

And of the very Sacrament it selfe we know no other thyng then that we come thether to see an vnseable miracle, which they affirme, the aungels in heauen haue no power to do: Sed solis Presbyteris, quibus sic congruit, vt sumãt nec dent cæteris: how that bread is turned into the body, and wine into the bloud of Christ, to mocke our seyng, smellyng, feelyng and tasting, which is a very strong fayth, and more a great deale (I thinke) then the text compelleth a man to. Neuertheles it were somewhat yet, if they had bene as louyng, kinde, carefull and diligent to teach the people to repent, and to beleue in the bloud of Christ for the forgeuenes of their sinnes vnto the glory of the mercy of God & of his exceedyng loue to vs, and vnto the profite of our soules, & vpon that preachyng to haue ministred the Sacrament as a memoriall, remembraunce, signe, token, earnest, the seale of an obligatiõ and clappyng of handes together for the assuraunce of the promise of God, to quiet, stablish and certifie our consciẽces, and to put vs out of all wauerying & doubt that our sinnes were forgeuen vs and God become our father & at one with vs, for which cause onely Christ ordeined it: as they were zelous and feruent to mainteine the opinion of so turning bread and wine into the body & bloud of Christ, that it ceaseth to be bread and wine in nature, vnto their owne glory and profite, without helpe of Scripture, but with sutle Argumentes of sophistrie and with crafty wiles. First with taking away halfe the sacramēt, lest if the people should haue dronke the blond of Christ, they should haue smelled the sauour and felte the tast of wine, and so haue bene to weake to beleue that there had bene no wine. And secondarily when they durst not robbe the people of all the Sacrament, they yet tooke away common bread, and imagined maunchetes which may not be handled, and in sight haue no similitude of bread, and in eatyng very litle tast, if there be any at all. And thyrdly whom they could not catch with those crafres, against him they disputed with the sword. For when they had taken away the signification and very intent of the Sacrament, to stablish the eare confession, their merites, deseruynges, iustifieng of workes and like inuētion vnto their own glory and profit: what had the Sacramēt bene, if they had not made of that opinion an article of the fayth? But now when they haue destroyed for the nonce that fayth which profited, and haue set vp with wiles, sutiltie, falsehead, guile and with violēce, that fayth which profiteth not, we haue good cause to iudge and examine the doctrine of the spirites, whether it be grounded vpon Gods word or no.

Halfe of the Sacrament kept from the lay people.

But I aske, wherfore we beleue that Christes body and his blond is there present? verely as many heades as many wittes, euery man hath his meaning. we take paynes to come thether to see straunge holy gestures, wherof, say they to their shame, who knoweth the meanyng ye or of the other disguising; and to heare straūge holy voyces, wherof, say I also that no man knoweth the vnderstanding: and to looke vpon the Sacrament: and all to obteine worldly thinges, for that seruice. why may not a man desire worldly thinges of God? Yes, we ought to aske of God onely sufficiency of all worldly things, as we do spirituall thinges, yet not for bodily seruice, when God is a spirite: but for the goodnesse and mercy of our father and for the truth of his promise and deseruinges of his sonne. And so when we do men bodily seruice, we ought to looke for our wages of God: lest if hee moue not the hartes of our masters, we be shrewdly payed: & like wise when we lende or bargen, we ought to desire God for payment, lest through our negligence he forget vs, & the appointementes be not truly kept. Some there be yet, that aske heauen: but for bodyly seruice, whiche is lyke abhomination.

But who commeth thether with repentaunce and faith, for to obtaine forgeuenesse of his sinnes, and with purpose to walke in the life of penaūce for the taming of the flesh that he sinne no more: and to stablish his hart in that purpose, and to arme his soule agaynst all that mone to the contrary, and whē he goeth home is certified in hys cōscience, through that signe and token, that his sinnes are forgeuen him: as Noe was certified by the signe of the rayne bow that the world should no more be ouerrunne with water: and as Abraham was certified by the signe of Circumcisiō that God would fulfill to him and his offspring all the mercies that he had promised: and as Abraham Genesis. xv. when he asked a signe to be sure that he should possesse that land of Canaan, was certified through the signe that God gaue him therof, and of the foure hundred yeares that his posteritie should be in thraldome in Egypt & of their deliueraunce: and as Gedeon was certified by the signe of his Fleese, of the victory that God had promised him: and as many other that beleued in God, were certified by the signes that God gaue them, of the promises which God made them? Verely no mā. For our Prelates which lay for them selues, compelle intrare, compell not vs to enter into any such feast nor will suffer any such meate to be set before vs: for feare of ouerthrowyng the foundation of their false buildyng whereof springeth so great glory and profit vnto them, which foundation to builde their lyes vpon, they could neuer haue layd, except they had first thrust this doctrine of our soules health cleane out of knowledge. And as soone as they had blinded ỳ light, they became leaders in darkenesse: and made of the Masse imageseruice: so that the straūge holy gestures, and the straunge holy voyces, and straunge holy vestures, with all other straunge holy ceremonies, must be meritorious workes to deserue lōg life, health, riches, honour, fauour, dignitie and aboundaūce of all that we haue, forsakyng our baptisme, & to arme vs from bearing of the crosse with Christ. And they haue made of it a pill of two contrary operations: so that the same medicine that preserueth our soules from purgatory, doth purge the body of houſe, lãdes, rentes, goods and money, that it is made as bare as Iob and as baulde as a Cout. And the light that rebuketh them, they call ſeditious, that it maketh the ſubiectes to riſe againſt their Princes. Which thing the hypocrites layed ſometyme vnto the Prophetes, as ye may ſee in the old Teſtamẽt. And at laſt they layed it vnto Chriſtes charge, as ye may ſee in the Goſpell, and to the charge of the Apoſtles, as ye may ſee in the Actes. But at all ſuch tymes, the hypocrites them ſelues ſtyred vp ſuch a ſword to mainteine their falſehead, that euermore a great part of the world periſhed through their owne miſcheuous incenſing and prouokyng Princes to battayle.

Theſe hypocrites layd to Wickleffes charge (and do yet) that his doctrine cauſed inſurrection: but they, to quench the truth of hys preachyng, ſlew the right kyng, and ſet vp iij. falſe kynges a row: by which miſcheuous ſedition, they cauſed halfe England to be ſlayne vp, and brought the Realme into ſuch ruine and deſolatiõ that M. More could ſay in his Vtopia, that as Engliſhmen were wont to eate ſhepe, euen ſo their ſhepe now eate vp them by whole Parriſhes at once, beſides other inconueniencies that he then ſaw. And ſo the hipocrites ſay now likewiſe: that gods word cauſeth inſurrection: but ye ſhall ſee ſhortly that theſe hypocrites them ſelues after their old wont and examples in quẽchyng ẏ truth that vttereth their iugglyng, ſhall cauſe all realmes Chriſten to riſe one agaynſt an other, and ſome agaynſt them ſelues. ¶ This much I haue ſayd becauſe of them that deceaue you, to geue you an occaſion to iudge the ſpirites.

The Teſtament of maſter William Tracie Eſquier; expounded by William Tyndall. Wherein thou ſhalt perceiue with what charitie the Chaunceler of Worceter burned, when he tooke vp the dead carkaſſe and made aſhes of it after it was buried. 1535.

¶ To the Reader.

THou ſhalt vnderſtãd moſt deare Reader that after William Tyndall was ſo Iudaſly betrayed by an Engliſheman, a Scholer of Louayne, whoſe name is Philippes, there were certaine thinges of his doyng found: which he had entended to haue put forth to the furtheraunce of Gods word amõg which was this Teſtament of M. Tracie expounded by him ſelf, whereunto was annexed the expoſitiõ of the ſame of Iohn Frithes doyng and owne hand writyng, whiche I haue cauſed to bee put in Printe, to the intent that all the world ſhould ſee how earneſtly the Cannoniſtes and ſpirituall lawyers (whiche be the chief rulers vnder Biſhops in euery Dioces, in ſo much that in euery Cathedrall Churche the Deane Chaũcelor and Archdeacon are cõmonly doctours or Bachelers of law) do endeuour them ſelues iuſtly to iudge and ſpiritually to geue ſentẽce according to charitie vpon all the actes and dedes done of their Dioceſſanes, after the exãple of the Chaunceler of Worceter, which after M. Tracie was buried (of pure zeale & loue hardly) tooke vp the dead carkaſſe and burnt it, wherefore he did it, it ſhall euidently appeare to the Reader in this little treatiſe, read it therfore, I beſech thee & iudge the ſpirites of our ſpiritualitie, and pray that the ſpirite of him that raiſed vp Chriſt, may once inhabite them, and mollifie their hartes, and ſo illumine thẽ, that they may both ſee and ſhew true light, & no lõger to reſiſt God nor his truth. Amẽ.

The Teſtament it ſelfe.

In the name of God. Amẽ.

I William Tracie of Todyngton in the Countie of Glocester Eſquier, make my Teſtamẽt and laste will, as hereafter followeth.

¶ First, and before all other thyng, I cõmit me vnto God, & to his mercy, trustyng without any doubt or mistrust, that by his grace and the merites of Jesus Christ, and by the vertue of his passiõ, and of his resurrection, I haue & shall haue remission of my sinnes, and resurrectiõ of body and soule, accordyng as it is written Job. xix. I beleue that my redemer lyueth, and that in the last day I shal rise out of the earth, and in my flesh shall see my Sauiour, this my hope is layd vp in my bosome.

And as touching the wealth of my soule, the fayth ẏ I haue taken & rehearsed, is sufficient (as I suppose) wt̃out any other mans woorke, or workes. My grounde and my belefe is, that there is but one God and one medaitour betwene God and man, whiche is Jesus Christ. So that I doe except none in heauen nor in earth to be my mediatour betwen me & God, but onely Jesus Christ, all other be but petitioners in receiuyng of grace, but none able to geue influence of grace. And therfore will I bestow no part of my goodes for that intent that any man should say, or do, to helpe my soule: for therein I trust onely to the promise of God, he that beleueth & is baptised shalbe saued, and he that beleueth not shalbe damned, Marke, the last Chapter.

And touchyng the burying of my body, it auayleth me not what be done therto, wherein S. Augustine De cura agenda pro mortuis sayth, that they are rather the solace of them that liue thẽ the wealth or cõfort of thẽ that are departed, and therfore I remit it onely to the discretion of myne executours.

And touchyng the distribution of my temporall goodes, my purpose is by the grace of God, to bestow them to be accepted as fruites of fayth, So that I do not suppose that my merite be, by good bestowyng of them, but my merite is the fayth of Jesus Christ onely, by whiche fayth such workes are good accordyng to the wordes of our Lord, Mat. xxv. I was hongry, and thou gauest me to eate, and it foloweth, that ye haue done to the least of my brethrẽ ye haue done to me, &c. and euer we should cõsider the true sentẽce, that a good worke maketh not a good man, but a good man maketh a good woorke, for fayth maketh the man both good and righteous, for a righteous man lyueth by fayth. Rom. i. and what soeuer springeth not out of fayth, is sinne. Rom. xiiij.

And all my tẽporall goodes that I haue not geuen, or deliuered, or not geuen by writing of mine own hand bearing the date of this present writyng I do leaue and geue to Margarete my wife, and to Richard my sonne which I make mine executours, witnes this myne owne hand, the x. day of October, in the xxij. yeare of the raigne of kyng Henry the eight. 1531.

A deſcrip-tiō of God.

NOw let vs examine the partes of this Teſtament ſentence by ſentēce. Firſt to commit our ſelues to God aboue all, is the firſt of all preceptes, & the firſt ſtone in the foundatiō of our faith, that we beleue & put our truſt in one God, one all true, one almighty, all good, & all mercifull, cleaning faſt to his truth, might, mercy, and goodnes, ſurely certified & fully perſuaded, that he is our God, yea ours, & to vs all true, without all falſhead & guile & can not fayle in his promiſes. And to vs almighty, that his will can not be let to fulfill all ỹ truth that he hath promiſed vs. And to vs all good, and all mercyfull, what ſoeuer we haue done, and how ſoeuer greuouſly we haue treſpaſſed, ſo that we come to hym the way that he hath appointed, which way is Jeſus Chriſt onely, as we ſhal ſee folowingly. This firſt clauſe then, is the firſt commaūdement, or at the leaſt, the firſt ſentēce in the firſt commaundement, and the firſt Article of our Crede.

And that this truſt and confidēce in the mercy of God is thorough Jeſus Chriſt, is the ſecōd article of our Credē confirmed and teſtified throughout all ſcripture. That Chriſt bringeth vs into this grace, Paule proueth. Rom. v. ſaying. Juſtified by fayth we are at peace with God, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord: by whom we haue an entryng in vnto this grace in which we ſtand. And Epheſ. iij. By whom ſayth Paule we haue a bold entring in, thorough the fayth that is in him: and in the ſecond of the ſayd Epiſtle, By him we haue an entring in vnto the father, and a litle before in the ſame Chapter, he is our peace. And John in the firſt Chapter. Behold the Lambe of God whiche taketh away the ſinne of the world, which ſinne was the buſh that ſtopped the entryng in, and kept vs out, & the ſword wherewith was kept the entryng vnto the tree of lyfe from Adam and all his offspryng.

And in the ſecond of the firſt of Peter, which bare our ſinnes in his body, and by whoſe ſtripes we are made whole. By whom we haue redemptiō through his bloud euen the forgeuenes of our ſinnes, Colloſ. i. & Epheſ. i. And Rom. iij. He was deliuered for our ſinnes and roſe agayne for our iuſtifyeng.

And concernyng the reſurrection, it is an article of our fayth, and proued there ſufficiently, and that it ſhalbe by the power of Chriſt, is alſo the open Scripture.

The beleef of the reſurrection is an article of our faith

John vj. This is the will of my father which ſent me, that I loſe nothing of all that he hath geuen me, but that I rayſe it vp agayne in the laſt day, and agayn, I am the reſurrectiō. John. xi.

Fayth is ſufficient to iuſtifie vs.

That this liuely fayth is ſufficient to iuſtification without addyng to of any more helpe, is this wiſe proued: The promiſer is God of whom Paul ſayth, Rom. viij. If God be on our ſide what matter maketh it who be agaynſt vs, he is thereto all good, all mercyfull, all true, and all mighty, wherfore ſufficiēt to be beleued by his othe, moreouer Chriſt in whom the promiſe is made hath receaued all power in heauen and in earth. Math. the laſt.

He hath alſo a perpetuall Prieſthode, and therfore able perpetually to ſaue. Heb. vij.

Chriſt the onely mediatour betwene God and man.

And that there is but one mediatour Chriſt, as Paul. i. Tim. ij. And by that word vnderſtand an attonemaker, a peace maker and bringer into grace and fauour, hauyng full power ſo to do. And that Chriſt is ſo, is proued at the full. It is written John. iij. The father loueth the ſonne, and hath geuē all into his hand.

And he that beleueth the ſonne hath euerlaſtyng lyfe and he that beleueth not the ſonne ſhall not ſee lyfe, but the wrath of God bydeth vpon hym. All things are geuē me of my father. Luke x. And all who ſoeuer call on the name of the Lord ſhalbe ſaued. Actes. ij. Of his fulnes haue we al receaued, Joh. i. There is no other name geuen to mā in which we muſt be ſaued. Actes. iiij. And agayne, vnto his name beare all the Prophets record, that by his name ſhall all that beleue in him receaue remiſſion. Actes. x. In hym dwelleth all the fulnes of God bodely. Colloſ. ij. Argumẽts prouyng our ſalua-tion in Chriſt.

ſware vnto Abraham. cccc. yeare before the law was geuen, that we ſhould be ſaued by Chriſt. Ergo, the law geuen cccc. yeares after can not diſanull that couenaunt, So diſpute I: Chriſt whẽ he had ſuffered his paſſiõ, and was riſen agayne and entred into his glory, was ſufficient for his Apoſtles, without any other meane or helpe, Ergo, the holynes of no Saint ſince hath diminiſhed ought of that his power, but that he is as full ſufficient now: for the promiſe is as deepely made to vs as to them. Moreouer the treaſure of his mercy was layde vp in Chriſt for all that ſhould beleue, yer the worlde was made, Ergo, nothyng that hath happened ſence hath chaunged the purpoſe of the inuuariable God.

Moreuer to exclude the blynd imagination falſely called fayth, of them that geue them ſelues to vice without reſiſtence, affirmyng, that they haue no power to do otherwiſe, but that God hath ſo made them, and therfore muſt ſaue them, they not entendyng or purpoſing to mende their liuyng, but ſinning with whole conſent and full luſt, he declareth what fayth he meaneth by. maner of wayes. Firſt by that he ſaith, who ſoeuer beleueth and is Baptiſed, ſhalbe ſaued. By which wordes he declareth euidently, that he meaneth that faith, that is in the promiſe made vpon the appointmẽt betweene God and vs, that we ſhould kepe his law to the vttermoſt of our power, that is, he that beleueth in Chriſt for the remiſſion of ſinne, and is Baptiſed to do the will of Chriſt, and to kepe his law, of loue, & to mortify the fleſh, that man ſhalbe ſaued: and ſo is the imagination of theſe ſwyne that will not leaue wallowyng thẽ ſelues in euery myre and puddell, cleane excluded: for God neuer made promiſe but vpon an appointment or couenaunt vnder whiche who ſoeuer will not come can be no partaker of the promiſe. True fayth in Chriſt, geueth power to loue the law of God: for it is written Iohn the firſt, He gaue them power to be the ſonnes of God in that they beleue in his name. Now to be the ſonne of God, is to loue righteouſnes, and hate vnrighteouſnes and ſo to be like thy father. Haſt thou then no power to loue the law? ſo haſt thou no fayth in Chriſtes bloud. And Rom. iij. We ſet vp or maintaine the law thorough fayth, why ſo? for the preachyng of fayth miniſtreth the ſpirit. Gala. iij. And ij. Cor. iij. And the ſpirite lowſeth the bandes of Sathan, & geueth power to loue the law, and alſo to do it.

Fayth in the promiſe betweene God and vs ſaueth our ſoules.

Gods promiſes haue couenaũtes annexed vnto them, the breakers wherof are excluded from the promiſe.

For fayth Paul Rom. viij. if the ſpirite of him that rayſed vp Jeſus dwell in you, then will he that rayſed vp Jeſus quickẽ your mortall bodyes by the meanes of his ſpirite dwelling in you.

In obiection of our aduerſaries againſt iuſtificatiõ by fayth.

A well (wilt thou ſay) if I muſt profeſſe the law and worke, Ergo, fayth alone ſaueth me not. Be not deceaued with ſophiſtrie: but withdraw thyne eares from wordes and conſider the thyng in thyne hart. Fayth iuſtifieth thee: that is bringeth remiſſion of all ſinnes, and ſetteth thee in the ſtate of grace before all workes, and getteth thee power to worke yer thou couldeſt worke, but if thou wilt not go backe agayne, but continue in grace, and come to that ſaluation and glorious reſurrection of Chriſt, thou muſt worke and ioyne workes to thy fayth in will, and dede to, if thou haue tyme and leaſure, and as oft as thou falleſt ſet thee on thy fayth agayn without helpe of workes. And although when thou art reconciled & reſtored to grace, woorkes be required: yet is not that reconcilyng and grace the benefite of the workes that folow: but cleane contrary, that forgeuenes of thy ſinnes and reſtoryng to fauour deſerue the workes that folow. Though whẽ the kyng (after that ſentence of death is geuen vpõ a murtherer) hath pardoned hym, at the requeſt of ſome of his frendes, workes be required of him that he hencefoorth kepe the kynges lawes, if he will continue in his graces fauour, in which he now ſtandeth, yet the benefite of his lyfe procedeth not of the deſeruyng of the workes that folow, but of the kynges goodnes, and fauour of his frẽdes, yea and that benefite and gift of his life deſerue the workes that folow. Though the father chaſtiſe the child, yet is the child no leſſe bounde to obey, and to do the will of the father. If when the father pardoneth it, the workes that folow deſerue that fauour, then muſt the woorkes that followed the correction haue deſerued fauour alſo: and then was the father vnrighteous to chaſtiſe it. All what ſoeuer thou art able to do, to pleaſe God with all, is thy duty to do, though thou haddeſt neuer ſinned, if it be thy dutie how can it then be the deſeruyng of the mercy and grace that wẽt before? Now that mercy, was the benefite of God thy father through the deſeruing of ỹ Lord Chriſt, which hath bought thee with ỹ price of his bloud.

A compendious declaration of our iuſtification by fayth.

A ſimilitude of an earthly kyng pardonyng a condemned perſon.

And

And agayne when he sayth that he purposeth to bestow his good, to be accepted as fruites of faith, it is evident that hee meaneth that lyuyng sayth which professeth the law of God, and is the mother of all good workes, yea and nurse therto.

An other cauillation whiche they might make in the second part, where he admitteth no other mediatour but Christe onely, nor will geue of hys goodes, to bynde any man to any fayned obseruaunce for the helpe of hys soule, whē he were whole in the kingdome of Christ cleane deliuered both body and soule from the dominion of Sathan (as the Scripture testifieth all that dye in Christ to be) is this, they will say, that he held that none should pray for him saue Christ, and that we be not bound to pray one for an other, nor ought to desire the prayers of an other man: that he excludeth, in that he sayth all other be but petitioners. By which wordes he plainly cōfesseth that other may and ought for to pray, and that we may and ought to desire other to pray for vs: but meaneth that we may not put our trust and confidence in their prayer, as though they gaue of them selues that which they desire for vs in their petitions, and so geue them the thankes, & ascribe to their merites that which is geuen vs in the name of our master Christ, at the deseruynges of his bloud. Christ is my Lord, & hath deserued and also obteined power, to geue me all that can be desired for me. And al that other desire for me: this is desired in Christes name & genē at the merites of his bloud. All the honour then, trust, confidēce, and thankes, perteyne to him also. Some will haply say, how should I desire an other to pray for me, and not trust to his prayer. Verely euen as I desire my neighbour to helpe me at my neede, and yet trust not to him. Christ hath commaūded vs to loue ech other. Now when I go or desire helpe, I put my trust in God, and complayne to God first, and say, Loe father, I go to my brother, to aske helpe in thy name, prepare the hart of him agaynst I come: that hee may pitie me and helpe me for thy sake &c. Now if my brother remember his duty & helpe me, I receaued it of God, and geue God the thankes which moued the hart of my brother & gaue my brother a courage to helpe me & wherwith to do it, and so hath holpe me by my brother. And I loue my brother agayne and say: Loe father I went to my brother in thy name, and he hath holpe me for thy sake: wherfore O father be thou as mercyful to him at his nede, as he hath ben to me for thy sake, at my nede. Loe now as my brother dyd his dutie when he holpe me, so do I my dutie when I praye for hym agayne: and as I might not haue put my trust and cōfidence in my brothers helpe, so may he not in my prayers. I am sure that God will helpe me by his promise, but am not sure that my brother wil helpe me, though it be his dutie, so am I sure that God will heare me what soeuer I aske in Christes name by his promise, but am not sure that my brother will pray for me, or that he hath a good hart to God.

No. But the Saintes in heauen cā not but pray and be hard, no more can the Saintes in earth, but pray and be heard neither. Moses, Samuell, Dauid, Noye, Elias, Elizeus, Esayas, Daniell, and all the Prophetes prayed and were heard: yet was none of those wicked that would not put their trust in God, accordyng to their doctrine and preachyng partaker of their prayers in the end. And as damnable as it is for the poore to trust in the riches of the richest vpon earth, so damnable is it also to leaue the couenaunt made in Christes bloud, and to trust in the saint of heauē. They that be in heauē know the elect that trust in Christes bloud & professe the law of God and for them onely pray: and these wicked Idolaters whiche haue no trust in the couenaunt of God, nor serue God in the spirite nor in the Gospell of Christes bloud, but after their blind Imagination, chosing them euery man a sondry Saint to be their Mediatour, to trust to and to be saued by their merites, do the Saintes abhorre and defie. And their prayers and offeringes, are to the Saintes as acceptable and pleasaunt, as was the prayer and the offeryng of Symon Magus to Peter. Act. viij.

Moreouer the Saintes in their most combraunce are most comforted & most able to comfort other, as Paule testifieth. i. Cor. i. In so much that S. Stephen and S. James prayed for them that slue them, S. Martine preached & comforted his desperate brethren euen vnto the last breath, & likewise (as stories make mention) dyd innumerable mo. Yea and I haue knowen of simple vnlearned persons & that of some that were great sinners which at the houre

The prayer of the faythfull for his brother taking effect, thankes therefore must wholly bee attributed to the geuer.

All our helpe is frō aboue, for man can not helpe but when God prepareth hys hart.

Praying to Saintes is damnable.

Saintes abhorre thē that pray vnto them.

of death haue fallen flat on the bloud of Christ, and geuen no rowme to other mens either prayers or preachynges: but haue as stronglye trusted in Christes bloud, as euer dyd Peter or Paul, and haue therto preached it to other, & exhorted other so mightily that an aungell of heauen could not mende them. Who then should resiste God that he might not geue the same grace to M. Tracie, which was a learned man, and better sene in the workes of S. Austē. yr. yeare before hee dyed, then euer I knew Doctour in England, but that hee must then faint and shrincke, whē most neede is to be strong, & feare the Popes Purgatory & trust to the prayer of Priestes dearely payd for? I dare say that he prayed for the Priestes whē he dyed, that God would conuert a great many of them, and if hee had knowen of any good man amōg them that had neede, he would haue geuen, and if hee had knowen of any lacke of priestes, he would haue geuē to mainteine moe: But now sence there be no then inough, & haue more then euery man a sufficient liuyng, how should he haue geuē them but to hyre their prayers of pure mistrust in Christs bloud? If robbyng of widowes houses vnder pretence of long prayers be damnable. Math. xxiij. Then is it damnable also for widowes to suffer them selues to be robbed by the long pattering of hypocrites, through mistrust in Christes bloud: yea and is it not damnable to maintеine such abhomination? Now when this dānation is spread ouer all, how can we geue thē that haue inough already, or how can they that haue inough already take more vnder the name of praying, & not harden the people more in this dānable dannation.

M. Tracie studious in S. Austen.

And concernyng the burieng of his body he allegeth S. Austen, neither is there any man (thinke I) so mad to affirme that the outward pompe of the body should helpe the soule. Moreouer what greater signe of infidelitie is there, then to care at the tyme of death, with what pompe the carkasse shalbe caried to the graue? He denieth not but that a Christen man should be honorablie buried namely for the honour and hope of the resurrection, and therefore committed that care to his deare executours his sonne and his wife, which he wist would in that part do sufficiēt, & leaue nothyng of the vse of the countrey vndone, but the abuse.

Burials must be celebrated honorably for the hope of our resurrection.

And that bestowyng of a great part of his goodes (while he yet lyued) vpon the poore, to be thankefull for the mercy receiued, without byyng and sellyng with God, that is, without bynding those poore vnto any other appointed prayers then God hath bound vs already, one to pray for an other, one to helpe an other, as he hath helped vs, but pacientlye abidyng for the blessynges that God hath appoynted vnto all maner good workes, trustyng faythfully to his promise, thanking (as ye may see by his wordes) the bloud of Christ for the reward promised to hys woorkes and not the goodnes of the workes as though he had done more then his dutie, or all that: And assigned by writyng vnto whom an other part should be distributed, also geuyng the rest to hys executours, that no strife should be, whiche executours were by right the heyres of all that was left to thē: These things I say are signes euident not onely of a good Christen mā, but also of a perfect Christen man, and of such a one as needed not to be agast and desperate for feare of the paynfull paynes of Purgatory, whiche who so feareth as they fayne it can not but vterly abhorre death: seyng that Christ is there no longer thy Lord, after he hath brought thee thether, but art excluded from his satisfaction, and must satisfie for thy selfe alone, and that with sufferyng payne onely, or els taryeng the satisfieng of them that shall neuer satisfie inough for them selues, or gapyng for the Popes pardons, whiche haue so great doubtes and daungers, what in the mynde and entent of the graunter, and what in the purchaser, yer they can be truly obteyned with all due circumstaūces, and much lesse certitude that they haue any authoritie at all. Paule thirsted to be dissolued & to be with Christ: Stephen desired Christ to take his spirite, the Prophetes also desired God to take their soules from them, and all the Saintes went with a lusty courage to death, neither fearyng or teachyng vs to feare any such crudelitie. Where hath the Churche then gotten authoritie to binde vs from beyng so perfite, from hauyng any such fayth in the goodnes of God our Father, and Lorde Christ, and to make such perfitnes and fayth of all heresies the greatest?

One must pray for an other, and one helpe an other.

A true Christian feareth not the Popes Purgatory.

Salomō saith in the xxx. of his Prouerbes, three things are insaciable and the fourth sayth neuer, It is inough. But there is a sitt called dame auarice, with with as greedy a gutte, as melting a maw, as wyde a throate, as gaping a mouth, and with as rauening teeth as the best, which the more she eateth the hongryer she is. An vnquiet euill neuer at rest, a blynd monster and a surmising beast, fearyng at the fall of euery leafe. Quid non mortalia pectora cogis, auri sacra fames! what doth not that holy hunger compell them that loue this world inordinatly, to committe: might that deuils belye be once full, truth should haue audience, and wordes be construed a right, and take in the same sence as they be ment.

Though it seme not impossible haply that there might be a place, where the soules might be kept for a space, to be taught and instruct: yet that there should be such a Jayle as they Jangle, and such fashious as they fayne, is playne impossible and repugnaunt to the Scripture: for when a man is trāslated vterly out of the kyngdome of Sathan, and so confirmed in grace that he can not sinne, so burnyng in loue that his lust can not be plucked from Gods will, and beyng partaker with vs of all the promises of God and vnder the commaundemētes: what could be denyed hym in that deepe innocencie of hys most kynde father, that hath left no mercy vnpromised, and askyng it thereto in the name of his sonne Jesus, the child of his hartes lust, whiche is our Lord & hath left no mercy vndeserued for vs: namely when GOD hath swore that he will put of righteousnes, and be to vs a father, and that of all mercy, and hath slayne his most deare sonne Jesus, to confirme hys othe.

God graunteth all thynges to the faythfull.

Finally seyng that Christes loue taketh all to the best, and nothing is here that may not be wel vnderstanded (the circumstances declaryng in what sence all was ment) they ought to haue interpreted it charitably, if ought had bene founde doubtefull or seemyng to sound amysse. Moreouer if any thyng had ben therin that could not haue ben taken well, yet their part had bene to haue interprete it as spoken of idlenes of the head, by the reason of sickenesse, for as much as the man was vertuous, wise, and well learned, and of good fame, and report, and sounde in the fayth whyle he was a lyue. But if they say he was suspect when he was a lyue, then is their doyng so much the worsse, and to bee thought that they feared hys doctrine when hee was a lyue, and mistrusted their owne part, their consciēces testifyeng to them that he held no other doctrine thē that was true, seyng they then neither spake nor wrote agaynst him, nor brought hym to any examinatiō. Besides that, some mery felowes will thinke, that they ought first to haue sent to him to wyt whether he would haue reuoked, yet they had so despitefully burnt the dead body, that could not aunswere for it selfe, nor interprete his wordes, how he ment them, namely the man beyng of so worshypfull and aunciēt a blood. But here will I make at end desiryng ỳ reader to loke on this thing with indifferent eyes, and iudge whether I haue expoūded the wordes of this Testamēt as they should seme to signifie, or not, iudge also whether the maker therof seme not by his worke both vertuous and godly: whiche if it so bee, thinke that he was the worsse bycause the dead body was burnt to ashes, but rather learne to know the great desyre that hypocrites haue to finde one craft or other to dase the truth with, & cause it to be counted for heresie of the simple and vnlearned people whiche are so ignorant they can not spye theyr sutteltie, it must nedes be heresie that toucheth any thyng their rotten byle they wil haue it so who soeuer say nay: onely the eternall God must be prayed to night & day to amende them in whose power it onely lyeth. who also graunt thē once earnestly to thirst his true doctrine contained in the sweete and pure fountaines of hys Scriptures and in his pathes to direct their wayes.

Baptistes burne both quicke and dead if they touch their roten sores.

the right inſtitution and vſage of the Sacramentes of Baptiſme, and the Sacrament of the body and bloud of our Sauiour Ieſu Chriſt.

Compiled by William Tyndall.

TO vnderſtād the pith of ỹ Sacramētes, how they came vp, & the very meanyng of them, we muſt conſider diligently the maners & faſhions of the Hebrues, which were a people of great grauitie & ſadneſſe, and earneſt in all their doynges, if any notable thyng chaunced among them, ſo that they not onely wrote, but also ſet vp pillers, and markes, & diuers ſignes to teſtifie the ſame vnto their poſteritie, and named the places where the thynges were done, with ſuch names as could not but keepe the dedes in memorie. As Jacob called the place where he ſaw God face to face, Pheniell, that is, Gods face. And the place where the Egyptians mourned for Jacob ſeuē dayes, the people of the countrey called Abell Miram, (that is) the lamentation of the Egyptians, to the intent that ſuch names ſhould kepe the geſtes and ſtories in minde.

Writtinges and monuments preſerue the memory of notable doynges.

Gene. 50.

And likewiſe in all their couenaunts they not onely promiſed one to another and ſware theron, but alſo ſet vp ſignes and tokens therof, and gaue the places names to keepe the thyng in minde. And they vſed therto ſuch circumſtaunces, proteſtations, ſolemne faſhions and ceremonies, to confirme the couenaūtes, and to teſtifie that they were made with great earneſt aduiſe and deliberation, to the intent that it ſhould be to much ſhame, and to much abhomination both before God and man, to breake them euer after.

A ſure bande of all couenaūtes amōgſt the Jewes.

As Abraham Geneſ. 21. when he made a couenaunt of peace with Abimeleck kyng of the Philiſtines, after they had eaten and dronke together, and ſworne, hee put ſeuen Lambes by them ſelues, and Abimelecke receiued them of his hand, to teſtifie that he there had digged a certaine well, and that the right therof pertained to hym. And he called the well Beer Seba: the well of Swearyng, or the well of ſeuē, becauſe of the oth, & of the ſeuē lambes, and by that title did Abraham his children chalenge it many hundred yeares after. And when Jacob & Laban made a couenaunt together Geneſ. 31. they caſt vp an heape of ſtones in witneſſe, and called it Giliad, the heape of witneſſe, and they bound ech other for thē and their poſteritie, that neither part ſhould paſſe the heape to the others countreyward, to hurt or conquer their land: and Laban boūd Jacob alſo, that he ſhould take no other wiues beſides his daughters, to vexe them. And of all that couenaunt, they made that heape a witnes, calling it the witneſſeheape, that their children ſhould enquire the cauſe of the name, & their father ſhould declare vnto them the hiſtory. And ſuch faſhions, as they vſe among them ſelues, did God alſo vſe to theimward in all his notable dedes, whether of mercy in deliuering them, or of wrath in puniſhing their diſobedience and trāſgreſſion, in all his promiſes to them, and couenaūtes made betwene them and hym.

Gene. 21.

The well of ſwearing or the well of ſeuen.

Gene. 31.

A heape of ſtones was a ſufficient bande for all couenaūtes.

As when after the generall floude God made a couenaunt with Noe and all mankind & alſo withall liuing creatures, that he would no more drowne the world he gaue them the rayne bow to be a ſigne of the promiſes, and for to make it the better beleued, and to kepe it in mynde for euer, he ſayd, when I bryng cloudes vpon the earth, I will put my bow in the cloudes, and will looke on it, and remembre the euerlaſtyng couenaunt made betwene God and all liuing creatures.

Gene. 9.

The rainebow a pledge of Gods promiſe.

And Abram, (whiche ſignifieth an excellent father) he named Abraham, the father of a great multitude of people, becauſe he had promiſed to make hym euen ſo, and that his ſeede ſhould be as the Starres, & as the ſand of the Sea innumerable, and that name gaue he him as a ſeale of the promiſe to confirme it, and to ſtrengthen the fayth of Abrahā and his poſteritie, and to kepe the promiſe in minde, that they might haue wherewith to binde God and to coniure him, as Moyſes and the holy Prophetes euer do, holdyng hym faſt to his owne promiſe, and binding him with his owne wordes, and bringyng forth the obligation and ſeale therof, in all tymes of neceſſitie and temptation.

Gene. 17.

The bleſſing of God to Abrahā

After that he made a couenaūt with Abraham to be his God, and the God of his posteritie, and their shield & defender, and Abraham promised for him and his seede to be his people, and to beleue and trust in him, & to kepe hys commaundementes, which couenaunt God caused to be written in the flesh of Abraham, and in the males of all hys posteritie, commaundyng the males to be Circumcised the eight day, or to be slayne: whiche Circumcision was the seale and obligation of the sayd couenaũt, to kepe it in minde, and to testifie that it was an earnest thyng, wherby God chalenged them to be his people and required the keppyng of his lawes of them, and fayth to trust in him onely and in no other thyng for helpe and succour, and all that can be nedeful and necessarie for man, And wherby he cõdemned the disobediẽt and rebellious, and punished them, and whereby also the godly chalenged hym to be theyr God and father, and to helpe and succour them at neede, and to minister all thyngs vnto them accordyng to all his promises.

And though the seale of this couenaunt were not written in the flesh of the females, yet it serued the womankynd, bound them to God, to trust in him, and to kepe his lawes, as well as it dyd the men children, & the womankynd not Circumcised in the flesh, yet through the helpe of the signe written in the males louyng Gods law, & trustyng wholly in hym, were truly Circumcised in the hart and soule before God. And as the mayde children beleuyng and louyng God, whereunto the outward Circumcision bounde them, were truly Circumcised before God: Euen so the males hauyng the flesshe Circumcised, yet not beleuyng, nor louyng God (whereunto the outward Circumcision bounde them) were vncircumcised before God, and God not bounde to them, but had good right therby to punish them: so that neither Circumcision, or to be vncircumcised, is ought worth (as S. Paule sayth Rom. 2.) saue for the keping of the law for if Circumcision helpe not to keepe the law, so serueth it for nought, but for to condemne. And as the womankind vncircumcised were in as good case, as the males that were Circumcised: euen so the infãtes of ỹ maydẽs, which dyed vncircumcised, were in as good case, as the infantes of males whiche dyed Circumcised. And in as good case by the same rule were the men children that dyed before the eight day: or els let them tell, why the couenaũt made betwene God and Abraham saued the manchilde as soone as it was borne, yea as soone as it had lyfe in the mothers wombe for the couenaunt, that God would be God of Abrahãs seede, went ouer the frute, as soone as it had life and thẽ there is no reason, but that the couenaunt must nedes pertayne to the males, as soone as to the females. Wherfore the couenaunt must needes saue the males vnto the eight day and then the couenaunt was, that the ruler shoulde slay the males onely, if their frẽdes did not Circumcise them, not that the Circumcision saued them, but to testify the couenaunt onely. And then it foloweth, that the infantes that dye vnbaptised of vs Christen, that would baptise them at due tyme, and teach them to beleue in Christ, are in as good case as these that dye Baptised, for as the couenaunt made to the faith of Abraham, went ouer his seede, as sone as it had life, & before the signe was put on them: euen so must needes the couenaunt made to all that beleue in Christes blond, go ouer that sede as soone as it hath lyfe in the mothers wombe, before the signe be put on it. For it is the couenaunt onely, and not the signe that saueth vs, though the signe be commaunded to be put on at due tyme, to styre vp fayth of the couenaunt that saueth vs: and in stede of Circũcision came our Baptisme: wher by we be receaued into the Religiõ of Christ and made partaker of his passion, and members of his Churche, and whereby we are bounde to beleue in Christ, and in the father through hym, for the remission of sinnes, and to kepe the law of Christ, & to loue eche other, as he loued vs, & whereby (if we thus beleue and loue) we callyng God to be our father, and to do his will, shall receaue remission of our sinnes through the merites of Jesu Christ hys sonne, as he hath promised. So now by baptisme we be bounde to God, and God to vs, and the bond and seale of the couenaũt is writtẽ in our flesh, by which seale or writting God chalengeth faith and loue, vnder payne of iust damnation. And we (if we beleue and loue) chalenge (as it is aboue rehearsed) all mercy, and what soeuer we neede, or els God must be an vntrue God. And God hath bound vs Christen men to receaue this signe for our infirmities sake, to be a witnes betwene hym and vs, and also to put this signe vpon our childrē not bindyng vs to any appointed time, but as it shal seme to vs most conuenient, to bring them to the knowledge of God the father, and of Christ, and of their dutie to God and his law. And as the Circūcised in the flesh and not in the hart, hath no part in Gods good promises: euen so they that bee baptised in the flesh, and not in hart hath no part in Christes bloud. And as the Circumcised in the hart and not in the flesh, had part in Gods good promises: Euen so a Turke vnbaptised (because he either knoweth not, that he ought to haue it, or cannot for tyrānie, if he beleue in Christ, and loue as Christ did and taught, then hath he his part in Christes bloud.

And thongh the outward Circumcision, by the whiche God chalengeth them to do him seruice, yea whether they would or not, and by the whiche they were taught to beleue in God, & in the seede of Abraham, that should come, and blesse all the world, and to loue the law, and certified them also on the other side, of the good will of God, if they so did, thought (I say) it was the chief and most principall signe, (for so are such ceremonies called in the Hebrue, because they yet signifie other things, then appeareth to the outward sence,) yet God gaue thē diuers other signes, both to styre vp fayth in the promise made thē, and also to kepe the benefite of the mercy of God in minde.

Exod.13. As in Exodus. 13. all the first borne both of mā and beast are sanctified and dedicated vnto the Lord for a remembraunce, that the Lord slue all the first borne of Egypt. This did God commaund to be obserued, that their childrē should aske why: and he cōmaunded their fathers to teach their childrē, whē they should aske what was ment thereby.

Exod.20. Also Exodus. 20. the Saboth is cōmaunded to be obserued, to be a signe, and to testifie that God had sanctified, and dedicated or chosen them, that they shuld be his people to kepe his lawes, & that he would be their God to kepe them, and to testifie also, that God hath created all thynges of nought in sixe dayes, and rested the seuenth.

Nume.10. Also Nume. x. where almighty God commaunded the childrē of Israell to blow a trompet, when they entered in to battell agaynst their enemies, and promised that they should be thought vppon before the Lord their God, and saued from their enemyes.

And likewise in their solēne feastes God commaūded them to blow trompettes ouer the sacrifice, to be a signe vnto them, that God would thinke on them accordyng to the couenaūt, made in the bloud of the sacrifice. Loe the trō pets were commaunded to be blowen, not that God delighted in the noyse of the trompettes, but in the faith of hys people.

Nume.15. Also Nume. 15. the Israelites are cōmaunded to make yelow gardes vpon their garmentes, to put them in remēbraunce to kepe his commaūdements, that they should do nothing after their own imagination, nor obserue any fashion, that pleased their owne eyes. wherby ye see that ceremonies are not a seruice to God, but a seruice to man, to put him in minde of the couenaunt, and to styre vp fayth and loue, which are Gods spirituall sacrifices in mans hart &c.

Iosua.4. And Iehosua 4. when the water of Iordane had geuen place, to go ouer by dry ground, God commaunded Iehosua, to take xij. stones out of the bottom of Iordan, and to pitch them on the land, to kepe the deede in memorie, & commaūded when the childrē should aske what the stones meant, that their father should teach them.

3.Reg.11. In the 3. of kynges. 11. Ahiah the Prophet tare the clocke of Ieroboam in xij. peces, and bad him take x. in signe, that he should raigne ouer x. of the tribes.

4.Reg.13. In 4. Reg. 13. Elisens made Iohab kyng of Israell open a windoow Eastward toward the Syrians, and made him to shoote out an arrow, and sayd it is the arrow of victory thorough the Lord agaynst the Syrians: and that did he to stablishe the kynges fayth in God, that he should with Gods helpe ouercome the Syrias, and then he bad the kyng smite the ground with an arrow, and the kyng smote it thrise wher by hee prophecied and certified the kyng that hee shoūld thrise ouercome the Syrians.

Esay.20. And Esayas in his xx. chapter was commaunded to goe naked and barefoote, to be a signe that Egypt, in whō the childrē of Israell trusted, should be so caried away of Nabuchadnezzar.

Ierem.27. And Jeremias 27. commeth among the people with bondes and chaynes put about his necke, and sheweth them vnto all the kyngs of those countreys, in token that they must be vnder the yoke of Nabuchadnezzar kyng of Babilon.

dēd. God so vsed to giue them signes, that they would not beleue without signes, as ye may see not onely in the old Testament, but also in the new. How the Jewes asked Christ saying, what signe doest thou shew vs? &c.

And Paule. 1. Cor. 1. the Jewes asked signes.

Luke. 1. Also Zacharias John Baptistes father asked a signe, and the aungel gaue it him.

Luke. 1. Christes mother also asked a signe, and the aungell gaue her Elizabeth to a signe.

Luke. 2. And vnto the shepheardes gaue the aungell a signe, as ye read, Luke. 2.

Exod. 12. And Exod. 12. God gaue the children of Jsrael the signe of Pesah, which we call the Easter Lambe, for a signe that the time was come, that the children of Jsrael should be deliuered out of Egypt. And therfore God sent Moyses and Aaron to them, whiche wrought many miracles among them, to stire vp their faith to the promise of that deliueraunce, agaynst the manifold and sore temptations to the contrarie, thorough the most straight and greuous bondage & mercyelesse oppressiō. And in that most specially, that Pharao was waxed ten tymes worse to them, after the comming of Moses and Aaron thē before, yet in the last night in which he had promised to smite the first borne of Exod. 12. Egypt, both of man and of beast, and to deliuer them, he commaunded them to take for euery house a Lambe, or a kidde, and to slay them, and to strike the doore postes with the bloud, to bee a signe to them, and a seale of the promise that God would deliuer thē that night, both out of the handes of Pharao, and also from the smitting of the aūgell, that went about all Egypt and slue the first borne in euery house.

The institution of ỹ Paschall lambe. And this signe Pesah, beside that it was a seale of the promise to be deliuered the same night, to stablish ỹ fayth, and commaunded to be obserued euer after yearely, to keepe the benefite in memorie, it was also a verie prophecie of the passion of Christ, describyng the verie maner and fashion of his death, and the effect & vertue thereof also. Jn whose stede is the Sacrament of the body & bloud of Christ come, as Baptisme in the roome or stede of Circumcision.

To see how Christ was prophecied and described therin, cōsider & marke, how that the kidde or Lambe must be without spot or blemish, and so was Christ onely of all mākind, in the sight of God and of his law. Jt must be taken vp the tēth day of the first moneth, which is ỹ x. day of ỹ first new mone in March, for so coūt they their monethes frō the new Moone, & there begin in ỹ tyme of March with vs. And the same day came Christ to Jerusalem, there to be offered, and to suffer his passion.

Jt must be offered the xiiij. day of the same moneth at night, and the same houre begā Christ his passion, he was the same houre betrayed, and persecuted all night, and taken in the morning early. The feare of death was the same houre vppon him, neither slept he any more after, but went immediatly, as soone as he had comforted his Disciples, into the place where he was taken, to abide his persecuters, where also he swete water and bloud, of very agonie conceiued of his passiō so nighe at hand.

Christes death figured by the Paschall lambe. The bloud stricken on the postes saued thē, that they were not plagued with the Egyptians, & deliuered them out of the captiuitie of Pharao. And the bloud of Christ strickē on the postes of our consciences, deliuereth vs from the captiuitie of Pharao the deuill, and smitting of his aūgels &c. There might not a bone thereof be broken, no more were there of Christes, though the ij. that were hanged with him, had either of them his legges & his armes brokē.

Moreouer that it was a very prophecie of ỹ death of Christ, & of the vertue of his passion, it is made the more manifest by the woordes of Christ him selfe. Luke. 22. for the night before hys passion, when he had eaten Pesah with his Disciples, he sayd, Jl will no more eate of it henceforth, till it be fulfilled in the kyngdome of G O D. As who should say. This memoriall, which we yearely haue hetherto obserued, was once fulfilled in the kyngdome of this world, when your fathers were deliuered out of bondage and seruitude of the Egyptians. But it hath yet an other signification hetherto vnknowen vnto you, which must be fulfilled spiritually in the kingdome of God, by my passion that is at hand, and bloud that now shall shortly be shed, by the which ye shalbe deliuered out of the power of Sathan, sinne, and hell, & made heyres of the kyngdome of heauen. Neither was it the lambes bloud, that deliuered you then. For what regarde hath God in the bloud of shepe and calues? but the bloud of Christ, (whom that lambe figured, and described his innocencie, pureness, and obedience to hys father, and compassion to mankynde ward, whose feble nature he had put on with all the infirmities of the same, (saue sinne) did then deliuer you, to bryng you to the fayth of this deliuerance, and to make you through faith partakers therof.

The scriptures of God are full of hidden misteries.

Many things there be in the Scripture whiche haue a carnall fulfillyng, euen there where they be spoken, or done, and yet haue an other spirituall signification, to be fulfilled long after in Christ and his kyngdome, and yet neuer knowen till the thyng be done.

Nume. 21. Iohn. 3.

As the Serpent of Brasse, which Moses hãged vp in the wildernes, though it tooke effect carnally in the wildernes, yet it so describeth the liftyng vp of Christ vpon the crosse, & the vertue of his passion, that no tõg could better declare it thẽ make the hart feele it.

If ye aske, why they may not be knowen, till they be done, and what prophecie may helpe: I aunswere. If men dyd vnderstand them before they were done, they would endeuour to let the fulfillyng of them, and when the significatiõ is fulfilled, then to see how playnly it was described in the Scripture, doth exceedyngly cõfirme the fayth thereof, and make it better to be vnderstand.

How the Paschall lambe was spiritually fulfilled in the kyngdome of heauen.

And when this Pesah was fulfilled spirituallie in the kyngdome of heauẽ, by the death and bloud heedyng of Christ, it ended there. And in ỹ roome therof (cõcernyng that spirituall significatiõ) came the signe of the Sacramẽt of the body and bloud of our Sauiour Christ, as Baptisme came in stede of Circũcision, thyngs more easie, & lesse paynefull and tedious to be obserued, and more gentle to prouoke and entise the Heathen. For as the lambe describeth the death of Christ to come, and the maner of his passion, by which we should be deliuered: euen so doth the ceremonie of the body and bloud of Christ testifie vnto vs, that he hath giuen him selfe to death for vs, and redemed vs already, if we beleue, and cleue fast to the profession of our Baptisme, to walke therin, or will (if any tempest had driuen vs out of the right course) returne to the right way agayne.

The institution of ỹ Sacramẽt of ỹ body & bloud of our Sauiour Christ.

The Paschall lambe & the death and sacrifice of Christes body & bloud compared together.

This to be so, the wordes of the Institutiõ declare, which are these. 1. Cor. 11. The Lord Jesus the night that he was betrayed, tooke bread and gaue thankes and brake it and sayd: Take, eate, this is my body that shalbe giuen for you: this doe in remembraunce of me. And likewise he tooke the cup whẽ Supper was done, saying. This cup is the new Testamẽt in my bloud, this do as often as ye shall drinke it, in the remembraunce of me. Here ye see by these woordes that it was ordeined to kepe the death of Christ in minde, and to testifie, that his body was giuẽ and his bloud shed for vs. And Luke. 22. This is my body that is giuẽ for you: do this in remembraunce of me. And this cup is the new Testament in my bloud, whiche shalbe shed for you. Loe here ye see agayne that it was instituted to kepe ỹ death of Christ in minde, and to testifie wherfore he dyed, euẽ to saue vs from sinne, death, and hell, that we should seeke none other meanes to be deliuered with: for there is none other name for vs to be saued by, but onely by the name of Jesus. Actes. 4. And as the children of Israell stong of the fiery Serpents, could haue none other remedy to saue them from present death, then to go and behold the brasen Serpent hanged vp by Moses in the wildernes, whiche lookyng on onely healed them: Euen so if the styng of death whiche is sinne haue wounded their soule, with the worksyng of the law in the consciences, there is none other remedy, then to runne to Christ, which shed his bloud hangyng vpon the Crosse, and to his euerlastyng Testament, and mercyfull promise, that it was shed for vs, for the remissiõ of our sinnes. If thou be stong with conscience of sinne, & the Cockatrice of thy poysoned nature, hath beheld her selfe in the glasse of the righteous law of GOD, there is none other salue for remedie, thẽ to runne to Christ immediatly, and to the father through him, And to say: father I haue sinned agaynst thee and thy godly, holy, and righteous law, & agaynst my brother, whom I ought of all right to loue for thy sake, as well as my selfe, forgeue me O father for thy sonne Jesus Christes sake, according to thy most mercyfull promises & Testament, & I will alke my brother forgiuenes (if the peace I meane be not made already) and will make to my power such satisfaction to hym as shall seme right in his eyes, if he be reasonable or as the congregatiõ shall assigne, or faythfull men thereunto appointed by the congregation, or such as I and he will agree vpon, and will endeuour my self to do so no more with the helpe of thy grace. And will submit my selfe to the wholesome ordinaunce of the cõgregation, accordyng the doctrine of thy sonne Jesus and of his faithful Apostles. For there is none other name giuen vnder heauen, wherby we shalbe saued, but onely the name of Jesus.

Only by the name of Jesus Christ commeth our saluation. Actes. 4.

Hereof ye see, that the Sacramẽt is an absolutiõ of our sinnes, as often as we receiue it, where it is truly taught and vnderstand, and receiued a right.

The nature of the Sacramẽt of the Supper of our Lord.

Hereof ye see also, that as the Hebrues wrote their stories, in couenaũts and signes, giuyng their signes such names as could not but keepe them in mynde: so God the father dyd follow the example of the people (or they folowyng hym) and commaunded hys promises, couenaunts, and prophecies to be written in gestures, signes, and ceremonies, geuyng them names, that could not but kepe his couenauntes in mynde. Euen so Christ wrote the couenaunt of his body & bloud, in bread and wine, geuyng thẽ that name, that ought to keepe couenaunt in remembraunce.

Sacraments were first ordeined by God to kepe hys couenantes and promises in remẽbraunce.

Sacramentes are no stories to keepe Christes couenaunts in memory.

And hereof ye see, that our Sacraments are bodyes of stories onely, and that there is none other vertue in thẽ, thẽ to testifie and exhibite to the senses and vnderstanding the couenauntes & promises made in Christs bloud. And here ye see that where the Sacramẽts or ceremonies, are not rightly vnderstãd there they be cleane vnprofitable.

Circumcisiõ without fayth auayled nothing

And as the Circumcisiõ in the flesh, their hartes still vncircumcised, hating the law of God and beleuyng in their owne imaginations, were Circumcised to their damnation.

Baptisme wont fayth auayleth nothyng.

And as, the Baptised in the flesh onely, the hart still vncleane, neither beleuyng in Christ for the forgeuenes of their sinnes, neither louyng their neighbour for Christes sake, are Baptised also vnto their greater damnatiõ. (For though God haue right to al mẽ, because he hath created and made mã: yet to all such persons by reason of the signe and badge, and of their owne cõsent, graunt, and promise, he hath more right to the callyng of them to the keepyng of his law, if they trust in hym onely, or to damne them, bicause when they know their duety, or might if they would, (the signe mouyng them and giuyng them an occasiõ to aske the rather) and yet do it not.) Euẽ so all that come to the Sacrament for any other purpose, then it was ordeined and instituted for, (that is to say) to seke absolution of their sinnes, with a set purpose to sinne no more, as nigh as they cã, & to cal to memorie ỹ benefite of the passiõ of Christ, with ỹ meditatiõ to weaken the flesh, & to stregth the spirite agaynst her, & to giue thankes agayne, (that is to say) to call to mynde, how much hee is bounde to loue his neighbour, to helpe his neede, and to beare his infirmitie and to forgeue him, if he haue offended, and desire forgeuenes, promising to amẽde, whereunto Christ bindeth all that wilbe partakers of his bloud. All such as are not thus prepared, come to their greater damnation. I passe ouer with silence the wicked & damnable doctrine of these seruauntes of Mammon, whiche for lucre peruert the true vse of the Sacrament, and hide it from the people for theyr gayne, teachyng it to be a sacrifice, instituted of God to helpe the soules of the dead in Purgatorie, and that it wil make men rich, and bring them to such promotion, as Christ neuer promised his Disciples, but forbad it them.

Some will say: This Sacrament needed not, Baptisme is inough, Baptisme, is a receiuyng into Religiõ, and there is the couenauntes made, what we shall do, and what we shall haue. And baptisme is a signe, wherby God hath right to vs, and we to God, and to Christ, and wherby euery man hath right to call other to do their dueties, and to rebuke them that will not. Neither our saluation so greatly standeth in that or any other Sacrament, that we could not be saued without them, by preachyng the word onely. Neuertheless God hath written his will, to haue his benefites kept in memorie, to his glorie and our benefite, and namely this benefite of all benefites, wherin onely the pith of our saluation resteth: therfore though the effect of it be signified by Baptisme, and though we be baptised to beleue in ỹ death of Christ, and to dye with him, by the mortifieng of the flesh: yet doth this Sacrament through ỹ rehearsing of the couenaũt, and breakyng of the bread, and powryng out of wine, much more lyuely expresse the whole storie, & kept it better in memorie, by dayly repeatyng therof, and hath more might and vehemencie to heale the conscience stong with fresh sinne. For the nature of mã is so weake, so feble, and so fraile, that he can not but sinne, as there is no mã that liueth and sinneth not.

Baptisme and the Sacrament of Christes body and bloud are both necessary.

The Sacrament of Baptisme what it worketh in vs.

The Sacrament of the body & bloud of Christ, what it worketh in vs.

And when he is so fallen then the Marke. 16.

The law driueth a sinner to desperatiō.

The deuill enemy to man.

The flesh enemy to man.

The impenitent and wilfull sinner feeleth not the wrath of God in his law.

The law, the flesh & the deuill are three great enemyes vnto man.

Why the Sacramentes were chiefly ordeined by God.

God hath cōmaunded his Sacramentes to be had in dayly vse & the cause why.

The Sacrament of Christes body & bloud is a sure token of Christes promise of our saluation in his death.

law looketh vpon him with so terrible a countenaunce, & so thundereth in hys eares, that he dare not abide, but turneth his backe and to go, but the enemie still allayleth him on the other side, to persuade him that GOD hath cast him away, saying: they that be Gods haue power to kepe his law, thou hast not, but breakest them: Ergo, thou art a cast away & a damned creature, and hell gapeth, and setteth opē her mouth to deuoure him, & the flesh also wrestleth with the spirit to kepe him down, and to take prisoner, and to stoppe his mouth that he crie no more vpon her, that she might sinne at pleasure without all feare.

The careles swyne that consent vnto sinne, feele not these thinges neither the hypocrites that haue put a visard on their face of the law, and make her looke with such a coūtenaunce as pleaseth thē, but the poore folkes that haue the eyes open, and consent, and fayne would do the law, they feele that can not be expressed with toung. Neither is there liuyng any man, that feeleth the vertue and power of the bloud of Christ, whiche hath not first felt the strong paynes of hell.

Seyng then that this mā is so sicke, so prone and ready to fall, and so cruelly inuaded, whē he hath sinned, of the feende, the flesh, and the law, that he is oft put to flight, and feared and made to runne away from his father. Therfore hath the God of all mercy and of his infinite pitie and bottomlesse compassion set vp this Sacrament, as a signe on an high hill, whence it may be sene on euery side a farre and neare, to call againe them that be fled and runne away. And with this Sacramēt he (as it were) clocketh to them, as an henne doth for her chickens, together them vnder the wynges of his mercy. And hath commaunded his Sacrament to be had in continuall vse to put them in mynde of mercy, layd vp for them in Christes bloud, and to witnesse and testifie it vnto them, and to be the seale therof. For the Sacrament doth much more vehemētly print lyuely the fayth, and make it sinke down into the hart, then do bare wordes onely. As a man is more sure of that he heareth, seeth, feeleth, smelleth, and tasteth then that he heareth onely.

Now when the wordes of the Testament and promises are spoken ouer the bread. This is my body that shalbe broken for you. This is my bloud that shalbe shed, for you, they confirme the fayth, but much more when the Sacrament is sene with the eyes, & the bread broken, the wine poured out or looked on: and yet more when I tast it and smell it. As ye see when a man maketh promise to an other with light wordes betwene them selues, and as they departed, hee to whom the promise is made, beginneth to doubt, whether the other spake earnestly or mocked, and doubteth whether he will remember his promise to bide by it or not. But when any man speaketh with aduisement and deliberation, the wordes are thē more credible: but yet if he sweare, it confirmeth the thyng more, and yet the more, if he strake handes, if he geue earnest, if he call record, if he geue his hād writing, and seale it: so is the promise more, and more beleued, for the hart gathereth: Lo he spake with aduisement, deliberation, and good sadnes, he clapped handes, called recordes, and put to his hand and seale, the man cannot be so fayne without the feare of God, as to deny all this: Shame shall make him bide by his promise, though he were such a man, that I could not compell him, if he would deny it. If a young mā breake a ryng betwene him and a mayde, doth not the fact testifie, & make a presumption to all men, that his hart meant, as his wordes spake.

Manoha Sampsones father when he had sene an aungell, Iud. 13. he sayd to his wife, we shal surely dye, because we haue sene the Lord. But his wife gathered other comfort of the circumstaunces, and sayd, if the Lord would kill vs, he would not haue receaued such offerings of our hands, nor shewed vs such thynges as he hath, nor told vs of thynges to come. Euen so our harts gather of the circūstaunces, protestatiōs, and other miracles of God, good argumentes and reasons, to stablish our weake fayth with all, such as we could not gather at bare wordes onely. Iudi. 13.

A brief collection of the promises.

And this we dispute, God sent his sonne in our nature, & made him feele all our infirmities, that moue vs to sinne, and named him Iesus (that is to say) Sauiour because he should saue his people from their sinnes. Math. 1. And after his death he sent his Apostles to preach the thynges or tydynges, and to thrust it in at the eares of vs, & set vp a Sacrament of it, to testifie it to be a seale of it, to thrust it in, not at the eares onely, by the rehearsing of the Math. 1.

promises and Testament ouer it, neither at our eyes onely in beholdynge it, but beate it in throughout our feelyng, tastyng and smellyng also, and to be repeated dayly, & to be ministred to vs. He would not (thinke we) make halfe so much a do with vs, if he loued vs not, or if he would not haue vs fayne come, and be as mercyfull to vs, as he was to his fredes in the old tyme, that fell and rose agayne. God so then vsed the Jewes, (to whom all ceremonyes were first giuen, and from whom they came to vs) euen such fashions as they vsed among them selues in all his promises and couenauntes, not for his necessitie, but for ours, that such thynges should be a witnes and testimonie, betwene him and vs, to cõfirme the fayth of his promise, that we should not waner nor doubt in them, when we looke on the seales of his obligations, wherwith he hath bound him selfe. And to keepe the promises and couenauntes better in mynde, and to make them the more deepe sinke in our hartes, and to be more earnestly regarded; and that we should aske what such thynges ment, and why God cõmaunded them to be obserued, that ignorannce should not excuse, if we know not what we ought to do & beleue, for naturall reason ought to teach vs, that ỹ outward, corporall & bodily thyng can not helpe the spirituall soule, and that GOD hath not delectation in such fantasie. Now if we were diligent to search for the good will of God, and would aske what such ceremonies meant, It were impossible, but then God, (which hath promised, Math. 7. If we seeke we shal finde,) would send vs true interpreters of his signes or Sacramentes.

Math. 7.

To an ignorant and vnfaithfull person the Sacramentes and ceremonies are sinne.

Idolatry what it is.

The spirituall and right seruyng of God what it is.

And he that beyng of a lawfull age obserueth a ceremonie, and knoweth not the entent, to him is the ceremonie not onely vnprofitable, but also hurtfull, and cause of sinne. In that he is not carefull, and diligent to search for it, and he there obserueth them with a false fayth of his owne imagination, thinking as all Idolaters do, and euer haue done, that the outward woorke is a sacrifice and seruice to God. The same therfore sinneth yet more deeper and more damnable: Neither is Idolatrie any other thyng then to beleue that a visible ceremonie is a seruice to the inuisible God whose seruice is spirituall as he is a spirite, and is none other thyng then to know that all is of hym and to trust in hym onely for all thynges and to loue him for his great goodnes and mercy aboue all, and our neighbours as our selues for his sake: vnto which spirituall seruyng of God, and to leade vs to the same, the old ceremonies were ordeined.

These be now sufficient concernyng the entent and vse of the ceremonies & how they came vp. Now let vs consider the wordes of this Testament and promises as they be rehearsed of the three Euangelistes Mathew, Marke, and Luke & of the Apostle Paule. For John whiche wrote last touched nothyng that was sufficiently declared of other Math in the 26. thus sayth, when they were eatyng Jesus tooke bread & gaue thankes and brake and gaue hys Disciples, and sayd, take, eate this is my body: And he tooke the cup and thanked and gaue it them, saying: Drinke ye all of this, for this is my bloud, whiche is of the new Testament ỹ that is shed for many for the remission of sinnes. First ye see by these wordes that the body was giuen to death, and the bloud shed for the remissiõ of sinnes and that for many. But who are these many? Verely they that turne to GOD to beleue in hym onely and to endeuour them selues to keepe his law from hence forth. which many, yet in respect of thẽ that loue not the law, are but very few, and euen that little flocke that gaue them selues wholy to follow Christ, wherfore if any man thinke hee beleue in Christ, and haue not the law written in his hart to consent, that his dutie is to loue hys brother for Christ sake as Christ loued him and to endeuour him selfe so to do, The fayth of that same man is vayne and built vppon sand of of his own imagination and not vpon the rocke of Gods word: for his worde vnto which he hath bound himselfe is, that they onely which turne to God to keepe his lawes shall haue mercy for Christes sake. Drinke of it all for it is my bloud of the new Testament, for it is (that is to say) the drinke that is in the cup, or if ye list the cup is my bloud of the new Testament takyng the cup for drinke, by a maner of speaking vsed in all tounges as when we say. I haue dronke a cup of wine, we take there the cuppe for the wyne. My bloud of this new Testamẽt, that is to say my bloud for whose shedding sake this new Testament and couenaũt is made to you, for the forgeuenes of sinne.

The institution of the Sacramentes of Christes body and bloud.

Who they are that receaue the benefite of Christes death.

The cup of the bloud of Christ what it is.

The old Testament made betwene God and your fathers in mount Synai in whiche, life was promised to thē onely that kept it, and to the breakers, death, wrath and vengeance, and to be accursed, and no mētion made of mercy whiche was confirmed with bloud, Exod.24. Exodus. 24. Moyses offered halfe the bloud to God and sprinkled the people with the other halfe to cōfirme the couenaunt and to bynde both parties: neither was there any couenaūt made that was not confirmed with bloud as Hebr.9. it is rehearsed Hebrues the 9. And as we see in the bookes of Moses, whose custome of bloudshedding was not onely to confirme those old couenauntes, but also to be a prophecie of the bloud that should be shed to confirme this Testament. That old cruell & fearefull testamēt, which drew ỹ people away, so that they durst not abyde the voyce

The great & mercyfull differēce betwene the old Testament & the new. of thunder, nor the terrible sight of the fire, but went and stode a farre of, was cōfirmed with the bloud of calues. But this new and gentle Testament which calleth agayne and promiseth mercy to all that will amend: And as it is a better Testamēt, so is it confirmed with a better bloud to make men see loue, to loue agayne, and to be a greater confirmation of the loue promised. For if he

The great mercy of God to mā kynd. gaue vs his sonne what will he deny vs? If God so loued vs whē we were sinners and knew him not, that hee gaue his sonne for vs, how much more loueth he vs now whē we loue agayn and would fayne kepe his cōmaundementes? In the old couenaunts the people were sprinckled with bloud of calues without in their bodies to bynd thē to keepe the law, els we were boūd to iust damnatiō for the breakyng of it.

Here it is sayd, drinke of it euery one, that your soules within may bee sprinkled and washed thorough fayth with the bloud of the sonne of God for the forgeuenes of sinne and to be partakers of a more easie and kynde Testament, vnder which if you sinne thorough fragilitie you shalbe warned louingly & receiued to mercy if you will turne agayne and amend.

Marke. 14. Marke in the. 14. And as they dyd eate, Iesus tooke bread, and when hee had geuen thākes, he brake it, & gaue it to them & sayd, Take, eate, this is my body: and he tooke the cup and when he had geuē thākes, he tooke it to thē, & they al dranke of it: And he said to thē, this is my bloud of ỹ new Testament, whiche is shed for many. This is all one with Mathew as is afore sayd.

Luke.22. Luke in the 22. And he tooke bread & when he had geuen thankes, he brake it and gaue to them, saying. This is my body which is giuen for you, this do in remembraunce of me, Likewise also, when he had supped he tooke the cup, saying: This cuppe is the new Testament in my bloud which is shed for you.

Here is also to be noted that ỹ cause of the institution was to be a memorial to testifie that Christes body was giuē and his bloud shed for vs. And agayne where Mathew & Marke sayd, this is my bloud in the new Testament. Luke sayth. This cup is the new testamēt in my bloud whiche shalbe shed for you. This is a straunge speakyng & far frō the vse of our toung, to call the signe & confirmation by the name of the thing that is signified & confirmed. The Testament is that Christes bloud is shed for our sinnes. And Christ sayth. This cup is that testament, signifieng thereby that ỹ thing that is meant by this ceremony is that we beleue that his bloud shedding is the remissiō of our sinnes, which is the very Testament.

The cause of the institution of ỹ Sacramēt of Christes body.

The signe of the body of Christ is called by the name of Christes body, whiche is there signified.

Paul. 1. Cor. 11. saith on this maner. That which I deliuered vnto you I receaued of the Lord. For the Lorde Iesus the same night in the whiche he was betrayed, tooke bread, and when he had geuen thankes he brake it and said. Take ye and eate, this is my body which is broken for you: this do in remembraūce of me: After the same maner also he tooke the cup when he had supped saying. This cup is the new Testament in my bloud: this do as oftē as ye drinke it in the remēbraūce of me. For as often as ye shall eate this bread and drinke this cup ye shall shewe the Lordes death vntill he come. 1.Cor.11.

As Mathew and Marke agree in these wordes. So do Lucas and Paul. And as it is aboue declared vppon the wordes of Luke, and so here by oft repeatyng one thyng. This do in remembraunce of me. This cup is the new Testament in my bloud. This do as oft as ye drinke it in the remembraunce of me. Agayne, as oft as ye shall eate of this bread and drinke of this cup, so oft ye must declare the Lordes death. By this oftē repeatyng (I say) ye may euidently perceaue, the cause, entēt, and whole purpose of the institution of this Sacrament was to testifie and confirme the fayth of the Testament made in the death of Christ, how that for his sake our sinnes shalbe forgeuen.

So, do this in the remembraunce of me, that is to say, Take bread & wyne and rehearse the couenaunt, and testament ouer them, How that my body was broken and my bloud shed for many and thē geue them to the people to eate and drinke to be a signe and earnest, and the seale of the Testament, & crie vpon them without ceasling to beleue in me onely for the remission of sinnes and not to dispayre how weake soeuer they be, onely if they hang on me and desire power to keepe the law after my doctrine and example of my lyfe and do more and be sory bycause they cannot do that good thyng which they would.

1.Cor.11. For sayth Paul who soeuer shall eate of this bread or drinke of the cup of the Lord vnworthely shalbe giltie of the body and bloud of the Lord, that is to say, whoso receaueth the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ with an vncleane hart not forsaking the old lustes of the flesh. For purposing to folow Christ, and to loue his neighbour as onely Christ was to hym mercyfull. The same sinneth agaynst the body & bloud of Christ. In that hee maketh a mocke of the earnest death of Christ, & Hebr.10. as it is written Hebrues the. 10. treadeth Christ vnder foote and counteth the bloud of the Testament wherwith he was sāctified as an vnholy thyng, & doth dishonour to the spirite of grace.

What the Sacramēt meaneth & why the same was instituted. Of this ye may perceaue agayne what the Sacrament meaneth & what the entent of the ordinaunce was, and how such ceremonies came vp, and whence they had their begynnyng and what the frute thereof is, and what is therin to hy sought: And though this were inough so that I might here wel cease, yet because the vnquiet scrupulous and superstitious nature of man wholy giuen to Idolatrie hath styred vp such traditions about this one Sacrament most specially: I cannot but speake therof somewhat more and declare what my conscience thinketh in this matter.

There are iij. opinīōs about the Sacramēt of the body and bloud of Christ. Ye shall vnderstand therfore that there is great dissention and three opinions about the woordes of Christ where he sayth in pronouncyng the testament ouer the bread This is my body: And in pronouncyng it ouer the wyne This is my bloud. One part say, that these woordes This is my body: This is my bloud compell vs to beleue vnder payne of damnation that the bread and wyne are chaunged into the very body and bloud of Christ really. As the water at Cana Galilee was turned into very wyne.

The first opinion.

The second part sayth, we be not bound to beleue that bread and wyne are chaunged but onely that his body and bloud are there presently. The second opinion.

The thyrd say, we be bound by these woordes onely to beleue that Christes body was broken and hys bloudshed for the remissiō of our sinnes and that there is no other satisfaction for sinne then the death and passion of Christ. The thyrd opinion.

The first say these woordes This is my body: This is my bloud compell vs to beleue, that thynges there shewed, are the very body and bloud of Christ really. But bread and wyne say they cannot be Christes naturall body: therfore the bread and wyne, are chaunged turned, altered and transubstantiated, into the very body & bloud of Christ, And they of this opinion haue buried them selues in seekyng subtilties and similitudes to proue how the very body and bloud might be there vnder the similitude of bread and wine onely, the very bread and wyne beyng thus trā-substantiated. And these men haue ben so occupyed in slaying, all that wil not captiue their wits to beleue them: that they neuer taught nor vnderstode that the Sacrament is an absolution to all that therby beleue in the body & bloud of Christ. A declaration made by them of the first opinō aboue mentioned.

The second part graunt, with the first, that the woordes compel vs to beleue that the things shewed in the Sacrament are the very body and bloud of Christ. But where the first say bread and wine cannot be the very body and bloud of Christ: There they vary and dissent from them, affirming that bread and wine may and also is Christes body really and very bloud of Christ: and say that it is as true to say that bread is Christes body and that wyne is hys bloud as it is true to say Christ beyng a very mā is also very God. And they say, as the Godhead and manhode in Christ are in such maner coupled togegether that mā is very God and God very man: Euen so the very body and the bread are so coupled that it is as true to say that bread is the body of Christ and the bloud so annexed there with the wyne, that it is euen as true to say that the wyne is Christes bloud. A declaratiō of them of the secōd opinion aboue mentioned.

The first though they haue slayne so many, in and for the defence of their opinion, yet they are ready to receiue the second sort to fellowshyp, not greatly stryuyng with them or abhorryng the presence of bread and wyne with the very body and bloud so that they yet by that meanes may keepe hym there still, and hope to sell hym as deare as before, and also some to bye hym and not to minish the price.

A declaration of the of the third opinion a-bouе mentioned.

The third sort affirme, that the wordes meane no more but onely that we beleue by the thynges that are there shewed that Christes body was brokē and his bloud shed for our sinnes, if we will forsake our sinnes & turne to God to kepe his law. And they say that these sayinges, This is my body: and This is my bloud, shewyng bread & wyne are true as Christ meant them, and as the people of that countrey (to whō Christ spake) were accustomed to vnderstand such wordes, and as the Scripture vseth in a thousand places to speake. As when one of vs sayth, I haue dronke a cup of good wyne, that saying is true as the mā meant: that he dranke wyne onely and not the cup: whiche wordes happely, in some other nations eares, would sound that he dranke the cuppe. And as when we say of a child. This is such a mans very face: the wordes are true as the maner of our land is to vnderstand them, that the face of the one is very like the other. And as whē we say he gaue me his fayth and hys truth in my hand, the wordes are true as we vnderstand them that he stroke handes with me, or gaue earnest in signe or token that he would byde by his promise. For the fayth of a mā doth alway rest in his soule, and cannot be giuen out though we giues signes and tokens of them. Euen so (say they) we haue a thousād examples in the Scripture, where signes are named with names of thynges signified by them. As Jacob called the place where hee saw the Lord face to face. Phenyell that is Gods face, when he saw the Lord face to face. Now it is true to say of that field that it is Gods face, though it be not his very face. The same field was so called to signifie that Jacob there saw God face to face. Gene. 33.

The chief hold and principall anere that the two first haue, is these wordes, This is my body: This is my bloud. Unto these the third answereth as is aboue sayd, other textes they alledge for them selues, whiche not onely do not strength their cause, but rather make it worse. As in ỹ sixt of John which they draw and wrest to the carnall and fleshly eating of Christes body in ỹ mouth, when it onely meaneth of this eating by fayth. For when Christ sayd except ye eate the flesh of the sonne of mā and drinke hys bloud ye haue no lyfe in you. This cannot be vnderstanded of the Sacrament. For Abraham had life and all the old holy fathers, Christes mother, Elizabeth, Zacharias, John Baptist, Symeon, Anna, and all the Apostles, had lyfe already by fayth in Christ: Of which not one had eatē hys flesh and dronke his bloud with theyr bodily mouthes, But truth it is, that the righteous liueth by his fayth: Ergo, to beleue and trust in Christes bloud is the eatyng that there was meant, as the texte well proueth, if they say we graunt that life commeth by faith: but we all that beleue must be Baptised to keepe the law and to keepe the couenaunt in mynde: Euen so all that lyueth by fayth must receiue the Sacrament. I answere. The Sacrament is a confirmation to weake consciences, and in no wise to be despised, howbeit many haue lyued by fayth in the wildernes, whiche in. 20. 30. or 40. yeares haue not receiued the Sacrament. Notwithstanding this Oration is nothing to the purpose. For Christ spake to the blinde and vnbeleuyng Jewes, testifieng to them that they could haue no lyfe, excepte they should first eate his flesh and drinke his bloud: Ergo, this eatyng and drinkyng is meant onely of that thyng, that first bryngeth lyfe into the soule and that is faith by your owne confession. And therfore must it be vnderstand of fayth onely, and not of the Sacrament.

Fayth encreaseth by the worthy receiuyng of the Sacramentes.

And Mathew the last, I am with you alwayes euen vnto the end of the world, which may well be vnderstand, and so was it of old Doctours that by his spirituall beyng with vs by fayth, and in his spirite and so may that text of Mathew 18. be vnderstand where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the middest of them. There is many tymes iij. or three good men that mete together in Christes name where the Sacrāmēt is not. And Paule, Ephes. 3. boweth his knees for the Ephesians to God, that he would geue thē his riches to be strengthened with his spirite that Christ may dwell in their hartes thorough fayth. where the hart then beleueth in Christ, there dwelleth Christ in the hart: though there be no bread in the hart, neither yet in the maw. Math. 28. Math. 18. Ephe. 3.

The two first partes taking the old Doctours to be on their side. I answere many of the old doctours spake so mystically that they seme sometimes to

Baptistes are the wryters of Scriptures.

to affirme playnly that it is but bread and wyne onely concernyng the substaunce. And that it is a figure of the body and bloud of Christ onely & some tyme that it is his very body & bloud, therfore it were nedelesse to wade any further herein.

In aunswere to them of the second opinion.

And vnto them of the second opinio that the bread is his very body, I aunswere ye must remember that the old Doctours, as earnestly call it a sacrifice as they do Christes body. But that ye denye: And say with the Epistle to the Hebrues that he was but once sacrificed for altogether whē he offered & sacrificed him selfe to the father for our sinnes, and can now no more be sacrificed. Christ dieth no more now and therfore is no more sacrificed. Neither do we properly offer him to God. But he in his mortall flesh offered himselfe for vs to GOD the father and purchased therewith a generall pardon for euer.

Christ once sacrificed is a sacrifice for euer.

The doctrine of the Papistes.

And now doth God the father proffer him and giueth him to vs. And the Priestes in Gods stede proferre hym and giue hym vnto the people for a remission and absolution of their sinnes dayly, if they by the mouyng and styrryng of the Sacramēt beleue in the body and bloud of Christ.

Papistes be agreued with such as consent not to their grosse opinion.

Wherfore ye ought of no right to be angry with them of the thyrd opinion though they denie the Doctors, where they seme to say that the Sacrament is the very body of Christ. As they be not angrie with you, when ye deny them, where they as earnestly affirme that it is a sacrifice. Neuertheless they aunswere that Doctours call it a sacrifice onely because it is the memoriall, the earnest and seale of that euerlasting sacrifice offered once for all. And euen so say they that the Doctours called the Sacrament the body & bloud of Christ after the same maner onely, because it is the memoriall, the earnest and seale of body and bloud, as the vse of Scriptures is to call signes by the names of thynges signified therby.

Signes cōmonly called by the name of thynges signified therby.

And vnto them of the first opinion I aunswere with the same reason that it is impossible that the Sacrament should be a very sacrifice. For neither the sacrifices of the old law which prophecied the sacrifising of Christ, neither yet our redemption was fulfilled at night. For if the Scriptures and prophecies were then fulfilled and we thē redemed. Christ dyed on the morow in vayne and false are the Apostles and Euangelistes that preache hys body breakyng and bloud sheddyng vnder Pontius Pylate by the persecution of Cayphas and Annas, to bee our redemption.

Note this worthy & true argument following.

Moreouer for all the breakyng and deuidyng of the Sacrament of his body among his Apostles. His body abode still alyue and for all the pouryng out of the Sacrament of his bloud of the pot into the cup, and out of the cup into the mouthes and belyes of his Disciples: hee blede as fresh on the morow, as though he had blede then nothyng at all.

He was verely much more easely sacrificed that night in the breakyng & diuidyng of the bread and pouring out of wyne, then he was on the morow. The Sacrament was that night no doubt but a description of his passiō to come. And it is now a memorial of his passiō past. He instituted the maner of the Sacrament then, and taught hys Disciples also, that they after vnderstode when he was risen agayne, and not then, as they neuer had capacitie to vnderstand hym when he spake of his death. For they then imagined carnally of Christ (as the Iewes yet do, that Christ should neuer dye as he dyd, not concernyng his Godhead but should lyue euer bodily as he now doth concernyng his resurrection.

All the doctors with one accorde call the Sacrament a sacrifice.

Wherfore seyng that all the Doctors with one accorde cal the Sacrament so earnestly a sacrifice they cannot otherwise vnderstand them that they so say after the vse of the Scripture onely, but because it is the memoriall of the sacrifice of his death & bloudsheddyng. Why should they then of right be offended if we vnderstand the Doctours after the same maner whē they call it his body and bloud? And that they so call it after the vse of the Scripture because that it is onely a memoriall of his body and bloud.

Papistes should be indifferent in iudgementes as Prote-stants are.

Transubstantiatiō was a worde vsed among the olde Doctours.

As concernyng the transubstantiation: I thinke that such a speech was among the old Doctours though they that came after vnderstode thē amisse. Their hartes were grosse, through busiyng thē selues to much with worldly businesse, for the bread and wyne are but onely bread & wine till the wordes of the Testament bee rehearsed ouer them, & then they ceasse to be any more bread & wyne in the hartes of the true beleuers, for the hart after these words once spoken thinketh onely vppon the couenaunt made in the body and bloud of Christ and through fayth eateth hys body and drinketh his blood, though the eyes and other sences perceaue nothyng but bread and wyne. As when a man sometyme seeketh for a text in the Bible he seeth paper and inke and the figure of letters: yet his hart not once thinketh of any other thyng thē on the wordes and sence of his text. And therof no doubt came vp this transubstantiation through false vnderstandyng.

Another thyng is this, none of those wicked heretickes which denied Christ to be very God, or any of them that denyed Christ to bee man or to haue a very body saue a phātastical body dyd cast the true beleuers in the teth at any time, of the fayth of Christes body present in their Sacrament euery where, which thing is not like but they would haue done, if that opinion had thē bene a generall article of the fayth.

An effectual and good Argument.

Neither was there any heresie or diuersitie of opinion or disputyng about the matter till the Pope had gathered a Councell to confirme this transubstāciation: wherfore it is most likely that this opinion came vp by thē of latter dayes.

The Pope confirming transubstantiatiō, did purchase hys own gayne to the ouerthrow of the right vse of Christes Sacrament.

Furthermore all the law and Prophetes, all that Christ dyd, or can yet do, is to bring vs to beleue in him, and in God the father through him, for the remissiō of sinnes, & to bring vs vnto that (whiche immediatly foloweth out of that belefe) to loue our neighbours for hys sake as he loued vs. Wherfore if Christ did put his bodilie presence in the Sacrament and would we should beleue it: It is done onely to bring vs to this fayth. Now is this fayth no where lesse had, then where that opinion is most strong neither so cruelly persecuted of Jew or Turke, as of thē that most feruently defend that opiniō. True fayth maketh a man to loue hys brother, but that opinion maketh them to hate and slay their brethren that better beleue in Christ, then they of that opinion do, and that murther do they for feare of losyng that they haue gotten through that opinion.

The common persuasion of Papistes.

Item, they of this opiniō in stede of teachyng vs to beleue in Christ, teach vs to serue Christe with bodily seruice, which thing is nought els but Idolatry. For they preach that all the ceremonies of the Masse are a seruice to God, by reason of the bodily workes to obtayne forgeuenes of sinnes therby, and to deserue & merite therewith. And yet Christ is now a spiritual substaunce with his father hauyng also a spirituall body and with the father to be worshypped, in spirite onely. And his seruice in the spirite is onely to beleue in hym for the remissiō of sinne, to call vpon hym, & giue hym thankes & to loue our neighbours for his sake.

Now all workes done to serue man and to bring him to this poynt to put his trust in Christ, are good & acceptable to God: but done for any other purpose they be Idolatry and Imageseruice and make God an Idole or bodily Image.

Agayne seyng the fayth of the Testament in Christes blood is the lyfe of the righteous from the begynnyng of the world to the end: and for as much as the Sacramēt was instituted onely to bring to this lyfe. Now when they which thinke not the body to be presēt in the Sacramēt haue by the preaching and confirmation of the Sacrament obtayned this lyfe or stedfast fayth in Christes blood, and by the dayly vse of the Sacrament are more & more hardned therein and in the loue that springeth thereof: what reasonable cause haue the contrary part (whiche beleue the body present and bread turned into the very body as fleth bones, here, sinewes, nayles & all other, as he was put on the crosse of length and quantitie, I cannot tell what) to rayle on vs as heretickes, hate persecute, and slay vs most cruelly, as enemyes? Christ sayth Qui contra me non est, mecum est, He that is not agaynst me is with me. Marke. 9.

Papistes are cruell persecutors.

Now they that beleue in Christ for the remissiō of their sinnes and for his sake loue their foes are not Christes enemies Ergo, they be on Christes side. Why then should they that boast themselues to be Christes frendes: slay thē? Fayth in Christes blood and in the father thorough him is Gods seruice in spirite. And so haue they whiche beleue not the bodily presence serued God a long time, and there to bene holpen by the Sacrament. The other part fallen there from through beleuyng the body present, seruyng God, with bodily seruice (which is Idolatrie) and to make God an Idoll or Image, in that they trust in the goodnes of their woorkes (as they which serue tyrauntes) & not in the goodnes of God through trust in the blood of Christ: Ergo, they that beleue not the bodily presence, (not a litle therto compelled through the wicked Idolatrie of the contrary belefe) are not to be thought so euill as the other would haue them seme to be.

The faithfull are in good state though the wicked iudge the contrary.

Paule

1.Cor.13. Paule teacheth. 1. Cor. 13. that if a man had all other giftes that God can giue man and had not charitie to loue his neighbour, it helpeth not. For all other giftes and the remissiō in Christes blond also are giuen hym of God to bryng hym to loue hys neighbour (which thing had) a mā hath all, which not had, a man hath nothyng.

Phil. 2. And Phil. 2. how swetely and how vehemently cōmaundeth he them to draw all one way to be of one accorde & one mynde or sentence, And to do nothyng of strife or of vayne glory, that is to say of hate or disdayne one of another, or of affectiō to him selfe for to seme glorious, but ech to preferre other thyough meknes and to haue his opinion suspect, and to feare least he hath not obtayned the vnderstandyng, rather thē of presumption to his owne witte to despise & hate the cōtrary party & persecute as a tyraunt. And in the thyrd of the same Paul sayth, let as many as be perfect (that is to say be truly taught) and know the law truly and her office and the office and effect of fayth, and know whiche be good workes before God, and what the intent of them is, let (sayth he) so serue as we be come, procede in one rule, that we may be of one accorde.

Fayth onely iustifieth & what it is to say. Now hetherto we be all come, and this generall rule haue we gotten that fayth onely iustifieth that is to say that the sinne is forgiuen onely for Christes sake: & againe that our duety is to loue our neighbours no lesse then Christ loued vs, wherfore let vs procede forth in this rule & exhort ech other to trust to Christ & to loue ech other as Christ dyd, and in this where in we all agree let vs bewise onely & feruēt and strine who shalbe greatest and go formost.

And in this which is not opened to all parties, let vs be meeke sober and cold and keepe our wisedome secret to our selues and abyde pacietly till God open it to other also.

The cause why the third part say that this worde (is) compelleth vs not to beleue the bodily presence of Christ to be there is this. The Iewes (say they) are wont euer to name the memoriall and signes of thinges with the very name of the thyng signified that the very name might the better keepe the thyng in mynde. As when Iacob Gene. 32. turned home agayne out of Mesopotamia saw the aūgels of God come agaynst hym hee called the place where he saw thē Mahanaim: An host, because his posteritie in tyme to come, when they hard the field whiche was none host yet so called should aske why it was so named, ỳ their elders might thereby haue an occasion to teach that Iacob saw there an host of aungels.

And agayn in the same chapter whē the aungell that wrestled with hym had blessed hym & was departed, Iacob called the name of the place Pheniell Gods face, that the people in time to come should aske why it was called Gods face & their Elders should aunswere because Iacob saw there GOD face to face that the name should keepe the thyng in mynde.

And agayne in the 33. where he had made boughtes, or houses of boughes for his beastes hee named the place Sucoth, that is Boothes. Gene. 33.

Item Gene. 33. He bought a parcell of land and built there an alter and called it, the mighty God of Israell.

Item Gene. 35. the God of Bethell, and Genesis the last chapter Ioseph held a lamentation for his father seuen dayes and the people of the countrey called the name of the place Abell Masrayn the lamentation of the Egyptiās. Now the place was not the lamentation, but so called to kepe the lamentation in memorie. Gene. 35.

Item Exodus xij. the lambe is called Pesah, a passing by, because the aungell dis passe by the houses and hurted not where it was slayne, and the blond striken on the postes: that the name should kepe the thyng in memorie. Exod. 12.

Item Exod. 29. and Leuit. 8. almost euery where the beast offered for sinne is called sinne, whiche vse of speakyng Paule vseth Rom. 9. and 2. Cor. 5. and calleth Christ sinne, whē Christ is neither sinne nor sinnefull, but an acceptable offeryng for sinne, & yet he is called our sinne, because he bare our sinnes on his backe, and because our sinnes are cōsumed and made no sinne in him if we will forsake our sinnes and beleue in Christ for the remission therof. Christ is also called our righteousnes to certifie vs that when we haue no righteousnes of our owne, yet that his righteousnes is giuen vs to make satisfactiō for our vnrighteousnes, if we will beleue it.

Item Exodus the 30. The sinne or sinne offeryng is called Atonemēt, and it was yet but a signe certifieng the cōscience, that the atonement was made and that God had forgiuen the sinne. Exod. 30.

Item Iudicum 10. They called the name Iudi. 10.

name of a certaine Horna, as it were an vtter destructiō. Because that they had vtterly destroyed man woman & child and all that bare life.

Iudi. 15. Item Iudicum 15. the place where Sampson killed mē with an Asse iawe was called Lehy that is Jaw bone, to kepe the acte in mynde.

Iudic. 19. Item Judic. 19. There went a companie out of the tribe of Dan and pitched besides Kyriath Iearym, in Juda, and the place was called euer after, the host of Dan, onely to keepe the thyng in mynde.

1. Reg. 6. Item 1. Reg. 6. A great stone where God slewe fifty thousand was called the great lamētation. In so much that the text sayth they put the Arke on the great lamentation.

1. Reg. 7. Item. 1. Reg. 7. Samuell pitched a stone on an end, and called it the helpe stone, because God had there holpen them and giuen them a great victorie of the Philistines.

3. Reg. 22. Item the last of the 3. of kinges Sedechias came to Achab with a couple of hornes on his head, saying, with these hornes shalt thou slay the Assyrians hee meant not that Achab should take those hornes and goe at the Assyriās: But would that he should beleue onely that as a beast scattereth a cocke of hay with his hornes so should Achab scatter the host of the Assyrians, with his host.

Nume. 6. Item Numeri the. 6. he that voweth abstinence must let his heare grow to keepe his abstinence in mynde, and when his abstinence is out, he is commaunded to shaue the head of his abstinence, and to offer such offerynges as are there appoynted after that he hath shauen of his abstinence. Loe here, the heare is called his abstinēce, and is yet but a memorie of his abstinence.

Ierem. 7. Item Jere. 7. The Prophet was cōmaūded to shere of his abstinence and to cast it away, which abstinence is but his heare.

Ezech. 12. Also Ezechiell 12. God commaunded the Prophet to remoue withall his goodes after such maner as conquerers carie away the people captiue frō countrey to coūtrey, and when he had done. The Lord sayd vnto him, this prophesie is the Capteine or Prince of Jerusalem, when it was but an exāple to him how he should be serued.

A short and effectuall collection of the former argumentes.

Finally where Mathew and Marke say. This cup is my bloud of the new Testament. Paule and Luke say This cup is the new Testament in my bloud. Now must the sence of the woordes of the two first Matthew and Marke be all one with the sences of the woordes of the .ij. last Luke & Paule. The woordes of Luke and Paule are. This cup is the new Testament made in my bloud, or for my bloud sake.

Now the Testament is that hys bloud was shed for our sinnes, but it is impossible that the cup or his bloud should be that promise. Wherfore the sence must be nedes that it is the memoriall and seale of the Testamēt onely. And therefore where Mathew and Marke say. This cuppe is my bloud of the new Testamēt, the sence must nedes be also. That it is the memoriall & seale therof, onely calling after the vse of the Hebrues the signe with ỹ name of that which is signified that is to say, calling the wine whiche onely signifieth the bloud with the name of the bloud. And then it followeth that the bread is called his body after the same maner because it is the signe of his body.

These & like exāples moue the third part to affirme that we be not bound to beleue that the bread is the very body of Christe. Though it be so called, nor that the bread is transubstantiated into the body. No more thē the things here rehearsed are that they be called or transubstantiated into the very things which they be called.

The other will aunswere, though this memoriall were not the thynges whose names they beare yet it wil not follow that it should bee so here in the Sacrament: for they that giue such other names had no power to make the thynges so to be: But Christ is very God and hath power to make his body to be euery thyng and euery where.

An obiection made by ỹ Papistes.

I aunswere, that God cannot make euery of his creatures God, neither cā it bee proued lesse repugnaunce that a creature should bee euery where then that he should be God.

In aunswere to ỹ former obiection.

Moreouer, though God where he appeared to Jacob had pitched a stone on an end and called it Gods face, yet had he not bene any more bound to beleue that it had bene the very face of God then if Jacob had done it. The almightynes of GOD standeth not in that hee is able to do all that our foolish leude thoughtes may Imagine. But because all power is his & of him and that hee doth all he will and hath made all of naught, and can bryng all to naught agayne. And can do all that includeth not cōtrarie to the truth and veritie that God hath put in his creatures: and because he can do thynges impossible for man or any other creature to do or to thinke how they shuld be done, therfore he is called the Lord almighty, but because to braule about such possibilitie, or impossibilitie is the lust of Sophisters, and also the desire of the deuill to quench the profession of our Baptisme and to wipe out the Image of Christ out of our hartes, and a thyng endeleese: Therfore I compte it wickednes to wade forth in it, and to giue them that seeke an occasion perpetually to scold. The negatiue may a man hold till they can proue the affirmatiue.

Moreouer, if bread be the very body of Christ, whether abidyng the very body still or transubstantiated, and enioy the glorye of the soule of Christ and also of the Godhead.

It semeth impossible to be auoyded but that whyst was made man & dyed: Also bread, whiche semeth to some a great inconuenience. Howbeit that great proclamation of bread and also that high power of Priestes aboue all aūgels I admit also to auoide all braulyng but one reaō I haue vnto which I cleaue somewhat and it is this.

An excellēt argument.

All that is betwene God and man in the Scripture is for mans necessitie and not for any nede that GOD hath therof: And other spirituall profite can none haue by that fayth in the Sacrament, then to be taught therby to beleue in Christ our Sauiour and to do good to his neighbour now is that beleefe & loue had as well & rather better as is aboue proued without such fayth with it, Ergo, where the Scripture compelleth to no such beleue it is wickednes to make it a necessary article of our fayth, & to slay them that cā not thinke that it ought to be beleued.

Notwithstandyng all these reasons and the damnable Idolatrie which the Papistes haue cōmitted with the Sacrament: yet whether they affirme the body and bloud to bee present with the bread and wyne, or the bread and wyne to be turned and transubstantiated into the body and bloud, I am therewith content (for vnities sake) if they will there cease, and let him be there onely to testifie and confirme the Testament or couenaunt made in Christes bloud and body, for which cause onely Christ instituted the Sacrament. But and if they will rage further with their blind reasons of their subtill sophistrie & deuilish Idolatrie, & say, where Christes bloud is, there is his body and where his body is, there is his soule, & where his soule is, there is his godhead & the trinity, the father, the sonne, & the holy ghost and there men ought to pray and say. O father whiche art present with thy sonne Christ vnder bread & wyne, or in forme of bread & wyne. If (I say) they so raue, thē as the old Prophet for like Idolatrie demeth God to dwel in the temple or to haue pleasure in sacrifice of bloud of goates, shepe & calues: Euē so deny I the body of Christ to be any more in the Sacrament then God was in the goldē calues, which Ieroboham set vp to be prayed to, the one in Bethell and the other in Dan for though God bee present euery where, yet if heauen of heauens can not compasse hym to make hym a dwellyng place (as the Scripture testifieth, and much lesse the temple that was at Ierusalem, how should he haue a dwellyng place in a litle wafer or crome of bread. God dwelleth not in the temple neither did our fathers, which were of the true faith in the old Testamēt pray to God as present in the temple, but the name of God onely was in the tēple 3. of the Kinges 8. and his law and couenauntes and wonderfull deedes were therin writtē in signes and were there preached and testified continually of the true Priestes and Prophetes vnto the people the fathers of the true fayth came thether. 3.Reg.8.

Furthermore of the feruent loue which they had towardes the lawes & couenauntes of God. For the whiche Prophets. Salomō prayed so earnestly vnto the Lord God saying. Here thou O God in heauen thy dwellyng place and do all that the straunger calleth to thee for: that all nations of the earth may know the & feare thy name, as do this people Israell &c.

Read the third booke of kynges the 8. chapter when God delighted onely in the fayth of the offerer, whiche beleued in God onely for all mercy, taking the sacrifice for a sure token and earnest of the mercy of God, certified by that signe, that God loued them, and was at one with them for Christes sake to come. As we should be certified by the Sacrament of God with vs for Christes death that is past. And Christe taught vs in our prayers to looke vp to heauen and say, Our father whiche art in heauē, & he him selfe in all his prayers did lift vp his eyes to heauē to his 3.Reg.8.

father, and so did hee when he instituted the Sacrament and rehearsed the wordes of the couenaunt ouer bread & wyne as it is written Mathew. 26. Marke. 14. Luke. 22. 1. Cor. 11. in these wordes Iesus tooke bread. &c.

Math. 26.
Marke. 14.
Luke. 22.
1. Cor. 11.

Christ though he affirme him selfe to be the sonne of God & his father to be in him, yet he taught not his Disciples to direct the prayer to the father in him but vp to the father in heauen neither lift he vp his eyes or prayer to his father in the Sacramēt but to his father in heauē. I know diuers, & diuers mē know me which loue me as I do thē, yet if I should pray them whē I mete thē in the strete openly they would abhorre me, but if I pray thē where they be appointed to mete me secretly they will here me & accept my request. Euē so though gods presēce be euery where yet will he be prayed so, vp to the place onely where he shall see him, & where he would haue vs for to lōg for to be.

Moreouer if I graunt you that the bloud of Christ is in the cup, it will follow that his body is there also, neither when I graunt that his body is in the bread, or vnder the forme of bread, will it folow that his soule is ther to. Christ made ẏ bread the Sacrament of his body onely wherefore as the bread is no similitude of his bloud. So am I not bound or ought to affirme ẏ his bloud is there presēt. And he did institute the wyne to be the Sacramēt of his bloud onely. And happely it was red wyne, ẏ more louely to represēt it. Now as the wine in no similitude doth represēt the body, so am I not bound or ought to affirme that his body is there present.

Ye say that Christ is so mighty, that though he stode mortall before his Disciples eyes, yet he was able to make ẏ same body ẏ same time to be in the Sacrament immortall, & to be vnder euery litle peece of bread or of the Sacramēt though it be no greater thē a mote in the sonne and that as lōg as great & thicke as he stode before them. If hee were so mighty, why is he not as mighty to make his bloud to bee alone and his body alone? hys bloud, body, and soule were ech alone at his death, and while the body lay in the sepulchre.

Finally Christ said this is my bloud that shalbe shed: Ergo, it is true now, this is my bloud that was shed. Now the bloud of Hayles and the bloud that is in many other places men say is the bloud that was shed, Ergo, that bloud is in the Sacrament if any be, but I am not bound to beleue or ought to affirme, that the bloud that is at Hayles is anymate with the soule of Christ, or that his body is there present.

Wherfore to auoid this endles brauling whiche the deuils no doubt hath stirred vp to turne ẏ eyes of our soules frō the euerlasting couenaūt made vs in Christes bloud & body & to nossell vs in Idolatry, which is trust & confidēce in false worshippyng of God & to quēch first the faith to Christward and thē the loue due to our neighbour therfore me thinketh that the party ẏ hath professed ẏ faith of Christ, & the loue of his neighbour ought of duety to beare ech other as lōg as the other opiniō is not plaine wicked through false Idolatrie nor cōtrary to the saluation that is in Christ, nor agaynst the opē & manifest doctrine of Christ and his Apostles nor contrary to the generall articles of the fayth of the generall Churche of Christ, which are confirmed with open Scripture. In whiche articles neuer a true Church in any land dissenteth.

There be many textes of the Scripture & therefore diuersly expounded of holy doctours & takē in cōtrary sēces, whē no text hath cōtrary sēces in dede or more thē one single sence & yet that hurteth not, neither are ẏ holy doctors therfore heretikes, as the expositiō destroyeth not the faith in Christes blud nor is cōtrary to the opē scripture or generall articles. No more doth it hurt to say that the body & bloud are not in the Sacramēt. Neither doth it helpe to say they be there, but hurt exceedingly, if ye inferre ẏ the soule is there to, and that God must be there prayed to when as our kingdome is not on the earth, euē so we ought not to direct our prayers to any God in earth but vp where our kyngdome is. And whether our redemer & sauiour is gone & there sitteth on the right hand of his father to pray for vs, & to offer our prayers vnto his father & to make thē for his sake acceptable: neither ought he ẏ is bound vnder paine of damnatiō to loue his brother as Christ loued him, to hate to persecute & to slay his brother for blind zeale to any opiniō that neither letteth nor hindereth to saluatiō that is in Christ: As they which pray to God in the Sacramēt not onely do: but also through that opinion, as they haue lost loue to their neighbours: euen so haue they lost the true fayth in ẏ couenaūt made in Christes bloud and body. which couenaunt onely is ẏ which saueth. And to testifie this was the sacramēt institute onely.

A letter of Maiſter Tyndall to M. Fryth.

THe grace and peace of God our father and of Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, be with you Amen. Dearely beloued brother Iohn. I haue heard ſay, how that hypocrites nowe that they haue ouercome that great buſines which letted thē at the leaſt way, haue brought it at a ſtay, they returne to their old nature agayne. The will of God be fulfilled, and that which he hath ordeyned to be ere the world was made, that come, and his glory reigne ouer all.

Dearely beloued, how euer the matter be, commit your ſelfe wholy and onely vnto your moſt louing father, & moſt kinde Lorde, and feare not men that threat, nor truſt men that ſpeake fayre: but truſt him that is true of promiſe, and able to make his worde good. Your cauſe is Chriſtes Goſpell, a light that muſt be fedde with the bloud of fayth. The lampe muſt be dreſſed and ſnuffed dayly, and that oyle poured in euery euening and morning, that the light goe not out. Though we be ſinners, yet is the cauſe right. If when we be bufteted for well doing, we ſuffer paciently and endure, that is acceptable to God: for to that ende we are called. For Chriſt alſo ſuffered for vs, leauing vs an example that we ſhould follow his ſteps, who did no ſinne. Hereby haue we perceaued loue, that he layed downe his lyfe for vs: Therefore we ought alſo to laye downe our liues for the brethern. Reioice and be glad, for great is your reward in heauen. For we ſuffer with him, that we may alſo be glorified with him: Who ſhall chaunge our vile body, that it may be faſhioned like vnto his glorious body, according to the working wherby he is able euen to ſubiect all thinges vnto hym.

Boldnes of ſpirite.

Dearely beloued, be of good courage, and comfort your ſoule with the hope of this high reward, and beare the Image of Chriſt in your mortall body, that it may at his comming be made like to his, immortall: and folow the example of all your other dear brethren, which chooſe to ſuffer in hope of a better reſurrection. Kepe your conſcience pure and vndefiled, and ſay againſt that nothing. Sticke at neceſſarie thinges, and remēber the blaſphemies of the enemies of Chriſt, ſaying: they finde none but that will abiure rather then ſuffer the extremitie. Moreouer, the death of thē that come againe after they haue once denyed, thouh it be accepted with God, and all that beleeue, yet is it not glorious, for the hipocrites ſay, he muſt needes dye, denying helpeth not: But might it haue holpen, they would haue denyed fyue hundred tymes: but ſeing it would not helpe them, therefore of pure pride, and mere malice togither, they ſpeake with their mouthes, that their conſcience knoweth falſe. If you geue your ſelfe, caſt your ſelfe, yelde your ſelfe, commit your ſelfe wholy and onely to your louyng father: then ſhall his power be in you and make you ſtrong, and that ſo ſtrong, that you ſhall feele no payne: which ſhould be to an other preſent death: and his ſpirit ſhall ſpeake in you, and teach you what to aunſwere, according to his promiſe. He ſhall ſet out his trueth by you wonderfully, and worke for you aboue all that your hart can imagine: Yea, & you are not yet dead, though the hipocrites all, with all they can make, haue ſworne your death. Vna ſalus victis nullam ſperare ſalutem. To loke for no mans helpe, bringeth the helpe of God to them that ſeeme to be ouercome in the eyes of the hipocrites: Yea it ſhall make God to cary you through thicke and thinne for his truethes ſake, in ſpite of all the enemies of his trueth. There falleth not an heare till his houre be come: and when his houre is come, neceſſitie caryeth vs hence though we be not willing. But if we be willing, then haue we a reward and thanke.

An other Letter of W. Tyndall.

DEarely beloued brother Iacob, myne hartes desire in our Sauiour Iesus is, that you arme your selfe with pacience, and be cold, sober, wise and circumspect, & that you keepe you alow by the ground, auoydyng hygh questions that passe the common capacitie. But expounde the law truly, and open the vayle of Moses to condemne all flesh, and proue all mē sinners, and all deedes vnder the law, before mercy haue taken away the condēnation ther of, to be sinne and damnable. And then as a faythfull Minister, set abroch the mercy of our Lord Iesus, and let the wounded cōsciences drinke of the water of him. And then shall your preachyng be with power, and not as the doctrine of the hypocrites: and the spirite of God shall worke with you, and all cōsciences shall beare recorde vnto you, & feele ỹ it is so. And all doctrine that casteth a mist on those two, to shadow and hyde them, I meane the law of God and mercy of Christ, that resist you withall your power. Sacraments without significatiō refuse. If they put significations to them, receiue them, if you see it may helpe though it bee not necessarie.

Hygh questions to be auoyded.

All deedes before they bee iustified by fayth are sinne.

Sacramēts with out significations to be refused.

Of the presence of Christes body in the Sacrament, medle as litle as you can, that there appeare no diuision amōg vs. Barnes will be whote agaynst you. The Saxons be sore on the affirmatiue, whether constant or obstinate, I omit it to God. Philippe Melancton is sayd to be with the French king. There be in Antwerpe that say, they saw him come into Paris with arc. and l. horses, and that they spake with hym. If the Frenchmen receiue the worde of God, hee will plant the affirmatiue in them. George Ioye would haue put forth a treatise of the matter, but I haue stopt hym as yet, what he will doe if he get money, I wotte not. I beleue he wold make many realōs litle scruyng to the purpose. My mynde is, that nothyng be put forth till we heare how you shal haue spede. I would haue the right vse preached, and the presence to be an indifferēt thyng, till the matter might be reasoned in peace at laysure, of both parties. If you be required, shew the phrases of the Scripture, and let them talke what they will. For as to beleue ỹ God is euery where, hurteth no mā that worshyp him no where but within, in the hart, in spirite and verity: euē so to beleue that the body of Christ is euery where (though it can not be proued) hurteth no man that worshippeth hym no where saue in the fayth of hys Gospell. You perceiue my minde: how beit if God shew you otherwise, it is free for you to do as he moueth you.

W. Tyndall here beareth with tyme.

By the affirmatiue meaneth he opinion which M. Luther & he Saxōs hold of he Sacrament.

Vbiquetie can not be proued.

I gessed long ago that God would send a dasing into the heades of the spiritualtie, to be catched thē selues in their owne subtiltie, and I trust it is come to passe. And now me thinketh I smell a counsayle to be take, litle for their profites in time to come. But you must vnderstand, that it is not of a pure hart & for loue of the truth, but to aduenge thē selues, and to eate the whores flesh, & to suck the marow of her bones. Wher fore cleaue fast to the rocke of the helpe of God, & commit the end of all things to hym: and if God shall call you, that you may then vse the wisedome of the worldly, as farre as you perceiue the glory of God may come therof, refuse it not: and euer among, thrust in, that the Scripture may bee in the mother toung, and learning set vp in the Vniuersities. But and if ought be required contrary to the glory of God and hys Christ, thē stand fast, and commit your selfe to God, and bee not ouercome of mens persuasions, which happely shal say: we see no other way to bryng in the truth.

Syr as concernyng Purgatory, and many other thinges, if you be demaunded, you may say, if you erre, the spiritualtie hath so led you, & that they haue taught you to beleue as you do. For they preached you all such thynges out of Gods word, and alledged a thousād textes, by reason of which textes you beleued as they taught you. But now you finde thē lyers, and that the textes meane no such thynges, and therfore you can beleue no longer, but are as you were before they taught you, and beleue no such thing. Howbeit you are ready to beleue, if they haue any other way to proue it. For without proue you can not beleue thē, when you haue founde them with so many lyes. &c. The end of all M. William Tindals workes, newly Imprinted, accordyng to his first copies, which he him selfe set forth. Gods name be blessed for euer. Amen.

☞ Here foloweth a short and pithy treatise touching the Lordes Supper, compiled, as some do gather, by M. William Tyndall, because the methode and phrase agree with his, and the tyme of writyng are concurrent, which for thy further instruction & learnyng (gentle Reader) I haue annexed to his workes, lest the Church of God should want any of the paineful trauels of godly men, whose onely care & endeuour was to aduaunce the glory of God, & to further the saluation of Christes flocke committed to their charge.

Anno. 1533. the v. day of Aprill.

When Chriſt ſawe thoſe glottons ſeekyng theyr bellyes ſtockyng, ſo faſt vnto him, after his wōted maner (the occaſion taken to teach & preach vnto them of the thing now moued) he ſayd. Verely verely I ſay vnto you: ye ſeeke me not, becauſe ye haue ſene my miracles, but becauſe ye haue eaten of the loaues and were well filled. But as for me, I am not commen into this worlde onely to fill mens bellyes: but to fede and ſatiſfie their ſoules. Ye take great paines to folow me for the meate of your bellyes: but oh ſlougharded, worke, take paynes & labour rather to get that meate that ſhall neuer periſh. For this meate that ye haue ſought of me hetherto, periſheth with your bellyes: but the meate that I ſhall giue you, is ſpirituall, and may not periſh, but abideth for euer, giuyng lyfe euerlaſtyng. For my father hath conſigned and confirmed me with his aſſured teſtimonie, to bee that aſſured ſauyng health and earneſt peny of euerlaſtyng life. when the Iewes vnderſtode not what Chriſt meant, biddyng them to worke and labour for that meate that ſhould neuer periſhe, they aſked hym, what ſhal we do, that we might worke the workes of God? ſuppoſing that he had ſpoken of ſome outward worke required of them. Wherfore Ieſus aūſwered, ſaying. Euē this is the worke of God, to beleue and truſt in him whō the father hath ſent. Lo, here may ye ſee that worke of God which he requireth of vs, euen to beleue in Chriſt. Alſo cōſider agayn what this meate is, which he bad them here prepare and ſeeke for, ſaying: worke, take paynes and ſeeke for that meate &c. and thou ſhalt ſee it none other meate then the belief in Chriſt: wherfore he cōcludeth, that this meate ſo oft mencioned, is fayth: of the whiche meate (ſayth the Prophet) the iuſt liueth. Fayth in him is therfore the meate whiche Chriſt prepareth & dreſſeth ſo purely: poulderyng and ſpicyng it with ſpirituall Allegories in all this Chapter folowyng, to giue vs euerlaſtyng life thrugh it.

Iohn. 6.

The Iewes were blynd and ignorant, & vnderſtode not the wordes of Chriſt.

Abacuk. 2.

Then ſayd the Iewes vnto hym. what token doeſt thou whereby we might know that we ſhould beleue in thee? Do ſomwhat that we might beleue in thee? what thyng worketh thou that we might know thee to be God? Thou knoweſt well inough that our fathers did eate bread of Māna in the deſerte, as it is written, hee gaue them bread from aboue. Ieſus aunſwered. Verely verely I ſay vnto you: Moſes gaue ye not that bread from heauē: for though it fell downe from the ayre: yet was it not heauēly foode for it dyd but feede the belly: but this bread of God that is deſcended from heauen (whom my father giueth) refreſheth the ſoule ſo aboundauntly, that it geueth life vnto the worlde. when the Iewes vnderſtode not this ſaying, whiche was nought elles then the declaryng of the Goſpell (for by the eatyng of this bread hee meant that beleefe of this his Goſpell) they ſayd. Syr, giue vs this bread euermore. Ieſus ſayd vnto thē. I am the bread of life, and who ſo commeth to me, ſhall not hunger: & who ſo beleueth in me ſhal neuer thyrſt. when the Iewes hard Chriſt ſay, the bread that deſcended from heauē ſhould giue lyfe to the worlde: they deſired to haue this bread giuen them for euer. And Ieſus perceiuing that they vnderſtode not the ſence of this Goſpel: he expoūded vnto them who was this ſo lively bread that giueth life to all the worlde, ſaying. I am the bread of life, and who ſo commeth to me, that is to ſay, who ſo is graffed and ioyned to me by faith, ſhall neuer hunger, that is, who ſo beleueth in me is ſatiſfied. It is fayth therefore that ſtancheth this hunger and thyrſt of the ſoule. Fayth it is therfore in Chriſt that filleth our hungry hartes, ſo that we cā deſire none other, if we once eate & drinke him by fayth, that is to ſay, if we beleue his fleſh and body to haue bene broken & his blond ſhed for our ſinnes. For then are our ſoules ſatiſfied and we be iuſtified.

The Iewes deſire a ſigne or token whereby they might beleue that he was Chriſt.

Pſal. 7.

Chriſt required of the Iewes to haue fayth and truſt in hym.

Chriſt expoūdeth & ſheweth him ſelfe to the Iewes.

Fayth onely apprehēdeth Chriſt and all hys benefites.

Ouer this, it foloweth: But I haue told you this, becauſe ye looke vppon me, and belene me not, that is, ye be offended that I sayd, he that commeth to me shall neither hunger nor thyrst, seyng that your selues beyng present, be yet both hungry and thyrstie. But this commeth because ye haue sene me with your bodily eyes, and yet see me & beleue not in me: but I speake not of such sight nor commyng, but of the sight of fayth, which who so hath, he shall haue none other desire, he shall not seeke by night to loue an other before whom he would lay his grief. He shal not runne wandering here and there to seke dead stockes and stones: for he is certified by his fayth to whom hee shall cleaue, he is coupled by fayth vnto me his very spouse & liuely foode, the onely treasure of his soule, neuer more to thyrst for any other. This sight of fayth ye haue not, for ye beleue not nor trust in me: wherfore ye vnderstand not how I am the very bread and meate of your soules, that is to say, your faith & hope. And the cause of this your blyndnes is (I will not say ouer hardly to you) that the father hath not drawne you in to the knowledge of me, or els ye had receiued me. For all that the father giueth me, must come vnto me. And as for me, I cast out no mā that commeth to me: For I am not come downe frō heauen to do my will, whiche ye attribute vnto me as vnto eche any other man, for I am verely a very man: & according to that nature I haue a speciall proper will: but much more obediēt to my father, then one of you. For your will oft resisteth and repugneth Gods wil, but so doth mine neuer. I am therfore come downe to doe his will that hath sent me. And to do you to witte what his will is. This (I say) is my fathers will ỹ hath sent me. That of all that he hath giuē me, I lese none: but must rayse hym vp agayne in the last day: and to be playne. This is the will of him that sent me. That who so seeth (that is to know) the sonne and beleueth in him, he shall haue lyfe euerlastyng: and I shall ryse hym vp in ỹ last day. Here may ye see what meate he speaketh of. God sent his sonne into this world, that we might liue thorough him. who liueth by him? They that eate his flesh & drinke his blond. Who eate his flesh & drinke his blond? They that belene his body crucified & his blond shed for their sinnes: these cleaue vnto his gracious fauour. But how could they cleaue thus vnto him except they knew him? And therfore he added saying. Euery man that seeth the sonne, that is to say, vnderstandeth wherfore the sonne was sent into this world and beleueth in him shall haue euerlastyng lyfe.

Christ rebuketh the incredulitie and lacke of fayth in the Iewes

All that the father draw come vnto Christ

Christe came from heauē into earth to fulfill the will of his father.

He ỹ beleueth Christes death to be for the remissiō of his sinnes the same ca teth ỹ flesshe & drinketh the blond of Christ.

Here it appeared to the carnall Iewes that Christ had taken to much vpon him selfe, to say: I am the bread of lyfe, which am come downe frō heauen to giue life to the world wherfore the flesh, that is to say the Iewes now murmured, and not marueiled (as M. More sheweth his owne dreame to an other text folowyng whiche I shall touch anone) they murmured at this saying of Christ. I am the bread which am come from heauen, saying, Is not this Iesus Iosephes sonne whose father & mother we know well inough? How then sayth he, I am come from heauen? Iesus aūswered saying, Murmour not among your selues: Heard ye not what I told you euen now? All that my father giueth me, come to me: your vnbelefe (wherof foloweth this false vnderstanding of my wordes spiritually spoken) compelleth me to tell you one thyng more thē once or twise. This therfore it is: No mā may come to me the onely earnest peny & pledge of your saluatiō, vnlesse my father that sent me draw him: and whō he draweth vnto me, that is, ioyneth vnto me by fayth, him shall I ryse vp in the last day. I wonder that ye take my wordes so straungely, beleuyng them to be some hard ridels, or darke parables, when I say nothyng els, thē that is written in your owne Prophetes, both in Esay, and Jeremy, saying, that all shall be taught of the Lord. Such euē your Prophetes testifie this knowledge to be giuē you of my father: what can be spokē more playnly then to say: what my father giueth me, that commeth to me: or this, no man may come to me, except my father draw him. And yet haue it more manifestly. who so hath heard my father, and is learned of him, he commeth to me as vnto the very onely anker of his saluation. Not that any man hath sene the father, lest peraduenture ye mistake these wordes to heare, and to learne, as though they pertcined to the outward senses, and not rather to the mynde and inward illuminyng of the soule. For no man euer saw the father, although he worke secretly vpon his hart, so that what so euer hee willeth, we must heare and learne. No man (I say) seeth him, but he that is sent of God, as I sayd before of my selfe, he it is that seeth the father. Now therfore say I vnto you, verely, verely, as playnly, ỹ who so beleueth & trusteth in me, he hath life euerlasting. Now haue ye ỹ summe of this my doctrine, euẽ my very gospel ỹ whole tale of all my legacy and message wherfore I am sent into the world. Had M. More vnderstode this short sentence, (who so beleueth in me hath life euerlastyng) & knowne what Paule with the other Apostles preached: especially Paul beyng a yeare & a halfe amõg the Corinthiãs, determinyng not, neither presumyng to haue knowẽ any other thyng to be preached them (as him selfe saith) then Iesus Christ, & that he was crucified. Had M. More vnderstand this point, he should neuer haue thus blasphemed Christ & his sufficiẽt Scriptures, neither haue so belyed his Euãgelistes & holy Apostles, as to say, they wrote not all thinges necessary for our saluation, but left out things of necessitie to be beleued, makyng Gods holy testamẽt insufficient & vnperfite. First reueled vnto our fathers, written oft sence by Moyses, and then by his Prophetes, and at last written both by his holy Euangelistes and Apostles to.

But turne we to Iohn agayne & let More mocke still & lye to. I am ỹ bread of life saith Christ. And no mã denyeth ỹ our fathers & elders did eate Manna in the desert, & yet are they dead. But he that eateth of this bread: that is to say, beleueth in me, he hath life euerlastyng. For it is I that am this liuely bread, which am come from heauen, of whom who so eate by faith, shal neuer dye. Here therfore it is to be noted diligently ỹ Christ meaneth, as euery mã may see, by ỹ eating of this bread none other thyng then the belefe in him self, offred vp for our sinnes: whiche faith onely iustifieth vs. whiche sentence to declare more playnly, & that he would haue it noted more diligently, he repeteth it yet agayn, saying: It is I ỹ am the liuely bread which am come down frõ heauẽ: who so eateth of this bread, shall liue euerlastingly. And to put you cleare out of doubt, I shall shew you in few wordes, what this matter is, & by what wayes I must be the Sauiour & redemer of the world, to giue it this life so oft rehearsed: & therfore now take good heede. This bread which I speake of so much & shall giue it you: it is myne owne flesh: which I must lay forth & pay for the life of ỹ world. Here it is now manifest, that he should suffer death in his own flesh for our redẽptiõ to geue vs this life euerlastyng. Thus now may ye see how Christes flesche, which he called bread, is the spirituall foode & meate of our soules. Whẽ our soules by fayth see God the father not to haue spared his onely so deare beloued sonne, but to haue deliuered him to suffer that ignominious & so paynefull death, to restore vs to lyfe: thẽ haue we eaten his flesh, and dronken his blond, assured firmely of the fauour of God, satisfied & certified of our saluation.

Christes flesh is the spirituall foode of our soules.

After this communication, that he sayd. The bread whiche I shall geue you is my flesh, whiche I shall pay for the lyfe of the world: yet were the carnall Iewes neuer the wiser. For their vnbelief and sturdy hatred, would not suffer the very spirituall sence & mynde of Christes wordes to enter into theyr hartes. They could not se, that Christes flesh broken and crucified, and not bodely eaten, should be our saluation, and this spiritual meate: as our soules to bee fed and certified of the mercy of God, and forgiuenes of our sinnes tho rough his passion: and not for any eatyng of his flesh with our teeth. The more ignorant therfore & fleshly they were, the more fierce were they full of indignatiõ, strivyng one agaynst an other, saying. How may this felow geue vs his flesh to eate it? They stoke fast yet in his flesh before their eyes: those fleshly Iewes. wherfore no marueil though they abhorred the bodely eatyng thereof: although our fleshly Papistes (beyng of the Iewes carnall opinion) yet abhorre it not, neither cease they dayly to crucifie and offer him vp agayne, which was once for euer and all offred as Paule testifieth. And euen here, sith Christ came to teache, to take away all doubt, and to breake strife, he might (his wordes otherwise declared, then he hath & will here after expounde them) haue soluted their question: saying, if he had so ment as More meaneth, that he would haue bene conuayed and conuersed (as our iugglers sleighly can conuaye him with a few woordes) into a singyng loafe: or els (as the Thomisticall Papistes say) bene inuisible with all his dimensioned body vnder the fourme of bread translubstantiated into it. And after a like Thomisticall mystery, the wyne translubstantiated to, into hys bloud so that they should eate his flesh and drinke his bloud after their owne carnall vnderstanding, but yet in an other forme, to put away all grudge of stomacke. Or sith S. Iohn (if he had vnderstode his maisters minde, and tooke vpon hym to write his wordes) would leaue this Sermon vnto the world to be read: he might now haue deliuered vs and them frō this doubt. But Christ would not so satisfie theyr question: but aunswered. Verely verely I say vnto you: except ye eate the flesshe of the sonne of man and drinke his bloud, ye shall not haue that life in your selues. He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my bloud, hath lyfe euerlasting: and I shall ryse him vp in the last day: for my flesh is very meate and my bloud the very drinke. He saith not here that bread shalbe transubstantiated or conuerted into his body, nor yet the wyne into his bloud. But now cōferre this saying to his purpose at the begynnyng: where he bad them worke for that meate that should neuer perish telling them, that to beleue in hym whom God hath sent, was the worke of God. And who so beleueth in hym should neuer thyrst nor hunger, but haue lyfe euerlastyng. Conferre also this that foloweth and thou shalt see it playne, that his wordes be vnderstand spiritually of the beleefe in his flesh crucified, and his bloud shed, for which beleefe we bee promised euerlastyng lyfe: hym selfe, saying, Who so beleueth in me hath life euerlastyng. Here therfore their questiō (how may this man giue vs his flesh to eate it) is solued: euen when he gaue his body to be broken, & his bloud to be shed. And we eate and drinke it in deede, whē we beleue stedfastly that hee dyed for the remission of our sinnes: Austen and Tertullian to witnesse.

Christ in saying ỹ hys flesh is very meate doth not say that bread shalbe transubstantiated into hys flesh.

Christes wordes are spirituall & not carnall.

But here maketh More his argument agaynst the young man. Because the Iewes marueiled at this saying: My flesh is very meate, and my bloud drinke. And not at this: I am the doore, and the very vyne: therefore this text (sayth he) My flesh is &c. must be vnderstand after the litterall sence, that is to witte: euē as the carnall Iewes vnderstode it, murmuring at it, beyng offended, goyng their wayes frō Christ, for their so carnall vnderstandyng therof. And the other textes. I am the doore, &c. must be vnderstand in an Allegory and spirituall sence, because his hearers marueiled nothyng at the maner of the speach. Loe Christen Reader, here hast thou not a taste: but a great tunne full of Mores mischief and pernicious peruertyng of Gods holy worde: and as thou seist him here falsely & pestilently destroy the pure sence of Gods worde, so doth hee in all other places of hys bookes. First where he sayth they mar ueiled at this Christes saying. My flesh is very meate. &c. that is not so, neither is there any such worde in the text, except More will expounde Murmurabant, id est, mirabantur, they murmured, that is to say, they marueiled, as he expoūdeth. Oportet, id est, expedit & conuenit. He must dye, or it behoueth him to dye, that is to say, it was expedient and of good cōgruence that he should dye, &c. Thus this Poete may make a man to signifie an Asse, & blacke white to blere the simple eyes. But yet for his Lordly pleasure, let vs graunt him that, they murmured, is as much to say, as they merualed: because perchaunce the one may folow at the other. And then do I aske him: whether Christes Disciples and his Apostles heard him not, & vnderstode him not when he sayd, I am the doore and the vyne: and when hee sayd. My flesh. &c. If he say no, or nay: the Scripture is playne agaynst him. If he say yea, or yes: then yet doe I aske hym whether his Disciples and Apostles thus hearyng and vnderstandyng hys woordes in all these three Chapters wondered and merualed (as More sayth) or murmured (as hath the text) at their maisters speech: what thinke ye, More must aunswere here: Here may ye see whether this old holy vpholder of the Popes Churche is brought: euen to be taken in his owne trappe. For the Disciples and his Apostles neither murmured, nor merualed, nor yet were offended wt this their maister Christes wordes and maner of speech: for they were well acquainted with such phrases: and aunswered their maister Christ when he asked thē, will ye also go hence fro me: Lord sayd they to whom shall we goe? thou hast the wordes of euerlastyng lyfe: and we beleue that thou art Christ the sonne of the liuyng God. Lo M. More, they neither merualled, nor murmured. And why? For because as ye say they vnderstode it in an Allegory sence, and perceiued well that hee meant not of hys materiall body to bee eaten with their teeth, but he meant it of him selfe to be beleued, to be very God and very man hauing flesh and bloud as they had, and yet was he the sonne of the liuyng God. This beleefe gathered they of all hys spirituall sayinges as hym selfe is not poſſible for God to make a creature equall vnto him ſelfe, for it includeth repugnaūce & derogateth his glory. God promiſed & ſwore that all nations ſhould be bleſſed in the death of that promiſed ſeede which was Chriſt. God had determined and decreed it before the worlde was made: Ergo, Chriſt muſt needes haue dyed, and not to expoūde this word Oportet, as More mynſeth it. For it was ſo neceſſary that the contrary was impoſſible, except More would make God a lyer, which is impoſſible. Hebr. 9. Paule concludeth that Chriſt muſt nedes haue dyed, vſyng this Latine terme Neceſſe. Saying: where ſo euer is a Teſtamēt, there muſt the death of the Teſtament maker go betweene: or els the Teſtament is not ratified & ſure, but righteouſnes and remiſſion of ſinnes in Chriſtes bloud is his new Teſtament, whereof he is mediatour: Ergo, the Teſtament maker muſt nedes haue died. Chriſtes muſt nedes dye, for God had ſo promiſed before.

And when More ſayth, that Chriſt had power to let his lyfe and to take it agayne, & therfore not to haue dyed of neceſſitie: I wōder me, that his ſcholemaiſter here fayled him, ſo cunnyng as he maketh him ſelfe therin: which graūteth and affirmeth (as true it is) that with the neceſſary decreed woorkes of Gods forſight and prouidence ſtādeth right wel his free libertie. But M. More ſayth at laſt, if God would tell me that hee would make ech of both their bodyes two (meanyng the young mans body and his) to be in fifteen places at once, I would beleue him, that he wer able to make his wordes true in the bodies of both twayne, and neuer would I ſo much as aſke hym whether hee would glorifie them both firſt or not: but I am ſure glorified or vnglorified, if he ſayd it, he is able to do it. Lo here may ye ſee what a fernēt fayth this old man hath, and what an earneſt mynde to beleue Chriſtes woordes if hee had told him: but I pray you M. More, what and if Chriſt neuer told it you, nor ſaid it, nor neuer would: would ye not be as haſty not to beleue it? If he told it you: I praye you tell vs where you ſpake with hym, and who was by to beare ye recorde: and if you bryng as falſe a ſhrew as your ſelfe to teſtify this thyng: yet by your own doctrine, muſt ye make vs a miracle to confirme your tale, ere we be bound to beleue you: or yet to admit this your argument, God may make his body in many places at once, Ergo, it is ſo. Spy ý be to buſie with Gods almighty power, and haue taken to great a burden vppon your weake ſhoulders, ye haue ouerladen your ſelfe with your own harneſſe and weapons: and young Dauid is likely to preuayle agaynſt you with his ſling and ſtone. God hath infatuated your high ſubtill wiſedome. Your crafty conueyaunce is ſpyed. God hath ſent your Church a mete couer for ſuch a cup, euē ſuch a defender as ye take vppon your ſelfe to be, that ſhall let all theyr whole cauſe fall flatte in the myer vnto both your ſhames and vtter cōfuſion. God therfore be praiſed euer. Amen.

Gods almightye power is not to be to buſely dealt withall.

More would haue beleued Chriſt if he had talked with hym, what ſoeuer hee had ſaid to him.

Then ſayth M. More, though it ſeemeth repugnaunt both to him & to me, one body to bee in two places at once: yet God ſeeth how to make them ſtand together well inough. This man with his old eyen & ſpectacles ſeeth farre in Gods ſight, and is of his priuey Councel: that knoweth belike by ſome ſecret reuelation how God ſeeth one body to be in many places at once, includyng no repugnaunce. For woorde hath hee none for him in all Scripture no more thē one body to be in al places at once. It implyeth firſt repugnaunce to my ſight and reaſon, that all this worlde ſhould be made of nothyng: and that a virgin ſhould bryng forth a child. But yet, when I ſee it written with the woordes of my faith, which God ſpake: and brought it ſo to paſſe: thē implyeth it no repugnaunce to me at all. For my fayth reacheth it and receiueth it ſtedfaſtly. For I know ý voyce of my herdman: whiche if he ſayd in any place of Scripture that his body ſhould haue ben cōtained vnder the forme of bread & ſo many places at once here, in earth, and alſo abidyng yet ſtill in heauen to. Verely I would haue beleued him, as ſoone and as firmely as M. More. And therfore euen yet, if he can ſhew vs but one ſentence truly taken for his part, as we cā do many for the contrary, we muſt giue place. For, as for his vnwrit tē veritīes, & the authority of his Antichriſtes ſinagoge, vnto which (ỹ ſcripture forſaken) hee is now at laſt with ſhame inough cōpelled to flee: they be proued ſtarke lyes and very deuelry.

More doth but ſcoffe out the matter.

Matters of fayth are repugnaūt to reaſon.

Gods bleſſed will is declared in his Scriptures.

Then ſayth hee, that ye wot well that many good folke haue vſed in this matter many good fruitefull examples of Gods other workes: not onely miracles, writtē in Scripture. Vnde Verſus? (where one I pray ye?) but alſo done by the commō courſe of nature here in earth. If they be done by the common courſe of nature, ſo be they no miracles. And ſome thynges made alſo by mans hand. As one face beholded in diuers glaſſes: and euery peece of one glaſſe broken into twenty. &c. Lorde how this pontificall Poete playeth his part. Becauſe (as he ſaith) we ſee many faces in many glaſſes: therefore may one body be in many places, as though euery ſhadow and ſimilitude repreſenting the body, were a bodely ſubſtāce. But I aſke More, when hee ſeeth hys owne face in ſo many glaſſes, whether all thoſe faces that appeare in the glaſſes be his owne very faces hauing bodely ſubſtaunce, ſkynne, fleſhe & bone, as hath that face, which hath his very mouth noſe eyen &c. wherewith he faceth vs out the truth thus falſely with lyes? And if they be all his very faces, then in very deede there is one body in many places, and he him ſelfe beareth as many faces in one hode. But accordyng to his purpoſe, cuē as they be no very faces, nor thoſe ſo many voyces, ſownes and ſimilitudes, multiplied in the ayre, betwene the glaſſes or other obiect & the body (as the Philoſopher proueth by naturall reaſon) be no very bodyes: no more is it Chriſtes very body: as they would make thee beleue in the bread, in ſo many places at once. But the bread broken and eaten in the Supper monitheth and putteth vs in remembraunce of his death, and ſo exciteth vs to thankes giuyng to laude and prayſe: for the benefite of our redemption, and thus wee there haue Chriſt preſent in the inward eye and ſight of our fayth. We eate his body and drinke hys bloud, that is, we beleue ſurely that hys bodye was crucified for our ſinnes and hys bloud ſhed for our ſaluation.

More tracteleth in his Poetrie.

More fayneth in his Poetrie.

More ſimilitude of faces in the glaſſe proueth no faces in ſubſtaunce.

By fayth we muſt eate and drinke Chriſtes body and blood ſpirituallie.

At laſt note (Chriſten reader) that M. More in the third booke of his confutation of Tyndall the. C. lix. ſide, to proue S. Johns Goſpell vnperfit and inſufficient (for leauing out of ſo neceſſary a point of our faith, as he calleth the laſt Supper of Chriſt his Maūdy) ſayth, that Johu ſpeake nothyng at all of this Sacramēt. And now ſee againe in theſe his letters againſt Frith, how him ſelfe bringeth in John the vj. chap. to impugne Frithes writyng, and to make all for the Sacrament, cuē thus. My fleſh is verely meate, & my bloud drinke. Belike the man had there ouerſhotte hym ſelfe foule: the young man here cauſing him to put on his ſpectacles and poore better and more wiſely with his old eyen vpō S. Johns Goſpel to finde that thing there now written, which before he would haue made one of his vnwritten veritīes. As yet if he looke narowly hee ſhall eſpy that him ſelf hath proued vs by Scripture, in the xxvij. leafe of his Dialogue of quoth he and quoth I, our Ladies perpetuall virginitie expoundyng non cognoſco, id eſt, non cognoſcam, whiche now written vnwritten veritie hee numbereth a litle before among his vnwrittē vanities. Thus may ye ſee how this old holy vpholder of the popes church, hys woordes fight againſt him ſelfe into his own confuſion, in findyng vs forth his vnwritten written vanities, veritīes I ſhould ſay. But returne we vnto the expoſition of S. John.

More an vpholder of vnwritten veritīes.

When the Jewes would not vnderſtand the ſpirituall ſaying of the eating of Chriſtes fleſh and drinkyng of hys bloud, ſo oft and ſo playnely declared: he gaue them a ſtrong ſtripe and made them more blynd, for they ſo deſerued it (ſuch are the ſecrete iudgementes of God) addyng vnto all hys ſayinges thus, who ſo eateth my fleſh and drinketh my bloud: abideth in me and I in him. Theſe woordes were ſpoken vnto theſe vnbeleuers into their farther obſtinatiō, but vnto the faithfull for theyr better inſtruction. Now gather of this the contrary, & ſay, who ſo eateth not my fleſhe and drinketh not my bloud: abydeth not in me, nor I in him; and ioyne this to the foreſayd ſentence. Except ye eate the fleſh of the ſonne of mā, & drinke hys bloud, ye haue no lyfe in you, let it neuer fal frō thy minde (Chriſten reader) that faith is the lyfe of the righteous, and that Chriſt is this lyuyng bread whom thou eateſt, that is to ſay, in whō thou beleueſt. For if our Papistes take eatyng & drinkyng here bodely, as to eate the naturall body of Christ vnder the forme of bread, and to drinke hys bloud vnder the forme of wyne: thē must all young children that neuer came to Gods borde departed, & all laye men that neuer dranke hys bloud be damned. By loue we abyde in God and hee in vs, loue foloweth faith in the order of our vnderstanding and not in order of succession of tyme, if thou lookest vpon the selfe giftes and not on their fruites. So that principally by faith, wherby we cleaue to Gods goodnes and mercy, we abide in God, and God in vs, as declare his wordes folowyng, saying, as the liuyng father sent me, so liue I by my father. And euen so he that eateth me shall lyue bycause of me, or for my sake. My father sent me whose will in all thinges I obey, for I am his sonne. And euen so verely must they that eate me, that is beleue in me, forme and fashion them after my exāple mortifying their flesh chaunging their liuing: or els they eate me in vayne and dissemble theyr belief. For I am not come to redeme ỹ world onely, but also to chaunge theyr lyfe. They therefore that beleue in me shall trāsforme their life after my example & doctrine, & not after any mans traditiōs. This is the bread ỹ came frō heauē, as the effect it selfe declareth, whō who so eateth shall lyue euer. But he ỹ eateth bodely bread lyueth not euer, as ye may see of your fathers ỹ eate Māna, & yet are they dead. It is not therfore any materiall bread nor bodely foode that may geue you life eternall.

1. Iohn. 4.

By fayth we eate & drinke Christ, and so he abydeth in vs and we in hym.

Christen religion is fayth, and a lyfe correspondēt.

These wordes did not onely offende them that hated Christ, but also some of hys Disciples. They were offended (sayd the text) and not merueyled as More trifleth out the truth) which said. This is an hard saying: who may here this? These Disciples yet stoke no lesse in Christes visible flesshe, and in the barke of his wordes, then did the other Iewes: and as doth now More, beleuing him to haue had spoken of his naturall body to be eaten with their teth. Which offence Christ seyng, sayd: doth this offend you, what then will ye say, if ye see the sonne of mā ascend thether where he was before? If it offend you to eate my flesh while I am here, it shal much more offend you to eate it when my body shalbe gone out of your sight, ascended into heauen there sittyng on the right hand of my father vntill I come again, as I wēt, that is to iudgement. Here might Christ haue instructed his disciples in the truth of the eatyng of his flesh in forme of bread, had this ben his meaning. For he left them neuer in any perplexitie or doubt: but sought all the wayes by similitudes & familiar exāples to teach them playnly. He neuer spake them so hard a parable, but where he perceiued their feble ignorance, anone he helpte them and declared it them. Yea and sometymes he preuented their asking with his owne declaration, & thinke ye that he did not so here? yes verely. For he came to teach vs, and not to leaue vs in any doubt and ignorance, especially in the chief pointe of our saluation, which stādeth in the belefe in his death for our sinnes. wherfore, to put them out of all doubt as concerning this eatyng of his flesh, and drinkyng of hys bloud, that should giue euerlastyng lyfe: where they tooke it for his very body to be eaten with their teeth: hee sayd. It is the spirite that giueth this lyfe, my flesh profiteth nothyng at all, to be eaten as ye meane so carnally. It is spirituall meate that I heare speake of. It is my spirite that draweth the hartes of men to me by faith and so refresheth them ghostly. Ye be therefore carnall, to thinke that I speake of my flesh to be eaten bodely, for so it profiteth you nothing at all. How long will ye be without vnderstādyng? It is my spirite I tell you that giueth lyfe. My flesche profiteth you nothyng to eate it: but to beleue that it shalbe crucified & suffer for the redemption of the world it profiteth. And when ye thus beleue, then eate ye my flesche and drinke my bloud, that is, ye beleue in me to suffer for your sinnes. The veritie hath spoken these wordes. My flesh profiteth nothyng at all: it can not therefore be false. For both the Iewes and his Disciples murmured and disputed of hys flesh how it should be eaten, and not of the offeryng thereof for our sinnes as Christ ment. This therfore is the sure anker to hold vs by agaynst all the obiections of the Papistes for the eatyng of Christes body (as they say) in forme of bread. Christ sayd: My flesh profiteth nothyng: meaning to eate it bodely. This is the key that solueth al their argumentes and openeth the way to shewe vs all their false and abhominable blasphemous lyes vppon Christes wordes, and vttereth their sleigh iuggling ouer the bread to maintein Antichristes kyngdome therewith. And thus

Here Christ doth playnly shew that it is the spirituall eatyng, & not the fleshly eatyng of his body that profiteth.

The Iewes and also the disciples of Christe were offended at his wordes.

The eatin of Christe flesh profited no thyng.

thus when Chriſt had declared it and taught them that it was not the bodely eatyng of his materiall body: but the eatyng with the ſpirite of fayth: he added ſaying. The wordes which I here ſpeake vnto you are ſpirite and lyfe. That is to ſay, this matter that I here haue ſpoken of with ſo many wordes muſt be ſpiritually vnderſtand, to giue you this life euerlaſtyng. wherfore the cauſe why ye vnderſtād me not is, that ye beleue not. Here is ſo the concluſion of all this Sermon. Chriſt very God and man, had ſet his fleſh before them to be receiued with fayth that it ſhould be broken & ſuffer for their ſinnes, but they could not eate it ſpiritually, becauſe they beleued not in him. wherefore many of his Diſciples fell frō him & walked no more with him. And then he ſayd to the twelue. will ye go away to? And Symon Peter aunſwered: Lord, to whom ſhal we go? Thou haſt the wordes of euerlaſtyng life, and we beleue and are ſure, that thou art Chriſt the ſonne of the liuyng God. Here is it manifeſt what Peter and his felowes vnderſtode by this eatyng and drinkyng of Chriſt. For they were perfitely taught that it ſtode all in the beleſe in Chriſt as their aūſwere here teſtifieth. If this matter had ſtand vpon ſo deepe a miracle, as our Papiſtes fayne without any word of God, not comprehended vnder any of their common ſenſes, that they ſhould eate hys body beyng vnder the forme of bread as long, depe, thicke, and as brode as it hanged vpon the croſſe, they beyng yet but feble of fayth, nes confirmed with the holy ghoſt, muſt here nedes haue wondered, ſtoned and ſtaggerde, & haue bene more inquiſitiue in and of ſo ſtraunge a matter then they were. But they neither doubted nor marueiled nor murmured, nor were any thyng offended with this maner of ſpech, as were ẏ other that ſlipt away, but they aunſwered firmely. Thou haſt the woordes of euerlaſtyng lyfe: and we beleue. &c. Now to the expoſition of the woordes of our Lordes Supper.

The wordes of Chriſte were ſpirit and life.

Chriſtes diſciples vnderſtode Chriſt to ſpeake ſpiritually and beleued.

Among the holy Euangeliſtes, writyng the ſtory of Chriſtes Supper: Iohn becauſe the other three had written it at large, did but make a mention thereof in his. xiij. Chapter Mathew, Marke and Luke declaryng it clerely, orderly & with iuſt number of wordes. With whom Paule agreeth, thus writyng vnto the Corinthians. Our Lord Ieſus, ẏ ſame night he was betrayed: he tooke the bread, and after he had giuen thankes: he brake it, ſaying: Take ye it, eate it. This is my body, whiche is for you broke. Here is now to be noted the order of this action or act. Firſt Chriſt tooke the bread in his hādes, ſecondaryly he gaue thankes, thirdly he brake it: fourthly he taught it them ſaying, take it, fiftly he bad them eate it. At laſt after all this hee ſayd. This is my body which is for you broken, this thyng do ye into the remembraunce of me. Here ye ſee, ẏ this bread was firſt broken deliuered them, and they were cōmaūded to eate it to: ere Chriſt ſayd. This is my body. And for becauſe it is to ſuppoſe verely, ẏ they tooke it at his hād as he had them, and dyd eate it to, when they had it in their handes their maſter (whoſe wordes they did euer obey) cōmmaūding thē. It muſt needes folow (if theſe be the wordes of the cōſecratiō) that they were houſeled with vnconſecrated bread, or els now eaten, or at leſt wiſe part of it, ere Chriſt conſecrated it, yea it foloweth that it was out of Chriſtes handes and in theyr mouthes when Chriſt conſecrated it, & ſo to haue conſecrated it whē it was now in his diſciples handes or in their mouthes or rather in theyr bellyes.

Math. 26. Math. 14. Luke. 14.

1. Cor. 11.

The order of the actiō

Here it is manifeſt that Chriſt conſecrated no bread, but deliuered it to his Diſciples, and bad them eate it. In ſomuch that S. Thomas their owne Doctour, that made their tranſubſtantiation cōfeſſeth that ſome there were, that ſayd that Chriſt did firſt conſecrate with other wordes, ere he now reachyng the bread to his Diſciples ſayd. This is my body. &c. And yet calleth he it no hereſie ſo to ſay. Now ſith in all this acte and Supper, there bee no wordes of conſecration, but of the deliueryng of the bread broken after thankes giuyng with a commaundement to eate it: bryng vs your wordes of cōſecration, and ſhewe vs by what wordes God promiſed you and gaue you power to make his body. There is neither commaundement, nor yet any wordes left in all the Scripture to make or to conſecrate Chriſtes body, to bryng it into the bread. But there be the wordes of God left in the firſt chapter of Geneſis, wherby he made all the world: with whiche wordes, all be it we yet haue them: yet is it denyed vs to make that thyng that he made with thē. Now, ſith we hauyng his wordes of the creation, can not yet make any new creature of nothyng: how then Chriſt conſecrated no bread, but deliuered it to his Apoſtles to eate.

There is left vnto vs no wordes of conſecration, wherby we ſhould alter and chaūge the nature of bread into his body.

shall we without any wordes of consecration and makyng, make the maker of all thynges?

The vse of the Supper.

Unto this action or supper or deliueraūce of the bread, he added a reason and signification of this signe or Sacrament, and what also is the vse therof: as though any should aske thē thereafter: what Sacrament, Religion, or rite is this? They should aunswere euen in a like maner of spech as it was cōmaunded their fathers to make aunswere to their children at the eatyng of the old passeouer, wherof this new passeouer was the veritie, and that the figure, saying. when your children aske you what Religion is this? ye shal aunswere them. It is the sacrifice of the passyng by of the Lord. &c. Lo here the lambe that signified, and did put them in remembraunce of that passing by in Egypt (the Israelites sparcd, and the Egyptians smitten) was called in like phrase the selfe thyng that it represented, signified, and did put them in remembraunce of: none otherwise then if Christes Disciples, or any man els, seyng in that Supper, the bread taken, thankes giuen, the bread broken, distributed and eaten: should haue asked hym. what Sacrament or religion is this? He had to aunswere them that Christ sayd. This is my body whiche is for you broken. This thyng do ye in remembraunce of me, that is to say, so oft as ye celebrate this Supper, giue thankes to me for your redemptiō. In which aūswere he calleth the outward sensible signe or Sacramēt, that is the bread with all the other action, euen the same thyng that it signifieth, representeth, and putteth such eaters of the Lordes Supper in remembraunce of. For when he sayd, which is broken for you, euery one of them saw that then it was not his body, that was there broken: but the bread for as yet he had not suffered, but the bread broken was deuided in peeces euery one of the twelue takyng and eatyng a peece before hee sayd. This is my body. &c.

Wordes litterall sense is lost.

Now sith M. More will sticke so fast in his litteral sense vpon these wordes. This is my body. &c. Then do I aske hym, what thyng hee sheweth vs by this first worde and pronoune demonstratiue Hoc, in Englishe (this.) If ye shew vs the bread: so is the bread Christes body, and Christes body the bread, which saying in the litterall sense is an hygh heresie after them. And for this saying they burned the Lord Cobham

Also I aske whether Christ speakyng these wordes. This is my body. &c. had then the bread in his hands wherwith he houseled his Disciples or no? That he had it not, but had now deliuered it them: and had commaunded them to eate it to, the order and woordes of the text playnly proue it, as is declared before. And S. Marke telleth the story also in this order. The cuppe taken in his handes, after he had giuen thākes, he gaue it them, & they all dranke therof. And he sayd to them. This is my bloud of the new Testament: which is shed for many. Here it is manifest that they had all dronken therof first ere he said the wordes of consecration (if they be the wordes of any cōsecration.) Besides this: if ye be so sworne to the litterall sense in this matter, that ye will not in these woordes of Christ. This is my body. &c. admitte in so playne a speche any trope (for allegory there is none, if ye knew the proper difference of them both, whiche euery Grammarian can teach you) thē do I lay before your old eyen and spectacles to, Christes wordes spoken of the cup both in Luke and Paul saying: this cup is the newe Testament through my blonde which is shed for you. Here Christ calleth the wyne in the cup the selfe cuppe whiche euery man knoweth is not the wyne. Also hee calleth the cuppe the new Testament, and yet was not the cup nor yet the wyne conteined therin the new Testament, and yet calleth it the new Testament established & confirmed with his bloud here ye see hee called not the cuppe his bloud but the Testament. where is now your litterall sense that ye would so fayne frame for your Papistes pleasure? If ye will so fore sticke to the letter: why do your faction leane here the plaine letter: saying that the letter slayth: goyng about the busly with this exposition and circumlocution, expoundyng. This is my body, that is to say, this is conuerted & turned into my body, & this bread is translubstantiated into my body? How farre lo, M. More is this your straunge Thomisticall sense from the flat letter? If ye be so addicte to the letter, why fray ye the commō people from the litteral sense with this bugge, tellyng thē the letter slayeth? but there is neither letter nor spirite that may bridle nor hold your stiffe necked heades.

The wordes of consecratiō were spokē after Christ had deliuered ✠ bread & the cup.

spirituall woordes, saying: My flesh profiteth you nothyng at all to eate it. &c. And their litteral takyng of his spirituall woordes was the cause of their murmure. &c. For euen there (as also lyke in other places) to eate Christes flesh. &c. after the common phrase of the Scripture, is not els, thē to beleue that Christ suffered death, & shed his bloud for vs. Read ye Paul. Our fathers did all eate the same spirituall meate and drinke the same spirituall drinke that we now eate & drinke: Here I thinke M. More must leaue his litterall sence & materiall meate, or els deny Paul, and deny to that our fathers did eate Christ and drinke his bloud, whiche all here Paule sayth, for to eate and to drinke this spirituall meate and drinke, was as him selfe declareth to eate & drinke Christ. They dranke of the stone (sayth Paule) that went with them. whiche stone was Christe. And we eate and drinke the very same stone. whiche is nothyng elz, then to beleue in Christ. They beleued in Christ to come, & we beleue in him comē, and to haue suffered, where is now thinke ye M. Mores litterall sense for the eatyng of Christes material body? Our fathers were one, and the same Church with vs, vnder the same Testament and promise, and euen of the same fayth in Christ. And euen as they eate him and dranke his bloud euen the same spirituall meate & drinke that we do eate and drinke: so do we now in the same faith. For what elles was signified by this maner of spech, our fathers did eate and drinke Christ, then that they beleued in Christ to bee incarnated and to suffer death? what els meant the poore woman of Canane by eating, then to beleue? whē she aunswered Christ, saying. Ye say soth my Lorde. But yet doe the little whelpes eate of the crummes that fall from their maisters table. This dyd she aunswere in an allegory accordyng to Christes first aunswere vnto her, she meanyng by ỹ eatyng of the crummes, the belief of his woordes and Gospell to be scattered among the Gentils as Christ aunsweryng, cōfirmed her meanyng, saying: O woman great is thy fayth. He sayd not, thou art a great eater and deuourer of bread. Here it is playne that to eate in the Scripture is taken to beleue: as Christ him selfe expounded it, so oft, and so plentuously. And I am here compelled to inculke & iterate it with so many woordes, to satisfie (if it were possible) this carnall fleshly vowerer and fleshly Iew.

Now to examine and to discusse this matter more depely & playnly. I shall compare the old passeouer, with the new and supper of the Lord. And to shew you how the figures correspond their verities: I will begyn my comparison at Baptisme comparyng it with the Lordes Supper, which be the two Sacramentes left vs now vnder the grace of the Gospell. And afterward (to set foorth both these Sacramentes playnly) I wil compare Circumcision with Baptisme: & the passe lambe with Christes Supper.

The olde passeouer compared with the Supper of our Lord. Baptisme compared with Circumcision.

We (by Baptisme) as we testified vn to the congregation our entryng into the body of Christ (take here Christes body, as doth Paule for his congregation) to dye, to be buried, and to ryse with him, to mortifie our flesh, and to be renued in spirite, to cast of the old man, and to do vpon vs the new: euen so, by the thankes giuyng (for so did the old Greke doctours cal this Supper) at Gods bourde, or at the Lordes Supper (for so doth Paule call it) we testifie the vnitie and communion of our hartes, glued vnto the whole body of Christ in loue: yea and that such loue as Christ at this, his last Supper expressed: what tyme he sayd, his body should be broken, and his bloud shed for the remission of our sinnes. And to be short. As Baptisme is the badge of our fayth, so is the Lordes Supper the token of our loue to God & our neighbours: where vpon standeth the law and the Prophetes. For the end of the precept, is loue out of a pure hart, and good conscience and fayth vnfayned. So that by baptisme we be initiated & cōsigned vnto the worship of one God in one fayth: And by the same faith and loue at the Lordes Supper, we shew our selues to cōtinue in our possession, to bee incorporated and to be the very members of Christes body.

Both these Sacramentes were figured in Moyses law. Baptisme was figured by Circumcision: & the Lordes Supper, by the eatyng of the passe-lambe. where lyke as by Circumcisiō, the people of Israell were rekened to be Gods people, seuered from the Gētiles, so be we now by Baptisme rekened to bee consigned vnto Christes Church seuerall frō Iewes, paynyms &c. And as their passeouer, that is to say, their solēne feast yearely in eatyng their passelambe, was an outward token of their perseueraunce in their religion, and in remembraunce of their passage out of Egypt into the lande of Chanaan: so is now the eatyng of the Luke.22. Lordes Supper (whiche Christ and 1.Cor.5. Paule called our passeouer) a token of our perseueraunce in our Christen profession at Baptisme: and also thankes giuyng with that ioyfull remembraunce of our redemption frō sinne, death, and Exod.12. hell by Christes death. Of the figure of this Supper: our new passeouer: thus it is written. After ye be entred into that land, whiche the Lord God shall giue you accordyng to his promise: ye shall kepe this ceremonie. And when your children aske you what Religion is this? ye shall aunswere them. It is the sacrifice of the passyng ouer of the Lord, when the Lord passed foorth by the houses of the children of Israell in Egypt, smityng the Egyptiās and deliuering our houses. This eatyng therfore of the pase lambe was the figure of the Lordes Supper, whiche figure when the houre was come ỳ he would it to ceasse and giue place vnto the veritie, as the shadow to vanish away at the presence of the body: He sayd thus, Luke.22. with a feruent desire do I long to eate this passeouer with you ere I suffer.

Agayne, let vs compare the figure with the truth, the old passeouer with the new, and diligētly consider the propertie of speakyng, in and of either of The Paschall lambe eaten and the Sacrament instituted. thē. Let vs expende the succession, imitation, and tyme, how the new succeding the old mediatour Christ betwen both sitting at the Supper celebrating both with his presence: did put out the old and bryng in the new. For there is in either of them such like composition of wordes, such affinitie and proportiō of speech, such similitude and propertie in them both, the new so correspōdyng in all thynges to the old, that the old declareth the new, what is it, wherfore it was instituted, and what is the very vse therof. And to begyn at Circumcision the figure of Baptisme, ye shall vnderstand, that in such rites and Sacramētes there are two thinges to be considered, that is to wit. The thyng, and the signe and of thyng. The thynge is it wherfore the signe is instituted to signifie it: as in Circumcision, the thyng is the couenaunt to be of the people of God, and the signe is, the cuttyng of the foreskinne of the preuy mēber. In the passeouer, the thing was, the remēbraunce with thankes giuyng for the deliueraunce out of the hard seruitude of Egypt: but the signe was, the lambe rosted with such ceremonies as were there prescribed them. So in baptisme: The thyng is, the promise to be of the Church of Christ: the signe is, the dippyng into the water with the holy wordes. In our Lordes Supper, the very thing is Christ promised and crucified, and of faith with thankes giuing vnto the father for his sonne giuen to suffer for vs. But the signe is, the dealyng and distributing or reaching forth of the bread and wyne, with the holy wordes of our Lord spoken at his supper, after he had thus dealt the bread & wyne, vnto his Disciples.

The matter and substaunce of the Sacramēt and the signes of the same

And here is it diligently to be noted: That in all such rites, ceremonies, or Sacramentes of God thus instituted: these two thinges (that is to witte the thyng signified, and the signe that signifieth) be concurraunt and inseparable. It is the common vse and propertie of speech in the Scripture, to call the signe, the thyng. As is Circumcision called the couenaunt. Euery manchild Gene.17. must be circumcised that my couenaunt might be in your flesh for a perpetuall bande. And yet was it onely but the outward signe & seale of the couenaūt, that the sede of Abraham should be his especial chosen people, & that he would be their God. The lambe, that was but the signe, was called the passeouer: Exod.12. and yet was not the lambe the passyng ouer, but the signe onely excityng and monishyng them to remember that deliueraūce by the aungell passing by the Israelites in Egypt, smityng the Egyptians. And sith this trope or maner of speech the Scripture did vse with so great grace in the old rites and ceremonies that figured our Sacramētes: why may it not with like grace, for that analogie and proper congruence of the figures with their verities, vse the same phrase and maner of speech in their verities? If the Scripture called the signe the thyng in Circumcision & the passeouer: why should we be offended with the same speech in our Baptisme & in the Lordes Supper? Sith such maner of speech haue no lesse grace and fulnes here then there to bryng the thyng signified into our hartes by such outward sensible signes. For when that signe of Circumcision was giuen the child: thē were they certified (as an outward token may certifie) that the child was of the people of Israell. And therfore did the signes thē, as they do now beare the names of thyngs which they signified as the lambe eaten in the passe

The scripture calleth the signe by the name of the thing that it signifieth.

Two thynges to be considered in the Sacramentes.

The bread in the Sacramēt called the body of Christ & the wyne called the bloud of Christ.

ouer was called the sacrifice & the selfe passeouer, none otherwise then in our new passeouer, that is the Lordes supper, the bread broke &c. is called the body of Christ, & the wyne poured forth and distributed to ech mā, the bloud of Christ because the bread so broken and dealt signifieth vnto the receiuers and putteth them in remembraunce of the sacrifice of his body on the aulter of the crosse, and of his bloud poured forth for our redemption. So that this maner of spech in the administration and vse of the Supper of our Lord: to say. This is my body, & this is my bloud: is almuch to say as, this signifieth my body, this signifieth my bloud. which Supper is here celebrated to put vs in remēbraunce of Christes death, and to excite vs to thankes giuyng.

Est, is take for significat.

Neither let it offend thee (O Christen reader) That est, is taken for significat: that is to say. This is that, is as much to say, as this signifieth that. For this is a cōmūn maner of spech in many places of Scripture, and also in our mother toūg: as whē we see many pictures or images, which ye know well are but signes to represent the bodyes whom they be made lyke, yet we say of the Image of our Lady. This is our Lord, and of S. Katherine, this is S. Katherine, & yet do they but represent and signify vs, our Lady or S. Katherine. And as it is writtē. The iij. braūches are three dayes. The three baskets are three dayes, which was not els but they signified three dayes. Also in the xxviij. chapter. Jacob sayd. This stone whiche I haue set vp an ende, shalbe Gods house, which stone yet was neuer Gods house nor neuer shalbe: but onely did signifie gods house to be buil ded in that same place. Agayne Pharao dreamed to haue sene vij. faire fat Oxē, & eftsoones vij. poore lene Oxē, which Joseph expoundyng sayd: The vij. fat Oxē are vij. plētuous yeares, in which phrase or maner of spech euery mā sith that the Oxē were no yeares: but they signified such yeares. Maruell not ther fore though est, likewise in this sentēce: Hoc est corpus meum, be taken for significat, as much to say, as this signifieth my body. And yet for because the Scriptures conferred together expounde them selfe as sayth S. Austen: And Peter. That we haue before a firme and sure prophetical spech vnto which if we attend as vnto a light set vp in a darke place, we do well: I shall shew you a like phrase in Ezechiell where the destruction of Jerusalem was thus figured. God commaundyng Ezechiell to take a sword as sharpe as a raser, and shaue of his head and beard, and then take a certain waight of the heares deuided into three partes: The one, he should burne in the middes of the Citie. An other he should cut roūd about, and cast the thyrd vp into the wynde. &c. which done he sayd: Thus sayth the Lord God. This is Jerusalem. which act and dede so done, was not Jerusalem. But it signified and preached vnto the beholders of it, Jerusalem to be destroyed: none otherwise thē the breakyng and distributing of the bread and wyne called Christes body and bloud signifieth and preacheth vs the death of Christ, the figure and signe bearyng the name of the thyng signified, as in the Prophetes spech, saying: This is Jerusalem: which dyd but signifie Jerusalem. when Christ dyd breath into his Disciples, saying: Take ye the holy ghost: the same breath was not the holy ghost, but signified and represented them the holy ghost, with a thousand lyke maner of spech in the Scripture.

In the old passeouer thankes were giuen for the slaughter of the first begotten, wherein the kynges posteritie of Egypt fell away. (The Hebrues spared, passeouer, and deliuered.) But in the new passeouer, thankes were giuen that the onely begotten sonne of the most highest was crucified, wherby all faythfull are spared, passed ouer, and not smittē with the sword of damnation, but deliuered and saued in the lambes bloud that hath takē away the sinne of the world. In the old passeouer. The lambe or feast is called the Lordes passeouer, and yet was neither the lambe nor the feast his passyng ouer: but the signe and commemoration of his passyng by. And euē so is it now in the new Supper of our Lord. It is there called the body of our Lord, not that there is any thing, wherin his very naturall body is contayned so long and brode as it hāged on the crosse, for so is it ascended into heauē and sitteth on the right hād of the father: but that thyng that is there done in that Supper, as the breakyng and dealyng and eatyng of the bread, and the whole like action of the wine, signifieth, representeth, and putteth into our harts by the spirite of faith this cōmemoration, ioyfull remēbraunce, & so to geue thankes for that inestimable benefite of our redemption, wherin we see with the eye of our fayth presently his body broken & his blond shed for our sinnes. This is no small Sacrament, nor yet irreuerētly to be entreated: but it is the most glorious and hyghest Sacramēt, with all reuerence and thankes geuyng to be ministred, vsed receiued, preached & solemnely in the face of the congregation to be celebrated: of whose holy administration and vse I shall peraduenture speake in the end of this Supper.

The Sacrament is to be receaued with thankesgeuyng.

But in the meane season (Christen reader) let these sensible signes signifie and represent hys death, and print it in thy hart geuyng thankes incessantly vnto God the father for so incomparable a benefite, that hath giuē thee his owne onely so dearely beloued sonne our Sauiour Iesus Christ to dye for thy sinnes yea and that when we were not his childrē but his enemyes. Christes disciples sayd to the man where is this gest chamber where I might eate the passing by with my disciples? & they prepared the passeouer. And yet Christ eate not the passeouer, but the lambe with his disciples, where it is plaine, ỹ signe to do on the name of the thyng.

Luke. 22.

At last, consider vnto what ende all things tended in that last supper, how the figure teached the veritie, the shadow the body, and how the veritie abolished the figure, and the shadow gaue place to the body. Loke also with what congruence, proportion, and similitude both in the action & the speech, al things were consummate and finished, and all to lead vs by such sensible signes from the figure vnto the veritie, frō the flesh vnto the spirite? And take thou here this infallible & assured saying of Christ neuer to fall fro thy mynde in this last supper, do ye this into the remēbrance of me. And also of Paul, saying. So oft as ye shal eate this bread (so this heretike calleth it bread cuē after the words of the Popes cōsecratiō) and drinke of this cup, praise, declare & geue thankes for the death of the Lord vntill he shall come agayne to iudgement. Remēber thou also: what Christ sayd to the carnall Iewes takyng the eatyng of hys flesh and drinkyng of his bloud so carnally, aunswerying them. My flesh profiteth not, meanyng to eate it bodely but the spirite maketh lyue. And to this set the Prophet Abacukes sentēce. The iust lyueth of his fayth.

Abacuk. 2.

And now (Christen reader) to put thee cleane out of doubt, that Christes body is not here present vnder the forme of bread (as the papistes haue mocked vs many a day) but in heauen, euen as he rose and ascēded. Thou shalt know that he told hys Disciples almost twenty tymes betwene the xiij. and xviij. chap. of Iohn that he should, and would goe hence, and leaue this world. where to comfort them agayne for that they were so heauy for his bodely absence, he promised to send them hys holy Ghost to be their comforter, defender, and teacher: in whom and by whom, he would be present with them and all faithfull vnto the worldes end. Hee sayd vnto hys Disciples. I goe hence, I goe the father, I leaue the world, and now shall I no more be in the world, but ye shall abyde still in the world. Father I come to thee. Poore men haue ye euer with you: but me shall ye not alwayes haue with you. And whē he ascended vnto heauē, they did behold hym & saw the cloude take hys body out of theyr syght: and they fastnyng their eyes after hym, the two men clothed in white, sayd vnto them. Ye men of Galile, wherefore stand ye thus lookyng vp into heauen? This is Iesus that is taken vp from you into heauen, whiche shall so come agayne, euen as ye haue sene him going hence.

Christ declared to his disciples that he would leaue this world & go to his father in heauen.

Scriptures are many that shewe Christ as touchyng his naturall body is gone and is not here. Actes. 2.

Here I would not More to flitte frō hys litterall playne sense. All these so playne wordes be sufficient, I trow, to a Christen man to certifie hys conscience that Christ went his way bodely ascendyng into heauen. For whē he had told his disciples so oft of his bodely departyng from them: they were maruelous heauy and sad. Vnto whō Christ sayd. Because I told you that I go hence, your hartes are full of heauines. If they had not beleued hym to haue spokē of his very bodely absence: they would neuer haue so mourned for his goyng away. And for because they so vnderstode him, and he so meant as his wordes sowned: He added (as he should haue sayd) be ye neuer so heauy or how heauely so euer ye take my goyng hence, yet do I tell you truth. For it is expedient for you that I goe hence. For if I should not go hence, that comforter should not come vnto you. But and if I go hence, I shall send him vnto you. And agayne in the same chap. I am come from the father, and am come into the world, and shall leaue the world agayne and go to my father. what mistery, thinke ye, should be in these so manifest woordes? Did he speake them in any darke parables?

Christ ascended into heauen.

Christ in playne wordes declareth his bodely departure out of this world

Dyd

Dyd he meane otherwise thē he spake? Dyd he vnderstand by goyng hence so ofte repeted, to tary here still? or dyd he meane by forsakyng and leauyng the world to be but inuisible beyng still in the world with his body? No surely. For he meant as faithfully & as playnly as his wordes sowned, and euen so dyd hys Disciples without any more maruelyng vnderstand him. For they aunswered him, saying: Lo, now speakest thou apertly: neither speakest thou any prouerbe. But what a darke prouerbe and subtile ridle had it bene: if he had meant by his goyng hence to haue taryed here still? and by forsakyng the world, to abyde still in the world? and by his going hence to his father by his very bodely Ascention, to be but inuisible? who would interpret this plaine sentence thus? I go hence, that is to saye: I tary here still. I forsake the world and goe to the father, that is to say, I will be but inuisible and yet here abyde still in the world bodely? For as concernyng his Godhead, which was euer with the father, and in all places at once, he neuer spake such wordes of it. when Christ sayd (his death now was at hand) vnto his Disciples: now agayne I forsake the world and go to my father, but ye shall tary still in the world. If they will expound by his forsakyng the world, to tary here still bodely, and to be but inuisible; why do they not by lyke exposition interprete the tarying here still of the Disciples at that tyme, to be gone hence bodely and to be here visible? For Christ dyd set these contraryes one agaynst an other to declare ech other. As if to tary here still, dyd signifie to the Disciples that they should abyde in the world, as it doth in deede: then must needes his goyng hence and forsakyng the world signifie his bodely absence as both the wordes playnly sowne, Christ meant, and they vnderstoode them. But in so plaine a matter what neede these wordes? Be thou therefore sure (Christen reader) that Christes glorified body is not in this world, but in heauen, as he thether ascended in which body he shal come euen as he went gloriously with power and great maiestie to iudge all the world in the last day. Be thou therfore assured, that he neuer thus iuggled nor mocked hys so dearely beloued Disciples so full of heauynes now for his bodely departyng. For if he had so meant as our Papistes haue peruerted hys, saying, hys Disciples would haue wondered at so straunge maner of spech, and he would haue expressed his mynde playnly, sith at this tyme hee was so full set to leaue them in no doubt but to comforte them with hys playne and comfortable wordes. And if he would haue ben but inuisible and still bodely present: hee would neuer haue couered hym selfe with the cloude shewyng them and testifying also by those .ij. men his very bodely Ascētion out of their sightes. we may not make of hys very bodely Ascentiō, such an inuisible iuggling cast as our Papistes fayne. Fashionyng and fayning Christ a body now inuisible, now in many places at once, & thē so great, and yet in so litle a place, not decerned of any of our senses now glorified, now vnglorified, now passible, and then impassible, and I wote neare what they imagine and make of their maker, and all without any woorde, yea cleane agaynst all the wordes of holy Scripture. For surely, in this their imagination and so saying they bryng in a fresh, the heresie of that great heretike Marcian, which said that Christ tooke but a phantasticall body. And so was neither verely borne nor suffered, nor rose, nor ascended verely, neither was he very man. which heresie Tertulian confuteth: Christ toke verely our nature such a passible and mortall body as we beare about with vs, saue that he was without all maner of synne. In such a body he suffered verely, and rose agayne from death in such a glorified body now immortall &c. as euery one of vs shall ryse at the generall iudgement. It is appropried onely to hys Godhead to be euery where and not to bee circumscribed nor conteined in no one place. And as for our Papistes prophane woyde doyces, his body to be in many places at once, indifinitiue incircumscriptiue, non per modum quāti neq; localiter &c. which includeth in it selfe contradiction, of which Paule warned Timothe callyng them the oppositions of a falsenamed science (for that they Scholasticall Diuinitie must make obiections agaynst euery truth, be it neuer so playne with pro & contra: whiche science many that professe it (sayth Paul) haue erred from the fayth, as for this contention and battayle about wordes profitable for nothyng els, but to subuert the hearers, I care not for them. For I haue the almighty testimony of the euerlastyng word of God ready to foyle all their madde and vnreasona-ble reasons, to wype them cleane away, and to turne them into their own confession.

And for bycause they hold them so fast by Paule. I shall loose theyr hold, expoundyng the Lordes Supper after Paule, which addeth immediatly vnto the cup, this ỳ Luke there left foorth: Doe ye this into my remembraunce. This doth Paule repete so ofte to put vs in minde, that these thankes giuing and Supper is the cõmemoration and the memoriall of Christes death. wherfore after all hee repeteth it yet agayne the thyrde tyme saying. So oft as ye shall eate this bread (hee calleth it still bread euen after the Popes consecration) and drinke the cuppe (he sayth not drinke this blonde) see that ye gyue thãkes, be ioyous and preach the death of the Lord, for so much signifieth, Annunciate, in this place, vntill hee come that is to say, frõ the tyme of his death and Ascention vntill hee come agayne to iudgement. Furthermore (sayeth Paule) who so eateth this bread (he calleth it still bread) or drinke of the cuppe of the Lord vnworthely: is giltie of the body and bloud of the Lord. The body and bloud of the Lorde Paule calleth here the congregation assembled together to eate the Lordes Supper. For they are his body and bloud which are redemed with his body and bloud, as he said in the x. chapter before. The cup of thankes giuyng which we receiue with thãkes: is it not the felowshyp of the bloud of Christ? The bread whiche we breake, is it not the felowshyp of the body of Christ? For we beyng many together are one bread, and one body. Loe here Paule expoundyng hym selfe vseth the same forme of speech that is vsed in these woordes. This is my body, takyng is, for signifieth. we are one bread & one body, that is to say, we are signified by one loafe of bread to be one body, he sheweth the cause, addyng because we be all partakers of one lofe or peece of bread. And in the xij. chapter folowing, he sayth plainly, ye be the body of Christ and his particular members, and in the first to the Ephesians. God dyd set Christ to be the head ouer all vnto hys congregation whiche is his body. &c.

And bicause the comparison in the x. chapter betwene the Lordes borde and his cup, and the deuils borde and his cup, do declare this matter. I shall recite Paules woordes, saying: ye may not drinke the cup of the Lord, and the cuppe of the deuill both together. Ye may not bee partakers of the Lordes borde & the deuils borde both at once. The deuils borde and hys cuppe was not his body and bloud, but the eating and drinkyng before their images and Idols as dyd the heathen in the worshyppe and thankes of theyr Gods. Of the which thyng thou mayst gather what Paul meant by the Lordes borde and his cuppe. Now let vs returne to Paule in the xi. chapter. They eate this bread, and drinke of this cup vnworthely, that come not vnto this borde with such faith and loue as they professed at their Baptisme. They eate vnworthely that thrust them selues in among this congregation hauyng not the loue that this Sacramẽt and signe of vnity teacheth and signifieth. which maner of people Paule in ỳ same chapter rebuketh, and bendeth all his Sermon agaynst them: for that they were contẽtious, and came together not for the better but for the woorse. So that their commyng together which should haue bene a token of fayth, and loue, was turned into the occasion and matter of dissention and strife: bycause euery man dyd eate (as Paule sayth) hys owne supper and not the Lordes supper: wherein the bread and drinke is common as well to the poore as to the riche. But here the rich disdayned the poore and would not tarye for them. So that some (as the rich) went theyr way dronken and full: and the poore departed hungry and dry, whiche was a token of no equall distribution of the bread and drinke: and that the rich contemned the poore, and so became sclaunderous and giltie of the body & bloud of Christ: that is to witte, of the poore congregation redemed with Christes body and bloud. Thus they that came together appearyng to haue had that loue whiche the Supper signified and had it not, vttered them selues by this contẽtious and vnlouyng dealyng not to be members of Christes body, but rather giltie and hurtfull vnto them. As if a souldier of our aduersaries part shoulde come in among vs with our Lordes badge, hauyng not that hart fayth and loue to our captaine that we haue, we would (if we espyed it by any token) take him for a spye and betrayer rather then one of vs.

Let a man therefore (sayth Paule) proue him selfe well before, whether he hath this fayth to Christ & loue to God and his neighbour which all he profes-the deuill, how they differre.

The Supper of the Lord is the commemoration and memoriall of Christes death.

Who they are that eate of the bread and drinke of the cup vnworthely.

Euery man did eate his own supper and not the Supper of the Lord.

We must firste examine our selues, & thẽ come to the table of the Lord fed at Baptisme, and this Supper signified: and so come in among the congregation to eate of this bread & drinke of this cup (he calleth it still bread and wyne: & neither his body nor bloud.) For he that eateth & drinketh vnworthely, eateth and drinketh hys owne damnation: bycause he discerneth not the Lordes body. He calleth still the Lordes body the congregation redemed with Christes body as he dyd before, and also in the chapter folowyng fetching his analogie and similitude at the naturall body. In which although there be diuers members one excelling an other, one inferiour, vyler and more cõtemptible then an other, yet may not the body want them: but must couer them reuerently, and hold them in honour. Agayn, in the body, though there be diuers members of diuers offices: yet is there no discorde among them: but euery member bee it neuer so low and vyle: yet doth it minister and serue an other, and all together hold vp and helpe the whole body. This consideratiõ with these cõparisons so eloquently, so plentcously, so liuely doth Paule set forth in that pl. chap. that no mã cã desire any more. And all to bryng vs into the consideration and discretion of the body of Christ which is his congregation: without whiche consideration and discretion, if we thrust our selues in with his signe and recognisance fayndly: we be but hypocrites and eate and drinke our owne iudgement. For this cause many are sicke among you, and many are a slepe, that is, are dead. Here it semeth some plage to haue ben cast vppon the Corinthians for this abuse in the eatyng of the Lordes Supper. For both the law & the Prophetes threatened vs plagues, as pestilence, famine, and sword for our sinnes. For if we had iudged our soules, that is, if we had diligently examined our owne liuyng & repented: we should not haue ben iudged, that is to say, punished of ỹ Lord. But while we be punished, we be corrected of the Lord lest we should be condemned with the world. wherfore my brethren, when ye come together to eate, tary one for an other. Here is the cause of all this dissention wherfore Paule rebuketh them. But here might some of them obiect & tell Paul. Syr we come thether hungry and may not tary so long: whereunto Paul answereth as he dyd before: saying. Haue ye not houses to eate & drinke in? Do ye contemne the cõgregation of God, and shame them that haue none? Here he calleth the poore the church of God, whom afterward he called the body of the Lord: and now at last he sayth. If any mã be so hũgry, let him eate somewhat at home, and so delay his hunger that he may the better tary for the pore, lest ye come together vnto your condemnation. And as for other thynges I shall dispose and set in order when I come. These other thynges were concerning this Supper and such as were out of frame among them whiche if ye read the whole Epistle are easie to see: & that they were no necessary truthes for their saluation. For all such truthes Paule had preached them before and written them to. Neither were these other thinges, Lent, Fast, the Assumption of our Lady, halowyng of bowes, Belles, and Ashes, halowyng of Vestimentes, and creppyng to the Crosse, with such other vnwritten vanities, as M. More lysteth to iest and tryfle out the truth.

Now haue ye the very pure sense of these Christs wordes, this is my body, that is to say. This signifieth or representeth my body takyng Est, for significat. As M. More hym selfe vttered it in his Dialogue put forth in William Barlowes name, reciting the opinions of Oecolampadius and Zwinglius: saying, this is my body, is as much to say as this signifieth my body, where he saith that Oecolampadius alledgeth for hym Tertulian, Chrisostome and Austen, but falsely sometyme addyng more to their wordes, sometyme takyng away from theyr sentẽces. which saying is playne false and hee belyeth the man now departed, for first his incomparable learnyng and verye spirituall iudgement would not suffer hym to be ignorannt in the vnderstandyng of these old holy Doctours (whom I dare say he vnderstode as well as More. And his conscience and faythfulnes would not suffer hym falsely to peruert them as M. More belyeth and peruerteth Christ & Paule and all holy Scripture. And if this mã had thus dealt with these Doctours sayinges: Luther agaynst whom he did cõtende in this matter would not haue left it vntold hym.

But (Christẽ reader) to put thee out of doubt haue here these doctours own wordes both in Latine and Englishe. And first heare Tertulian, where thou must first vnderstãd that there was an hereticke called Marcion, saying that Christ tooke not to hym the very body of man, but an imagined and a phantaſticall body, to put of, and on, when he lyſted: and ſo not to haue ben borne verely of the virgine Mary nor yet to haue ſuffered verely death &c. agaynſt whom, thus writeth Tertulian in hys fourth booke.

Tertulian. Profeſſus itaq; ſe concupiſcentia concupiſſe edere paſcha, vt ſuum acceptum panem & diſtributum Diſcipulis corpus ſuum illum fecit, hoc eſt corpus meum dicendo: id eſt figura corporis mei. Figura autem non fuiſſet, niſi veritatis eſſet corpus. Cæterũ, vacua res, quod eſt phantaſma, figuram capere non poſſet. Whiche wordes are thus in Engliſh ſpoken of Chriſt. Whiche acknowledgyng hym ſelfe with how feruent deſire he longed to eate the paſſeouer, as his bread taken and diſtributyng to his Diſciples: made it his body, ſaying: This is my body: that is, to ſay, the figure of my body. For figure had it bene none, except it were a very body. For a voyde thyng which is a phantaſie can receaue no figure. Here it is playne, that this is my body after the old holy Doctour, is as much to ſay, as this is the figure or ſigne that repreſenteth or ſignifieth my body.

The wordes of Tertulian.

Also, thus ſayeth Auſten. Lex dicit non eſſe manducandũ ſanguinem, quod anima ſit ſanguis: Quod lex dicit, ſanguis eſt anima: eſſe poſitum dicimus, ſicut alia multa & penè omnia Scripturarum illarum Sacramenta ſignis & figuris plena futuræ predicationis, quæ iam per Dominum noſtrum Ieſum Chriſtum declarata eſt. &c. Poſſum etiam interpretari præceptum illud in ſigno eſſe poſitum. Non enim dubitauit Dominus dicere: Hoc eſt corpus meum, quum ſignum daret corporis ſui. Sic eſt enim ſanguis anima, quomodo petra erat Chriſtus. Nec tamen quum hæc diceret, ait: petra ſignificabat Chriſtum, ſed ait: petra erat Chriſtus. Quæ rurſus ne carnaliter acciperetur, ſpiritualem illam vocat, id eſt ſpiritualiter intelligi docet. Whiche wordes be thus in Engliſh. The law ſayeth that bloud ſhould not be eatẽ, becauſe the life is bloud. which precepte of the lawe and becauſe that bloud is lyfe: we affirme it to be ſet like as many other almoſt innumerable ſacramentes of thoſe Scriptures, full of ſignes and figures of the preachyng to come: whiche now is declared by our Lord Ieſu Chriſt &c. And I may interprete that precept to bee layed in a ſigne. For the Lord doubted not to ſay. This is my body: when hee gaue the ſigne of his body. And euen ſo is the bloud lyke, and the ſtone was Chriſt. And yet when he ſayd theſe wordes: he ſayd not the ſtone ſignified Chriſt: but he ſayd, the ſtone was Chriſt, whiche leſt they ſhould be taken carnally, hee calleth it ſpirituall, that is to ſay, he teacheth it to bee vnderſtand ſpiritually. where is now Mores litteral ſenſe, and materiall meate?

Auſte cap. 23. against Fauſt. Gene. 6. Leui. 7. Deut. 12. Auſten calleth Sacrament the ſigne of his body.

Now ſhall ye heare Chriſoſtome. Nihil ſenſibile tradidit Chriſtus: licet dederit panem & vinum: non quod panis & vinum non ſint ſenſibilia, ſed quod in illis mentem hærere noluit. Nam in ſuum corpus, quod eſt panis vitæ, ſubuehit dicens. Hoc eſt corpus meum: perinde ac dicat. Hoc licet panis ſit, ſignificat tamen tibi corpus. Thus it is in Engliſhe. Chriſt geuyng bread and wyne, gaue no ſenſible thyng: not that bread and wine be not ſenſible: but that he would not our mynde to ſticke ſtill in them. For hee lifted vs vp into hys bodye, which is the bread of lyfe: ſaying. This is my body: as though he ſhould ſay. Though this be but bread, yet it ſignifieth vnto thee, my body. Now iudge thou (Chriſtẽ reader) whether M. More reporteth right, of this mã that alledgeth theſe holy Doctours, or no.

Hom. 83. operis imperfecti. Chriſoſtome calleth the ſacramẽt the ſigne of Chriſtes body.

Now haue ye the pure vnderſtandyng of the wordes of the Lordes ſupper confirmed with the old holy Doctours. That, this is my body, is as much to ſay, as this ſignifieth my body. And this is my bloud: is, this ſignifieth my bloud. But yet was there neuer ſuch maner of ſpeaking in the ſcripture. This is that: that is to ſay. This is conuerted and tranſubſtanciated into that. Or this is conteined in that: the thyng conuerted and chaunged keepyng ſtill her fourme, qualities, quantities &c. As to ſay. This is my body, that is to ſay. This bread is conuerted into my body, the bread abydyng ſtill in his faſhion, taſt, colour, waight. &c. For Chriſt when hee conuerted water into wyne, dyd not leaue the fourme, colour, and taſt ſtill in the water. For ſo had it bene no chaungyng. But let our couetous conuerters choppe and chaunge bread and wyne till we there feele, ſee, & taſt neither bread nor wyne, and then will we beleue them ſo they bryng for them the word of God. For as for their falſe iugglyng we feele it at our fingers ende: we ſee it, had we but halfe an eye: we taſt it at our toũges end, and know it with all our wyttes and vnderſtandyng ſo manifeſtly, that we perceiued them openly long agoe, to be the very Antichriſtes, of whom Chriſt and his Apoſtles warned vs to come in this laſt tyme.

The Papiſtes ſay that the trā ſubſtantion is done by miracles.

And if they ſay. That this conuerſion is made by miracles. Then muſt euery one of them as hee ſay a Maſſe, make vs many a miracle the very markes of M. Mores Churche. For it is one great miracle that Chriſts body ſhould come ſo ſodenly inuiſible and ſo oft out of heauen, and that ſuch a miracle as the worde of God neuer knew. An other that ſo great a body ſhould be conteyned in ſo litle a place, and that one body ſhould be at once in ſo many places and two bodyes in one place. An other that it is eaten, neither the eater feelyng it, nor the body eaten ſuffereyng nor feelyng the teeth of the eater. with as many moe marueloꝰ & like miracles or rather abſurdities of the bread and wyne, that there muſt be the forme, colour, taſt, wayght, broken &c. and yet neither to be bread nor wyne in our beleſe except we will be burned of thē bycauſe we beleue not their iuggleyng taſtes. O miſchieuous miracle makers. O cruell conuerters: O blondy butchers.

But hearke (Chriſten reader) and I ſhall learne thee to knowe Chriſtes playne and true miracles, from the fleighty iuggling of theſe craftey cōueyers. Chriſt would neuer haue done miracle had men beleued hym onely by hys woꝛdes, but when hee ſayd firſt theſe woꝛdes. This is my body, no mā doubted at them, no man was in any vnbeleue of them, wherfoꝛe theſe woꝛdes muſt needes bee playne ſingle and pure without miracle, as theſe. The ith. braunches are thꝛe dayes: without any ſubtile tranſubſtantiation, ſuch inſenſible conuerſion, or any falſe miracle. Chriſt wꝛought all his miracles foꝛ the glozy of God to declare hym ſelfe both God and man, ſo that all Chriſtes miracles were cōpꝛehended vnder mans ſences or commō wyttes, which bꝛyng in ſuch knowledge vnto the vnderſtā dyng. As when he chaunged water into wyne, the miracle was firſt receiued with the ſight, open at the eye, taſted with the mouth and ſo conuayed vnto the vnderſtandyng. And now though we neither ſee nor taſt that miracle, yet we heare it, ſee it, read it, and ſo vnderſtād that it was once a miracle done of Chriſt: whē he reſtoꝛed the ſight to the blynd, healed the lame, cleanſed the leꝛpoſe, reared the dead: all was ſeen, heard, and ſo compꝛehended vnder our moſt ſwete ſenſes: that his very enemyes were compelled to confeſſe them foꝛ miracles. But our miracle makers, that make dayly ſo oft and ſo many, are ſo farre from this cleare poynt, that their miracles in this matter, be not, neither ſhalbe cōtained noꝛ compꝛehēded vnder any of our fiue wittes, but they rather delude and deceyue both ſight, taſt, feelyng, hearyng, and ſmelyng: ye our fayth and vnderſtandyng to. Beware therefoꝛe of theſe miſchieuous miracle makers foꝛ theyꝛ owne glory and profite and will kill thee to, if thou beleueſt not their lyes. Beware I ſay of thoſe Marchauntes that will ſell the wares, which they will not ſuffer thee to ſee, nor to taſt, nor to touch but when they ſhewe the white, thou muſt beleue it is blacke: If they geue the bread, thou muſt beleue it without any word of thy fayth, that it is Chriſtes body, and that of their owne makyng. If thou taſt, ſee and feele it bread yet thou muſt ſay it is none though the Scripture calleth it bread xx. tymes. Beware, beware I ſay of Antichriſt: whoſe commyng ſayth Paule (He is come alredy ſayth John, now are there many Antichriſtes) ſhall be after the woꝛkyng of Sathan with an almighty power, with falſe ſignes and wonders lying miracles, & with all deceite of vnrighteouſnes. &c.

All Chriſtes miracles were ſuch as were cō pꝛehended vnto our ſenſes.

The doctrine and tyrāny of the Papiſtes.

1. Theſ. 2. 1. Iohn. 2.

To be to curious in ſo playne a Sacrament and ſigne, to cauill Chriſtes cleare woꝛdes with ſophiſticall ſophiſmes, and to tryſull out the truth with tauntes and mockes, as M. More doth, is no Chriſten maner. And if our Papiſtes, and Scholaſticall Sophiſters will obiect and make aunſwere to this Supper of the Loꝛde, bꝛingyng in foꝛ them, their vnwittē woꝛdes, dedes, & dreames (foꝛ we haue compelled More with ſhame to flitte frō the Scripture) ſtrewed with their vaine ſtraunge termes which Paul damneth, and geueth Timothe warning of: I ſhall by gods grace ſo ſet the almighty woꝛd of God againſt them, that all Chriſten ſhall ſee falſhead and deceite in this Sacramēt: and ſo diſcloſe theyꝛ deuilly doctrine and fleighty iuggleyng, that all that can read Engliſhe, ſhall ſee the trouth of Gods woꝛd openly beare downe their vnwꝛitten lyes. Foꝛ it is verely the thyng that I deſire, euen to be written agaynſt in this matter, foꝛ I haue the ſolutions of all theyꝛ obiections ready. And know right well, that the moꝛe they ſtyꝛre this Sacrament, the bꝛoder

All true miracles are done to ſet foꝛth the glozy of God.

ſhall theyr lyes be ſpread, the more ſhal theyr falſehead appeare and the more gloriouſly ſhall the trouth triumph: as it is to ſee this day by long contention in this ſame, and other lyke Articles: which the Papiſtes haue ſo long abuſed, and how More hys lyes vtter the truth euery day more and more. For had he not come beggyng for the Clergy from Purgatory, with his ſupplication of ſoules, and Raſtel and Rocheſter had they not ſo wyſely played theyr partes: Purgatory peraduenture had ſerued them yet another yeare: neither had it ſo ſoone haue bene quenched, nor the poore ſoule and Proctour there bene with his bloudy Byſhop Chriſtē catte, ſo farre coniured into hys owne Vtopia with a ſachell about hys necke to gather for the proude Prieſtes in Synagoga Papiſtica.

The contētious and wicked doctrine of ỹ Papiſtes hath prouoked the lyght of gods truth to be ſet forth to the vnderſtandyng of the people.

When Chriſt was aſcended into heauen: and had ſent his Apoſtles the ſpirite of truth to leade them into all truth perteinyng vnto our ſaluation, euen into hym that ſayd: I am the truth of whiche truth hee inſtructed them after his reſurrection. Luke. xxiiij. and they had preached the ſame truth nowe at Jeruſalē Actes. ij. at which preachyng there were that receiued their wordes and were Baptiſed, about iij. M. hys Apoſtles remembryng how their maiſter Chriſt at his laſt Supper did inſtitute and leaue them this holy Sacrament of his body and bloud to be celebrated and done in his remembraunce among ſuch as had receiued his Goſpell, were Baptiſed, had profeſſed hys fayth, and would perſeuer in his Religion: dyd now in this firſt congregation celebrate the Lordes Supper breakyng the bread and eatyng it as Chriſt dyd teach them, which Supper, Luke and Paule called afterward the breakyng of the bread. As Actes. ij. ſaying. That they which gladly had now receiued Peters acte, & were baptiſed: were perſeuering in the doctrine of the Apoſtles, and in the communiō, and in the breakyng of the bread, and in prayer, whiche Sacrament was now a token of the perſeueraunce in theyr Chriſten Religion now profeſſed. Of this breakyng of bread, Luke writyng of Paule commyng vnto Troades, ſayth alſo, that their vpon a Sabboth day, when the Diſciples were come together vnto the breakyng of the bread: Paule made a Sermon duryng to mydnight &c. And that this was no common nor prophane vſe but an heauenly Sacrament and a reuerent rite and vſage, the circumſtaunces of the action declare, both in Luke and Paule, the wyrgit to be the very inſtitutiō that Chriſt ordeyned at his Supper. Paule thus recitynge this breakyng of the breade: ſaying. The bread whiche we breake, is it not the felowſhyp of the body of Chriſt? ỹ is to ſay, doth it not ſignifie vs to be the body of Chriſt that is hys congregation and people, as doth the wordes folowyng declare? Paule addyng the cauſe ſaying. For we beyng many are all together ſignified by the one loafe to be one body: for that we be partakers of the ſame bread. Alſo before, he calleth in the ſame Supper, the cup of thankes geuyng the felowſhyp of the bloud of Chriſt: that is to ſay, the congregation redemed with Chriſtes bloud.

How the Apoſtles dyd in the firſt congregation celebrate the Lordes Supper.

Actes. xx.

The holy Sacrament therefore, would God it were reſtored vnto the pure vſe, as ỹ Apoſtles vſed in it their tyme. would God, the ſecular princes which ſhould be the very paſtours and head rulers of their congregations cōmitted vnto their cure, would firſt cōmaunde or ſuffer the true preachers of Gods woorde to preache the Goſpell purely and playnly with diſcrete libertie: and conſtitute ouer eche particulare Pariſh ſuch Curates as cā and would preach the word, and that once or twiſe in the weeke, appoyntyng vnto theyr flocke certeyne dayes after their diſcretion and zeale to Godward, to come together to celebrate the Lordes Supper. At the which aſſemblie the Curate would propone and declare them firſt this texte of Paule. i. Corinthians. xj. So oft as ye ſhall eate this bread and drinke of this cuppe: ſee that ye be ioyous, prayſe, and giue thankes preachyng the death of the Lord &c. whiche declared, and euery one exhorted to prayer, he would preach them purely Chriſt to haue dyed and bene offered vpon the altare of the Croſſe for theyr redemption: whiche onely oblation to be ſufficiēt ſacrifice to peace the fathers wrath, and to purge all the ſinnes of the world. Then to excite them with humble diligence, euery man vnto the knowledge of hym ſelfe & hys ſinnes: and to beleue and truſt to the forgyuenes in Chriſtes bloud: and for this ſo incomparable benefite of our redemption, (whiche were ſold bondemen to ſinne) to geue thankes vnto God the father for ſo merciefull a deliueraunce through the death of Jeſu Chriſt, eue-

Then the bread and wyne ſet before them in the face of the Churche vpon the table of the Lord purely and honeſtly layed: let hym declare to the people the ſignifications of thoſe ſenſible ſignes, what the action and deede moueth, teacheth and exhorteth them vnto: and that the bread and wyne be no prophane common ſignes: but holy Sacramentes reuerently to be conſidered and receiued with a depe fayth, and remembraunce of Chriſtes death and of the ſhedyng of his blond for our ſinnes, thoſe ſenſible thynges to repreſente vs the very body and blonde of Chriſt, ſo that while euery man beholdeth with his corporall eye thoſe ſenſible Sacramentes: the inward eye of his fayth may ſee & beleue ſtedfaſtly Chriſt offred and dying vppon the Croſſe for his ſinnes, how his body was broken and his blond ſhed for vs, and hath giuen hym ſelfe whole for vs, hym ſelfe to be all ours, and what ſoeuer he dyd to ſerue vs, as to bee made for vs of hys father our righteouſnes, our wiſedome, holyneſſe, redemption, ſatisfaction. &c.

The bread and wyne are not prophane but Sacramentes to holy vſe.

1. Cor. 1.

Then let this preacher exhort them louyngly to draw neare vnto this table of the Lord, and that not onely bodely, but alſo (their hartes purged by fayth), garniſhed with loue and innocency) euery man to forgyue eche other vnfaynedly, and to expreſſe or at leaſt wiſe to endeuour them to folow that loue wherche Chriſt dyd ſet before our eyes at his laſt Supper when he offered hym ſelfe willyngly to dye for vs hys enemyes: whiche incomparable loue to commende, bryng in Paules Argumentes, ſo that this, hys flocke may come together, and be ioyned into one body, one ſpirite, and one people. This done let hym come downe: and accompanyed honeſtly with other Miniſters come forth reuerently vnto the Lordes table, the congregatiō now ſet round about it, and alſo in their other conuenient ſeates, the paſtour exhorting them all to pray for grace, faith and loue, whiche all this Sacrament ſignifieth and putteth them in mynde of. Then let there be read apertely and diſtinctly the vj. Chapter of Iohn in their mother toung: wherby they may clearely vnderſtand, what it is to eate Chriſtes fleſh and to drinke his blond. This done, and ſome briefe prayer and

A good and neceſſary exhortatiō to be made to ỹ people at the tyme they receaue the communiō.

Theſe with ſuch lyke preparations and exhortations had, I would euery man preſent ſhould profeſſe the Articles of our fayth openly in our mother toung, and confeſſe his ſinnes ſecretly vnto God, praying intierly that hee would now vouchſafe to haue mercy vpon hym, receiue his prayers, glewe hys hart vnto hym by fayth and loue, encreaſe his fayth, geue hym grace to forgyue and to loue his neighbour as him ſelfe, to garniſh hys lyfe with pureneſs and innocency, and to confirme hym in all goodnes and vertue. Then againe it behoueth the curate to warne and exhorte euery man ſtrayte to conſider and expende with hym ſelfe, the ſignification & ſubſtaūce of this Sacrament, ſo that he ſit not downe an hipocrite and a diſſembler, ſith God is ſearcher of hart and raines, thoughtes and affectes: and ſee that he come not to the holy table of the Lorde without that fayth whiche he profeſſed at hys Baptiſme, and alſo that loue which the Sacrament preacheth and teſtifieth vnto hys hart, leſt hee now, founde gilty of the body and blond of the Lord (that is to wytte a diſſembler with Chriſtes death and ſclaunderous to the congregation, the body & blond of Chriſt) receiue his own damnation. And here let euery man fall downe vppon hys knees ſaying ſecretly with all deuotion their Pater noſter in Engliſh, theyr Curate as example kneelyng downe before them. Which done, let hym take the bread and eft the wyne in the ſight of the people hearing him with a loude voyce, with godly grauitie, and after a Chriſten religious reuerence rehearſyng diſtinctly ỹ woordes of the Lordes Supper in their mother toung. And thē diſtribute it to the miniſters, which taking the bread with great reuerence, will deuide it to the congregation euery man breakyng and reaching it forth to hys next neighbour and member of the miſtike body of Chriſt, other miniſters folowyng with the cuppes powring forth & dealing them the wyne, all together thus beyng now partakers of one bread and one cuppe, the thyng thereby ſignified and preached printed faſt in their hartes. But in this meane while muſt the miniſter or paſtour be readyng the communicatiō that Chriſt had with his Diſciples after his Supper, beginnyng at the waſhing of their feete: ſo readyng till the bread & wyne be eaten and dronken and all the action done. And then let them all fall downe on their knees geuing thankes highly vnto God the father, for this benefite and death of his ſonne, whereby now by faith euery man is aſſured of remiſſion of his ſinnes, as this bleſſed Sacrament had put them in mynde, and preached it them in this outward action and Supper. This done, let euery man commende and geue them ſelues whole to God and depart.

Thankeſgeuyng to God.

I would haue hereto put my name, (good Reader) but I know well that thou regardeſt not who writeth, but what is writtē: thou eſteemeſt the word of the veritie, and not of the authour. And as for Mo More, whom the veritie moſt offendeth, and doth but mocke it out when he cannot ſoyle it: he knoweth my name well inough. For the deuill his gardian, as him ſelfe ſayth: commeth euery day into Purgatory, (if there be any day at all) with his haynous and enuious laughter, gnaſhing his teeth and grynnyng, tellyng the Proctour with hys Popes priſoners, what ſoeuer is here done or written againſt them, both his perſon and name to. And he is now, I dare ſay, as great with his gardian, as euer he was.

These wordes of his are in his booke that he made for hys poore ſoules in Purgatory.

If any man tel ye, loe here is Chriſt, or there is hee, beleue hym not: For there ſhall aryſe falſe Chriſtes falſe annoynted giuyng great miracles. Take hede, I haue told ye before, if they therefore tell ye: loe, hee is in the deſert, go not forth, loe hee is in the priuy pipe, beleue it not.

The ſtorie, life, and Martirdome of Iohn Frith with the Godly and learned workes and writings of the ſayde Author, here after enſueing.

He ſayd Iohn Frith was borne in Kent and was the ſonne of Richard Frith Inholder in Senenock in the Countye of Kent. This yong man ſo greatly profited in lerning, that ſcarcely in his time there might bee anye found equall vnto him. And vnto his great knowledge and learning, was adioyned ſuch an honeſt conuerſation and godlynes of life, that it was harde to iudge, in whether of them he was more commendable. Of the great godlines that was in him, this may ſerue for experiment ſufficient, that not withſtanding his other manifold and ſingular giftes and ornaments of the mynde in him moſt pregnant, wherwith all hee might haue opened an eaſye way vnto honour, and dignitie, yet he choſe rather wholye to conſecrate him ſelfe vnto the Church of Chriſt, excellently ſhewing forth and practiſing in him ſelfe the Precept ſo highly commended of the Philoſophers touching the lyfe of man, which life (they ſay) is geuen vnto vs in ſuch ſort, that how much better the man is, ſo much the leſſe hee ſhould liue vnto hym ſelfe, but vnto other, ſeruing for the common vtilitie. And that we ſhoulde thinke a great part of our birth to bee due vnto our parentes, A greater part vnto our countrey, And the greateſt parte of all, to bee beſtowed vpon the Church, if we wil bee counted good men.

Fyrſt of all he began his ſtudie at Cambridge where he had to his tutor Stephen Gardiner, who afterward was Byſhop of Wincheſter. And in the nature of this yong man being but a child, God had planted meruelous inſtinctions, and loue vnto learning, where vnto he was addict. He had alſo a wonderfull promptnes of wit, and a redye capacitie to receaue and vnderſtand any thing, in ſo much that he ſemed not to bee ſent vnto learning, but alſo borne for the ſame purpoſe. Neither was there any diligence wanting in him equall to that towardnes or worthy of his diſpoſition. Whereby it came to paſſe, that he was not onely a louer of learning, but alſo became an exquiſite learned man.

And at that tyme it happened that Thomas Wolſey Cardinall of Yorke prepared to buyld a College in Oxforde, whiche had the name and title of Frideſwyd, but now named Chriſtes Church. And vnto this College the ſayd Cardinall gathered togither ſuch men as were founde to excell in any kinde of Learning, and knowlege. Amonge whom this Iohn Frith, the Author of theſe notable workes was one, who then being a ſtudient in Cambridge, and Bacheler of arte was called from thence, and placed in ỹ ſaid College. And when he had diligently Labored in moſt godly ſtudy certaine yeares, not without great profite both of Latyn and Greeke. Then being ſuſpected to be a fauorer of Martyn Luthers doctrine. He was apprehended and committed to priſon, from whence afterward being deliuered he reſorted to the Citie of London, and there came in acquayntaunce with William Tyndall. And not long after the ſayd William & Iohn Frith had many metinges and great conferences, and by the ſayd William he fyrſt receaued into his hart the ſeede of the Goſpell and ſencere godlines, & after with great perill and Daunger they both being inquired & ſought for, fled. William Tyndall firſt placed him ſelfe in Germany, and there did firſt tranſlate the Goſpell of S. Mathewe into Engliſhe, and after the whole new teſtament &c. And not long after the departure of Tyndall, Iohn Frith eſcaped and fled into Flaūders where he remayned almoſt the ſpace of iij. yeares, and there he made his booke againſt purgatory, and dyuerſe other Godly and learned workes, as in the perface of the ſayd booke doth appeare. But at the laſt he being driuē to neceſſitie and lacke of money, was forced ſecretly to returne ouer into this Realme to be releued of his frendes: namely of the Prior of Reading. And (as it was thought he purposed to haue had the Prior ouer with him. And he being at Reading, it happened that he was there taken for a vagabond, and brought to examination. Where the simple man loth to vtter him selfe what he was, and vnacquainted with their maner of examinations, and they greatly offended with him, committed him to ẏ stockes, where when he had sitten a long tyme, and was almost pined with hunger, & would not for all that declare what he was: At the last he desired that ẏ Schoolemaster of the towne might be brought vnto him, which at that tyme was one Leonard Coxe, a man very well learned. Assone as he came vnto him, Frith by and by in the Latyn tongue began to bewaile his Captiuitie. The schole maister being ouercome with his eloquence, did not onely take pitie and compassion vpon him, but also began to loue and embrace such an excellent witt, and disposition vnlooked for, especially in suche state of mysery. Afterward they conferring more togither vpon many thinges as touching the Vniuersities, Scholes, and tonges, fell frō the Latyn tongue, to the Greeke, wherein Frith did so inflame the loue of the sayd schole master towardes him, that he brought him into a meruelous admiration, especially when as the schoolemaster hard him so promptly by hart rehearse Homers verses out of his first booke of Iliades. Wher vpon the schoolemaster, went with all speede vnto ẏ Magistrates, greuously cōplayning of the iniury which they did shewe vnto so excellent and innocent a yong man. And so through the helpe of the sayde schoolemaster, the said Frith was freely set at libertie. All be it, his sauetie cōtynued not long, through the great hatred and deadly persute of Sir Thomas More who at that tyme being Chauncelor of England, persecuted him both by land and Sea: besetting all the wayes, hauens, and portes, yea and promysing great rewardes if any man could bring hym any newes or tydinges of hym. Thus Frith being on euery part beset with troubles, not knowing which way to turne hym, sought for some place to hide him in. And so flyeng from one place to another, & often chaunging both his garmentes and place, yet could he be in safetie in no place, no not long amongest his very frendes, so that at the last he comming to a Porte towne in Essex called Milton shore, and there purposing to haue taken shipping to haue passed ouer into Flaunders, was betrayed and brought bounde backe agayne, and layed in the Tower of London. And diuerse tymes after was called before Sir Thomas More, & also before the Bysshops with whom he had many conflictes. And he continuing long prisoner in the Tower, at the last a false brother resorted vnto him whose name was William Holt a Taylour, who (feyning that he bare great frendship vnto him) so flattered him (and he himselfe being vtterly voyde of all suspicious nature) that he began to communicate vnto him his very Secretes, and among other entred into a longe discourse of the sacrament, which Frith had penned in a booke in the tyme that he was Prisoner in the Tower. And when the sayd Holt had seene the sayd booke, he required him most instantly to lend him the same onely to reade ouer, the which the sayd Iohn Frith did vnaduisedly graunte, which after was the occasion of his greate trouble and finally of his death. So sone as this false brother had the booke, he departed, for now he had the praye that he had long watched for, And forth with he caried the sayde booke vnto Sir Thomas More, who reioyced not a litle at the hauing thereof, and forthwith whetted his wittes, and cauled his spirites togither, meaning to refute his opinion by a contrary booke, but that was more then he could doe. Yet he attempted to doe asmuch as he might, and at the last wrote a booke agaynst him, the Copie whereof when it came to Frithes handes, although he were then prisoner in the Tower and destitute both of bookes and conference, yet he aunswered it, omitting nothing that any man coulde desire to the perfect and absolute handeling of the matter. Beside all these cōmendations of the afore sayde Learned yong man, there was also in him a frendly and prudent moderation in vttering of the trueth, ioyned with learned godlines, which vertue hath allwayes so much preuayled in the Church of Christ, that without it all other good giftes of knowledge be they neuer so great can not greatly profite, but oftentimes doe very much hurt. And in all matters, where necessitie did not moue him to contend, he was ready to graunt all thinges for quietnes sake.

After he had sufficiently contended in his writynges with More, Rochester, and Rastall, Raſtall Mores ſonne in lawe, whom he did ſo valiauntly fight withall and confounde, that he conuerted Raſtall to his part. Then he was caryed to Lambith before the Biſhop of Caunterburie, and afterward to Croydon where was preſent Stephē Gardiner Biſhop of Wincheſter who had bene his tutor in Cambridge as aforeſayd, and ſemed to owe vnto him greate loue and fauour, but in the ſtede thereof he found in the ende his great malice and tyrannye, and laſt of all he was called before the Biſhoppes in a Common aſſemblye at London, where he ſo conſtantly defended him ſelfe that he had preuailed, if he might haue bene heard, as indeed he was not. The order of his iudgment with the maner of his examinatiō and Articles which were obiected againſt him, are compriſed and ſet forth by himſelfe in a letter written to his frendes, which letter alſo is imprinted and ſet forth in this booke. After ſentence geuen againſt him by the Byſhop of London, he was delyuered to the Maior & Shirifes of the ſayd Citie (Syr Stephen pecocke, a ſimple man being then Maior) and forth with he was committed to new gate, where he was put into ỹ Dungeon vnder the ſayd Gate, and laden with Boltes, and Irons as many as he could beare, and his necke with a Coler of Iron made faſt to a poſt, ſo that he could neyther ſtand vpright nor ſtoupe downe, yet was he there continually occupied in writing of diuerſe thinges, namely with a candell both day, and night, for there came none other light into that place. And in this caſe he remayned iij. or iiij. dayes, and then was from thence caried into Smithfielde ỹ iij. day of July. 1533. where with great pacience, and conſtancy he ſuffered that moſt helly, and cruell death of burning.

And when the fyer was ſet on the faggottes he embraced the ſame in his Armes, & and with all pacience commytted his ſpirite vnto almighty God. But this one thing is yet to bee remembred, that he being bounde to the ſtake with an other good Martyr, which was a very ſimple young man named Andrew Hewet, there was preſent one Doctour Cooke that was perſon of the Church called Allhalowes in hony lane ſcituate in the myddes of Chepeſyde. And the ſayd Cooke made an open exclamation and admoniſhed the people that they ſhould in no wiſe pray for them no more then they would doe for a dogg. At which wordes Frith ſmyling, deſired the Lord to forgeue him. But the vngodly and vncharitable wordes of the ſayd Doctour did not a litle offende the people. And thus for the teſtimony of the true doctrine of Chriſt, which the ſayd Frith ſealed with his bloud the day, and yeare afore ſayd, he dyed in the xxiij. yeare of his age (as ſome ſaye) but his parentes reported in the xxx. yeare of his age.

GRace and peace bee with thee Christē reader. I am sure there are many that will much merueil & coūt it a great presumptiō that I beyng so young and of so small learnyng dare attempt to dispute this matter against these thre personages of the which nūber two, that is to say, my Lord of Rochester and Sir Thomas More, are auncient men both of great witte, and dignitie. Notwithstanding I will desire thē paciently, to heare myne aunswere, not aduertisyng who speaketh the wordes, but rather what is sayd. And as cōcernyng myne youth, let them remember what Paule monisheth. i. Timot. iiij. willyng that Timotheus should instruct the cōgregation and that no mā should despise his youth: for as the spirite of God is bound to no place, euē so is he not addict to any age or person, but inspireth when hee will and where he will, makyng the young to see visiōs and espye the truth, and, the elders to dreame dreames, and to wander in phantasies Actes. 2. Ioel. 2.

Not who speaketh, but that whiche is spoken is to be weyed most.

1. Tim. 4.

The holy ghost inspireth where, when, and on whom he pleaseth.

Actes. 2.

And as touchyng my learnyng I must nedes acknowledge (as the truth is very small, neuertheless that litle (as I am bound, haue I determined, by Gods grace) to bestow to the edifyyng of Christes congregation which I pray god to encrease in the knowledge of his word.

1. Cor. 12.

The talent of our learnyng is to be employed to the edifiyng of Christes congregation.

I would not that any man should admit my wordes or learnyng, except they will stande with the Scripture, and be approued therby. Lay them to the touchstone, and trye them with Gods word. If they be found false and counterfaite, then damne them, and I shall also renoke them with all myne hart. But if the Scripture allow them, that you can not deny but it so is, then resist not ye doctrine of God, but knowledge your ignorāunce and seduction, and returne gladly into the right way. For if you cā not improue it by Gods word, and yet, of an hate and malicious myndе that you beare to the truth labour to resist it & condemne it that it should not spread: I ensure you your sinne is irremissible and euen agaynst the holy ghost, and the blond of them that perish for fault of instruction shalbe required on your handes.

wilfully to resist Gods worde, is sinne agaynst the holy ghost.

Ezech. 33.

Obiection.

Peraduenture some of you will say, your fathers & old progenitours, with many holy men and Doctours haue so beleued & that therfore you will abyde by the old. I aunswere: The wayes & iudgementes of God are meruelous, who knoweth whether God haue suffred his elect to erre and be seduced for a season, to the entent that the vnfaithfull which would not beleue the truth, but had pleasure in iniquity might stōble at their errour into their vtter confusion and ruine? Although a man be neuer so faythfull and holy, yet is there much imperfectiō in him as long as he is included in this mortall body, how be it, it is not imputed vnto him, but thrōugh ye fayth in Christes bloud who lye pacified and forgeuen. And therfore it is not sure, that we folow their exteour workes or other imaginatiōs, but let vs euer cōferre them vnto the pure word of God, and as the Scripture testifieth so let vs receaue them.

1. Thess.

Our imperfection forgeuen thorough faith in Christes bloud.

My Lord of Rochester doth testifie him selfe writyng vpon the xviij. Article, that there are many pointes both of the Gospels and other Scriptures which are now discussed more diligētly, and more clearely vnderstand, then they haue bene in tymes past. And adeth furthermore that there are diuerse places in Scripture yet some deale darke, which he doubteth not, but that they shalbe more open and light vnto our posteritie, for why shal we dispaire of that (saith he) sith that the Scripture is for that entent left with vs, that it may be vnderstād of vs exactly, and to the vttermost point? Of this may you euidently perceaue that the old fathers and holy Doctours haue not sene all the truth. But somewhat is also left, thrōugh the high prouision of God, to be discussed of their successours. And therfore is it not mete, that we straight wayes cleaue vnto their wordes, without any further enserchyng the scriptures, but we must examine all thyngs by the Scriptures although. S. Paule or Peter should preach it vnto vs, as we see experience Actes. xvij. that whē Paule preached, the audience dayly searched the Scriptures, whether it were as he sayd.

The Bysshop of Rochesters owne opinion concernyng the vnderstandyng of the scriptures in his time, and long afore that.

Actes. 17.

But you haue bene of long continuaunce secluded from the scriptures, whiche is cause of such grosse errours as ye are now fallen in, so that ye could neither search them, nor yet once looke on them. Alas what blindnes doth occupy our eyes? Are ye so childish to beleue that the same worde whiche hath made the vnfaythfull and heretickes, faythfull and Christen in tymes past, is nowe so farre altered that it should cause the faythfull and Christen to become heretickes? I praye God open your eyes. Howbeit wee may nowe well tast at our fingers endes that we haue long bene in that miserable case that Paule prophesied vppon vs. ij. Thes. ij. that God hath sent vs strong delusions because we would not receaue ꝑ knowledge of the truth: what greater delusion can we haue, then to thinke that the very woorde of God, whiche was written for our comforte, which is the very fode and sustenaunce of our soules, whiche is the sure metyarde and perfect touchstone that iudgeth and examineth all thynges: to thinke (I saye) that this wholesome worde should be our poyson and condemnation?

The cause of our blindnes, and grosse errours.

Rom. 15.

And all be it our forefathers haue lyued without it and receaued all for truth that our Prelates beliyes haue imagined: yet is not theyr fault & ours alike (although I can not excuse their ignorauncе but that it is sinne before the face of God) for they had not the light of Gods word opened vnto thē. Nowe sith we haue the light declared vnto vs, and yet will procede in blynd ignorauncie and not conferre and examine these iuggling mistes with the light of Gods word, our ignorauncе is wilfull and without excuse.

Voluntary ignorauncе, not to bee excused.

Suffer therefore all thynges what soeuer they be, to be tryed and examined by the Scripture. If they be true then shall the Scripture doe them no hurt, but stablish and strēgthen them, for the Scripture discloseth nothyng but falsehead, and cōdemneth nothyng but that is damnable.

And now to descend vnto our matter and disputation whiche is of Purgatory, I shall shew you what occasiō I had to take it in hand. I wrote a letter vnto a certaine frende in England, desiryng hym instantly to send me certaine bookes which I though necessary for my vse, and were not to be gotten in these parties, as the Chronicles, Syr Thomas Mores booke agaynst the Supplication of Beggers, and certein other. These bookes I receaued vpon S. Thomas day before Christmasse, the yeare of our Sauiour a. M. cccc. & xxx. with a letter written in this forme: Sir I haue sent you such bokes as you wrote for, and one moe of Rastels makyng, wherin he goeth about to proue Purgatory, by naturall Philosophie: whiche thyng (quoth he) I thinke be more easie to do, thē to proue it by any good Scripture. &c. This stuffe receaued, I was meruelously desirous and tickled to see what reasons he brought for his probations. And in the begynnyng and Prologe of the booke, he set seuen reasons which he sayd that fonde felowes alledged for thē to proue that there could be no Purgatory. And in deede they are very fonde that would deny Purgatory, if there were no better Argumentes to confute it then hee assigneth. But by Gods grace I will propounde vij. times seuen which shal haue such pith, that their paineful purgatory shall not bee able to abyde the worst of them, for these seuē that Rastell assigneth are not worth one Beane.

The cause of Iohn Frithes writyng against Purgatory.

When I had read and well ponedered these reasons, I thought that hee should sharpely haue confuted thē, as he might full well haue done, specially sith they were but of his owne imagination. Neuertheless when I came vnto his solutions I founde not one but it had certaine poyntes repugnaūt vnto the Scripture (vnto which our reason must euer be obediēt) yea and also they were extremely iniurious vnto Christ and his precious blood.

Mans reason must be obedient to the Scriptures.

Then left I him, & read: Syr Thomas Mores booke, to see what Scripture might bee brought for that purpose, and after that made I diligēt enquire to come by my Lord of Rochesters booke which also writeth on the same matter, and when I had well examined their reasons and had sene the order and processe of the Scriptures whiche they alledged: I founde that clearely verified whiche Aulus Gellius sayeth, that it were a great deale better for a man to bee sharpely rebuked yea and openly to haue his faultes published of his enemy, then to bee coldly and slenderly prayed of his frende. For a mans enemy ensercheth narrowly and gathereth together all that he can imagine, and so accuseth a man more of a fumous heate then of any veritie: and therfore the audience (if they be wise) consider his woordes therafter, and so geue very small credence or els none vnto them. But if a mans frende before audience doe prayse hym slenderly and coldly, it is an argument that the person is very faultie, for a frende beholdeth all qualities and circum-

Aulus Gellius.

The reproue of an open enemy better then the slender prayse of a frende.

cumstaunces, his byrth, bringyng vp, & what feates hee hath done all hys lyfe long: yea and applieth many thynges vnto his frendes prayse, whiche serue but smally for it, for he will leaue nothing behynd that may be imagined to employ his frendes fame and honour. Now if in all these pointes he can not colour out a glorious apparant laud, but is compelled for lacke of matter to prayse his frēd slenderly, then (if the audiēce be wise) they may soone cōiecture that he is no prayse worthy, & also may well doubt whether that small prayse which he gaue him be true or not. Euē so, when I had read these bookes of Syr Thomas More and my Lord of Rochester, and saw the small probations & slender reasons that those two witty and learned men had brought to confirme Purgatory: considering also that they are the chiefest frendes, proctours and patrones therof, and that they had applied many reasons and Scriptures for their purpose (for lacke of matter) that rather made against them: yea and not that onely, but also that they dissented betwene them selues in their probations: for M. More sayth that there is no water in Purgatory. And my Lord of Rochester sayth that there is water. Master More sayth that the ministers of the punishmēt are deuils. And my Lord of Rochester sayth that the ministers of the punishment are aungels. Master More sayth, that both the grace and charitie of them that lye in the paynes of Purgatory, are increased. My Lord of Rochester saith, that the soules in Purgatory obtain there neither more fayth nor grace nor charitie then they brought in with them. These thynges cōsidered, it made mine hart yerne and fully to cōsent, that this their paynefull Purgatory was but a vayne imagination, and that it hath of long time but deceaued the people and mulked them from their money.

M. More & my Lord of Rochester cannot agree.

Notwithstanding God hath left vs two Purgatories. One to purge the hart and clense it from the filth whiche we haue partly receaued of Adam (for we are by nature the children of wrath. Ephe. ij.) and partly added thereto by consentyng vnto our natural infirmitie. This Purgatory is the word of God as Christ sayth. Iohn. xv. Now are ye cleane for the worde whiche I haue spoken vnto you. This purgation obtayneth no man but thorough fayth, for the vnfaythfull are not purged by the word of God, as the Scribes and Pharisees were nothyng the better for hearing his word but rather the worse for it was a testimony against them vnto their condemnatiō. And because we receaue this purgatiō onely through beleuyng the word, therfore is the vertue of this purgyng applied also vnto fayth, for Peter sayth. Act. xv. that the Gentiles hartes were purged thorough fayth, that is to say, through beleuing the word. And what word is that? verely the preaching that Christes death hath fully satisfied for our sinnes and pacified for euer the fathers wrath towardes vs. &c. This fayth purifieth the hart and geueth vs a will and gladnes to do what soeuer our most mercyfull father commaundeth vs.

The Purgatories, that God hath ordeyned.

Iohn. 15.

The Purgatory of the hart.

The Purgatory of the hart, is fayth.

Neuertheless because our infirmitie is so great, and our mēbers so weake and fraile that we cā not eschew sinne, as our hart would, and as our wil desireth: therfore hath God left vs an other Purgatorye whiche is Christes crosse. I meane not his materiall crosse that he him selfe dyed on, but a spirituall crosse which is aduersitie, tribulation, worldly depression. &c. And this is called the rodde or scourge of God wherewith he scourgeth euery sonne that he receaueth, that we may remember his law and mortifie the old Adam and fleshly lust which els would wax so rebellious that it would subdue vs, raigne in vs, and hold vs thrall vnder sinne? when soeuer we haue committed a crime thē is God prefēt with this rod as he sayth Psal. lxxxix. If they defile my ceremonies and not obserue my cōmaundements, then with a rod shall I punish their sinnes and with beatyngs shall I reward their iniquities, but yet my mercy shall I not take from him neither will I deceaue hym of my promise.

The Purgatory of the mēbers is the crosse of Christ.

Psal. 89.

This crosse must we receaue with a glad hart and thanke our louing father for it, for it is but a medicine to heale our infirmitie and to subdue our rebellious members. But when our members are fully mortified, that is, when death hath subdued our corruptible body, and our flesh cōmitted to rest in the earth, then ceale the Purgatories that God hath ordeined, & then are we fully purged in his sight.

God nayleth vs to the crosse, to heale our infirmities.

If our Clergy could haue found in their hartes to haue taken these Purgatories vppon them, they had neuer neded to imagine any other, but sith their lyfe begā to wax so dissolute, specially sith they should be the salt of the earth and lanternes of light: It was neceſſary for them to imagine Purgatory after this lyfe, for els they might be ſure that the moſt part of them were neuer like to come in heauen.

Iudge Chriſten reader whiche haſt the ſpirite to diſcerne and knoweſt the voyce of Chriſte what reaſons Raſtell hath brought and how he hath ſoluted them: for in my mynde both his reaſōs and ſolutions are ſo childiſh and vnſauery, ſo vnlearned and baren, ſo full of faultes and phantaſies, that I rather pitie the mans deepe ignorance and blindneſſe (which hath ſo deceaued him ſelfe through Philoſophie and naturall reaſon) the I feare that he by his vaine probations ſhould allure any man to conſent vnto hym.

Iudge and conferre the Scriptures which Sir Thomas More and my Lord of Rocheſter allege for their opinion, and I doubt not but that God ſhall open thine eyes to eſpy that thing which hath blinded them.

Iudge and compare the Scriptures together which I haue brought to confirme my purpoſe, ponder their reaſōs and my ſolutiōs vnto them, and I am ſure thou ſhalt perceaue that my ſmall learnyng hath condemned their hyghe eloquence, that my foly hath brought to nought their wiſedome, and that my youth hath diſcloſed their old and feſtred ignorance.

The wiſedome of the world foolyſhnes afore God.

And this is euen the old practiſe of God: to chooſe the foliſh thynges of the world: to confound the wiſe: to chooſe the weake to confounde the mightye: And to chooſe the vyle thynges whiche are of no reputation to confound them of high degree: that no fleſh might boſt it ſelfe in his ſight to whom onely be prayſe and thankes for euer. Amen.

¶A Prologe whereby a man may the better perceaue the occaſion and whole cauſe of this Booke.

Symon Fiſhe the maker of the booke of the Supplication of Beggers.

THere was a brother of ours named Simon Fiſhe (whiche nowe I truſt reſteth in Gods handes) whoſe eyes God had opened, not onely to eſpy the wily walkyng of hipocrites and ruyne of the realme whiche through their meanes was nye at hand: but alſo to marke and ponder the peril of mēs ſoules, and how that the ignoraunt people by their ſeduction was fallen into that franticke imagination that they more feared the Pope and hys Decrees whiche are but vanitie, then God him ſelfe and his law whiche are moſt righteous and eternall. This man therfore of a feruent and burnyng zeale that hee bare to the wealth of the comminaltie brake out and touched theſe hypocrites in a litle treatiſe whiche hee called The Supplication of Beggers, willyng that wee ſhoulde geue the aboundaunce of our richeſſe vnto the poore to whom it is due by the law of God: and that we ſhould no lenger ſuffer our ſelues to bee diſpoyled and robbed of a ſight of ſturdy lubbars whiche vnder a falſe cloke of vertue and prayer deceiue the poore of their liuyng and both the poore and the riche of their ſoules health, if credence be geuen vnto them.

Our riches is to be beſtowed on the poore.

And where theſe wilye Foxes would haue pretēded the cloke of Purgatory affirmyng that it were due vnto them becauſe they praye for their frendes ſoules that they might come to reſt, he aunſwered vnto that poynt preuentyng theyr obiection, and proued that either there could be no ſuch Purgatory, or els that the Pope were a mercyleſſe tyraunt which (as he ſaith him ſelfe may deliuer them from thēce and will not except hee haue money. At this point began M. More to fume and tooke vpon hym ſelfe to bee Proctour for Purgatory (I will not ſay that he was hyred ther to of our ſpiritualtie although many men dare ſweare it) and to confirme his purpoſe hee wreſted ſore the Scriptures, and triumpheth alſo that the very miſcreantes and Idoladolaters beleue that there is a Purgatory. He addeth thereto(to ſtabliſh his matter with all)that there is no man whiche beleueth that there is a God, and that the ſoule of man is immortall, but hee muſt nedes graunt that there is a Purgatory. There tooke Raſtell his hold, whiche is a Printer dwellyng at Paules gate in London and of Maſter Mores alliaunce,which alſo coueteth to counterfayte his kinſmā, although the beames of his braines be nothyng ſo radiaunt nor his cōueyaunce ſo commendable in the eyes of the wiſe. Notwithſtandyng this Raſtell hath enterpriſed to dilate this matter, and hath diuided it into three Dialoges, imaginyng that two men diſpute this matter by natural reaſon and Philoſophie, ſecludyng Chriſt and all Scripture. The one of them (that ſhould diſpute this matter)he calleth Gingemen,& fayneth hym to be a Turke and of Mahometes law. The ſecond he nameth Comingo an Almany & of Chriſtes fayth. And he maketh the Turke to teach the Chriſten mā what he ſhould beleue.

Raſtell followeth M. More.

The names of the diſputers in the matter of Purgatory

The ſōme and contentes of Raſtels iij. Dialogues

The firſt Dialoge goeth about to proue by reaſon that there is a God, which is mercyfull and righteous. The ſecond entendeth to proue, that the ſoule of a man is immortall. Againſt theſe two Dialogues I will not diſpute, partly becauſe this treatiſe ſhould not be ouer long and tedious, and partly becauſe that thoſe twoo poyntes which he there laboureth to proue are ſuch as no Chriſten man will deny (although many of his probations are ſo ſlender, that they may well be improued) but as concerning his thyrd Dialogue wherin he would proue Purgatory,it is wholly iniurious vnto the bloude of Chriſte and the deſtruction of all Chriſten fayth, if men were ſo mad as to beleue his vayne perſuaſions. And therfore I thought expedient to cōpare this third Dialoge with all the deceitfull reaſons vnto the true light and pure worde of God that at the leaſt Raſtell hym ſelfe might perceiue his owne blind ignoraunce and returne agayne into the right way. And if any man haue bene deceiued through his booke (as I truſt there are but few except they bee very ignoraunt) that they may repent with hym and glorifie GOD for his ineſtimable mercy which hath ſent his light into this world to diſcloſe and expell theyr darke and blynd ignorauncy, that they may ſee his wayes and walke in them prayſing the Lord eternally. Amen.

An aunſwere to Raſtels Dialogue.

THere is no man as I thinke that hath a naturall wytte, but hee will graunt me that this booke of Raſtels making is either true, or falſe, If it be falſe thē how ſo euer it ſeme to agree with naturall reaſon it is not to be allowed: if it be true, then muſt we approue it. Naturall reaſon muſt bee ruled by Scripture. If naturall reaſon concude againſt the Scripture, ſo is it falſe, but if it be agreeyng to Scripture then is it to be heard.

Raſtels booke is either true or falſe.

Of this may I conclude that if Raſtels booke be agreeyng to Scripture, then is it true and to be allowed, if it determine cōtrary to the Scripture, then is it falſe and to bee abhorred, how ſoeuer it ſeme to agree with naturall reaſon.

If naturall reaſon concude againſt the Scripture then is naturall reaſō falſe.

Now is there no Chriſten mā but hee beleueth ſurely that if Chriſt had not dyed for our ſinnes we ſhould all haue bene damned perpetually & neuer haue entred into the ioyes of heauen, whiche thyng is eaſie to be pro-

Roma.5. ned,for Paule ſayth Rom. 5. As thorough one mās ſinne,that is Adā,enſued death in all mē vnto condēnatiō: Euen ſo thorough one mans righteouſnes which is Chriſt, came righteouſnes, in al men vnto ỹ iuſtification of lyfe. Alſo.Iohn.xi. It is neceſſary that one man dye for the people, that all the people periſhe not: ſo that we had ben condemned and had periſhed perpetually if Chriſt had not dyed for vs.But Raſtel with his Turke Gingemin excludeth Chriſt and knoweth not of his death,wherfore al ỹ reaſōs that they can make vnto domeſday cā neuer proue Purgatory (except they imagine ỹ we muſt firſt go to Purgatory and then after to hell:) for this is a playne cōcluſiō that without Chriſt (whom they exclude) we can neuer come to heauen: what fondnes were it then to inuent a Purgatory. Now may you ſée that Raſtels booke is fully aunſwered,and lieth already in the dyrte, and that his thyrd Dialogue is all falſe and iniurious vnto the bloud of Chriſt. As for the firſt and ſecond Dialogue,although there be ſome errours both agaynſt Diuinitie and all good Philoſophy,yet wil I paſſe them ouer,for they are not ſo blaſphemous agaynſt God and his Chriſte as the thyrd is.

Raſtels boke cleare ly & quickly confounded.

Notwithſtandyng I will not thus leaue his booke,although I might full well, but I will declare vnto you what ſolutions he maketh to theſe ſeuē weake reaſons which he hath propounded hym ſelfe) for hee anoydeth them ſo ſlenderly, that if a man had any doubte of Purgatory before, it would make hym ſweare on a booke that there were none at all. Beſides that it hath not one ſolutiō but there are in it certaine pointes repugnaūt vnto Scripture, ſo that it is greate ſhame that any Chriſten man ſhould printe it,and much more ſhame that it ſhould be printed with the kynges priuilege.

Raſtel beaten to the wall.

The firſt & chief reaſon made for Purgatory

The firſt and chiefeſt reaſon that moueth this man (yea and all other) to affirme Purgatory is this, whiche he putteth both in the firſt Chapter of his third Dialogue, and alſo in ỹ laſt. Man(ſayth he) is made to ſerue and honour God, now if man be negligent about the commaundements of God and committe ſome veniall ſinne,for which he ought to be puniſhed by the iuſtice of God, & dye ſodenly without repentaunce,and haue not made ſufficiēt ſatiſfactiō vnto God here in the worlde, hys ſoule ought neither immediatly to come into the glorious place of heauen, becauſe it is ſomewhat defouled with ſinne,neither ought it to go to hell vnto eternal dānatiō: but by al good order of iuſtice that ſoule muſt bee purged in an other place, to make ſatiſfactiō for thoſe offences,that it may afterward bee receiued into the glorious place of heauē. And ſo by the iuſtice of God there muſt nedes be a Purgatory. Raſtell.

Aunſwere to the firſt argument.

For ſoth this reaſon hath ſome apperaunce of truth and the ſimilitude of wiſedome, howbeit in déede it is nothyng but mans imagination and phantaſie. For if we compare it vnto Gods word, then baniſheth it away. But we regarde not the word of the Lord,and therfore chaunceth euē the ſame thyng vnto vs, that happened before vnto the children of Iſraell. Pſal.81. My people regarded not my voyce and Iſraell gaue no hede vnto me: therfore let I them go after the appetites of their owne harts. They ſhall wander in their owne imaginations. Now what goe they about in this their inuention and imaginatiō of Purgatory, but to ponder the iuſtice of God in the balance of mās iuſtice,ſaying. It is no reaſon that we ſhould enter into heauen which haue not here ſatiſfied vnto God for our iniquitie except that we ſhould be formēted and purified in an other place. We were ſurely in euill takyng if God were of mans cōplection which remitteth the fault and reſerueth the payne. Nay, nay, Chriſt is not gredy to be auenged. He thirſteth not after our bloud, but ſuffered all tormentes in his owne body to deliuer vs from the paines that we had deſerued. But Pſal.81.

ſeyng they thinke their reaſō ſo ſtrōg and inuincible, I will confute it with one queſtion that they ſhal not know whyther to turne them . But firſt I will ground me vpon this Scripture.

1.Theſſ.4. S.Paule writeth.1.Theſſ.4. on this maner: we that liue and are remayning in the comming of the Lord (vnto iudgemēt) ſhall not come yere they that ſleepe, for the Lord himſelfe ſhall deſcende from heauen with a ſhoute and the voyce of the Archaungell and trōpe of God. And the dead in Chriſt ſhall ariſe firſt, then ſhall we whiche liue and remaine bee caught vp with them alſo in the cloudes to mete the Lorde in the ayre, and ſo ſhall we euer be with the Lord. Now harken to my queſtion. Thoſe men that ſhalbe found alyue at the laſt day (for as it was in the tyme of Noe, euē ſo ſhall the laſt day come vppon vs vnwares and as a theefe in the night. Math.24. thoſe men I ſpeake of, ſhall any of thē be ſaued or not? There is no mā that liueth but hee māy well ſay his Pater noſter, of the which one part is: Forgeue vs Lorde our treſpaſſes as we forgeue them that treſpaſſe againſt vs, therefore is no man pure and without all ſinne. And this confirmeth S. John, ſaying: If we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceaue our ſelues and the truth is not in vs. 1.John.1. what remedie now? ſhall they all be damned? There is no doubt but ſome of them ſhall not be very euill, although they haue not made ſufficient ſatiſfaction vnto God in this worlde, & they ought not to go vnto hell to euerlaſtyng dānatiō (as your owne reaſon proueth) and then ſhall there be no Purgatory to purge and puniſhe them. Beſides that if there were a Purgatory at ꝑ time yet could they not be caſt into it, for all ſhall be done in the twinklyng of an eye. 1.Cor.15. 1.Cor.xv. and they ſhall be caught vp to mete the Lord. 1.Theſſ.4. 1.Theſſ. 4. Is God not as iuſt then as he was before? will he not haue puniſhed as well then as before. Nowe ſee you no cuaſion for all your ſuttle imaginations, for they are not pure and without ſpotte (as you ſay) except they make ſatiſfaction them ſelues vnto God. But they muſt be without ſpot or wrincle that ſhall enter into heauē, as Raſtell him ſelfe doth proue in the ir. Chapter of hys thyrd Dialogue. Howbeit I regarde not his teſtimony, but the Scripture affirmeth that to be true, as Paul ſayth. Epheſians. 1. and. 5. Now ſith they muſt be pure euē without ſpot or wrincle that ſhall enter into heauen, and theſe perſons are yet ſpotted with ſinne, and haue neither place nor ſpace to purge them in: you muſt nēdes conclude whether you will or not that they muſt all bee damned and yet you thinke that vnreaſonable to.

Math.24.

The confutatiō of Raſtels firſt & chief argument.

Raſtell ouerthrowē in his owne turne.

Sēe whyther your Argumentes of naturall reaſon bring you. But what ſayth the Scripture? verely Paule. 1. Theſſ.4. eſpyed an other way: for he ſaith: and ſo ſhall we euer be with the Lord: and not damned. Of this may we euidently conclude, that ſome ſhal be ſaued although they be ſinners & neuer come in Purgatory (there taketh Raſtell a fall & all his faultours) and ſith God is as iuſt and mercyfull now as he ſhall be then: why ſhall we go more in Purgatory thē they? But marke I pray you how properly that ſubſtauntiall reaſon wherewith they go about to ſtabliſhe Purgatory concludeth: which condemneth into hell ſo many thouſandes, yea and euen them whom Paule affirmeth to be ſaued. And yet at the begynnyng it ſēmed very reaſonable.

Now haue I proued you ſufficiētly that this their reaſon can proue no Purgatory, for as I ſayd there ſhall ſinners enter into heauen and neuer come in Purgatory. Here peraduenture you bee deſirous to know how Gods iuſtice is pacified. For all ſinne by the iuſtice of God muſt nēdes be puniſhed. Now can the worlde eſpy no puniſhment here, and therefore they thought it neceſſary to imagine a purgatory to purge & puniſh ſinne. Here aunſwere I with S. Paule.

Chriſt the ſonne of God beyng the brightnes of his glory & very image of his ſubſtaūce bearing vp all things with the word of his power, hath in hys owne perſon purged our ſinnes Hebr. 1.

Christ is the onely Purgatory and purger of our sins.

and is set on the right hande of God. Behold the true Purgatory and consumyng fire, whiche hath fully burnt vp and consumed our sinnes, & hath for euer pacified the fathers wrath towardes vs. Marke how he sayth, that Christ in his owne person hath purged our sinnes. If thou yet seke an other purgation, then are you iniurious vnto the bloud of Christ. For if thou thought his bloud sufficiēt, then wouldest thou seke no other Purgatory, but geue him all the thākes and all the prayse, of thy whole health and saluation, and reioyse whole in the Lord.

4. Ephe. 5. Paul writeth Ephes. 5. on this maner, Christ loued the congregation. And what dyd he for it, sent he it into Purgatory there to be clensed. Nay verely, but gaue hym selfe for it that he might sanctifie it and clense it in the fountaine of water, thorough the word to make it vnto hym selfe a glorious congregation, without spot or wrincle or any such thyng, but that it should bee holy and without blame.

A frutefull and excellēt argument. Now if Christ by these meanes haue sanctified it and made it without spot, wrincle and blame, then were it agaynst all right to call it into Purgatory, wherfore I must nedes cōclude that either Paul saith not true which affirmeth that Christ hath so purged his congregatiō, or els that Christ is vnrighteous if he call them into Purgatory whiche are wout spot wrincle and blame, in his sight.

5. Ephe. 1. Christ chose vs in hym before the begynnyng of the worlde, that we might bee holy and without spotte in his sight. Ephes. 1. If thorough his chosyng and election we be without spot in his sight, Alas what blind vnthākefulnes is that to suppose that he will yet haue vs tormented in Purgatory.

Christ by his election doth purge and clense vs.

6. 1. John. 1. Peraduenture euery man perceaueth not what this meaneth, that we are righteous in hys sight seyng that euery man is a sinner. 1. John. 1 Therefore I will briefly declare the meanyng of the Apostle. This is first a cleare case, that there lyueth no mā vppon the earth without sinne. Notwithstandyng all they that were chosen in Christ before the foundatiō of the world were laid, are without spot of sinne in the sight of God. Ephes. 1. Ephe. 1. So that they are both sinners & righteous. If we consider the imperfectiō of our fayth and charitie, If we consider the conflict of the flesh and the spirite. Gala. 5. If we consider our rebellious members, which are sold vnder sinne. Roma. 7. then are we greuous sinners. Gallat. 5. Roma. 7. And cōtrarywise, if we beleue that of mercyable fauour God gaue his most deare sonne to redeme vs from our sinne: If we beleue that he imputeth not our sinnes vnto vs, but ỹ his wrath is pacified in Christ and his bloud, If we beleue that hee hath freely geuen vs hys Christ and with him all thinges so that we be destitute in no gift. Roma. viij. then are we righteous in his sight and our cōscience at peace with God, not thorough our selues, but thorough our Lord Jesu Christ. Roma. 5. So mayst thou perceaue that thou art a sinner in thy selfe, & yet art thou righteous in Christ, for through him is not thy sinne imputed nor rekened vnto thee. And so are they to whom God imputeth not their sinnes, blessed, righteous, without spot, wrincle or blame. Roma. 8. Roma. 4. Psal. 31. And therfore will he neuer thrust thē into Purgatory.

Paule sayth there is no difference, for all haue sinned and lacke ỹ glorye whiche before God is allowed, but they are iustified freely by his grace, thorough ỹ redemption ỹ is in Christ Jesu. Roma. iij. what saye you now, shall they yet go into Purgatory? Call ye that iustificatiō freely by his grace, to lye in the paynes of Purgatory. Surely that were a newe kynde of speech, whiche I thinke Paule neuer vnderstode. Roma. 3. Iustification freely doth exclude Purgatory.

Peraduenture some man will thinke myne Argumentes to bee of small pyth, and to dissolue them by a distinction, saying: It is truth ỹ God hath so purged and clensed vs from all our iniquities, neuertheless hys mercy, purgyng & forgeuenesse, haue onely purified vs from the faulte and crime, but not from the payne which is due to the crime. Obiection

An aunſwere to the firſt obiection.

To this obiection I aunſwere that if God of his mercy and thorough the bloud of his ſonne Jeſus haue not remitted ẏ payne due vnto that crime, then ſhall we all be damned: for the payne due vnto euery diſobedience that is againſt God, is eternall damnation. And therefore if this payne were not forgeuen vs, then are we ſtill vnder cõdemnation, and ſo were Chriſtes bloud ſhed in vayne, & could ſaue no man.

Obiection.

If they will ſay that this euerlaſting payne is not wholy forgeuen vs, but that it is altered into the temporall payne of Purgatory, out of which the Pope may deliuer them by his pardon, for els haue they no cuaſion at all, then may we ſone confute them and that by diuers reaſons.

1. An aunſwere to the ſecond obiection.

Firſt, ẏ their wordes are nothyng but euen their own imagination, for they cannot confirme their ſayinges by the Scripture, neither ought we to accept any thyng as an article of our fayth whiche is not approued by Gods word: for we may neither decline vnto the right hand nor vnto the left: but onely do that the Lord commaundeth vs. Deut. 4. 5. 12. 13.

2. The Pope ſelleth Chriſtes merites for money.

And agayne if a man ſhould aſke them by what authoritie the pope geueth ſuch pardon. They aunſwere, that it is out of ẏ merites of Chriſtes paſſiõ. And ſo at the laſt they are compelled to graũt euen againſt them ſelues, that Chriſt hath not onely deſerued for vs the forgeuenes of ẏ cryme but alſo of the payne. If Chriſt haue deſerued all for vs, who geueth the Pope authoritie to reſerue a part of his deſerupnges from me, and to ſell me Chriſtes merites for money.

3. We may not robbe God of his honour.

Beſides that, euery Chriſten man ought to apply vnto God all thynges whiche ſhould employ his honour as farre forth as the Scripture will ſuffer. Now ſeyng it is more vnto the honour of God that he ſhould deliuer vs in his bloud both from the cryme and from the payne, and alſo not repugnaũt vnto the Scripture but that he hath releſed vs from the payne as well as from the ſinne: for what entent ſhould we bee ſo vnkynde as to deſpoyle him of this great honour, & without any authoritie of Scripture imagine that he hath not deliuered vs from the payne as well as from the ſinne.

4. Blaſphemy to ſay Chriſtes bloud is not full remiſſion for our ſinnes.

Moreouer if he ſhould reſerue the payne, then were it no full remiſſion and forgeueneſſe, but what blaſphemy is that to thinke ẏ Chriſtes bloud was not ſufficient to geue full remiſſion vnto his faythfull?

5. There is no ſatiſfaction for ſinne, but Chriſtes death.

Furthermore, for what entent ſhould the payne be reſerued? to ſatiſfie towardes God for their offences? Nay verely, for all mẽ liuyng are not able to ſatiſfie towardes God for one ſinne. Neither are all the paynes of hell able to purge one ſinne or ſatiſfie for it: for then at the length the damned ſoules ſhould be deliuered out of hell.

Finally, I thinke that there was neuer any temporall puniſhment inſtitute of God to be any ſatiſfaciõ for ſinne, but the vſe of all tẽporal paines and chiefeſt cauſe why they were ordeyned is this.

7. Why temporall paynes are ordeined.

Temporall paynes are profitable for the commõ wealth, that they may be examples to learne the vnfaithfull (which els feare not God) that they may at the leſt for feare of puniſhmẽt abſteine from committyng like offences, for if theyr ſinne were vnpuniſhed then ſhould all vice raigne to the vtter ſubuerſiõ of the cõmon wealth.

They are alſo profitable for the faythfull, for they try and purifie the fayth of Gods elect, and ſubdue and mortifie their carnall members, that they may bee the more able to ſerue their brethren and to withſtand the behemẽt aſſaultes of tẽptation which are euer at hand: and leſt they ſhould ware prowde and boaſt them ſelues for thoſe giftes which they haue receiued of God.

Furthermore they ſet out and aduaunce the glory of God. For after that we be put in remembraunce and made to feele our fraile nature that ſo continually diſpleaſeth God our father: then haue we occaſion to ponder and compare this trãſitory payne which we here ſuffer with thoſe enormous trespasses that we haue cõmitted and so to espy the infinite mercy and fauour of God, and euen in our aduersities to be compelled to prayse God our mercyfull and tender father whiche scourgeth vs so fauorably for those greuous offences that haue deserued a thousande tymes more punishment.

Howbeit (to say truth) there is no man that can take any such profite of them that men fayne to be punished in Purgatory. For we neither see it nor heare it, neither haue we any mẽtion made of it in Scripture, that we may be sure that it so is. Now sith we haue no infallible euidence, but onely phantasticall imaginatiõs, it is plaine inough that there was no such thyng ordeined neither to aduaunce Gods honour nor yet to the profit of the cõmunaltie or els of Gods elect, for then I am sure that Christ and al his Apostles would not haue forgottẽ to haue remembred vs of it.

Scripture maketh no mention of Purgatory.

NOw let vs see some of Rastels reasons which he sayth that fond felowes say for them selues to proue that there should be no Purgatory.

Rastels first argument.

They say (sayth Rastell) that contrition which some call repentaũce is that whiche is the very payment and satisfaction for sinne, and they say that when a man committeth a sinne and after is repentaunt therfore, that God of his goodnesse doth forgeue him, and that that repentaunce is the onely satisfaction that God woulde haue made and done for that sinne. And then sith a mã by such repẽtaunce hath made such payment and satisfaction for his sinne as God would haue to be made therefore, if then that man should go to Purgatory and haue a new punishement after his death, that repẽtaunce that he had before should be but voyde.

Frith.

A fond argument.

Forsoth I thinke that neither Rastell euer heard any such reason, neither yet that any man euer would be so fonde as to say ỹ this argumẽt cõfuted Purgatory, except it were one ỹ were cleane purged of hys wytte before. But whose reason so euer it be, whether Rastels, or any other mans, let vs lay it vnto ỹ touchstone, that is the Scripture, to proue whether it be gold or copper, bright or counterfaite, truth or vntruth. And to bee short, the first proposition and Maior of his reason is this, that cõtrition or repentaũce is the very payment and satisfaction for sinne. That is a farre lye to begyn withall. For if we by all our contrition, repentaũce, sacrifices and woorkes (I adde more to helpe hym) can fully pay and satisfie for our sinnes, then is Christ dead in vayne, and mought full well haue spared his bloud. This can no man deny, but he that will set at nought both Christ & all the Scripture. Now marke how he procedeth. And they say (saith Rastell) that when a man committeth a sinne and after is repẽtaunt therfore, that God of hys goodnesse doth forgeue him, and that that repentaunce is the onely satisfaction that God would haue to bee made and done for that sinne.

The Maior of Rastels argument is a lye.

Rastell.

That is the next part of his argument and containeth two lyes at once cheined together, for where he sayth that whẽ a man committeth a sinne and after is repentaunt therefore that God of his goodnes doth forgeue him: you must first cõsider that neither he nor his Turke Gregemin know any thyng of Christ. Now if it were not for Christes sake, all the repentaũce that man can imagine could not moue the goodnes of God to forgeue one sinne. But by his iustice (where Christes death hath no effect) he must nedes condemne. The second lye is this, that that repentaunce is the onely satisfactiõ that God would haue made and done for that sinne: for if this be true, thẽ is our fayth false. For our fayth holdeth that if Christe had not dyed for vs, we had all perished. Then procedeth he as though all that he had sayd before were true, on this maner. And then (sayth he) sith a man by such repentaunce hath made such paymẽt and satisfactiõ for his sinne as God would haue to be made therfore, If Christes death only is the cause of the forgeuences of our sinnes.

then

then that man ſhould go to Purgatory and haue a new puniſhement after his death, that repentaunce that he had before ſhould bee but voyde. Euen iuſt, if heauen fell we ſhould catche larkes.

Frith. Now let vs ſée how properly hée aunſwereth vnto his owne queſtion. And you ſhall finde moe blaſphemies agaynſt Chriſt in his aunſwere then preceded in ỹ argument. Thinke you this man hath not take great paynes.

Three lyes at once. To prepare him ſelfe vnto his matter hee bryngeth in three lyes in the firſt chapter. The firſt is he ſayth that onely the ſoule ſuffereth and not the body, & maketh Comingo, who he ſayneth to bee a Chriſten man, to graunt it well and wiſely. Forſooth this is new learnyng in déede. For if this be true, then Chriſtes body ſuffered no harme, neither when he was ſcourged, neither whē he was crowned with thorne neither whē he was nayled on the croſſe. But I report me vnto your owne ſelues if ye cutte but your finger, féele ye no payne: and yet I thinke ye will not ſay that ye cutte your ſoule. From hence forward if you ſée a poore man ſhiuerynge for cold in the ſtréete, you may byd him walke a knaue and beare hym in hand that he féeleth no harme, for as this man ſaith his body féeleth no harme, and I promiſe you of honeſtie that his ſoule catcheth no cold. But what néede I to make mo woordes of this matter ſith you may make experiēce your ſelues. The ſecond lye is this. That mā was created of God, to do him honour and ſeruice. For if a mā may ſay the truth man was not made for the entent to be a ſeruaūt & do ſeruice. For God hath no néede of our ſeruice, but was in as full honour and as well ſerued before the world begā as he now is. So that his honour, ioye and ſeruice is whole in hym ſelfe, and is by vs neither employed nor diminiſhed.

What folye is in naturall reaſon, to reaſon agaynſt the Scripture.

A good concluſion.

Gods honour conſiſteth not in our ſeruice.

Why man was made. But the cauſe why hee made man was this that man ſhould haue ỹ fruition of his ioy and honour. Such was his goodnes, he made vs not that hée ſhould haue any pleaſure by vs, but that we ſhould haue pleaſure by hym. The third lye is this, that no other creature here in earth doth ſeruice and honour to God but onely mā. This is alſo a ſtarke lye for all creatures honour God through their creation and being, for the whole glory of their creation redoūneth into the honour of God and what ſeruice cā they do better thē ſo to glorifie God? Neither yet letteth he them bee idle but worketh thorough them meruelous thynges and all to his glory. Fire at his commaūdement came downe frō heauen and burnt Sodome and Gomorra. Geneſis xix. was that no honour and ſeruice: he made a ſtronge and burnyng wynde to dryue vp and deuide the red Sea. Exod. xiiij. At his voyce the winde and ſea were obedient and ware calme. Math. viij. was this no honour & ſeruice? But a man may ſée that his wytte was ſo purged in Purgatory, that bee hath not one droppe left to eſpye any truth at all.

God made vs not for his pleaſure but that we ſhould receaue pleaſure by hym

Gene. 19. Exod. 14. Math. 8.

But yet let vs ſée how he aunſwereth the argument, and ſeuerally examine euery part. The firſt part was: that contrition or repentaunce is the very payment & ſatisfaction for ſinne. To this bee aunſwereth, that when thou takeſt repētaunce and aſkeſt mercy of God for thyne offēce: No mā ought to be ſo fooliſh to thinke that God ſhould bee reſtrayned or cōpelled, but that it is at his libertie whether he will forgeue or no.

Raſtell.

In other of Raſtels fooliſh argumentes.

I would be loth to moue the man and aſke hym what repentaunce is: for ſurely as farre as I can gather by his woordes he wotteth nothing what it meaneth. But I pray you ſée how ſubſtantially he aunſwereth the argument. It argueth that contrition or repentaunce is the very payment and ſatisfaction for ſinne. And to that aūſwereth he neither yea nor nay, for feare of trappyng (all beit the woordes are cleane agaynſt Scripture.) But he aunſwereth that when thou takeſt repentaūce and aſkeſt mercy of God for thy ſinne: no man ought to be ſo fooliſhe to thinke that God ſhould bée conſtrayned or compelled to forgeue thée. But for all ỹ this is ſure inough that if repentaunce be the very payment

Frith.

Repentaunce is no ſatiſfactiō for our ſinne, but Chriſtes death onely ment and ſatiſfaction for ſinne (as the argument falſly ſuppoſeth) that God of his iuſtice muſt nedes forgeue me when I repent. For the haue I wholly payed him his and may require my right euen by his iuſtice. If thou obiect that God were then reſtrayned & compelled, I aunſwere nay. But it were rather a greate pleaſure vnto him to forgeue all mē if ſo they could make ſatiſfaction vnto hys iuſtice by repentaunce, for he reioyſeth not in Raſtell. punishyng vs. Then addeth Raſtell that it is at his libertie alway to execute iuſtice or mercy at his pleaſure. To that I aūſwere, that he hath

Frith. no pleaſure to do agaynſt his Scripture, but therein hath he fully opened

God forgeueth for Chriſtes ſake & not otherwiſe. his pleaſure. His pleaſure is to forgeue freely all them that beleue in his ſonne Chriſt Jeſu, and to condemne thē that beleue not. If Raſtell meane on this faſhion then graunt we hym. But if he vnderſtād that God taketh hys pleaſure & libertie in miniſtryng his mercy and iuſtice, ſo that hee may condemne him which hath geuen the very payment and full ſatiſfaction of ſinne (as it ſēmeth he ſhould meane ſeing hee denyeth not the firſt part of the argument) and agayne ſaue hym that beleued not, then will I ſay that Raſtell groundeth hym vppon lyes & imaginations. Raſtell rūneth ryotte and taketh hys own pleaſure. For God hath no power agaynſt hym ſelfe and hys Scripture, but loke what he hath promiſed and that he will performe. And therfore in this can Raſtell proue no purgatory for all that hee groundeth hym on ſo many lyes.

But yet is it neceſſary that we declare vnto you what is the very ſatiſfaction for ſinne and then ſhall we ſee whether Purgatory may ſtand with it or not.

8. Heb. 10. Pauls ſayth Hebr. x. that Chriſt with one oblation hath ſatiſfied for our ſinnes, for we are halowed (ſaith hee) by the offeryng of the body of Chriſt Jeſu whiche was once done (vppon the croſſe) and with that one oblation hath hee made them whiche are halowed perfite for euer. Now if this be true that we are made perfite by the oblation of hys owne body vpon the croſſe, then is Purgatory in vayne. For if he haue ſo purged vs, what nede we an other purgation? If we be made perfite thorough hym what nede we after this lyfe to bee purged? If hee haue ſatiſfied for vs, why ſeke we an other ſatiſfaction? why leaue we the fountaine of liuing water and ſeke our refreſhing out of polluted poles and ſpecially ſith the headſpryng is ſo ready at hand?

Chriſtes merites vterly ſetteth aſide Purgatory.

If we muſt make ſatiſfaction vnto God for our ſinnes, then would I know why Chriſt died? thinke ye that his bloud was ſhed in vayne? This is no doubt, if there were any other way vnto the father thē through Chriſtes bloud, whether Purgatory or ſacrifices or what thou canſt imagine, thē was his death not neceſſary. But alas what vnkindneſſe is ỹ ſo to reiect the precious bloud of Chriſt and to ſet his gracious fauour at naught? If there be any meanes by the which I may ſatiſfie for my ſinnes, I nede no redemer nor yet any fauour. But may call for my right and duety. And ſo were there no nede of Chriſtes bloud mercy & fauor. But what may be more blaſphemous vnto Chriſtes bloud and his frē redemption?

9. There is no meane to purge vs but onely the death of Chriſt.

Chriſt is able fully and for euer to ſaue thē that come vnto God by hym ſeyng hee euer lyueth to make interceſſion for vs. Hebr. vij. If he be able fully & for euer to ſaue vs, why runne we from hym and ſeke an other Purgatory? If he make interceſſion for vs, then is it lyke that he is no cruell ſtepfather towardes vs, but rather ỹ by all meanes hee ſeketh our health, why flye we from hym that offereth hym ſelfe ſo louyngly to vs? why dare we not put our truſt in hym, whiche when we were his enemyes vouchſafed to dye for vs, and to reconcile vs vnto his father. Rom. v.

10. Chriſt is hable fully to ſaue all that commeth to God by him.

Now maketh he Comyngo his Almany, to bryng in an example, and in confutyng that he thinketh to wynne the fielde. But we will ſhew you that his ſimilitude is nothing lyke in dede. But if he will imagine that it be lyke, then doth he not cōfute it but maketh it ſtronger. The example is this: If I

Raſtell. owe thee.an.C.li.of true debt, and humbly deſire thee to forgeue, diſcharge & pardon me & thou make me a cleare releaſe therof then am I not bounde to make thee any other payment or ſatiſfaction.

Frith. To proue that the ſimilitude is nought, and nothyng lyke to the purpoſe, is very eaſie. For the purpoſe and firſt part of the argument was this: that contrition or repētaunce is the very paymēt and ſatiſfactiō for ſinne.

Raſtels ſimilitude is not good. Therfore if he will haue it like, then muſt he ſuppoſe that this humble requeſt of forgeueneſſe, diſcharge and pardon is the very payment and ſatiſfaction for that.C.li.and therfore vpō that ſhould they firſt haue agrēd or els cā the example ſerue for nothyng. Now if he make them lyke and imagine that this humble deſire or forgeuenes is the very payment and ſatiſfactiō for that.C.li.then hath he made a rod for his own arſe,for he ſhall neuer be able to auoyde it. But let vs ſē his aunſwere.

Raſtell. In the caſe that you haue put (ſayth Raſtell) if you deſire me forgeueneſſe of that.C.li. yet is it at my libertie and gentlenes whether I will forgeue thee the whole. C.li. or els part therof, well hitte Maſter Frith. John. If I ſhould pay you that.C.li. in good curraunt money were it yet in your libertie and gentleneſſe whether you would forgeue me a part or the whole therof? Truly I would be loth to be one of your debtours,if you Maior. be ſo hard to your creditours. Be like you haue ſtudyed ſome cautell in the law. For I neuer heard but that if I owed you an.C.li. & gaue you the very payment & ſatiſfaction therof, then ſhould I bee cleane diſcharged whether ye would yea or nay,and neither nēde to thanke your liberalitie nor Minor. gentlenes. But in your caſe the requeſt and deſire of forgeuenes is and muſt be the very payment and ſatiſfactiō of ỳ.C.li.or els it is nothyng lyke the argument, ſo that you may put your ſimilitude in your purſe til an other place and tyme where it ſhal better agrē, wherfore I muſt nēdes cōclude, that if I deſire forgeuenes (this Cōcluſio. ſtanding that the ſayd deſire of forgeuenes is the very payment and ſatiſfaction of that.C. li.(for els as I ſayd it is nothyng lyke) I am cleane diſcharged and nēde neither to thanke your liberalitie nor gentleneſſe.

Raſtels ſimilitude clearely confounded.

Now where you obiect the recompenſe for the loſſe of tyme and damages, hurt and hinderaunce that you haue had for the none paymēt of that. C.li. and ſo forth, that can not be applyed vnto God and the remiſſion of our ſinnes. For there is no ſuch loſſe of tyme, damage, hurt or hinderaūce towardes God. For we neither hurt nor hynder hym although we neuer aſke forgeueneſſe but be damned perpetually. So that it is our profite to aſke it, and our hurt and hinderaūce if we aſke it not. If I owe a mā xx.li. the lenger I kēpe it the more is my profite & the more his loſſe: but God receaueth vs young, he receaueth vs at mās ſtake,he receaueth vs old, and thinketh it no loſſe or hurt then to receaue vs,for he ſaith by his Prophet.

Our debtynges can make God neither better nor worſe.

The wickednes of the wicked ſhal 11. not hurt hym in what day ſoeuer hē turne from his vngodlyneſſe Ezech. xxxiij. But it ſhould ſurely hurt hym if hee ſhould broyle in Purgatory for it. Wherfore either there is no ſuch paynefull Purgatory, or els can not I ſē how the Prophet, whiche ſpeaketh theſe wordes in the perſon of God,ſhould be true. Ezech. 33.

I ſhall poure vpon you cleane wa- 12. ter (ſayth God the father) & you ſhal bee cleanſed from all your iniquities. Ezech. xxxvj. If we bee purged from all, what nēde an other Purgatory nēde we more purgyng when all are cleanſed? Ezech. 36. If Chriſt haue purged vs cleane, what neadeth an other Purgatory.

I will ſurely conuerte Juda and 13. turne Iſraell vnto me,and I will purifie them from all they? iniquities wherewith they haue offended me. Hieremie. xxxiij. If hē purifie them from all, what ſhould they do in Purgatory. Ierem. 33.

he will not frye vs in the fire of Purgatory for our ſinnes.

The ſecond argument.

NOw let vs ſée his ſecõd argumẽt which is in the .iiij. chap. and is ſurely fond, how beit his ſolution is yet more fooliſhe. The ſumme of his argument is this.

Raſtell. Man was made and ordeined to haue an infinite beyng, therfore after this mortalitie and death hee muſt haue infinite ioye or infinite payne.

Frith. I will put you a like argument. A man is ordeined in this worlde to be a kyng or a ſubiect therefore after he is borne he is euer a kyng or els euer a ſubiect. Now may this be falſe, for peraduenture he may be borne a ſubiect and after made king or els he may bee borne a kyng and after deposed & made a ſubiect. Therefore this argument holdeth not formally. But it holdeth on this maner, as I ſhould ſay to an Ape thou muſt nédes be an ape or an aſſe, whiche now is true. But if I ſhould ſay the very ſame wordes to M. Iohn Raſtell, I thinke he would be angry and ſay that it were falſe. And I ſuppoſe our ſcholemen will ſay that he lyeth, and put hym an example of the infantes that dye without Chriſtendome, whiche (as the ſcholemen ſay) ſhall neuer haue ioy nor payne. But I will graunt him his argument to ſée how properly he will confute it.

Raſtels ſecond argument confuted.

A ſuppoſed concluſion.

Now marke his aunſwere which ſtandeth in the v. chapter.

Raſtell. There are degrees in ſinnes, ſome ſinnes are great and ſome greater, and therfore muſt there be degrees in puniſhment, ſome puniſhment is great and ſome greater. Well for your pleaſure I am content to graũt you this to. But els were it a matter worthy diſputation what now?

Frith.

Raſtell. When that a man (ſayth Raſtell) here in earth hath committed a great ſinne and offence and taken repentaunce whereby the ſinne is forgeuẽ (marke that he beyng ignoraunt of Chriſt, ſayth through repentaunce the ſinne is forgeuẽ,) and yet hath not taken ſuch ſufficient repẽtaunce therfore, nor had any ſufficiẽt puniſhmẽt which ſhould make a full payment and ſatiſfaction for that ſinne, and dyeth before any condigne or full ſatiſfaction made, God muſt then of his righteouſnes ordeine a place of Purgatory, wher his ſoule ſhall haue a further puniſhment to make a condigne and full ſatiſfaction for that ſinne, and ſo to bee purged and purified before it ſhalbe able and woorthy to be admitted to receaue the eternall ioye in heauen.

Raſtelles fond argument to proue a Purgatory

Frith. Firſt bycauſe you muſt graunt, that we haue a Chriſt or no Chriſt: a redemer or no redemer: a iuſtifier or no iuſtifier. If there be none ſuch (as Raſtell with his Turke Gingemini ſuppoſe) then all the repentaunce in the worlde could not ſatiſfie for one ſinne, but who ſoeuer committed a ſinne ſhould be damned therfore. So that Raſtell ſpeaketh and ſeyeth all in diminutiues, for where he ſhould of truth ſpye hell, there eſpyeth he but Purgatory. And where he ſhould ſay that all ſinners (if they ſticke not to Chriſtes bloud) ſhall be damned eternally, there ſayth he that they ſhalbe puniſhed in Purgatory. And to be ſhort, if Raſtell ſay truth thẽ is Chriſt dead in vayne: If hee ſay not truth why ſticke you to his reaſõ? But peraduenture thou that knoweſt Chriſt wilt ſay (as many doe) that Chriſtes death and redemptiõ ſerueth thée but for originall ſinne, or at moſt for thoſe ſinnes that thou committedeſt before Baptiſme: To that I aunſwere with S. Iohn.

An aunſwere to an obiection.

Childeren, this do I write vnto you that ye ſinne not. And if any man ſinne, yet we haue an aduocate with the father, Jeſus Chriſte, whiche is righteous. And he it is that obtaineth grace for our ſins, not for our ſinnes onely, but alſo for the ſinnes of all the worlde. To whõ wrote. S. Iohn. this Epiſtle? Thinke you that he wrote not vnto the Chriſten and them that were all ready Baptiſed? And yet he ſayd: if any man ſinne, we haue an aduocate with ỹ father, Jeſus Chriſt which is righteous: and he it is that obtaineth grace for our ſinnes. Loe he admunbreth him ſelfe alſo: for he

ſayth

ſayth we haue an aduocate: and ſaith agayn, for our ſinnes. We may ſée that he meaneth not onely original ſinne, neither yet the ſinnes done before baptiſme: for I doubt not but he was Baptized whē he wrote this Epiſtle, and yet ſayd he: if we ſinne (meaning after Baptiſme or when ſoeuer it be) we haue an aduocate with the father Jeſus Chriſt, this is S. Johns learning: he knew no other remedy if we fell into ſinne, but onely Chriſt. Notwithſtandyng our Prelates haue practiſed further, for they ſay: if any man ſinne he ſhall lye in the paynes of purgatory, vntill he be deliuered thence by Maſſe pence, the Popes pardon or certaine other Suffragies, but not without money you may be ſure.

If we fall into ſinne, we haue no remedy but Chriſt our aduocate.

16. Chriſt ſayth (no man commeth vnto the father but thorough me. Johan. xiij. for ſayth hee) I am the way, yes Lord, our Prelates haue eſpyed an other way, whiche although it be more paynfull vnto the poore, yet is it more profitable for Prelates.

Johan. 13.

17. Come vnto me all ye that labour and are laden & I will eaſe you ſayth our Sauiour Chriſt Jeſu. Math. xj. wilt thou ſend vs Lord into Purgatory? forſooth there is litle eaſe, if the fire bee ſo hote as our Prelates haue fayned it.

18. It is euen I that put out thine iniquities for mine own ſake ſayth God the father, and thy ſinnes will I no more remember. Eſay. xliij. Ergo, then hee putteth them not away for byrnyng in Purgatory. He addeth alſo that hee will no more remember our ſinnes: call ye that no remembraunce to caſt vs into Purgatory for them.

Byrnyng in Purgatory putteth not away ſinne.

19. Whom God predeſtinated, them he called, and whom hee called, them he iuſtified: and what dyd he with them then? Dyd he caſt them in Purgatory there to be clenſed? forſooth the Apoſtle maketh no mentiō therof but addeth immediatly, whom he iuſtified them he glorified. Roma. viij. Wherfore let not vs put ſuch obſtacles and be vnkynde vnto the gracious fauour of God.

Thoſe whom God calleth he iuſtifieth & glorifieth.

20. Beſides that Paule forbiddeth vs to be carefull for them that ſlepe (that is to ſay for ſ dead) as they that haue no hope. But ſurely if he had knowne of any Purgatory, hee would haue bene careſull for them, ſith they payne them in ſuch miſerable tormentes. Now ſeyng he had occaſion to make mention of the dead, and ſpake not one word of Purgatory, it is playne inough that he knew nothyng of it or els was hee very negligent to ouerhyppe it. But yet had I leuer ſay that Purgatory were but a phantaſie of mans imagination, then to aſcribe ſuch forgetfulnes or negligence vnto that Apoſtle.

1. Theſſ. 4.

Purgatory is but a phanſie of mans imagination.

THe thyrd reaſon that Raſtell alleageth is in the vj. chapter, the ſume is this. There are degrees of ioye in heauen, and degrees of payne in hell. And therefore may God paſſe euery mā and geue him accordyng to his deſerte, either more or leſſe and neuer neede Purgatory. Well let vs graūt theſe degrées for Raſtels pleaſure although the queſtion be ſo diſputable that I am ſure he can not defend it. What foloweth on this? forſooth he bryngeth in proper examples if they could ſerue for ſ purpoſe. But let vs paſſe ouer to his ſolutiō which is in the end of the vj. chapter.

The thyrde argument.

Whē a man (ſayth Raſtell) is infected with a great mortall ſinne and ſo depart, then his ſoule ought not to doe ſeruice in heauen vnto God becauſe it is putrified with that foule ſinne. But if that man had taken the medicine of full repentaunce in hys lyfe, that medicine would haue reſtored him againe to his ſoule health and vertue. (But here you muſt remember that Chriſt is dead in vayne, for if repentaunce be the medicine that reſtoreth agayne the health & vertue of the ſoule, what nēdeth Chriſt.) Now forth. But if he haue taken (ſayth Raſtell) ſome repētaunce for that ſinne and not ſufficient, and had not ſufficient tyme to make ſufficient ſatiſfaction therfore, yet by the takyng of that medicine of repentaunce, that ſinne is expelled and gone, and the ſoule of that ſickeneſſe and ſinne is clearely whole, but yet the ſpottes and tokens of the ſinne which is a deformitie to the ſoule doe ſtill remayne till the ſoule haue a time to be purged from thoſe tokens and ſpottes to make it pure and cleane of that deformitie.

Frith. This man is euer in one ſuppoſition which is both falſe and iniurious vnto the precious bloud of Chriſt. I wonder who taught him that concluſion, and why hee graunteth ſo ſone vnto it, for he would not haue graunted that there were a God, neither that ỹ ſoule was immortall (although they were both true) vntil he had proued it (as he thought him ſelf) by good naturall reaſon. But as for this that is ſtarke falſe (that is to ſay) that repentaũce while he excludeth Chriſt, doth ſatiſfie for our ſinne, hee neuer putteth in queſtion, but graunteth it by and by, belike the Turkes haue ſuch an opinion. But let him go with his Turke and let vs Chriſten men graunt nothing contrary to the ſcripture, but euer captiuate our reaſon vnto that, for it is the infallible reaſõ and wiſedome of God, & paſſeth our reaſon farre.

Raſtels naturall reaſõ doth fouly deceaue both hym & his Turke Gyngemin.

The 4. argument.

Cant. 4.

Raſtell. THe fourth reaſon is propounded in the iiij. chapter whiche is this: that the ſoule vnpurged maye doe ſome meane & low ſeruice to God in heauen, though it bee not the higheſt & beſt, which thing is falſe & agaynſt Scripture. Epheſ. v. Cãt. iiij. But let vs ſee what aunſwere he maketh vnto it. His aũſwere begynneth in the ix. chap. & the ſumme is this.

Raſtelles aunſwere to his iiij. argument.

Heauen is ſo pure and cleane of nature, that it muſt expell all maner of impuritie and vnclennes, neither can it ſuffer any thyng therin, that is of any maner vnclenneſſe or euill, or other thyng vnpleaſaunt. So now it foloweth that when a mã hath cõmitted a mortall ſinne and after taketh repentaunce by the whiche he is healed of the ſoule infirmitie. (See how he harpeth all of one ſtring whiche is alſo ſo farre out of tune that I wonder how any man tã abyde him. For if I can heale mine infirmitie through repentaũce wherfore dyed Chriſt? But yet (ſayth he) the ſpots and tokens remayne for lacke of ful ſatiſfaction. I aunſwere that it remaineth euery whitte, ſinne, ſpottes, tokens, & all together except Chriſt haue takẽ it frõ of vs, through his death and bitter paſſiõ. Therfore ſaith Raſtel) God of his iuſtice may not condemne his ſoule to eternall paine in hell for that offence which is purged and put away. Wherwith is it purged and put away?

Frith. Raſtell.

11. There is no remiſſion of ſinne without bloud. Hebr. ix. If there be no remiſſiõ without bloud, what ſhall repentaunce doe, where the bloud of Chriſt is excluded? yea or what ſhall thy Purgatory doe, for there is no bloudſhed. So is there nothyng that taketh awaye ſinne: but onely the bloud of Chriſt Jeſu, ſhed for our redemption.

Frith. Hebr. 9.

Sinne can not be take away but by ỹ bloud of Jeſu Chriſt.

And yet (ſayth Raſtell) God by his iuſtice and by hys diſcrete wyſedome and goodnes ought not immediatly to receaue that ſoule into that cleane and moſt pure place in heauen to accompany the pure aungels. &c. No mary I warraunt thee, be not afrayde of that, for neither Gyngemin thy companyon nor thou neither ſhall enter in there, either immediatly or mediatlye, & ye exclude Chriſt as ye haue done hetherto, no not if ye had taken all the repentaũce in the worlde, and would thereto imagine as many Purgatoryes as will peſen into a Monkes coule.

Raſtell. Frith. A merye concluſion of John Frith.

12. But it is Chriſt the lambe of God that taketh awaye the ſinne of the worlde. John. i. It is he that hath purged our ſinne and now ſitteth on the right hand of the father. Hebr. i. It is he that hath purged our ſinne & hath made vs in hys own ſight & in ỹ ſight of his father, without ſpot or wrincle Epheſ. i. All beit in our own ſight we finde our ſelues ſinners. i. John. i. But he maketh vs bleſſed and righteous and imputeth not our ſinnes vnto vs. Roma. iiij. Then what needeth Purgatory?

John. 1. Heb. 1. Ephe. 1. 1. Iohn. 1. Rom. 4. No nede of Purgatory

The 5. argument. Raſtell. THe fift Argumẽt that he bryngeth agaynſt Purgatory is touched in hys his x. chapter, the ſumme is this. It ſhould ſeeme conuenient that this Purgatory (if there were one) ſhuld be in earth: partly becauſe the body which offendeth with the ſoule might be purged with the ſoule: & partly to bee a good example to all men lyuing to put them in feare to doe any like offence, and ſo ſhould cauſe many to abſtayne from committyng any ſuch lyke offence and ſinne, or elles where ſhould Purgatory be?

Frith. This reaſon hath no great pyth. Notwithſtanding if it were well proſecuted, it wuld be to hard for Raſtell to auoyde it. For this is no ſmall argument, it is meete ỳ the body which offendeth with the ſoule ſhould be purged with the ſoule, Ergo, Purgatory muſt be vppon the earth. For God may ioyne the body and ſoule together agayne after they be departed and ſo punithe them together although purgatory were not in earth, euen where ſoeuer it be. And therfore thus me thinketh it ſhoulde well followe.

How Raſtel proueth that Purgatory is vpon the earth.

13. The body was felow and partener with the ſoule in committyng the crime and ſinne, and ſhall alſo be partaker of the glory, which is prepared for them that loue God. Wherfore it is reaſon if the ſoule ſhould bee purged and punished in Purgatory: that the body ſhould alſo ſuffer with hym in Purgatory: fayne the place of Purgatory where you will, in heauen, in earth or in hell. But wote ye what Raſtell would here ſay vnto me? forſoth euen as he dyd in the firſt chapter of the thyrd Dialogue, that is to ſay: hee would ſtoutely affirme that the body ſuffereth neither well nor woe, ioy nor payne, good nor euill, and therfore it needeth not goe to Purgatory. And by that reaſon it is folie that the body ſhould go either to heauen or hell, for it neither feeleth pleaſure nor payne, this is new learnyng in deede. But I thinke there is no Chriſten man ſo foliſhe as to beleue hym.

Raſtelles fond concluſiō of his v. argument.

And as for the ſecond poynt that it ſhould be a good example to put men in feare for committyng ſuch treſpaſſes, it were ſone aunſwered. For we ought not to abſtaine from euill becauſe of ỳ punishmēt that followeth the crime but onely for the loue that we haue to God without any reſpect either of ſaluation or of damnatiō. If thou abſtaine for feare, ſo art thou vnder the law and vnder damnatiō: The law of God and the law of man are farre vnlike: for the law of mā is fulfilled by the exteriour act although the hart be farre from it. As if I owe a man xx. pound and be compelled by the law to pay hym at a certaine day: if I then pay albeit myne hart be neuer ſo grudging and euill willing, yet haue I fulfilled the law ſo that there ſhall no proceſſe or ſentence paſſe agaynſt me. But Gods law requireth a thyng to bee done with a well willyng hart, and euē for pure loue. For if thou do it for feare or vnwillyngly ỳ ſhall be imputed vnto thee for ſinne. If thou do it for feare, then worſkeſt thou not of loue, but rather hateſt both the thing that thou doeſt, and alſo the law that conſtraineth the vnto it. And if thou do it vnwillyngly then willeſt thou to do the contrary, and ſo wouldeſt thou that there were no ſuch lawe neither yet any God that ſhould iudge thee in ſo doyng. And ſith God iudgeth thee after thine hart and will, then muſt hee needes condemne thee, for thou willeſt contrary vnto his law and wil: yea & willeſt in thine hart contrary to that thou doeſt in thyne outward deede.

we may not abſteine from ſinne for feare, but for loue

The law of God, & the law of man doth greatly vary.

The law of God requireth the hart and myude.

The law of man requireth the body and outwarde deedes.

Now let vs ſee his ſolution which is in the xi. chapter and ſo foliſh, that if it were not for the great length of the chapter, for loſſe of tyme and for the more coſt in Printyng, I would ſurely haue aunſwered vnto it at length, euen that he ſhould haue ben aſhamed of hym ſelfe. But to be ſhort we will touch ſome of hys wordes. The firſt part of the argument which he entendeth to aunſwere to, is this: that it ſhould ſeeme cōuenient that Purgatory ſhould be here on earth, becauſe the body which offendeth with the ſoule ſhould bee purged with the ſoule. This reaſon is of no value as I haue ſhewed you before. But what ſayth Raſtell?

Raſtells ſolution.

That reaſon (ſayth Raſtell) proueth not onely that there is no Purgatory, but alſo that there ſhould be neither heauen nor hell. For if a man haue lyued ſo vertuouſlye in earth, that he ought to be ſaued & goe to the ioyes of heauen, (let vs pardon hym this lye, for the Prophet ſayth that no man ſhall be iuſtified in ỹ ſight of God, if he enter into iudgement with vs Pſalme. C. xliij. And yet did neuer meritorious acte but onely when the ſoule was ioyned with the body, then ſhould he neuer be rewarded, but here in earth while his ſoule is ioyned with the body. Here may ye perceaue what Raſtell thinketh of heauen and hell, euen thus that the body ſhall neuer come in heauen nor hell, whiche poynte I will touche more largely a none. First where Comingo in hys argument ſayth, that it ſhould ſeeme conuenient for Purgatory to be vpõ earth, there ſayth Raſtell ỹ he would take away the libertie, prerogatiue, and authoritie of God. As by example, if I would ſay, It ſhould ſeeme cõuenient that the Byſhop of Londons palace ſhould be in Londõ, partly becauſe it is ỹ chiefeſt Citie of his Dioceſſe, and partly becauſe it is nigh the Court whereto he may the better reſort to get further promotion, there would Raſtell ſay by and by that I take the Byſhops libertie, prerogatiue, and authoritie that he might not ſet it where he would: belike this mã hath dronke of a mery cuppe. He affirmeth alſo that this argument taketh away both heauen and hell: why ſo? Becauſe hee ſuppoſeth it conuenient that Purgatory ſhould be here vppon earth: Albeit he ſay it is conuenient, yet ſayth hee not that it muſt needes be. Nay, but there is an other thyng that Raſtels ſore yes can not abyde. What is that? verely for he added that it were moſt conuenient that the body whiche is partaker in committyng the crime, ſhould alſo be purged and puniſhed with the ſoule. And that as ye knowe plucketh Raſtell by the beard, for he went about to proue the contrary in the firſt chapter, that ỹ body hath neither payne nor pleaſure. &c. But how ſhould this take away heauen and hell? forſooth on this maner. Raſtell thinketh not that God cã and will ioyne the body agayne with the ſoule after this tranſitory life that they may together receaue ioye or payne for ỹ paſſeth his natural Philoſophy. But thus he imagineth, when the body and ſoule are once departed, thẽ ſay they adieu for euer and a day. Therfore (thinketh he) if God will puniſh them in hell together, or ſaue them together in heauen, thẽ he muſt take them whiles they are here liuyng in earth. And ſo this ſuppoſition that the body muſt ſuffer with ỹ ſoule (after Raſtels learnyng) muſt proue that heauen and hell be here in earth or els there cã be none. See this learned man ỹ would proue Purgatory by good Philoſophy.

Raſtells reaſon ſayeth hym.

Frith.

Raſtell doth to much abuſe hym ſelfe.

Raſtell. Frith.

Raſtell is contrary to hym ſelfe.

Raſtell hath here a ſoule ouerthrow.

The ſecond cauſe, that Purgatory ſhould be a good example to the liuing to put them in feare to do any like offence, is not ſoluted of Raſtell, but I haue ſoluted it before and will yet ſatiſfie you agayne becauſe Raſtell leaueth it out. We haue here in ỹ worde Moſes & the Prophetes that is ỹ old Teſtament, yea & alſo Chriſt & his Apoſtles, which we call the new Teſtament, now if we beleue not thoſe thẽ ſhall we not ſurely beleue although we had Purgatory & hel to amõg vs. And this may well bee gathered of Chriſtes owne wordes. Luke. xvj. Where he brought in ỹ parable of ỹ rich mã & Lazarus, for ỹ rich mã being in paynes deſired Abrahã to ſend Lazarus vnto his .v. brethrẽ to warne them that they might not come into that fire. Abrahã aunſwered agayne, ỹ they had Moſes & the Prophetes. And added, let them heare them. Thẽ ſayd the rich mã: Nay father Abrahã, but if any of them that are departed appeare vnto them, then will they beleue it. And Abraham concludeth on this maner. If they beleue not Moſes and the Prophetes, no more will they beleue if any of the dead ſhould riſe agayne. And therfore may I likewiſe con-conclude, that if they beleue not, neither yet feare the paynes which Moſes and the Prophets, yea and Chriſt and his Apoſtles haue propheſied to fall on the vnfaythfull, then will they not beleue for feare of the paynes of Purgatory.

Raſtell.

Prith.

Now to the laſt pointe where Purgatory ſhould be, he aunſwereth as you ſhall heare. Firſt ỹ it is a fooliſh queſtion (for hee can not aunſwere vnto it by his Philoſophy.) And then he ſayth that no man can tell, neither the place neither yet the maner of the payne. Here maketh he. S. Thomas yea, and all our Scholemen fooles by craft: partly becauſe they take vpon them to aunſwere vnto this queſtion whiche he calleth fooliſh, and partly becauſe they fully determine that the place of Purgatory is the third place in hell, and all to aſſigne fire to be the maner of ỹ payne.

Raſtell can not tell where purgatory is, whether on the earth or els where.

Raſtell proueth all the ſcholemen to be double fooles.

And agayne in this laſt part hee proueth thē double fooles. Once becauſe they ſtoutly affirme that thyng which no man can tell (as Raſtel ſayth) And agayne becauſe they reſtrayne God of his libertie that aſſigne any place & make him of leſſe authoritie then an inferiour iudge: which hath no place aſſigned hym, but may doe execution and puniſh the giltie in what place he will. I wonder that our Scholemen may abyde this felow.

Raſtell.

And then he ſayth that Purgatory is in a place limitatiue. And where ſoeuer God doth limitte the ſoule to bee purged there is the limitatiue place of that ſoule and there is the Purgatory of that ſoule. So ỹ a man may gather by Raſtell that the ſoules bee not limited to one place to be purged and puniſhed. And therto a græth alſo his ſimilitude of the iudge whiche aſſigneth one to be puniſhed in one place, and an other in an other place, euen at his pleaſure. If ſuch geare had come from beyond the Sea it ſhould ſone haue bene condemned although it had not bene halfe ſo greuous agaynſt our Scholemen. But let this paſſe as it is well worthy, and let vs ſee & examine more of this newfangled Philoſophy.

Purgatory is not in one place onely but in many & diuers places.

NOw are we come vnto the firſt argument whiche begynneth in the.xy.chapter the effect is this.

Repentaunce is the full payment and ſatiſfaction of ſinne and bryngeth remiſsion, therfore as ſoone as repentaunce is taken, God of his iuſtice muſt geue remiſsiō, and ſo there ought to be no Purgatory.

Frith.

This argument is nothyng worth, for the firſt part as we haue oftē proued is falſe. For if repentaunce were the full payment and very ſatiſfaction for ſinne, then dyed Chriſt in vayne. Notwithſtandyng if hee graunt this firſt part to be true, neither he nor all his felowes ſhal be able to ſolute this argument whyle they lyue. But becauſe we will be ſhort, let vs paſſe ouer to his aunſwere whiche is in the.xiij.chapter.

Raſtell.

In ſolutyng this argument hee groundeth hym on two lyes at once, the firſte is that God neuer geueth remiſsion except he ſee in vs a conuenient cauſe counterpayſyng hys iuſtice.

Frith.

There can bee no cauſe in vs that may deſerue the forgeuenes of ſinne. Luke.23.

What cauſe founde he in the man that was brought vnto hym ſicke of the palſie, to whom he ſayd: be of good comfort (ſonne) thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee? Math.ix. Marke.ij. Luke.v. what cauſe found he in the theefe that was crucified with him, but that hee had bene an vnthryft all his life lōg? And yet euen the ſame day that hee ſuffred with Chriſt was he partaker of ioye with him in Paradiſe. Luke. xxiij. Where was Purgatory then where was the puniſhment that hee ſhould haue ſuffered for his enormities? If any mā ſhould ſuffer in Purgatory, it is like that this theefe ſhould haue done it. But he went from death to life, & neuer came in Purgatory, wherfore I may conclude that no mā ſhall come there, if there were any. What cauſe I pray you doth Paule aſſigne as touching our redēptiō & remiſſion of our ſinne? forſooth no other but ỹ we were wretched ſinners and the very enemyes of God. Roma.v. For ſayth Paule, if whē we were his enemyes, we were reconciled vnto God through the death of his ſonne, much more now we are reconciled, ſhall we be ſaued by his lyfe. So that in vs is no maner cauſe of remiſſion but onely miſerie and ſinne.

There is no Purgatory.

25.

But the whole cauſe of the remiſſion of our ſinnes & of our ſaluation, is the bloud of Chriſt which hath fully counterpayſed the iuſtice of God the father, & hath pacified his wrath towardes vs that beleue. He is the very Purgatory for all faithful which hath already purged our ſinnes & ſitteth on the right hand of the father.

The ſhedyng of Chriſtes bloud is our ſaluation.

Heb.1.

Hebr.i. The ſecõd lye is this, he ſayth that God of hys iuſtice muſt geue to euery thyng his own, which own is the thyng that it deſerueth to haue. If this were true then ſhould not one of vs enter the inheritaunce of heauen, for we haue euery one of vs deſerued death and damnation.

Raſtell.

Frith.

Roma.3.

For as Paul ſaith Roma.iij. we haue all ſinned and want the glory whiche before God is allowed. But we are freely iuſtified through his grace by ỹ fayth that is in Chriſt Jeſu. If it be freely through his grace, then is it not by our owne deſeruyng, for thẽ grace were no grace. And contrarywiſe if it be by our own deſeruing, thẽ is it not of grace, for then deſeruyng were no deſeruyng. Roma.xj. But the truth is this: that God of his mercy had promiſed vnto our forefathers his deare ſonne Chriſt that hee ſhould deliuer them frõ all their iniquities and that all the nations of the world ſhould be bleſſed in him Gene.xij. This ſæde he promiſed of his mercy & fauour, whõ alſo he ſent in the time that he had ordeined Gala.iiij. not for our owne deſeruynges, but for his truthes ſake & to fulfill that he had promiſed. This Chriſt is become our righteouſnes. i. Cor.i. ſo ỹ the iuſtice of God is not to geue vs ỹ we our ſelues haue deſerued (as Raſtell ſyeth) but to cloth vs with an other mans iuſtice (that is Chriſtes) & to geue vs ỹ which Chriſt hath deſerued for vs. And this iuſtice of God through the fayth of Jeſu cõmeth vnto all and vpon all them that beleue. Roma. iij. Now marke a myſtery.

Roma.3. and 26.

Chriſt humbled him ſelfe and was made obedient vnto the death: euen to the death of ỹ croſſe. Phil.ij. This obedience and death was not for him ſelfe but for vs, for he alone ſuffered and dyed for vs all. Cor.v. Now ſith hee was obedient vnto the death for vs, that is euen as good as though we our ſelues had bene obedient euery man for him ſelfe vnto the death. And ſith he dyed for vs, that is euẽ as good as though we had dyed our ſelues for our owne ſinnes. What wilt thou haue more of a man then that hee be obedient vnto God the father euen vnto death, yea & dye for his ſinnes, wilt thou yet thruſt him into Purgatory.

2.Cor.5.

Chriſt onely ſubmitted himſelfe to death for our ſinnes.

On theſe two lyes byngeth he in an aunſwere which is ſo confuſed, intricate and long that it were not onely folilyhnes to ſolute it, but alſo much loſt labour & coſt to rehearſe it, wherfore I let it paſſe, for euery child ſhall eaſely ſolute it ſith his foũdation and firſt ſtone is taken from hym. But yet one thyng is neceſſary to be touched. He goeth about to proue hys purpoſe with an enſample on this maner.

Raſtels ignorauncy.

If I do beate thy ſeruaunt or apprentiſſe and do mayme him, wher by thou doeſt looſe his ſeruice: and alſo that this ſeruaunt duryng hys life is not able to get his lyuyng. If ſo be that thou do forgeue me the offẽce done vnto thee in that thou haſt loſt his ſeruice: yet am I boũd to make an other ſatiſfaction vnto thy ſeruaunt for the hurt I haue done him, which is the cauſe of the hynderaunce of his lyuyng. And in lyke maner if I haue offended God and my neighbour, Albeit God for geue me his deale & yet can he not of iuſtice forgeue me my neyghbours deale to, but yet muſt I make ſatiſfaction vnto my neyghbour. Now in caſe I would and be not able to ſatiſfie my neyghbour, and yet he forgeue me not, then muſt I ſuffer in the paynes of Purgatory for it: & thoſe paynes ſhall ſtãd my neighbour in profite for part of his Purgatory if he come there or els to the increaſe of his ioy if he go to hea-heauē: this is ỹ ſūme but he ſpeaketh it in many mo wordes. Now becauſe he hath touched the matter of ſatiſfactiō I wil ſhew you my minde therin.

Frith. There are twoo maner of ſatiſfactions. The one is to God: the other to my neighbour. To God can not all the worlde make ſatiſfaction for one crime. In ſo much that if euery graſſe of the grounde were a man, euen as holy as euer was Paul or Peter and ſhould pray vnto God all their lyues long for one crime, yet could they not make ſatiſfaction for it. But it is onely the bloud of Chriſt that hath made full ſatiſfaction vnto God for all ſuch crimes. Heb. vij. Or els were there no remedy but we ſhould all periſh: as I haue proued before. And he that ſeeketh any other ſatiſfaction towardes God then Chriſt our Sauiour, hee doth wrong vnto his precious bloud.

Hebr. 7.

There is an other ſatiſfactiō which is vnto my neighbour whom I haue offended. As if I haue taken any mās good from hym. For then am I bound to pacifie him either by reſtoring it agayne or els by other meanes as we two can agree. If I haue diffamed hym, then am I bound to pacifie him, and to reſtore him vnto his good fame agayne, and ſo forth. But if I be not able to ſatiſfie him, thē muſt I knowledge my ſelfe giltie and deſire him to forgeue me, and then is he bounde to forgeue me, or els ſhal he neuer enter into heauē. For God hath taught vs

Math. 6. to pray. Math. vj. that he ſhould forgeue vs, as we forgeue them that treſpaſſe againſt vs, ſo if that we forgeue not one an other then will not God forgeue vs. To this well agreeth the Math. 18. parable. Math. xviij. The kyngdome of heauen is likened vnto a certaine kyng which would take accomptes of his ſeruauntes. And when he had begon to recken, one was brought to hym, whiche ought him ten thouſand talentes: but when he had nought to pay, the Lord commaunded him to be ſold, and his wife and his children, & all that he had, & payment to be made. The ſeruaunt fell downe & beſought him ſaying: Syr geue me reſpite, and I will paye it euery whit. Then had the Lord pitie on the ſeruaunt and loſed him and forgaue him ỹ debt. The ſame ſeruaunt went out and founde one of his felowes, which ought hym an. C. pence. And layed handes on hym and toke him by the throat, ſaying: pay that thou owelt. And his felow fell downe and beſought him ſaying: haue patience with me & I will pay thee all: & he would not, but went and caſt him into priſon till he ſhould pay the debt. Whē his other felowes ſaw what was done they were very ſory and came & told vnto their Lord all that happened. Then the Lord called hym & ſayd vnto him. O euill ſeruaunt I forgaue thee all the debt, becauſe ỹ prayedſt me: was it not meete alſo ỹ thou ſhouldeſt haue had cōpaſſion on thy felow, euen as I had pitie on thee? And his Lord was wroth and deliuered him to the gaylers, till he ſhould paye all that was due to hym. So lykewiſe ſhall your heauenly father doe vnto you if you will not forgeue with your harts, ech one to his brother their treſpaſſes. Here mayeſt thou ſee that if you forgeue hartly the ſmall debt or offence ỹ thy neighbour hath done agaynſt thee, then will thy heauenly father forgeue thee, ỹ whole and great debt that thou owelt hym, for the which thou art well worthy to be damned. And ſo is it more profitable for thee to forgeue it then that thy neighbour ſhould broyle in Purgatory for it, as Raſtell ſayneth. And contrarywiſe if thou forgeue him not, thē ſhall not God forgeue thee thy great debt, but thou ſhalt ſurely be dāned, and ſo ſhall not thy neighbours Purgatory profite thee (be it in caſe there were one and that he ſhould goe thether) but it is rather the cauſe of thy dānation: but this can not Raſtell ſee.

Except we be ready to forgene thē that offend vs God will not forgene vs.

Now be we come vnto the ſeuēth reaſon which is in the. xiij. chap. The argumēt is this. God is the very owner of all, and thy neighbour hath no propertie, but as a ſeruaūt to God, as but to make accompt to God. Therfore when thou doeſt an offence to God and to thy neyghbour, whē God forgeueth it thou nedeſt no other ſatiſfactiō vnto thy neigh-

Raſtelles ſeuē argument.

Here are two maner ſatiſfactions one God and the other to thy neighbour.

neighbour. And to ſtablish his reaſō hē bringeth in a ſimilitude, which is nothing to ỹ purpoſe. The ſimilitude is this. I put caſe thou haue a ſeruaunt whom thou putteſt in truſt to occupy for thee, to make bargaynes chaunge and ſell to thy vſe, to take bondes and agayn to make acquitaunces and releaſes in hys own name. If this ſeruaunt ſell part of thy ware and take an obligation for the payment of xx. pounde, if thou afterward knowyng of this, either for loue or ſome other cauſe wilt make vnto the ſayd debtour a cleare releaſe: I ſuppoſe no mā will deny but that this debtour is fully diſcharged of this. xx. pounde, and is not bounde by any iuſtice to make any ſatiſfaction either vnto thy ſeruaunt or to any other man. For thou art the very owner therof, and thy ſeruaunt had but the occupation as to geue the accoumptes therof.

This ſimilitude is not proper betwene God and man, as it is betwene man and man.

Frith. This ſimilitude can not well be applyed vnto God & man. For albeit it is true that all our ſubſtaunce pertaineth vnto God as it is writtē. Aggæ. ỹ. Gold is myne and ſiluer is myne: yet hath not God geuen it vs to occupy it for his profite and vſe (as the ſeruaunt doth for his maſter) but onely that we ſhould vſe his giftes for ỹ profite of our neighbour and to ỹ vſe of the cōgregation. i. Cor. xỹ. And where as he inducеth that when God forgeueth vs whiche is the principall part, ỹ thou nēdeſt no other ſatiſfaction to thy neighbour. I aunſwere that God forgeueth no mā which had offended his neighbour, vnleſſe that he make ſatiſfaction vnto his neighbour, if he be able but if he be not able, yet is he bound to knowledge his faulte vnto his neighbour and then is hys neighbour bound vnder the payne of damnatiō to forgeue him, ſo that God neuer forgeueth vntyll thy neyghbour be pacified in caſe the cryme extende vnto thy neighbour. This ſoluteth both the reaſon and alſo improueth the ſimilitude. Now let vs declare his ſolution.

Aggæ. 2. 1. Cor. 12.

God forgeueth no mā that offendeth hys neighbour, except he firſt reconcile him ſelf to his neighbour.

Raſtell. God of him ſelfe hath two powers: One is an abſolute power, and an other is an ordinary power. The abſolute power is the authoritie that God hath ouer all thing in the world, by that he may geue to euery creature what pleaſeth him, and alſo forgeue euery offence done by any creature at his pleaſure without any cauſe. And by this may he forgeue both the crime done towardes him ſelfe, and alſo towards my neighbour. But by his ordinary power hee doth euery thyng by order of iuſtice and equitie. And by this can he not forgeue the offence done to him and my neyghbour without ſatiſfaction.

Raſtels ſolution to his ſeuen argument.

Frith. Now would I fayne wete, whether Raſtel imagine ỹ God by his abſolute power may ſaue ỹ vnfaithful & dāne the faithfull. If he ſay nay, then may I cōclude ỹ Raſtels diffinition is falſe where he ſaith: that god by his abſolute power may geue to euery creature what pleaſeth him, and alſo forgeue euery offence done by any creature at his pleaſure without any cauſe. If he ſay yea, thē muſt I cōclude that God hath power to do contrary to hys Scripture, for the Scripture ſaith: that he that beleueth and is Baptized ſhalbe ſaued, but he that beleueth not ſhalbe condemned. Mark. xvi. Now if he graunt me that he hath power to do againſt his ſcripture, (ſith his Scripture is the truth & his own word,) then muſt it nēdes folow ỹ he hath power to doe agaynſt his truth: & conſequētly he hath power to be falſe, and ſo to ſinne. And ſith hee hath power agaynſte hys owne word, and that word is his ſonne, thē muſt we graunt hym power agaynſt hys ſonne, euen to make hym a lyer where he ſayth in the foreſayd texte Mark. xvi. And ſith hys ſonne is God, then hath God power to doe agaynſt God and ſo can not his kingdome indure. Math. xỹ.

A perfect diffinition of Gods abſolute power.

Mark. 16

God can not be agaynſt hym ſelfe.

Math. 12

Furthermore, if I might be bold wt Raſtel, I wold aſke him this queſtiō, whether God haue not an abſolute iuſtice as well as an abſolute power? If God haue alſo an abſolute iuſtice: then can not his abſolute power preuayle whether God hat an abſolute iuſtice?

nayle vntil his abſolute iuſtice be fully counterpeſed. And ſo is it falſe that Raſtell begynneth withall, that God by his abſolute power may forgeue euery offence at his pleaſure without any cauſe. For (as I ſayd) his abſolute iuſtice muſt nedes be ſatiſfied & fully counterpeſed. If Raſtell dare ſay that God hath an abſolute power and no abſolute iuſtice, then taketh he his pleaſure in deede. For if he make one Nocionall in God greater then an other (by this worde Nocionall which ỹ Scholemen vſe, I would you ſhould vnderſtand the goodnes, wiſedome, power, iuſtice and mercy of God &c.) then ſhall he make a diſſentiō in God and imagine that one Nocionall ſubdueth an other: yea and beſides that, ſith eche one of theſe Nocionals is very God (for the power of God is nothyng but God hym ſelfe, and the iuſtice of God is nothyng but God hym ſelfe, & ſo forth of all the other) then if his power were greater then his iuſtice, it ſhuld folow ỹ God were greater thē God, & conſequētly we ſhould haue a great God and a litle God and moe Gods then one, ſuch reuell maketh Raſtel with his Turke. But the Chriſten beleue that one power of God is no greater then an other and that hys power is not aboue hys iuſtice, neither hys iuſtice aboue hys mercy &c. And ſo may you ſée that Raſtels imagination of Gods abſolute power is but very childiſh and vnſauery. For he hath no power agaynſt his Scripture and hym ſelfe. Thus finiſh his ſeuen reaſons with their ſolutions.

There is no one power in God greater then an other.

Raſtels imaginatiō of Gods abſolute power is childiſh.

But yet that his worke ſhould lōg indure all tempeſtes and ſtormes, he addeth a batelment and weatherſtone to auoyde and ſhote of the rayne, for feare it ſhould ſoke ſtrand make his buildyng decay. And therwith concludeth his booke.

The concluſion of Raſtels booke.

To beleue (ſayth hee) that there were no Purgatory to purge and puniſh our ſinnes after we be departed, ſhould put away that drede of God from the moſt part of the people and geue them boldnes to commit offences and ſinnes. And agayne, if the people ſhould beleue that they neuer neede to make any ſatiſfaction nor reſtitution to their neighbours for the wronges done vnto them, they ſhould neuer force nor care what iniuries, extortions, theftes, robberies and murthers they did. Finally if they beleued that ſuch a light repētaunce ſhould be ſufficient without any other ſatiſfaction to be made, it ſhould be an occaſion to deſtroy all vertue & increaſe vice and ſinne to the vtter deſtruction of the common wealth and quyet lyuing of the people. And thus much he maketh an end.

Frith. As to the firſt where he ſayth that it would put awaye the dreade of God and geue boldnes to ſinne, if we thought there were no Purgatory, we ſée and may euidently perceaue the contrary all day both in young & old of them that beleue there is a Purgatory. The young ſay I wil take my pleaſure whyle I may, and if I may haue but one houres reſpite to cry God mercy, I care not, for then ſhall I go but to Purgatory & ſo ſhall I be ſure to be ſaued. The old ſay: I will kéepe my goods as long as I may for I wote not what nede I ſhal haue. But whē I dye I will cry God mercy, and then ſhall I go but to Purgatory, and myne executours that haue my goodes ſhall redeme me thēce well inough. And ſo to beleue Purgatory, is rather an occaſiō of recheleſſe, boldneſſe, then of the feare of God. Beſides that if they knew ỹ there were no Purgatory, then ſhould many the more feare God and do wel them ſelues and not truſt to their executours for feare of damnation, howbeit as I haue ſayd before they that feare not God but for payne whether it be of hell or Purgatory are yet vnder condemnation and not in Gods fauour. And this dare I boldly affirme, that they whiche feare not God but for Purgatoryes ſake ſhall neuer come in it no nor yet in heauen. And therfore it is but folye to imagine Purgatory for that intent.

The feare of Purgatory cannot kepe vs frō ſinne but rather ỹ feare of hell and euerlaſtyng damnation.

Such as feare not God but for Purgatory and helles ſake ſhall neuer come in heauen.

As concernyng the ſecond poynte. If the people beleue that they neded not to make ſatiſfactiō to their neighbours for their treſpaſſes &c. I haue ſufficiently aūſwered before, that we muſt make ſatiſfaction vnto our neighbours, if we be able or els will God neuer forgeue vs. And if we be not able, yet muſt we knowledge our offence & then is our neighbour bounde to forgeue vs vnder the payne of damnation. And ſo can this proue no Purgatory.

Now as touchyng the third, that if they beleued that ſuch a light repentaunce were ſufficient without any other ſatiſfaction, it ſhould be an occaſion of vice and ſubuerſion of the common wealth: I aūſwere, as I haue done before almoſt in euery argument: ſith thou art ignoraunt of Chriſtes death and his ſatiſfaction vnto the father for vs, that all the repentaunce whiche we can take is not ſufficient to counterpeſe one cryme, but that if Chriſt were not we ſhould all be damned. Here will I leaue Raſtell and his Turke Gingemin with all their naturall Philoſophy (which is now proued ſwiſhnes) for hetherto hath he proued no Purgatory, neither hath hee one good reaſon nor yet to that baren reaſons one good ſolution, as we haue ſufficiently declared. But let vs heare ſomewhat more of Gods word: and ſee how Purgatory ſtandeth with that.

All the penaunce and repentaūce in ỹ worlde without fayth in Chriſtes bloud can not ſaue vs.

27. Paul ſaith, we muſt all be brought before the iudgement ſeate of Chriſt, that euery man may receaue accordyng to the workes of his body, whether it be good or bad. 2. Cor. 5. If this be true, then can there be no Purgatory whiche ſhall profite hym after he is diſſolued from his body, for then ſhould he not receaue accordyng to ỹ workes of his body. But rather accordyng to the paynes that he ſuffered in Purgatory. Now if this text be true then muſt it folow that all thyne executours dealyng, & offeryng of Paſſe pence. &c. helpe thee not a myte. And by this text it is not poſſible that there ſhould be a Purgatory.

2. Cor. 5.

Upon this text would I fayne diſpute a poynt of Sophiſtry, whiche I would gladly haue diſſolued of them that thinke thē ſelues learned in Philoſophy. My Sophiſme is, ỹ ỹ. contradictories may ſtād together & be both true. Whiche I am ſure no Sophiſter dare graunt, for it hath in tymes paſt ben condemned in Oxford for an hereſie. The cōtradictories are theſe. Euery man ſhall receaue accordyng to the workes of his body. And ſome mā ſhall not receaue accordyng to the workes of his body, that theſe two cōtradictories be both true I will proue. The firſte propoſition is Paules. 2. Cor. 5. which no man will deny to be true. And the ſecōd may eaſely be proued true, which is, that ſome mā ſhall not receaue accordyng to the workes of his body. For be it in caſe ỹ there depart a mā out of this world, which is not cleane purged by fayth and the word of God, neither are his rebellious members ſubdued through death (as they imagine) but that the ſpottes and remnauntes of ſinne remaine in him, for the which he is worthy to lye in the paynes of Purgatory for the ſpace of fiue yeare. This graunted, which I am ſure they will not deny, then alſo put I the caſe that this man lyeng in Purgatory by the ſpace of a moneth, haue a frend which offereth for hym a peny vnto S. Dominikes bore (which hath ſuch power that aſſone as the tinging is hard in ỹ bore, ſo ſone the ſoule is free in heauen) or that a frende or his bye a Pardon for hym which may abſolue him a pœna & a culpa for all commeth to one effect. This man deliuered on that maner doth not receaue accordyng to the workes of his body for by the workes of his body he ſhould yet lye in Purgatory more thē fiue yeares. And that doth he not, but is by and by deliuered from Purgatory. Ergo, I may conclude that ſome mā receaueth not accordyng to the workes of his body, & ſo are two contradictories true or els there can be no ſuch deliueraunce out of Purgatory, whiche deſtroyeth all Pardons, Paſſepence and Suffragies for the dead. This would I haue ſoluted. How beit I will not adnumber it for an argument becauſe the vnlearned people (to whom I write this booke)

Contradictories.

How two contradictories may be both true.

booke) can not well perceaue it. But this Sophiſme haue I writtē to ſtop the chatteryng mouthes of the Sophiſters and to caſt them a bone to gnaw vpon.

28. Paule ſayth, you whiche were in tymes paſt ſtraungers and enemyes becauſe your myndes were ſet in euil workes hath he now recōciled in the body of hys fleſhe thorough death to make you holy & ſuch as no man can complayne on, and without faulte in his owne ſight if ye continue grounded and ſtabliſhed in the fayth, and be not moued away from the hope of the Goſpell. Coloſ. i. Here Paule affirmeth that you are reconciled through his death, ſo that ye are made holy and without faulte in his ſight (I haue expounded what it is to bee without fault in his firſt argument) loke ye yet for an other Purgatory: are ye ſo childiſh and inſenſible no imagine that ye muſt yet go through Purgatory, ſith ye are already without faulte in his ſight: This a playne caſe, God of his righteouſnes will not puniſhe a man for nothyng: but all that are groūded and ſtabliſhed in the fayth are in hys ſight without faulte (for their ſinnes are not imputed vnto them but forgeuen through Chriſtes bloud (wherfore of neceſſitie I muſt conclude that no faythfull ſhall euer come there.

29. Euery man that departeth this worlde is either faithfull or vnfaithful if he be faithful then commeth he not there, as ỳ forſaid argumēt proueth. And if he be vnfaythfull thē commeth he neuer in Purgatory, but is all ready damned. Iohn. iij. Marke the laſt. Now if neither faythfull nor vnfaithfull enter into it, then ſhould it be in vayne: but there is nothyng made in vaine wherfore I muſt conclude that there is no ſuch Purgatory.

30. Paule ſayth he that ſpared not his owne ſonne but deliuered him for vs all, how ſhal he not with him geue vs all thynges alſo? who ſhall lay any thyng to the charge of Gods choſen? Roma. viij. Forſooth Lord God our prelates lay ſo fore vnto their charge, that they would haue them broyle in Purgatory. But Lord be our protector for it is thou that iuſtifieſt vs, & hast freely geuen vs all thynge with him. Roma. viij.

Who can cōdemne that God doth iuſtifie.

31. Paule ſayth the law of the ſpirite, wherein is lyfe through Chriſt Jeſu hath deliuered me from the lawe of ſinne and death. Roma. viij. Seyng we be ſo deliuered what nēde vs ſeke an other deliuerance ſpecially ſith they make it ſo paynefull? Seyng, we are on ỳ maner deliuered, how chaūceth it that we are taken priſoners agayne vnder ſinne, that we muſt be purged a freſh by the fire of Purgatory? I pray God geue vs grace that we may be purged frō this our blynd ignorance thorough hys ſpirite of knowledge, that we may perceaue how it is Jeſus Chriſt that purgeth our ſinnes, and hath deliuered vs thorough his bloudſhedyng. So ſhould we geue hym the prayſe whiche hath deſerued it. And not be ſo vnkind vnto hym as we now be.

Roma. 8.

Chriſt hath purged our ſinnes.

32. Paule ſayth ỳ there is no condēnatiō to them which are in Chriſt Jeſu. Roma. 8. But if we continue firme & ſtable in Chriſt vnto the end thē ſhall we be ſaued. Math. 24. what nēdeth thē purgatory yea & what ſhould purgatory doe? Is not Chriſt ſufficient? thē is our faith in vayne. And if he be ſufficient, thē is Purgatory in vayne.

Roma. 8. Math. 24.

There is no Purgatory.

33. Paule ſayth if you be iuſtified by the law then is Chriſt dead in vayne. Now if the lawe beyng good iuſt and holy. Roma. vij. And euen of Gods owne makyng cā not iuſtifie vs, thinkeſt thou to be iuſtified by fryenge in Purgatory?

Roma. 7.

34. They that are the chief patrones and proctours of Purgatory, do fayne it for no other intent, but to purge e-pill workes, and to be as a penaunce to ſupply the good workes whiche we lacked beyng in this world. But all this can not bryng vs into heauē. For then were Chriſt dead in vayne. And of this haue we euident examples. Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Dauid and all holy Prophetes were excluded from heauen vntill Chriſte had ſuffered death, this all men teſtifie. But if good workes or penaunce could haue brought them to heauen they ſhould

Purgatory is a vayne imaginatiō.

We are reconciled to god by ỳ death of Chriſt, & therefore neede not to looke for any other Purgatory not haue taryed out of it ſo lōg. Therfore I may conclude that it is but vanitie to imagine a Purgatory for to purge euill workes and ſupply good. For as I haue ſhewed, that holpe not the Patriarches.

Obiections

Peraduenture thou wilt ſay vnto me, ſhall I then do no good workes?

Good workes.

I aunſwere yes. Thou wilt aſke me wherfore? I aunſwere, thou muſt do them becauſe God hath commaūded them. Thou wilt ſay, for what intent hath he commaunded them? I aunſwere, becauſe thou art liuing in this world, and muſt nedes haue conuerſation with men, therfore hath God appointed thē what thou ſhalt doe to the profite of thy neighbour and tamyng of thy fleſh. As Paule teſtifieth.

We muſt do good workes becauſe God hath ſo commaūded vs.

Epheſ. 2. We are his worke made in Chriſt Jeſu to good woorkes, whiche woorkes God hath prepared that we ſhould walke in them. Theſe workes God would haue vs doe that the vnfaythfull might ſee the godly and vertuous conuerſation of his faythfull & thereby be compelled to glorifie our father whiche is in heauen. Math. 5. And ſo are they both profitable for thy neighbour and alſo a teſtimonie vnto thē by the which mē may know that thou art the right ſonne of thy heauēly father and a very Chriſte vnto thy neighbour: and euen as our heauenly father gaue his Chriſt vnto vs not for any profit that he ſhould haue ther by, but onely for our profite, likewiſe ỹ ſhouldeſt do all thy good workes not hauing reſpect what cōmodities thou ſhalt haue of it, but euer attendyng through charitie, the wealth and profite of thy neighbour. Thou wilt yet obiect, then ſee I no great profite that I ſhall haue by them: I aunſwere, what wouldeſt ỹ haue? Firſt Chriſt is geuen thē freely and with him hall thou all thinges. He is thy wiſedome, righteouſnes, halowyng and redemption. i. Cor. i. by him art thou made inheritour of God, and felowheyre with Chriſt. Roma. viij. This is freely geuen thē with Chriſt before thou wall borne thorough the fauour and election of God whiche election was done before the foundations of the world were caſt. Epheſ. i. Now were thou very fonde and vnkynde if thou thoughteſt to purchaſe by thy workes the thyng which is already geuē thē. Therefore muſt thou do thy workes with a ſingle eye, hauyng neither reſpect vnto the ioyes of heauē, neither yet to the paynes of hell, but onely do them for the profite of thy neighbour as God commaundeth thē, and let him a lone with the reſidue.

In aunſwere to an other obiection.

1. Cor. 1.

Roma. 8.

Ephe. 1.

We muſt worke with a ſingle eye.

To this well agreeth Paule. Ephe. 2. ſaying: by grace are ye made ſafe thorough fayth and that commeth not of your ſelues, but it is ỹ gift of God & cōmeth not of workes leſt any man ſhould boaſt him ſelfe. Loe here ſayth Paule playnly that our ſaluatiō is the gift of God & cōmeth not of workes, if it come not of workes then are we worſe then mad to fayne a Purgatory. For the chiefeſt operation of that ſhould be but to ſupply the woorkes which we haue not accompliſhed beyng in this body. 35. Ephe. 2.

Our ſaluatiō is ỹ gift of God, and cōmeth not by workes.

Paule ſayth Roma. xj. The remnaunt which are left at this time, are thorough the election of grace. If it be thorough grace thē is it not by workes, for then grace were no grace. Or if it be for the workes ſake ſo is it not of fauour and grace, accordyng to that which he wrote before. Roma. iiij. If Abrahā (ſayth Paul) were iuſtified by his workes, then may he reioyſe but not before God. But what ſayth the Scripture? Abraham beleued God & that was imputed vnto hym for righteouſnes, for he that worketh receaueth his reward not of fauour but of dutye. Now if it be duty, then nedeth he not to thanke God, but rather him ſelfe for thē God geueth him nothing but that which is his owne of dutye. Where is then the prayſe and glory that we owe to God? Therfore it followeth in the ſame terte: vnto hym that worketh not, but beleueth in him that iuſtifieth the wicked, is his faith imputed for righteouſnes. Now if our ſaluatiō come of fayth and not thorough our workes & deſertes, then is Purgatory ſhut out of dore & quite vaniſheth away. 36. Roma. 11. Rom. 4.

Faith in Chriſt is our righteouſnes.

Fayth is imputed for righteouſnes.

Mercy and Purgatoꝛy cannot agree. Foꝛ ỹ nature of mercy is to foꝛgeue, but Purgatoꝛy will haue all payde & ſatiſfied ſo that they twayne bee deſperate and can in no wiſe agrée. And loke how many tertes in Scripture commende Gods mercy, euen ſo many deny this paynefull Purgatoꝛy.

For there ſhoulde hee haue had an hote broth and an hartleſſe, and ſo might he rather haue deſired long to haue liued. And therefore I ſuppoſe that he knew nothyng of Purgatory but that he rather thought (as ẏ truth is) that death ſhould finiſh all his euils and ſorowes and geue hym reſt in loſing hym from his rebbellious members whiche were ſolde and captiue vnder ſinne.

S. Paule knewe of no Purgatory.

Howe a Chriſten man ſhould deſire death

All Chriſtē mē ſhould deſire death as Paule doth. Phil. 1. not becauſe of their croſſe and trouble whiche they ſuffer in this preſent worlde for then they ſought thē ſelues and their own profite and not the glory of God. But if we will well deſire death, we muſt firſt conſider howe ſore ſinne diſpleaſeth God our father, & then our owne nature and frailtie and our members ſo bounde vnder ſinne that we cā not doe nor yet thinke a good thought of our ſelues. 2. Cor. 3. 2. Cor. 3. Then ſhall we finde occaſion to lament our lyfe, not for the troubles that we ſuffer in it, but becauſe we be ſo prone vnto ſinne and ſo continually diſpleaſe God our father. What deſerueth he that would lōg lyue, but daply to heape ſinne vpon ſinne? And therefore ſhould we haue a will to dye bycauſe ẏ in death our ſinne is finiſhed, and thē ſhall we no more diſpleaſe God our father. Now if we ſhould fayne a Purgatory, it were not poſſible to imagine a greater obſtacle to make vs feare & flye from death. For ſith euery man muſt knowledge him ſelf a ſinner. 1. Iohn. 1. 1. Iohn. 1. And not beleue that Chriſtes death were ſufficiēt, but that he muſt alſo go to Purgatory: who ſhould depart this world with a quiet mynde?

Becauſe daply we offēd God, therfore we ſhould pray to be diſſolued as Paul dyd.

45. The wiſeman ſayth: The ſoules of the righteous are in the hande of God. They ſēmed to dye in the eyes of the fooliſh & their end was thought to be payne and afflictiō, but they are in peace. Sapi. 3. Sapien. 3. There is no mā but he muſt nēdes graunt me that euery faythfull is righteous in the ſight of God as it is written Abac. 2. Abacuc. 2. the righteous man lyueth by his fayth. And Roma. 5. Roma. 5. becauſe we are iuſtified by fayth we are at peace with God thorough our Lord Ieſus Chriſt &c. It is mere fooliſhnes to thinke there is a Purgatory whē theſe faithfull or righteous departe, thē ſayth this text that they are ſoles which thinke them to be in payne or affliction: for it affirmeth that they are in peace. Now ſith their Purgatory whiche they imagins is payne and affliction, and yet fayne that the righteous onely ſhal enter intō it after their death, then are they ſoles that ſuppoſe there is a Purgatory, or els this text can not be true.

46. For what entent will God haue vs tormented in Purgatory, to make ſatiſfaction for our ſinnes? verely thē is Chriſt dead in vayne as we haue often proued before. But thinke you not rather that our purgation ſhould be to encreaſe our fayth, or grace, or charitie (for theſe thrée couer the multitude of ſinnes) no verely we can not fayne a purgatory for any ſuch cauſe. For fayth ſpringeth by hearing of the Rom. 10. worde. Rom. 10. But the Pope ſendeth thē no preachers thether, Ergo, they fayth can not there be encreaſed. And agayne, payne ingendreth and kyndleth hate againſt God and not loue or charitie. Furthermore My Lord of Rocheſter is cōpelled to graunt that the ſoules in Purgatorye obtayne there neither more fayth nor grace nor charitie then they brought in with them, and ſo can I ſée no reaſonable cauſe why there ſhould be a purgatory. Neuertheleſſe M. More ſayth that both their grace and charitie is encreaſed. And ſo may you perceaue that lyes can neuer agrée how wyttie ſo euer they be that fayne and cloke them. For in ſome poyntes they ſhall be founde contrary ſo that at the length they may be diſcloſed.

The Pope ſendeth no preachers into Purgatory.

Roma.7. ſay with the Apoſtle Roma. vij. The good that I would doe, that do I not: that is, I haue a will and deſire to fulfill the law of God, & not to diſpleaſe my heauenly father, yet that I do not. But the euill which I hate, that do I, that is I do committe ſinne whiche in déede I hate. Now if I hate the ſinne whiche I do, then loue I the law of God whiche forbiddeth ſinne, and do conſent vnto this law that it is good righteous and holy. And ſo the ſinne whiche I hate and yet commit it thorough the frayltie of my members, is not imputed or rekened vnto me for ſinne. Neither will S. Paule graunt that it is I [illegible] that ſinne: but he ſayd: I haue a will to doe good: but I can not performe that will. For I do not that good which I would, but the euill whiche I would not, that do I. Now if I doe that thyng whiche I would not do, then is it not I that do it but the ſinne that dwelleth with in me. I delight in the law of God with myne inward man (that is with my will and minde which is renued with the ſpirite of God) but I ſée an other law in my members which rebelleth agaynſt the law of my mynde and maketh me bonde vnto the law of ſinne which is in my members. So that I my ſelfe in my will and mynde do obey the law of God (hatyng ſinne as the law cõmaundeth me and not conſentyng vnto it in my mynde & will) but in my fleſh and members I ſerue the law of ſinne, for the frayltie of my members compelleth me to ſinne. Rom.7.

We haue a will and minde to obey the law of God, but our ſinfull fleſh will not conſent thereunto.

Example. As by example. I ſée a poore man whiche is not of abilitie to do me any pleaſure, and neuertheles doth all his diligence to ſéeke my fauour & would with hart and mynde geue me ſome acceptable preſẽt if he were of power beyng alſo ſory that hee can not performe his will and mynde towardes me. Now if there be any point of humanitie or gentleneſſe in me, I will count this man for my frende, and accept his good will as well, as though he had in dede perfomed his wil. For his habilitie extendeth no further. If his power were better, better ſhould I haue. Euen ſo ſith we are not of power and habilitie to performe the law of God, and yet beare a good hart towardes God and his law, lamentyng our imbecillitie that we can do him no further pleaſure: then will God recount vs not as his enemyes, but as his deare children and beloued frendes. Neither will hee afterward thruſt vs into Purgatory, but as a tender father pardon vs our treſpaſſes, and accept our good will for the full déede.

God accepteth our good will if we do that in vs is to obey his cõmaundementes.

S. Paule exhorteth vs Gal.vj. that we worke well while we haue tyme, for what ſoeuer a man doth ſow that ſhall he réepe, by this may we euidently perceaue that hée ſhall not receaue according to his doing or ſufferyng in an other world, and therfore cã there be no Purgatory. 48. Gallat.6. Purgatory is nedeleſſe.

The wiſeman ſayth Eccle. xiiij. worke righteouſnes before thy death for after this lyfe there is no méete, that is to ſay ſuccour to bee founde. There are ſome which wil vnderſtãd this place & alſo the text in the xlviij. argument on this maner that there ſhould be no place of deſeruyng, but yet there may well bee a place of punishment. But this ſolution beſides that it is not grounded on Scripture, is very ſlender. For I pray you wher fore ſhould their inuention of Purgatory ſerue but to bee a place of purgyng, punishment, and penaunce, by the which the ſoule ſhould make ſatisfaction, that it might ſo deſerue to enter into the reſt of heauen. 49. Eccle.14. Some imagine Purgatory to be a place of ſatisfaction.

Bleſſed are the dead which dye in the Lord from hẽce forward, yea truly ſayth the ſpirite, that they may reſt frõ their labours. But their workes folow with them. This text they vſe in their ſoule maſſes as thoughe it made for Purgatory. But ſurely me thinketh that it maketh much againſt them. For let vs enquire of all the praiours and fautours of Purgatory, 50. Apoca. 14.

The dead that dye in the Lorde are bleſſed, and therfore are not in Purgatory.

whether ỹ ſoules that muſt be prayed for, are departed in the Lord or not? And they muſt nedes aunſwere that they are departed in the Lord, for the vnfaithfull which dye not in the Lord muſt not be prayed for. And therfore muſt they be vpright Chriſten ſoules which are tormẽted, for the other are all damned. Now ſayth the text that all ſuch dead as dye in the Lord are bleſſed: but what bleſſednes were that to broyle in Purgatory? And if they would here fayne a gloſe (as their maner is) when they are in a ſtraite euer to ſeke a ſtartyng hole & ſay that they are bleſſed becauſe they are in a good hope, although they haue not yet the reſt, but muſt ſuffer before in Purgatory: that euaſion will not this tert ſuffer, for the text ſayth that they reſt and are in peace as Eſayas

Eſay. 57. alſo ſayth in the .lvij. that the righteous (and euery faythfull man is righteous in the ſight of God as we haue often proued before) when he departeth reſteth in peace as in a bed. And Sapien. 3. Sapiẽ. iij. it is ſayd that the righteous ſoules are in peace: & ſo is it not poſſible that there ſhould be ſuch a paynefull Purgatory.

Thus haue we confuted Raſtell: both his argumentes and alſo ſolutions, for all that he writeth is falſe & agaynſt Scripture. Furthermore, we haue brought in, to proue that there cã be no ſuch Purgatory l. argumẽtes all grounded on Scripture. And if nede were a mã might make a thouſand of which our Clergy ſhould not be able to anoyde one.

The cõcluſiõ of Iohn Frith agaynſt Raſtells booke.

Here I thinke ſome mẽ will wonder that I haue the Scripture ſo full on my ſide becauſe that there are certaine mẽ, as my Lord of Rocheſter & Syr Thomas More, which by Scripture go about to proue Purgatory: & this is ſure that Scripture is not contrary vnto it ſelfe. Therfore it is neceſſary that we examine the tertes which they bring in for their purpoſe, in markyng the proceſſe both what goeth before and what cõmeth after. And then ſhal we eaſely perceaue the truth, & how theſe ỹ. men haue bene piteouſly deceaued. Firſt I will aunſwere vnto M. More which hath in a maner nothyng but that he toke out of my Lord of Rocheſter, although he handle it more ſuttelly. And what ſoeuer is not aunſwered in this parte, ſhalbe touched and fully conuinced in the third, whiche ſhall be a ſeuerall booke agaynſt my Lord of Rocheſter.

The ſecond booke which is an aunſwere vnto Syr Thomas More.

M. More begynneth ſtilfully.

MAiſter More begynneth with the ſely ſoules of Purgatory and maketh them to wayle and lamẽt, that they heare the world waxe ſo faynte in the fayth of Chriſt that any mã ſhould nede now to proue Purgatory to Chriſtẽ mẽ, or that any mã could be found which would in ſo great a thyng ſo fully and faſtly beleued for an vndoubted article this .xv. hundred yeare, begyn now to ſtaggar and ſtand in doubt. &c.

Frith. Verely me thinketh it a foule faute ſo ſore to ſtomble euen at the firſt. It were a great blot for him, if he ſhould be compelled by good authoritie to cut of .iiij. hundred of his foreſayd nũber.

Purgatory in 400. yeare after Chriſt was neither beleued as an article of ỹ fayth nor yet for an vndoubted truth.

Now if we can not onely proue that he muſt cut of that iiij. hundred yeare, but alſo bryng witneſſe that it was neither at that time beleued for an article of ỹ fayth nor yet for an vndoubted truth: thẽ I thinke ye would ſuppoſe this mãn ſomewhat out of the way. And that will I proue by Gods grace. S. Auſten was foure hundred yere after Chriſt. And yet in his time was it not fully and faſtly beleued for an article of the fayth, no nor yet fully and faſtly beleued to bee true. For hee him ſelfe writeth in his Enchiridion on this maner ſpeakyng of Purgatogatozy. After he expounded the place 1.Cor.3. of Paul. 1. Coz. 3. and had taken this wozd fire not foz Purgatozy, but foz temptation and tribulation, he added theſe wozdes in the. 69. chapter. It is not incredible that ſuch a thyng ſhuld alſo chaũce after this life, & whether it be ſo oz not it may be queſtioned &c.

S. Auſten doubted of Purgatozy Of theſe woozdes may we well per-ceaue that he counted it not foz an article of ỹ fayth, neither yet foz an vn-doubted truth foz if it had bene an article of ỹ faith, oz an vndoubted truth then would hee not haue ſayd, Poteſt etiã queri, that is to ſay: it may be que-ſtioned, doubted oz moued: foz thoſe holy fathers vſed not to make queſtions & doubtes in articles of the fayth among thẽ ſelues, neither yet in ſuch Roma. 4. things as were vndoubted true: they vſed not to diſpute whether Chriſte dyed foz our ſinnes & roſe agayne foz our iuſtificatiõ, but onely beleued it.

Beſide: that the occaſion why hée wzote the boke entitled Enchiridion was this. There was one Laurẽtius a Chriſtẽ man, which inſtantly required of S. Auſten that he would wzite him a fozme of his belefe whiche hée might continually beare in hand and whereunto he ſhould sticke. Upõ this wzote him S. Auſten this litle boke, where in he commaundeth hym not fully and faſtly to beleue (theſe are
M. Mores woozdes) that there was a Purgatozy: but ſayth that it may be queſtioned, doubted oz moued whether there be ſuch a place oz not. Of this haue we playne euidence that it
M. Moze much deceaued in the accomptyng of hys was none article of ỹ fayth in S. Auſtens tyme (which was foure hũdzed yeare after Chriſt) neither yet vn-doubted truth. And ſo may all men ſée that M. More is foze deceaued and ſet on the ſand euen at the firſt bzunte and in the begynnyng of his viage.

M. More. His ſecond reaſon that he hath to pzoue Purgatozy is this. The very miſcreauntes & Idolaters, Turkes,
M. Mozes ſecond reaſon. Saracenes and Paynimes haue euer for the moſt part thought and be-leued that after the bodyes are de-ceaſed: the ſoules of ſuch as were neither deadly dampned wretches for euer, nor on the other ſide, ſo good but that their offences done in this world haue deſerued more puniſhment then they had ſuffered and ſuſtained there, were purged and puniſhed by payne after the death, ere euer they were admitted vnto their wealth and reſt. And ſo muſt there nedes be a Purgatory.

I aũſwere, if it were lawfull to re- Frith.
quire wiſedome in a man ſo wiſe as
M. More is counted, here would I wiſh him a litle moze wit, foz I thinke M. Moze maketh a falſe and fond argu-ment.
there is no wiſeman that will graunt
this to be a good argumẽt, ỹ Turkes, Saracenes, Paynimes & Jewes beleue it to be true, Ergo, we muſt beleue that it is true: foz I will ſhewe you a like argument. The Turkes, Saracenes, Paynimes & Jewes beleue that we haue not ỹ right Chriſt, but that we are all damned which beleue in Chriſt. Is it therfoze true: ſhal we turne our fayth becauſe they beleue that we be deceaued? I thinke there is no man ſo foliſh as to graũt him this. But if M. More will haue his reaſõ hold, he muſt argue on this maner: The miſcreauntes and infi- John Frith amẽdeth M. Mozes ar-gument.
dels befoze named beleue that there is a Purgatozy & their belefe is true, therfoze we muſt beleue that there is a Purgatozy. Now foloweth this argument ſomewhat moze fozmally.
Here might I put him to the pzofe of his Minor: which is, that their belefe (in beleuyng Purgatozy) is true:
which thyng he ſhall neuer be able to pzoue. But I haue ſuch confidence of the truth on my ſide that I will take vpon me to pzoue the negatiue, Enẽ that their belefe is not true as cõcer-nyng Purgatozy. Foz theſe miſcre- John Frith pzo-ueth the ne-gatiue to be true.
auntes which beleue Purgatozy, beleue that there is a Purgatozy foz vs that be Chriſten: foz they beleue that we are fallẽ from all truth and vtterly dãned. But they thinke that there is a Purgatozy foz them ſelues wher-in they ſhalbe purged & puniſhed vntill they haue made full ſatiſfactiõ foz their ſinnes committed: but that is falſe, foz neither Turkes, Saracenes Paynimes noz Jewes whiche beleue not in Chriſt haue oz euer ſhall enter into any Purgatozy, but they are all dãned wretches becauſe they beleue not in Jeſu Chriſt. Iohn. 3. Now ſith they be deceaued, for they haue no Purgatory, but are all damned as many as beleue not. Alas what blindnes is that to argue that we muſt folow them which are both blynd and out of the right way?

Iohn. 3.

Raſtell had his argumentes frõ M. More.

After this diſputeth he by naturall reaſon that there muſt be a Purgatory, his diſputation continueth a leafe and an halfe, out of the which Raſtell toke all his booke. And ſo are all his apparent reaſons diſcloſed before agaynſt Raſtell. Then begynneth he with the Scripture, on this maner.

M. More.

IT ſemeth very probable and likely that the good kyng Ezechias for no other cauſe wept at the warning of his death geuen him by the Prophet, but onely for the feare of Purgatory.

Ezechias.

Frith. 4. Kinges. 2 Eſay. 38.

The ſtory is written. 4. Kinges. 2. And Eſay. 38. Ezechias was ſicke vnto the death. And Eſay the Prophete and ſonne of Amos came vnto him ſaying, this ſayth the Lord, diſpoſe thy houſe for thou ſhalt dye and not liue. He turned his face vnto the wall and prayed the Lord ſaying, I beſeche thée Lord, remember I pray thée, how I haue walked before thée in truth and in a perfite hart & haue done that thyng which is pleaſaunt & acceptable before thée. Then Ezechias wept with great cryeng: theſe are the wordes of the text. We cã not perceaue by the text that he was a great ſinner, but rather the contrary, for he ſayth that hee had walked before the Lorde in truth and in a perfite hart, & hath done that thyng which is pleaſaunt and acceptable before the Lord. And therfore it is nothyng lyke that hee ſhould feare Purgatory neither yet hell. Thou wilt peraduẽture aſke me, if he wept not for feare of Purgatory, why did he then wepe? I will alſo aſke you a queſtion, and then will I ſhew you my minde. Chriſt dyd not onely wepe, but feared ſo ſore that he ſweat like droppes of bloud runnyng downe vppon the earth, whiche was more then to wepe. Now if I ſhould aſke you why Chriſt feared & ſweate ſo ſore: what would you aũſwere me? that it was for feare of the paynes of Purgatory? forſoth he that would ſo aunſwere ſhould be laughed to ſcorne of all the world, as he were well worthy. Wherfore was it then? Merely euen for feare of death, as it playnly appeareth after: for he prayed vnto his Father, ſaying: my father if it be poſſible let this death paſſe fro me. Math. xxvj. So fearefull a thyng is death euen vnto the moſt pureſt fleſh. And euen the ſame cauſe will I aſſigne in Ezechias, that he wept for feare of death and not for Purgatory. Now proceedeth he further & promiſeth to proue it by playne euident textes, as it is very needefull for the text that hee alledged before is ſomewhat to farre wreſted and yet will it not ſerue him.

A queſtion to Maiſter More.

A very apt ſimilitude.

Math. 26.

M. More.

Haue ye not (ſayth he) the wordes of Scripture written in the booke of the kynges, Dominus deducit ad inferos & reducit: Our Lord bryngeth folke down into hell, and bringeth them thence agayne? But they that bee in that where damned ſoules be, they be neuer deliuered thence againe. Wherfore it appeareth well that they whõ God deliuereth and bryngeth thence agayne, be in that part of hell that is Purgatory.

Frith. 1. Kynges. 2

This texte is written in the firſt booke of the kynges and in the ſecond chapter, and they are the wordes of Anna which ſayth: The Lord doth kill & quickẽ againe: he ledeth downe into hell & bryngeth agayne. Here he thinketh to haue good hold. But ſurely his hold will fayle hym, for in this one text hee ſheweth him ſelfe twiſe ignorant. Firſt becauſe he knoweth not that the Hebrue word, Sheol, doth not ſignifie hell, but a graue or a pitte that is digged. As it is written Gene. 42. Si quid aduerſitatis acciderit ei in terra ad quam pergitis, deducetis canos meos cum dolore ad inferos, that is if any euill chaũce vnto my ſonne Beniamin in the lãd whether you go, you ſhall bryng down myne hoore heares with ſorow vnto my graue, not vnto hell nor yet vnto Purgatory, for he thought thought neither to go to hell nor Purgatory for his ſonne, but thought that he ſhould dye for ſorrow if his ſonne had any miſchaunce.

M. More here ſemeth to be ignorant in the Hebrue tonng.

Gene. 42.

M. More ignorant of the maner of the ſpeakyng of the Pro-phetes.

Beſides that he is cleane ignorãt of the cõmon maner of all Prophetes which for ẏ moſt part in all Pſalmes, Hymnes and other ſonges of prayſe (as this is) make the firſt ende of the verſe to expounde the laſt and the laſt to expounde the firſt. He that obſerueth this rule ſhall vnderſtand very much in the Scripture although hee be ignorannt in the Hebrue. So doth this place full well expounde it ſelfe without any imagination of Purgatory. Conferre the firſt part of ẏ verſe vnto the laſt and you ſhall eaſely perceaue it. The firſt part of the halfe verſe is this. The Lord doth kill, and that expoũdeth the other halfe of this verſe where he ſayth, hee leadeth downe to hell, ſo that in this place to kill and to leade downe to heil is all one thing. And likewiſe in the ſecond part of the halfe verſe, to quicken agayne and bryng agayne is all one thyng. Now if any man be ſuperſtitious that hee dare not vnderſtand this thyng as figuratelỹ ſpoken, then may he vertie it vpon them that God rayſed from naturall death as he did Lazarus. Iohn. xj. And all beit no man can deny but that this ſence is good and that the text may ſo be vnderſtãd, yet in my minde we ſhal go more nye vnto the very and pure truth, if we expounde it thus. The Lord doth kill and quickẽ agayne, he leadeth downe to hell and bringeth agayne: that is, hee bryngeth men into extreme affliction and miſerie (whiche is ſignified by death and hell) and after turneth not hys face vnto them and maketh them to folow hym. And to this well agreeth the 78. Pſalme that ſpeaketh of the children of Iſrael (which figure his elect Church and congregation.) Theyr yeares paſſed ouer in perpetuall trouble, whẽ he deſtroyed or killed them, then they ſought hym, they turned and beſought him buſely. He meaneth not here that he had firſt killed them by temporal death and after their death made them to ſeeke hym: but that he had wrapped them in extreme afflictions and perpetuall troubles, and that he ſore ſcourged them whẽ they brake his cõmaundements & yet after turned his mercyfull face vnto hym.

The Lord doth kill & rayſe again.

Iohn. 11.

Pſal. 78.

When God ſaith he killeth & doth quicken againe, what the meanyng therof is.

Finally, if you will haue the pure vnderſtãdyng of this place. Note the wordes of the iij. children Daniell. 3. whiche were caſt into the fornace of fire and yet preſerued frõ death thorough the mighty hand of God, their wordes & ſong was this: Benedicite Anania, Azaria, Miſaell Domino, laudate & ſuperexaltate eum in ſecula: quia eruit nos de inferno, & ſaluos fecit de manu mortis, & liberauit nos de medio ardentis flammæ, & de medio ignis eruit nos. That is: bleſſe ye anania, azaria, and miſaell the Lord: prayſe and aduaũce him for euer. For he hath plucked vs out of hell, & hath ſaued vs frõ the power of death. He hath deliuered vs from the middeſt of the burnyng flãme and hath plucked vs out frõ the middes of the fire. Here may you ſee the ſame maner of ſpeakyng & how the laſt ende expoundeth the begynnyng. Theſe children ſay that God hath plucked them out of hell, and yet were they neither dãned nor in Purgatory nor dead. But the nert part of this verſe expoundeth their meaning which ſayth: he hath ſaued vs from the hand of power of death. So may ye know that to bee plucked out of hell, and to be ſaued from the power of death, are all one thyng. And again where they ſay that God hath deliuered them from the burnyng flamme, and that hee hath plucked them from the middes of the fire, is all one ſenſe as euery child may well perceiue: and therfore is M. More to blame to be ſo buſie ſeyng he vnderſtandeth not the phraſe and manner of ſpeache of the Scripture.

Daniell. 3.

A true interpretatiõ of Scripture.

A foule fault in M. More.

Then bryngeth hee in the Prophet Zachary which ſayth. Tu quoq; in ſanguine Teſtamenti tui eduxiſti vinctos tuos de lacu in quo non erat aqua. Thou haſt in the bloud of thy Teſtament brought out thy bounden priſoners out of the pitte or lake in which there was no water. Now in hell is there no redemption, and in lymbo patrum the ſoules were in reſt? wherfore it appeareth clerely that thoſe priſoners whiche hee brought out of their payne, hee brought onely out of Purgatory.

Frith. This tert is ſpoken Zachary. 9. for a full aunſwere of this text I nēded no more but to bring the authoritie of my Lord of Rocheſter agaynſt hym. For hee expoundeth the place of the Pſalme. 66. for Purgatory, whiche ſayth. Tranſiuimus per ignem & aquam & adduxiſti nos in refrigeriū, we haue gone thorough fire and water & thou haſt brought vs into coleneſſe: If this tert of the Pſalme ſerue for Purgatory which ſayth that there is both fire and water, as my Lord of Rocheſter doth affirme & bringeth alſo Origine to confirme it, then can not this place of Zacharie ſerue, whiche ſayth that there is no water. And ſo muſt M. More nēdes bee ouerſene, for Origene and Rocheſter bee able to wey vp him. Here might I ſay vnto thē both that they ſhould firſt agrē with in thē ſelues and then would I ſhape them an aūſwere. Howbeit I know my part ſo ſure that I will confute them both, and proue that neither other place ſpeaketh any thyng of this paynfull Purgatory that the deſcribe. But my Lord of Rocheſters authoritie ſhall be differred vntill the third part whiche ſhalbe a ſeuerall boke agaynſt hym.

Pſal. 66.

More and Rocheſter can not agree.

How the ſaying of the Prophete Zachary is to be vnderſtand. This place berely approueth not Purgatory but ſheweth the vertue of Chriſtes redemption which thorough his bloud redemed his captiues & priſoners that is to ſay them whom hee foūd bound with the ſtrōg bondes of ſinne to euerlaſtyng damnatiō which were ſubiectes vnto the deuil and the extreme enemyes of God, but why calleth hee them his? berely becauſe they were choſen in Chriſt Jeſu before the begynnynge of the worlde, that they with him and thorough hym ſhould enioy the euerlaſtyng inheritaunce of heauen. Why are they called bounde and priſoners? Surely becauſe they were captiues, boūde and impriſoned vnder the deuill thorough the ſinne that Adā committed. Roma. 5. Roma. 5. b. Why ſayth he that he deliuered thē out of the pitte where in is no water? Forſoth that is euen as much to ſay, as hee deliuered them out of hell and from eternall damnation. Thou wilt happely ſay, hee deliuered them not out of hell and from eternall damnation, for his priſoners that is to ſay, they ỹ ſhalbe ſaued neuer came there. I aunſwere, that they ſhould without doubt haue gone thether & haue bene dāned perpetually, except that Chriſt by his death had deliuered and loſed them. And therefore ſayth the Scriptures that Chriſt deliuereth vs out of hell, becauſe he ſaueth and deliuereth vs that we come not there, which els ſhould ſurely enter into it for euer. It is alſo a common maner of ſpeach among vs, if a man ſhould go to priſon for debt or any ſuch matter, & one of his frendes come in ỹ meane ſeaſon which pacified the aduerſaries & payeth that debt, then may we well ſay, that he hath deliuered this man out of priſon although hee came not there, but ſhould haue gone thether. And likewiſe when we ſay that ſuch a mā hath deliuered his frend from the galowes, we meane not that he was all ready hanged, for then were the deliueraūce to late but we meane that he deliuered him that hee ſhould not be hanged. Furthermore if a mā might bee bold to aſke M. More whether Chriſt haue redemed, loſed and deliuered him in the bloud of his Teſtament? I thinke he would aunſwere yea. Now if we ſhould aſke him further, from whence he hath deliuered him? I am ſure he is not ſo ignoraunt as to ſay that Chriſte hath deliuered him from Purgatory, but euen that he hath deliuered him from eternall death and damnation. And ſo hath Chriſte deliuered vs from the pytte wherin is no water, that is to ſay, frō hell and euerlaſtyng damnation, not ỹ we were in hell all ready (although we were bound vnder ſinne and ready to be caſt therein, but becauſe we ſhould not enter into hell. This is the pure vnderſtandyng of the terte.

An obiectiō and aunſwere therunto.

A queſtion to maſter More.

Here

A true and plaine expoſition of the prophet Zachary.

Here might I diſpute wᵗ him both of hell & of Limbus patrum but becauſe I wilbe as ſhort as poſſible is I will deferre ẏ vntil an other occaſiō ẏ I may reaſon with hym ſomewhat at large.

M.More. AN other place is there alſo in the old Teſtament that putteth Purgatory quyte out of queſtion. For (ſayth he) what is playner then the places whiche in the booke of Machabeus. the Machabees make mention of the deuoute remembraunce, prayour, aſmoſe & ſacrifice to be done for ſoules, when the good and holy mā Iudas Machabeus gathered money among the people to buy ſacrifice withall to be offered vp for the ſoules of them that were dead in the battaile. What ſhift finde they here? Surely a very ſhameleſſe ſhift

Soꝛe ſpoken of M. Moꝛe. and are fayne to take them to that talkyng wᵗ is their ſhote anker alway, when they finde the ſtorme ſo great that they ſee their ſhyppe goeth all to wracke. For firſt they vſe to ſet ſome falſe gloſſe vnto the text, and if that helpe not, then fall they to a ſhameles boldnes, and let not to deny the Scripture and all.

Frith. The place whiche hee reciteth is

2. Mach. 12 writtẽ. 2. Macha. 12. Are to ſay the truth, ẏ booke is not of ſufficiẽt authoritie to make an article of our fayth: neither is it admitted in the Canō of the Hebꝛues. Here he obiecteth that the Church hath allowed it, and the holy Doctours, as S. Hierome. S. Auſtine and ſuch other I aunſwere: S. Hieromes mynde is opened vnto vs by the Epiſtle which he wꝛote befoꝛe ẏ Pꝛouerbes of Salomō, his woꝛdes are theſe. Sicut Iudith & Tobie Machabeorum libros, legit quidem eos eccleſia, ſed inter canonicas Scripturas non recipit, ſic & hæc duo volumina legat ad ædificationem plebis, non ad authoritatem eccleſiaſticorum dogmatum confirmandum. That is lyke as the Church

The bokes of the Machabees are not in the Canon of ẏ Hebꝛues. doth read the bokes of Iudith, Tobias, & the Machabees, but receaueth them not amōg the canonicall Scriptures, euen ſo let it read theſe twoo bokes (he meaneth the boke of Sapience and Eccleſiaſticus) vnto the edifieng of the people, and not to confirme the doctrine of the Church therby. And it is nothyng lyke that S. Auſten ſhould diſſent from S. Hierome, foꝛ they were both in one tyme, yea & S. Hierome out lyued S. Auſten. And therfoꝛe the Church could not admit any ſuch bookes either befoꝛe S. Auſtens tyme oꝛ in his tyme, but that S. Hierome ſhould haue knowne of it. And ſo may you gather that if S. Auſten allow theſe bookes, oꝛ els ſay that the Churche hath allowed them, you may not vnderſtād that they haue allowed and receaued them as canonicall Scriptures, foꝛ then you make S. Hierome a lyar. But thus you muſt vnderſtād it, that they haue receaued them to be read foꝛ the edifying of ẏ people, and not to confirme the doctrine of the Church oꝛ articles of the fayth therby, accoꝛding to S. Hieromes expoſitiō. Now may you ſée that our ſhote anker (as he called it) is ſo ſtrōg that all his ſtoꝛmes and waues can not once moue it, foꝛ we deny not but that the booke is receaued of the church to be read, and we ſhew by S. Hierome foꝛ what entent it is receaued and read, not to pꝛoue any article of our faith therby, but onely to oꝛder our maner of liuyng therafter in ſuch poyntes as are not repugnaunt vnto the canonicall Scripture.

But yet foꝛ this once, to do the mā pleaſure we will let ſlyppe our ſhote anker & take the ſeas with him. And foꝛ all their furious wyndes and frothy waues, we wil neuer ſtrike ſayle, ſo ſtrong is our ſhyp and ſo well ballaunced. Be it in caſe that this booke of the Machabées were of as good authoꝛity as Eſay: yet can he not pꝛoue this fury and paynefull Purgatoꝛye therby. Foꝛ it ſpeaketh not one woꝛd neither of fire noꝛ payne, but it ſpeaketh of a ſacrifice offred foꝛ the dead, ẏ they might be loſed frō their ſinnes becauſe there is a reſurrectiō of ẏ ded, which may wel be without any paine oꝛ fire. So that this concluſion is very bare and naked: It is good to offer ſacrifice foꝛ the dead that they may be loſed from their ſinnes, Ergo, there is a ſenſible fire which doth punithe the holy and choſen people of God. I am ſure there is no child, but he may perceaue that this argument is naught.

3. Furthermore it is euident that the Iewes had ſacrifices for the ſinnes of them that liued. Leuit. 4. 5. 6. &c. But how knew they that theſe ſacrifices would extende them ſelues vnto the ſinnes of the dead? And they were cõmaunded vnder the payne of curſing that they ſhould adde nothyng vnto Deut. 12. the word of God. Deut. 12. Verely it is lyke that the Prieſtes euen at that tyme ſought their owne profite, abuſed the ſacrifices, & deceaued the ſimple people.

4 M. More alſo ſayth, that the money was ſét to buy ſacrifices which ſhoulde be offered for the ſinne of the ſlayne. Now knoweth euery Chriſten that all maner of ſacrifices & offerynge were nothyng but figures of Chriſt, which ſhould be offered for the ſinne of his people. So that when Chriſt came, all ſacrifices & oblations ceaſed. If thou ſhouldeſt now offer a calfe to purge thy ſinne, thou were no doubt iniurious vnto the bloud of Chriſt, for if thou thought his bloud ſufficiẽt, then wouldeſt thou not ſéke an other ſacrifice for thy ſinne. By Chriſtes death all ſacrifices ceaſed.

5 Yea I will go further with you there was not one ſacrifice in the old Teſtamẽt that purged or toke away ſinne. For the bloud of oxẽ or goates can not take away ſinne. Heb. x. But Heb. 10. all the ſacrifices which were thẽ offered, did but ſignifie that Chriſt ſhould come and be made a ſacrifice for vs, which ſhuld purge our ſinne for euer. Now were their ſacrifices and oblations inſtitute of God and yet could they not take away ſinne: but onely ſignified that Chriſt through his blud ſhould take it away. What maſnes then is come into our braynes that we thinke that our oblations whiche are ordained but of our owne imagination ſhould take away ſinne? No ſacrifice cã take away ſinne but onely the ſacrifice made by Chriſt.

6 What if Iudas gathered ſuch an offeryng in the old Teſtamẽt, ſhould it then folow that we muſt doe ſo to, which know that Chriſt is come and that all oblations are ceaſed in hym: ſhall we become Iewes and go backe agayne to the ſhadow and ceremonie ſith we haue the body and ſignificatiõ whiche is Chriſt Ieſu? Be it that Iudas were a holy man, might he not do yet amiſſe? Be it in caſe that he dyd well, ſhall we therfore ſtraight wayes out of his worke ground an article of our fayth? Dauid was an holy man & yet committed he both murther and aduoutry ſhal we without further enſearchyng the Scriptures ſtreight wayes folow his example? Abraham was an holy man and was commaũded of God to offer his owne ſonne: The holieſt men haue fallen.

ſhall we offer our childzen therfoze? Gedſon and Ioſua deſtroyed the vnfaythfull kyngs and Pzinces and did well and were pzayſed of God. Muſt we do ſo to? And wherfoze ſhall we moze felow the example of Judas thē of the other? Shall I tell you why? Verelye foz this example of Judas bringeth money vnto our ſpiritualty. Theſe .xy. thouſād dzachmas ſhyne ſo bright in their eyes, ỹ without other cādle lanterne oz ſpectacles they haue eſpyed an article of our fayth: you may not conſider that they haue taken this text of .xy. thouſand dzachmes foz an Epiſtle in ſoule maſſes, foz then peraduēture you might fall into ſome ſhzewed ſuſpection, that they ſhould do it of couetouſnes, which faulte can not be eſpyed in our ſpiritualtie, as you know well inough.

The example of Judas Machabeus is profitable to ỹ church, and therfoze it muſt be folowed.

7. He that holdeth any ceremony of the law as neceſſary, is boūd to kēpe and fulfill the whole law. This is euident of Paul. Gal. 6. where he ſayth, If ye be circumciſed, then are ye debtours to fulfill the whole law. That is if ye put any confidence in circumciſion oz recounte it as neceſſary (foz els it is of it ſelfe, neither good noz euil) then make you your ſelues boūde vnder the law which burthen neither we noz our fathers could beare, and tempt God. Act. xv. And this ſacrifice of Judas was but a ceremony & ſignifieth ỹ Chriſt ſhould with his bloud quench our ſinnes. Ergo, he that keepeth oz coūteth this ceremony as neceſſary (as are all the articles of the fayth) doth captiue him ſelf vnder the law and tempteth God to ſpeake no moze ſharpely.

8. Yet will I go a litle nere vnto you. Judas hym ſelfe beleued not ỹ there was a Purgatozy. Foz in the tyme of the old Teſtament there was no purgatozy as the Scholemen graūt them ſelues but onely a place of reſt which they called Limbus patrum: wherfoze they are pitiouſly deceaued that will pzoue Purgatozy by the textes of the old Teſtament, ſith, as they ſay them ſelues, there was no Purgatozy at that tyme.

The ſchole mē ſay that in the tyme of the olde Teſtament there was no Purgatozy.

9. Finally, I cā not finde a place that of it ſelfe moze properly cōfuteth this phantaſticall Purgatozy, then doth this ſame texte whiche they ſticke ſo ſoze to, imaginyng that it ſtabliſheth Purgatozy. The text ſaith on this maner, except hee had hoped that they which were ſlayne ſhould riſe agayn, It ſhould ſeme voyde and in vayne to pzay foz the dead. If you fayne a Purgatozy, thē muſt this text nedes be falſe: foz be it in caſe that the dead ſhould not riſe agayne. Now ſayth the text that it were voyde & in vayne to pzay foz the dead if they ſhould not riſe agayne. But if there were a Purgatozy wherein they ſhould be purged and puniſhed in the meane ſeaſon: then were it not in vayne to pzay foz them to deliuer them out of that payne, but rather very frutefull and neceſſary although they ſhould neuer ryſe agayne. And therfoze if this text be of authozitie, is it impoſſible that there ſhould be any Purgatozy, neither is there any text that in my iudgement can better vndermine Purgatozy and make it fall.

Peraduenture you deſire to know my mynde in this place, and that I ſhould expoūd vnto you what Judas ment in his oblatiō ſith he thought of no Purgatozy as ỹ fozeſayd text doth well ſpecifie. Verely I thinke that Judas beleued that there ſhould be a reſurrection, as this text pzayſed hym, ſaying, thinkyng well and deuoutly of the reſurrection. Foz among the Jewes there were many that beleued not the reſurrection of our fleſh, and they that beleued it were yet ſo rude and ignozaūt, that they thought they ſhould ryſe but to obtayne a carnall kyngdome & haue their enemyes ſubdued vnder them without rebellion. And thereto ſticke the Jewes vnto this day. And it is moſt lyke that this ſhould be his meanyng, we ſhall all ryſe agayne, and poſſeſſe this land in peace, and theſe men which are ſlaine are out of the fauour of God becauſe they haue contrary to the law. Deut. vij. Take of the idols oblations, therfoze is it beſt that we ſend a ſacrifice vnto Jeruſalem to pacifie the wzath of God towardes them, leſt whē they riſe againe the Lord ſhould ſend ſome plague amongeſt vs for their trāſgreſſiō which they committed while they were here lyuyng. If any má can better geſſe I am wel cōtent to admit it, but this is playne inough: he thought that this ſacrifice could not helpe thē before they ſhould riſe agayne, which doth fully deſtroy Purgatory. For where he ſayth that it were voyde & in vayne to pray for the dead except they ſhould ryſe agayne: Is euen as much as to ſay vnto hym that hath any witte as that this prayer & ſacrifices can do them no good before they be riſen agayne from death: for els were it not in vayne to praye for them although they ſhould neuer ryſe agayn. As by example, if I ſay to a man that he ſhall neuer obtayne his purpoſe except he ſhould ſue to the kings grace, it is euen as much to ſay to a má that hath any wytte, as he ſhall neuer obtaine his purpoſe before he hath ſued to the kynges hyghnes.

Judas Machabeus thought of no Purgatory.

M. More is like to be proued an inſipient.

Maſter More goeth about to ieſt them out of countenaunce which ſay that the booke of Machabées is not au tētike becauſe it is not receaued in ỹ Canon of the Hebrues and ſayth that by this reaſon we may alſo denye the booke of Sapience & proue our ſelues inſipientes: but verely, if he admitte the booke of Sapience to be true and autentike, I feare me it will go nye to proue hym an inſipient for graunting that there is a Purgatory. Read the. 45. argument againſt Raſtell, & then iudge whether I ſay true or not.

10. Hetherto haue I let ſlyp our ſhoteanker and haue runne the Seas with hym, graunting him for his pleaſure that this booke ſhould be of as good authority as Eſay. Not that the Church, or holy Doctours, or any wiſe man ſuppoſeth it of ſo good authoritie, but onely to ſée what concluſion might be brought vpon it (that once graūted.) And if any man would require my iudgement as concerning this booke, I would ſhortly aunſwere that either this booke is falſe and of no authoritie, or els that Chriſt & his Apoſtles all holy Doctours & Scholemen therto are falſe and without authoritie.

For he that admitteth prayers and ſacrifice to be done for the dead, yea & alſo affirmeth that they are holy and wholeſome for ſuch ſinnes as are dāned by the law of God (which are in dede very mortall) doth not he agaynſt the word of God, yea and alſo agaynſt the cōmon conſent of all mē? But this booke doth ſo: which admitteth prayer and ſacrifice to bée done for the dead that were ſlayne in the battayle for theyr offence, yea and alſo damned by the law. Deut. 7. Now conclude your ſelues what ye thinke of this booke.

Thus much hath M. More brought (to proue his purpoſe) out of the old Teſtament and I thinke ye ſée it ſufficiently aunſwered. And now he entendeth to proue hys Purgatory by good and ſubſtaunciall authoritie in the new Teſtament alſo.

M. More.

FIrſt let vs conſider (ſayth Maſter Poze) the wordes of the bleſſed Apoſtle and Euangeliſt. S. Iohn, where he ſayth. Eſt peccatum ad mortem, non dico vt pro eo roget quis. There is ſayth hee ſome ſinne that is vnto the death, I byd not that any man ſhould pray for that, this ſinne as the interpreters agree is vnderſtād of deſperation and impenitēce, as though Saint Iohn, would ſay: that who departe out of this world impenitent or in deſpayre, any prayer after made can neuer ſtand hym in ſtede. Then it appeareth clearely that S. Iohn meaneth that there are other whiche dye not in ſuch caſe for whom hee would men ſhould pray, becauſe that prayer, to ſuch ſoules may be profitable. But that profite can no man take beyng in heauen where it needeth not, nor beyng in hell where it helpeth not, wherefore it appeareth that ſuch prayer helpeth onely for Purgatory, which thou muſt therfore nedes graunt except thou deny S. Iohn.

1. Iohn. 5.

Deſperatiō and impenitency are damnable ſinners.

Frith. 1. Iohn. 5.

The text is written. 1. Iohn. 5. which ſayth: there is a ſinne vnto the death, I byd not that any man ſhall pray for that. In this place doth M. More vnderſtād by this word death, temtempozall death, and then he taketh his pleaſure. But we will deſire hym to loke two lynes aboue, and not to ſnatch one peece of the text on this faſhion. I will rehearſe you the whole text and then ye ſhal heare myne aunſwere. The text is this, if any man perceaue that his brother doth ſinne, a ſinne not vnto ỹ death, let him aſke and he ſhall geue hym lyfe, to them that ſinne not vnto death. For there is ſome ſinne that is vnto death I bid not that any mã ſhould prayy for that. Now marke myne aunſwere. Death and life be contrary and both wordes are in this text, therfore if you vnderſtand this word death for tempozall death, then muſt you, alſo vnderſtand by this word life, tempozall lyfe. And ſo ſhould our prayer reſtore men agayne vnto tempozall lyfe. But I enſure you, M. More taketh this word death ſo commonly that no mã can tel what he meaneth. For in one place he taketh it for tempozall death, ſaying: who ſo depart out of this world impenitent. &c. And in an other place he is compelled to take it for euerlaſtyng death. Therfore will I ſhewe you the very vnderſtandyng of ỹ text. And better interpzeters deſire I none then Chriſt him ſelfe which ſayd vnto the Phariſeis, euery blaſphemy ſhall be forgeuen, but ỹ blaſphemy againſt the holy ghoſt (which S. John calleth a ſinne vnto the death) ſhall neuer be forgeuen, but is giltie vnto euerlaſtyng damnation. Marke. 19. what ſinne or blaſphemie is this? verely ỹ declareth S. Marke, ſaying. They ſayd that he had an vncleane ſpirite ỹ was ỹ ſinne vnto death euerlaſtyng, that was the ſinne, that ſhould neuer be forgeuen. He prooueth ſo euidently vnto thẽ that his miracles were done with ỹ ſpirite of God, that they could not deny it. And yet of an hard and obſtinate hart, euen knowyng the contrary, they ſayd that he had a deuill within hym. Theſe Phariſeis dyed not forth with, but lyued peraduenture many yeares after. Notwithſtãding if all the Apoſtles had prayed for theſe Phariſeis whiles they were yet lyuing, for all that their ſinne ſhould neuer haue bene forgeuen them. And truth is that after they dyed in impenitencie and deſperation, which was the frute of that ſinne, but not the ſinne it ſelfe.

M. More is confuſe in the interpretation of the ſcriptures.

Marke. 3.

What blaſphemy and ſin againſt the holy ghoſt is.

Now ſée ye the meanyng of this text, and what the ſinne vnto death or agaynſt the holy ghoſt is. If any man perceaue his brother to ſinne a ſinne not vnto death, that is not againſt the holy ghoſt: let him aſke and he ſhall geue him life, that is, let him pray vnto God for his brother and his ſinne ſhalbe forgeuen him. But if he ſée his brother ſinne a ſinne vnto death, that is, agaynſt the holy ghoſt, let him neuer pray for him for it boteth not. And ſo is not the text vnderſtand of prayer after this lyfe (as M. More imagineth) but euen of prayer for our brother which is lyuing with vs.

The pure vnderſtanding.

Notwithſtanding this ſinne is not lightly knowne, excepte the perſon knowledge it hym ſelfe, or els the ſpirite of God opẽ it vnto vs. Therfore may we pray for all men, except we haue euident knowledge that they haue ſo offended as is before rehearſed. And this is his text taken from him wherwith he laboureth to proue Purgatory.

What ſay they to the wordes of S. Iohn Apoc. 5. I haue heard (ſayth he) euery creature that is in heauen and vppon the earth and vnder the earth, and that be in the Sea and all thynges that be in them, all theſe haue I heard ſay, benediction, and honour, and glory and power for euer be to him, that is ſitting in the throne and vnto the lambe. By the creatures in heauen hee meaneth aungels. By the creatures vpon the earth, he meaneth men. By the creatures vnder the earth, he meaneth the ſoules in Purgatory. And by the creatures in the Sea hee meaneth men that ſayle on the Sea.

M. More. Apoca. 5.

Note.

By this text I vnderſtand not onely aungels and men, but alſo heauen and earth and all that is in them, cuẽ all beaſtes, fiſhes, wormes, and other creatures & thinke that all theſe creatures do prayſe the Lord. And where he taketh the creatures vnder ỹ earth foꝛ the ſoules in Purgatoꝛy: I take it foꝛ all maner of creatures vnder ỹ earth, both woꝛmes vermine and all other. And where he dꝛaweth the text and maketh the creatures in the ſea, to ſignifie men that are ſayling on the Sea: I ſay that the creatures in the Sea do ſignifie fiſhes, and ſuch other thynges, and that S. Iohn by this text ment euen playnly that all maner of thynges geue pꝛayſe vnto God and the lambe, yea and I dare be bold to adde that euen the very deuils & damned ſoules are compelled to pꝛayſe hym. Foꝛ their iuſt puniſhment commendeth his puyſaunt power & righteouſnes. Neither nédeſt thou to wõder oꝛ thinke this any new thyng, foꝛ Dauid in the 148. byddeth Serpentes beaſtes and byꝛdes to pꝛayſe the Lord, as it is alſo wꝛitten Dani. iij. And Paule ſayth Roma. 8. All maner of creatures long foꝛ our redemption and pꝛayſe God foꝛ it, yea and mourne that the laſt day is not yet come that the elect childꝛen of God might enter into reſt: foꝛ then ſhall alſo thoſe creatures be deliuered frõ their coꝛruptiõ and bondage into the libertie and gloꝛy of the childꝛen of God. Now iudge Chꝛiſten reader whiche ſentence ſtandeth moſt with the Scripture and gloꝛy of God.

A true expoſition of the Scripture.

M. More. Doth not the bleſſed Apoſtle. S. Peter as it appeareth. Actes. ij. ſay of our Sauiour Chriſte in this wiſe. Quem Deus ſuſcitauit ſolutis doloribus inferni. In theſe woordes he ſhewed that paynes of hell were loſed: but thoſe paynes were not the paynes of damned ſoules. And in Iimbo patrum there was no payne, Ergo, it was the payne of Purgatory which he looſed.

Frith. Alas what ſhall I ſay? I am in a maner compelled to ſay that this mã wandꝛeth in wilfull blindneſſe. Foꝛ els were it not poſſible that he ſhould erre ſo far as to bꝛing in this text foꝛ hys pꝛpoſe. The woꝛdes of Peter are theſe: Ye men of Iſraell heare theſe woꝛdes, Ieſus of Nazareth a man ſet foꝛth of God foꝛ you wyth powers, wonders, and tokens which God hath done by hym among you, as (you your ſelues know) after he was deliuered by the purpoſed counſell and foꝛeknowledge of God, and you receyued hym of the handes of the wicked, ye crucifyed and kylled him whom God hath rayſed, diſſoluing the paynes of death: foꝛ it was impoſſible that he ſhould be ſubdued of it. Here in ſtead of theſe woꝛdes The paynes of death, he ſetteth the paynes of hell (as it is moſt like) euẽ of a purpoſed deceit. Foꝛ albeit the mã would not take the payne to read the gꝛæke, yet if he had but once lꝛked vpon the tranſlation of hys olde frende and companion Eraſmus, it would haue taught him to haue ſayd, ſolutis doloribus mortis, that is, diſſoluing the paynes of death, accoꝛding to the Gꝛæke, and very woꝛdes of Luke which wꝛote theſe actes in the gꝛæke tongue.

Moze purpoſely coꝛrupteth the ſence of the Scripture.

And albeit the Lad tranſlation vſeth thys woꝛde Infernus which is diuerſly taken in ſcripture, both foꝛ death, foꝛ a graue, & foꝛ hell, yet in this place is maiſter Moze wythout excuſe which calleth it hell in our Engliſh tongue. Foꝛ albeit the woꝛd of it ſelf were indifferent in the Latine, yet it is not indifferent in the Engliſh: foꝛ there is no Engliſh man that taketh hys woꝛd hell, eyther foꝛ death, oꝛ foꝛ a graue, no not maiſter Moze himſelf. Foꝛ firſt he tranſlateth the text falſely calling it hell, and then he deſcãteth on a falſe ground, and calleth hell, not death but purgatoꝛy: when S. Peter bꝛought in theſe woꝛdes foꝛ no other purpoſe but to pꝛoue ỹ Chꝛiſt was riſen from death thꝛough the power of hys Father, meaning, that God the Father dyd rayſe hys Sonne Chꝛiſt notwythſtanding the ſoꝛowfull paynes and panges which he ſuffred vnto ỹ death, foꝛ it was impoſſible that Chꝛiſt ſhould be vtterly ſubdued of death. So that thys text pꝛoueth no moꝛe purgatoꝛy, then it pꝛoueth that maiſter Moze was hyꝛed of the ſpiritualty to defend purgatoꝛy. Beſides that, if it ſhould ſerue foꝛ Purgatoꝛy (which no wiſe man wil graunt whẽ he ſeeth the pꝛoceſſe of the Tert) it ſhould pꝛoue nothing, but that Chꝛiſt ſhould ſhould lye in the paynes of purgatory vntill God hys Father had holp him out: for the paynes which he ſpeaketh of were Chriſtes paynes, which no man can deny if he read the Text. But what a fond opinion were that, to fayne that Chriſt which was without ſinne, ſhould be tormented in the paynes of purgatory.

M.More. 1.Cor.3. The bleſſed Apoſtle Paule in his firſt epiſtle to the Corinthians the third chapter, ſpeaking of our ſauiour Chriſt the very and only foundation of all our fayth and ſaluation, ſayth: If any man builde vpon this foundation gold, ſiluer, precious ſtones, wood, hay, or ſtrawe, euery mans worke ſhall be made open, for the day of the Lord ſhall declare it, for in the fire it ſhalbe ſhewed, & the fire ſhall proue what maner of thyng euery mans worke is. If any mans worke that he hath builded thereon do abide, he ſhall haue a reward: if any mans worke burne, he ſhall ſuffer harme, but he ſhalbe ſafe, but yet as by fire. And finally he concludeth that thys word fyre, muſt nedes ſignifie the fyre of Purgatorye.

M. More woulde fayne proue a purgatory.

Frith. He that conſidereth the order or proces of the text ſhall eaſely perceiue that thys man erreth: for the Text ſpeaketh of the preachers, & blameth the Corinthians that they made ſuch ſectes and diſſentions among them ſelues, for one ſayd that he was Paules man, and held on hys ſide: an other ſayd that he was Peters man: the thirde did ſticke to Apollo, and ſo forth, euen as our friers do now a dayes, one ſect holdeth on S. Fraunces, an other of S. Dominike, the thyrd of S. Auſten. &c. S. Paule rebuketh theſe ſectes, & called the perſons carnall, commaunding them to take Chriſt for they head, & to cleaue onely to him: and as for Apollo, Peter, and Paule he ſayth, that they are but miniſters of the word, euery mā according to the gyfte geuen hym of God, the one more, the other leſſe.

Paule planted Apollo watred, that is, Paule ſet the Corinthians in the ground of Chriſtes fayth, and then came Apollo and preached them further of Chriſt, and comforted them to abide in the way which they walked in: howbeit it was onely God that made them proſper in the word and gaue the encreaſe. Neuertheles euery man ſhall receaue according to his labour: if he preach much, the more ſhall be his reward: if he preach litle, therafter ſhall he be rewarded. For we are Gods workmē to preach hys worde, and you are Gods huſbandry whom we muſt till and dreſſe in declaring you the word and perpetuall will of God: you are become Gods building thorough the grace of God which he hath geuen me, whome we muſt frame and ſo couch by the word of God, that we may make of you a temple of liuing ſtones. Lyke a wiſe workemaiſter haue I layd the foundation, for I firſt beganne to preach you Chriſt. Now commeth there an other and buildeth vpon this my foūdation entendyng to inſtruct you further in the wayes of Chriſt. But let euery mā take hede how he buildeth or preach vnto you, for no man cā lay any other foundation then is layed already, for all our buildyng and preachyng leneth onely on this pointe and principall ſtone, to declare vnto you what Chriſt hath done for you. wil to you.

He that labozeth much in Gods vyneyard ſhall receaue much. &c.

If any builde on this foundation gold, ſiluer, or precious ſtones, that is: if any man preach purely the word of God, which is likened to gold, ſiluer, and precious ſtones becauſe that as theſe are not conſumed with materiall fire, but rather made more pure, euen ſo the pure word of God ſuffreth neither hurt nor damage in ſpirituall fire, that is temptation and perſecution.

What it is to builde on gold, ſiluer or precious ſtone.

Or els if any man build vpon this foūdation wode, hay, or ſtubble, that is, if a man of good entent (but yet thorough ignorance) preach and teach you to ſticke vnto ceremonies & mēs traditions (although they ſeme neuer ſo glorious) and to ſuch thynges as are not groūded on Scripture (as S. Cyprian taught and defended to rebaptiſe hym, that was once Baptiſed and after fallen into hereſie, yea & many Byſhops conſented vnto hym, yet was it ſurely a great errour) this is wode, haye and ſtubble that cā not endure the fire of temptation & lyght of Gods word.

Euery mans worke ſhalbe declared for the day ſhall open it. Albeit it proſpere for a ſeaſon in the darke and can not be perceiued, yet whē the day commeth, which is the light of Gods worde, it ſhalbe eſpyed and iudged. The day ſhal open it that ſhalbe reuelated in fire, and the fire ſhall proue euery mans worke what it is. Fire ſignifieth temptation, tribulation, perſecution &c. whiche ſhall proue euery mans workes. If any mans worke that hee hath builded doe abyde this fire, that is, if the word that a man hath preached do abyde all aſſaultes & temptatiōs, it is a token that they are ſurely grounded on the Scripture of God, and then ſhall the preacher receiue his reward. If any mans worke be burnt, that is if the preachers wordes will not abyde the tryall and light but baniſh away, then is it a token that they are not well grounded on Scripture, and ſo ſhall he ſuffer hurt, for it ſhalbe a great croſſe and veration to the preachers hart that he hath bene ſo deceiued hym ſelfe and hath alſo ledde other into his errour. Notwithſtādyng he ſhalbe ſaued, becauſe of his fayth in the foundation, which is Chriſt, and his ignorannce ſhalbe pardoned vith he erreth not of a malicious purpoſe but of a good zeale. But yet ſhall it be as it were a fire to him, for it ſhall greue his hart to ſē that he had laboured in vayne, and that hee muſt deſtroy the ſame which he before through ignorannce preached: this is the proceſſe & pure vnderſtandyng of the tert.

How euery mans worke is tryed by fire.

There is no man but he graūteth that theſe wordes, foundation, laying of foundation, buildyng, gold, ſilver, precious ſtones, wood, haye and ſtubble are figuratiuely ſpoken: and why cā they not ſuffer that this word fire be ſo taken to? But where they finde this word fire, what ſoeuer the proceſſe be, there plante they Purgatory by and by, without any further conſideratiō. And yet if they had any iudgement at all, they might well perceaue by Paules owne wordes that he toke not this worde fire for materiall fire, as they groſſely imagine, but proceded in his Allegory and ſpake it figuratiuely: for Paule ſaith, He ſhalbe ſaued, but ſo as it were thorough fire. Marke well his wordes, he ſayth not that he ſhalbe ſaued through fire. But as it were thorough fire, ſignifyng that it ſhalbe a great grief & vexatiō vnto him. So that by theſe wordes of Paule, a very child may perceaue what he ment.

Wordes figuratiuely ſpoken.

Furthermore, if they be ſo ſtifnecked that they will not bow to ỹ truth, but ſtill perſeuer in their owne phantaſies faynyng Purgatory out of this place: thē will I boldly ſay vnto them that there ſhall no man enter into it but onely preachers. For in this place Paul onely ſpeaketh of them, and affirmeth that it is their preachyng and learnyng that ſhall be ſo proued thorough fire, and that ſuch a Preacher ſhall be ſaued, but yet as it were thorough fire. And therfore may the temporaltie be of good comfort, for I promiſe them that by this texte they ſhall neuer haue hurt in this their painfull Purgatory.

M. More. Math. 12.

DOth not our bleſſed Sauiour him ſelfe ſay that there is a certaine ſinne which a man may ſo cōmit agaynſt the holy ghoſt, that it ſhall neuer be remitted nor forgeuen, neither in this world, nor in the world to come? Now when our Lorde ſayth that the blaſphemy agaynſte the holy ghoſt ſhall not be forgeuē, neither in this world, nor in the world to come, he geueth vs cleare knowledge, that of other ſinnes, ſome ſhall bee forgeuen in this world, and ſome in the world to come.

Frith. A ſubtile ſophiſme.

Although this argument be a very Sophiſme, yet is there neither one rule in Sophiſtry that can proue this argument, nor yet one Sophiſter ſo folliſh as to graunt it.

For if I ſhould ſay vnto mine enemy that I would neither forgeue him

as lōg as I lyued no3 after my death, becauſe hee had done me ſome hay-nous treſpaſſe, then would men cōũt hym wo3ſe thē made that would ſay, Frith will not fo3geue his enemy as long as he lyueth no3 after his death, Ergo, ſome mē will fo3geue their ene-myes after their death. Fo3 when I ſay that I will not fo3geue hym, nei-ther in my life no3 after my death, I meane that I wil neuer fo3geue him, and make that addition becauſe hée ſhould not of folíhnes loke fo3 any ſuch fo3gueneſſe.

There is no remiſſiō of ſinnes after this lyfe.

But thus foloweth the argument well, It ſhall not be fo3geuen in thys wo3ld no3 in the wo3ld to come, ergo, it ſhall neuer be fo3geuen. And euen ſo doth the holy euangeliſt S. Marke expounde theſe wo3des of Chriſt in the thyrd chapter. Fo3 Mathew ſaith chap. 12. He that ſpeaketh agaynſt the holy Ghoſt ſhal neuer haue it fo3-geuen in this wo3ld no3 in the wo3ld Marke.3. to come: Marke expoundeth it thus, he that ſpeaketh a blaſphemy agaynſt the holy Ghoſt hath no remiſſion fo3 euer, but is giltie vnto euerlaſtyng damnation.

But of thys I haue ſpoken ſuffici-ently befo3e (in ſoluting the Tert 1. Joh. 5.) both what the ſinne and alſo how the text is to be vnderſtand. Nei-ther affirmeth the Scripture in any place that any ſinne is fo3geuen after thys lyfe, but ſayth, be ready fo3 ye know not the time when the Lo3de ſhall come, as who ſhould ſay, in this lyfe is remiſſion and full mercy to be had: labour therfo3e to attayne it, fo3 after thys lyfe is no ſuch fo3geuenes, but euen as the Lo3d findeth thee, ſo ſhall he iudge thée. Hys next and laſt argument of ſcripture is this:

M.More. Math. 12.

CHriſt ſayth, as it is rehearſed in the xij. of Matthew, that men ſhall yeld a reckenyng of euery idle worde, and that ſhall be after thys preſent lyfe. Then wotteth euery man that by that reckoning is vn-derſtand a puniſhment therefore, which ſhal not be in hell, and much leſſe in heauen, and therfore can it be no where els but in Purgatory.

Verily I haue not heard of a pa- Frith.
trone that ſo vnpro3ſitably defendeth hys clyent, no3 yet of any man that geueth himſelfe ſuch proper tripps to call himſelfe, except he went about M. More doth quyte ouerthrow hym ſelfe.
to betray and vtterly deſtroy the part which he would ſéme to fauour: fo3 thys text maketh mo3e agaynſt hym, then any that he bro3ght befo3e ſé-meth to make with him. The wo3des of Mathew are theſe: I tell you that of euery idle wo3d that men ſpeake, ſhall they yéld a reckoning in the day of iudgement: but that leaueth he out full craftely. Now let vs reaſon of thys text. By the reckoning is vnder-ſtood a puniſhment fo3 the ſinne (as maiſter Mo3e ſayth himſelf) and thys reckoning ſhall be vppon the day of dome, ergo, then this puniſhment fo3 ſinne, can not be befo3e the day of dome, but either vpon o3 els after the day of dome: Fo3 God will not firſt puniſh them, and then after reckon with them to punyſhe them a new: And ſo is purgato3y quite excluded: Here by M. Mo3es argument, Purgato3y is quyte ex-cluded.
Fo3 all they that euer imagined any purgato3y do put it befo3e the iudge-ment: fo3 when Chriſt commeth to iudgement then ceaſeth purgato3y as they all conſent: neyther is there any pra3er o3 ſuffrage which at that time can do any helpe at all. And ſo hath maſter Mo3e by thys text geuen him ſelfe a pro3per fall.

Here may you ſe3 how ſtrong hys reaſons are: and what wil happen to him that taketh in hand to defend the falſhode agaynſt the truth of Goddes wo3d: fo3 hys reaſons make mo3e a-gaynſt him then wyth him. You may well know that if hys matter had bē any thing lykely, he would haue co-loured it of an other faſhion. But ſith ſuch a patrone ſo greatly commended fo3 his conueyance & wiſedome hand-leth this matter ſo ſlenderly, you may well miſtruſt hys cauſe. Thys is the laſt reaſon grounded of Scripture, wherwith he hath laboured to pro3ue purgato3y. And after thys reaſon he reckeneth vp the doctours, and ſayth fo3 his pleaſure that al make fo3 him: but as touching the doctoures I will make a ſufficient aunſwer in the third part, which is agaynſt my Lorde of Rochester.

Thus he leaueth the Scripture, which he hath full vnmanerly handled, and now endeuoureth himſelfe to proue his purpoſe by ſome probable reaſons. And firſt he bringeth in hys old argument that the church can not erre, to the which reaſon I nede not to aunſwer, for William Tyndall hath declared aboundantly in a treatiſe which by Goddes grace you ſhall ſhortly haue, what the church is, and alſo that it both may erre, & doth erre, if the pope and his adherents be the church, as M. More imagineth.

M.More. AFter thys he confirmeth hys fantaſie with phantaſticall apparitions, ſaying: that there haue in euery country and in euery age apparitions bene had, and well knowne & teſtified, by which men haue had ſufficient reuelation and proofe of purgatorye. Howe many haue by Gods moſt gracious fauour appeared to theyr freendes after theyr death, and ſhewed themſelues holpen and deliuered thence by pilgrimages, almeſdeedes, prayer, &c. If they ſay that theſe be lyes, then they be much worſe then their maſter Luther himſelfe, for he conſenteth in his ſermons that many ſuch apparitions bee true, and they be true: then muſt there needes be a purgatory.

M. More is a ſubtill Sophiſter. Here playeth maſter More the ſubtile ſophiſter, and would deceiue men wyth a fallace, which lyeth in thys worde, true, ſo that when he ſayeth that ſuch apparitions be true, thys ſentence may be taken two maner of wayes. One, that it is true that ſuch phantaſticall apparitions do appeare to diuers, and that I thinke no man be ſo foliſh but he will graunt him.

And yet in dede are they no ſoules but very deuils that ſo appeare to delude men, that they ſhould fall frō the the fayth of Chriſt and make a God of their owne workes truſtyng to be ſaued thereby. But to ſuppoſe this true that they are the ſoules of Purgatory which ſo appeare, is very fonde falſe and agaynſt all Scripture, for Eſay ſayth, ſhall we go from the quicke vnto the dead? that is, ſhall we enquire of the dead and beleue them in ſuch pointes as cōcerne our wealth? Nay ſayth he, but vnto the law & witnes, that is vnto God and his word. Eſay. 8.

And ſo are we monished by Eſay in the. 8. that we beleue no ſuch phantaſies, we are commaūded by the law of God, that we enquire not of the dead, not for the truth, for God abhoreth it. Deut. xviij. Truth is not to bee fought of the dead.

Beſides that the parable of the rich man and Lazarus doth vtterly condemne all ſuch apparitions, that they are no ſoules which appeare but very deuils. For when the rich man deſired that Lazarus might go & warne his brethrē, that they ſhould not come into that place of payne, Abrahā aunſwered, that they had Moſes and the Prophetes, addyng alſo, that if they beleued not them, then would they not beleue although one ſhould riſe agayne and tell it them. Luke. 16.

And ſo may I conclude that it were in vayne to ſend them any ſuch apparitions of ſoules, & that in very dede there are no ſoules ſent of God, but that they are verely deuils whiche come to delude the people, & to withdraw them from Chriſt. Furthermore all men graunt that the appearyng of Samuell was but an illuſion of the deuill, thou ſhalt finde the ſtory. i. Reg. xxviij.

It is not long ſith ſuch a queſtion was moued in Oxford, the thing was this, there was a powre man of the cōtrey, whiche was ſore troubled with ſuch apparitions, for there came a thyng to him which deſired him to go certaine pilgrymages and to do certaine other ceremonies whereby it ſayd that it ſhould be deliuered from innumerable torments which it now ſuffered. The powre man beleued that this thyng ſayd truth, and dyd as it commaunded. Notwithſtandyng it came ſo often vnto him, that what with labour and what with feare, the mā was almoſt beſides him ſelfe, and then was hee ſent to Oxford to aſke counſell what was beſt to bee done. The queſtion was moued to one Dr. 1. Kinge. 18 tour Nicolas, and hee affirmed by ¶ by that it was no ſoule but the very deuill, and that he ſhould no more follow the fendes appetite. Then was it moued to D. Kyngton, and he affirmed the ſame. Finally, they enquyred of D. Roper what his minde was therin, ¶ he ſayd that he would loke on his boke, and when he had loked his pleaſure, he gaue this aunſwere. Let him alone a while (quoth he) and I warraunt you, that this felow ſhall either hang him ſelfe, or drowne hym ſelfe, or come to ſome other miſchief. Thus determined theſe men whiche are a great deale to ſuperſtitious to diſſent from any of the old Doctours, yea or els from their owne Scholemen. And yet would M. More make vs beleue that they were very ſoules, ¶ that by ſuch ceremonies they might be deliuered.

Frith.

Now commeth M. More to ſolute thoſe two reaſons that were brought againſt Purgatory in the Supplication of Beggers, which was ỹ whole occaſion of his boke. And marke how ſlender his ſolutiõs are. The firſt reaſon is this. If there were any Purgatory out of which the Pope might deliuer one ſoule by hys pardon, then may he by the ſame authoritie deliuer many: and if he may deliuer many, then may he deliuer them all. The ſecond reaſon is this. If he can deliuer them for money: then may he alſo deliuer them without money. And then is he a very cruel tyraunt which kæpeth them in paynes ſo intollerable (as he imagineth him ſelfe) vntill they pay money.

M. More his ſolution of the two former reaſons.

The firſt hee ſoluteth on this maner: Sith our Lord ſendeth them thether for ſatiſfaction to be made in ſome maner for their ſinne: the Pope ſhould not againſt Gods purpoſe delyuer them free then chaunge the maner of their ſatiſfaction frõ payne into prayer, almoſe or other good workes to be done by their frendes for them in ſome pointe profitable and neceſſary for the whole corps of Chriſtẽdome or ſome good member of the ſame.

As concernyng ſatiſfaction, I haue ſpoken ſufficiẽtly before agaynſt Raſtell. The Scripture knoweth no other ſatiſfaction to be made for ſinne towardes God, but onely the bloud of his ſonne Jeſu Chriſt, for if there were an other ſatiſfaction then dyed Chriſt in vayne: yea and he that ſeeketh any other ſatiſfactiõ for his ſinne (towardes God) then Chriſtes bloud (which muſt be receiued with a repẽtyng hart through fayth) doth deſpiſe Chriſtes bloud and treade it vnder his fæte. And ſo is the firſt part of M. Mores ſolution falſe, that they ſhould be ſhut in Purgatory to make ſatiſfaction.

M. Mores his argument is falſe.

Beſides that where hee ſayth that if the Pope ſhould ſo deliuer them, he ſhould deliuer them free. I ſay nay. For the Pope can deliuer no mã from thence vntil ſatiſfactiõ be made, as both he ¶ all his adherentes graũt. And therefore to finde away how he might ſeme to deliuer thẽ, he fayneth that he hath in his hands the merites of Chriſtes paſſion, and the merites of all Saintes to diſtribute them at his pleaſure. And therfore might the Pope apply the merites of Chriſtes paſſion ¶ of other Saintes vnto theſe ſely ſoules and ſo deliuer them. For thoſe merites ar inough to ſatiſfie for ỹ ſoules in purgatory, if there were ten tymes ſo many. And ſo ſhould the Pope deliuer them not free, but chaũgyng the maner of their ſatiſfaction from payne, into merites of Chriſtes paſſion and of all Saintes. And ſo is this reaſon not abated but rather ſtrõger thẽ it was before. Howbeit to ſay the truth, the merites of Chriſtes paſſion are onely diſtributed vnto the faythfull, and that by God and his ſpirite and not by the Pope. And as for the merites of Saintes can not helpe other, for they haue to litle for them ſelues if God ſhould enter into iudgement with them. Pſalme. 104. And Chriſt ſayth: Luke. 17. when you haue done all that is commaunded you, ſay we are vnprofitable ſeruauntes. To this well agræth the parable of the x. Virgins. Math. 25. whiche could not depart with any of they oyle, for feare that they ſhould not not haue had inough for them ſelues.

The ſecond reaſon byteth him ſomwhat, and therefore he calleth it vnreaſonable, and would auoyd it by an example on thys wiſe:

M. More his aunſwer to the ſecond reaſon.

Preſuppoſe that the Pope may deliuer al ſoules out of purgatory, yet if he were therfore cruell as oft as he leueth any there. This vnreaſonable reaſon layeth cruelty vnto the blame of God which may vndoubtedly deliuer al ſoules thence and yet he leaueth thē there. This blaſphemye ſhould alſo touch hys hye maieſtie for keeping any ſoule in hell, from whence no man doubteth but that he might if he liſt deliuer them all for euer.

Frith.

I aunſwere, that the example is nothing like, for God can deliuer no man neither from hell, nor from purgatory (if ſuch one were) vntill hys iuſtice be counterpayſed, as I haue ſufficiently proued agaynſt Raſkell. And if you obiect his abſolute power then aunſwer I that he hath an abſolute iuſtice as well as an abſolute power, and ſo can hys abſolute power do nothing vntill hys abſolute iuſtice be ſatiſfyed. And agayne I ſay, that God hath no power nor luſt to do agaynſt hys ſcripture any himſelf: but his power & luſt is to fulfill that he hath promiſed: vnto the faythfull, euerlaſting glory: and vnto the wicked eternall damnation. So that god by hys ſcripture can deliuer no man out of hell, for then had he power to make himſelfe a lyer, & ſo were he no God: neither can he deliuer any man out of purgatory (ſuppoſed that there were one) vntill hys iuſtice be pacified. But the pope (as he ſayth himſelfe) hath the full ſatiſfaction in hys own hand wherby Gods iuſtice muſt be pacified: wherfore it is onely the popes fault, which hath the ſatiſfaction in his power, and will not geue it till he haue money, & not Gods fault which muſt nedes tary vntill ſatiſfaction be made. And ſo is thys reaſon as ſtrong as it was before, & the pope proued a cruell tyraunt.

God cānot be againſt himſelfe.

M. More.

But yet to excuſe the pope he ſayth, It is not meete that the Pope ſhould be ſo quicke in deliueraūce: for ſo ſhould he geue a great occaſion to mē boldly to fall into ſinne and litle to care or feare how ſlowly they ryſe agayne, and that were not mete for his office.

Frith.

Forſoth this is a gentle reaſon. He may not be quicke in deliueraūce becauſe he ſhould geue men occaſion of ſinne. But for one peny he will quyte deliuer you and that with ſpede. For if ye offer a peny into S. Dominikes bore, aſſone as ye heare ỳ peny ryng in the bore, euen ſo ſone is the ſoule in heaue. Call you not that quicke deliueraūce? If you geue not that peny, then may he not deliuer the ſoule, for it ſhould be an occaſion of ſinne. But if you geue that peny thē is there no ſuch occaſiō of ſinne. Such great vertue hath that one peny in M. Mores ſight, that it cleanſeth away the occaſion of ſinne.

A penny offred into S. Dominickes bore worketh great matter.

Note what vertue is in a penny.

Furthermore, if this redemption may be done for money, it ſhall be ſtill an occaſion vnto the rich that they regard not ſinne, and yet they had more nēd to be bydeled then the pore: for where riches & aboundaunce is there raygneth ſinne moſt of all. Howbeit I haue ſhewed ſufficiently before agaynſt Raſkell, that they which feare not to ſinne but for feare of purgatorye, ſhall neuer come into it, but be damned in hell. For we ſhould not abſtaine from ſinne for any feare, but for the pure loue that we haue to god our moſt mercifull Father. &c.

M. More.

Then commeth maiſter More to this imagination, that we ſhould ſay, how no mans prayer or good deed can help an other. And (ſaith he) if that were true, thē could not Chriſtes bitter paſſion profite vs.

Frith.

Sir mine opiniō of Chriſtes death is this: 1 We haue ſinned in Adam without our own conſent and worke.

Joh. Frith declareth his opinion of Chriſtes death.

1 And we are looſed from ſinne thorough Chriſt without our workes or deſeruinges.

2 Sinne is come into the world thorow Adam, and is puniſhed wᵭ death.

2 The death through Chriſt is turned into a medicine, and cleane finiſheth ſinne.

3 One

3 One mans ſinne whiche is Adam, hath condemned many men.
3 One mans grace which is Chriſt, hath banquiſhed ſinne and holpen many.
4 If one mans ſinne be able to condemne vs without our workes.
4 Then much more is Gods grace of power to ſaue vs without our workes.
5 Sinne thorough Adam was planted in vs.
5 Grace thorough Chriſt is planted in vs.
6 Sinne hath had dominion ouer all men through Adam.
6 Grace preuaileth ouer vs through Chriſt.
7 Death thorough ſinne is planted in vs.
7 Life through grace is plãted in vs.
8 Death thorough ſinne hath dominion ouer vs.
8 Lyfe through grace preuayleth ouer vs.
9 Synne and death haue cõdemned all men.
9 Grace and life haue ſaued all men.
10 Thorough Adam, Adams ſynne was counted our owne.
10 Thorough Chriſt, Chriſtes righteouſneſſe is reputed vnto vs for our owne.

¶ Of this may you perceaue that we thinke that Chriſtes death profiteth vs, for we take hys death and reſurrection for our whole redemption and ſaluation. Now as concernyng mens good dedes and prayers, I ſay that they profite our neighbours: yea and good workes were ordeined for that entent that I ſhould profite my neighbour through them: And prayer ought to bee made to God for euery ſtate. But if I ſhould graũt that ſuch workes & prayers ſhould helpe them that are departed, thẽ ſhould I ſpeake cleane without my booke, for the worde of God knoweth no ſuch thyng. Let them therefore that pray for the dead examine them ſelues well with what fayth they do it, for fayth leaneth onely on the worde of God, ſo that where his worde is not there can be no good fayth: and if their prayer procede not of fayth, ſurely it can not pleaſe God. Hebrues. xj.

How mens prayers & good dedes do help one an other.

NOw ſuppoſe (ſayth M. More) that Purgatorye could in no wiſe be proued by Scripture, and that ſome wold yet ſay plainly that there were one and ſome would ſay playnly nay, let vs now ſee whether ſorte of theſe twayne myght take moſt harme if their parte were the wrong. Firſt he that beleued there were Purgatory, & that his prayer and good workes wrought for his frendes ſoules might relieue them therein, and becauſe of that vſed much prayer and almoſe for them, he could not leſe the reward of his good wil although his opiniõ were vntrue and that there were no Purgatory at all. But on the other ſide, he that beleueth there is none, and therfore prayeth for none: if his opiniõ be falſe and that there be Purgatory in deede, hee leſeth much good, and getteth hym alſo much harme. For hee both feareth much leſſe to ſinne, and to lye lõg in Purgatory, ſauing that his hereſie ſhall keepe hym thence, and ſende hym downe deepe into hell. M. More.

I aũſwere, that he ſhould take moſt harme that beleued there were a Purgatory, if his opiniõ were wrong and could not be proued by the Scripture (as M. More ſuppoſed) for he ſhould ſinne and tranſgreſſe agaynſt the law of God which ſayth. Deut. xij. That I commaunde thée that onely do vnto the Lord, neither adde any thyng nor diminiſh. And before in the iij. chap. of the ſame booke, ye ſhall not adde vnto the worde that I ſpeake vnto you neither ſhall ye take any thyng from it. And agayne in the v. chapter ye ſhall not decline neither to the left hãd (doyng that which is good in your owne ſight) neither yet vnto the right hand, doyng that which I manifeſtly forbyd you as though he ſhould ſay, doe that onely whiche I commaunde thée. And where M. More ſayth that hee can not leſe the reward of hys good will, although his opinion be vntrue. I aunſwere yes for it is but choſen holyneſſe which Paule condẽ- Frith.

neth. Colloſ. 2. which ſurely ſhall rather be imputed vnto hym for ſynne then for any good worke. And becauſe (as I ſayd before) it can not be done through fayth. I ſay that it is vtterly reproued of God. And on the other ſide he that beleueth it not, ſith it can not be proued by Scripture, cā catch no harme at all, although his opinion were falſe, but rather much good and prayſe both of God and all good men: becauſe he feareth to ſwerue frō the word of God, and had leuer not to beleue that thyng which is true (be it in caſe that purgatory were) and not ſet forth in Scripture, for ſo ſhall he be ſure not to ſinne: then to beleue for an article of ỹ fayth that thyng which is falſe in dede, for ſo ſhould he ſurely ſinne and tranſgreſſe agaynſt God and his holy worde. And ſo is there great perill to beleue a thyng for an article of the fayth whiche is not opened nor ſpoken of in Scripture: But if I beleue it not (although it were true) yet is there no ryght nor law that can condemne me. Now may you ſée, that to beleue for an article of the fayth that there is a Purgatory, ſith it can not be proued by Scripture, may condemne a man and make hym lye for euer in the paynes of hell, where as the other ſhoulde but a litle lenger lye in the paynes of Purgatory (if there were one) and ſo ſhal he be ſure ſo catch moſt harme that beleueth there is a Purgatory.

It is better not to beleue that which the ſcripture alloweth not, thē to make a fayth where we ſhould not.

M.More. Sauyng (ſayth Maſter More) that hys hereſie ſhall keepe hym from thence, and ſende him downe depe into hell.

Frith. Before he ſuppoſed ỹ it could not be proued by ſcripture. And now (ſtanding the ſame ſuppoſitiō) he calleth it an hereſie, & anhereſie is a ſtiffe holdē opinion repugnant vnto Scripture. If Purgatory can not bee proued by Scripture (as he maketh his ſuppoſition) then cā not the contrary opiniō be repugnaunt to Scripture, & thus of his own ſuppoſitiō he doth euill to cal it an hereſie. And where he ſayth, that his opiniō ſhall ſende hym down depe into hell, verely he ſteppeth to farre in Gods iudgement to conclude and determine ſo cruelly, & ſpecially in the ſame argument where he ſuppoſeth that it can not be proued, for if it can not bee proued by Scripture, whereby will ye condemne hym ſo depe that holdeth the contrary? forſoth you are a fierce iudge. God geue you eyes to ſée.

What is hereſie.

M. More is a ſore iudge.

FInallye, if ye pitie any man in payne, neuer knewe ye payne comparable to ours, whoſe fire paſſeth as farre in heate all the fires that euer burned vppon earth, as the hoteſt of all thoſe paſſeth a fayned fire paynted on a wall. M. More. The fire of purgatory is a meruelous hot fire.

Merely among all his other Poetrie it is reaſon that we graunt hym this. Yea and that our fire is but water in compariſon to it. For I enſure you it hath alone melted more gold and ſiluer for our ſpiritualties profite out of poore mens purſes, then all the gold ſmithes fires within England, neither yet therewith can the ragyng heate be aſſwaged. But it melteth caſtels, harde ſtones, landes and tenementes innumerable. For all your ſectes of Religion, Monkes, Friers, Chanons and Nunnes, with other Prieſtes regulare & ſeculare, by this fire, multiplication and alcumye haue obtayned their whole riches and pleaſures: euen the ſwete of England. And ſo muſt we graunt hym that this fire is very hote. Frith. Beholde here the force of the fire of purgatory.

Now may you wel perceaue what a ſlender foūdation their hote purgatory hath. For by this confutatiō may you eaſely ſée that it hath no grounde nor authority of Scripture. Notwithſtanding it is the foundation of all religions and cloyſters, yea and of all the godes that nowe are in theſe ſpiritualtie. Are not they witty worke men whiche can builde ſo much on ſo ſlender a foundation? Howbeit they haue made it ſo toppeheuye, that it is ſurely lyke to haue a fall. Thus hath Maſter More a full aunſwere, both to hys Scriptures whiche were ſo farre wreſted out of theyr places, and alſo to hys owne apparent reaſons. Howbeit if hys maſterſhyppe be not fully pacified, let hym more ground-

M. More fully aunſwered to all that he can ſay for purgatory.

ly open hys mynde, and bryng for his purpoſe all that he thinketh to make for it and I ſhall by Gods grace ſhortly make hym an aunſwere and quyet his mynde.

¶ Thus endeth the ſecond booke.

¶ The third booke, which aunſwereth vnto my Lord of Rocheſter and declareth the mynde of the old Doctours.

NOw will I addreſſe me to the thirde part, which ſhallbe an aunſwere vnto my lord of Rocheſter. And all his reaſons and argumentes both of the Scriptures, and doctoures, which are not before diſſolued in the ſeconde part, wyll I clene confute (by Gods grace) in this thirde booke. Howbeit the chefeſt of his ſcriptures hath M. More peruſed and hath in a maner nothing but that was before wrate by my lord of Rocheſter: ſauing that he maketh the ſelye ſoules to pull, to helpe his matter withall. My lord of Rocheſter is the firſt patroue and defender of thys phantaſie. And euē as M. More toke his worke out of my lord of Rocheſters: euen ſo plucked Raſtell hys booke out of M. Mores.

M. More was the Byſhop of Rocheſters Diſciple.

Rocheſter the firſt patrone of Purgatory

My lord of Rocheſter to confirme hys ſentence, rekeneth vp the doctors by heape, M. Iohan, M. William, M. Thomas, & omnes. But as concerning the doctors, that they are not ſo fully on hys ſide as he woulde make thē ſeme, is ſone proued. And where ſhould I better begin to confute him, then of hys owne wordes? for he writeth himſelfe vpon the xviij. article on this maner:

Rocheſter. THere is no man now a daies that doubteth of Purgatorye (ſayeth he) and yet among the olde auncient fathers was there eyther none, or els very ſeldome mention made of it. And alſo among the Grecians euen vnto this day is not purgatory beleued? Let him read that will the commentaries of the olde Grecians, and as I ſuppoſe he ſhal finde eyther no worde ſpoken of it, or els very few.

The Byſhop of Rocheſters owne wordes.

Theſe are my lordes wordes. I wonder what obliuiouſnes is come vppon hym, that he ſo cleaueth vnto the Doctors, whome he affirmed before eyther to make no mention of it, or els very ſeldome. Notwythſtanding I will declare you ſomewhat of the Doctors, that you may the better know theyr meaning. Frith.

To ſpeake of the Doctors, & what theyr minde was in thys matter, it were neceſſarye to declare in what time they were, and what condition the worlde was in theyr dayes. S. Auſtine, Ambroſe, & Hierome were in one time, euen about iiij. hundred yeares after Chriſt, and yet before theyr time were there ariſen infinite heretikes by whole ſectes, as the Arrians, Domitians, Eunomians, Vigilanttians, Pelagians, with infinite other, which had ſo ſwerued from the truth, and wreſted the Scripture out of frame, that it was not poſſible for one man, no nor for one mans age to reſtore it agayne vnto the true ſenſe. Among theſe there were ſome which not onely fayned a purgatory, but alſo doted ſo far, that they affirmed that euery man were he neuer ſo vicious ſhould be ſaued through that fire, and aleaged for them the place of Paul 1. Corinthians 3. Theſe holy doctours perceauing thoſe greate erroures, thought it not beſt by and by to condemne all thinges indifferētly: but to ſuffer and diſſemble wyth the leſſe, that they might wede out the opinions which were moſt noyſom, as the Apoſtles graunted vnto the Iewes, that the Gentiles ſhould kepe ſome of Moyſes law, Actes xv. that they might the better com to their purpoſe to ſaue the Iewes with the Gentiles. For if they had at the firſt vtterly ſet of the law, then would the Iewes neuer Sectes of heretickes. 1. Cor. 3. Actes. 15.

uer haue geuen any audience vnto the Apoſtles. And euen ſo S. Auſten went wiſely to worke: Firſt condemning by the Scripture that errour which was moſt noyſome, and wrote on thys maner. Albeit ſome might be purged through fire, yet not ſuch as the Apoſtle condemneth when he ſayeth, that the perſons which ſo do, ſhal not poſſeſſe the kingdome of heauen. And where they woulde haue ſtucke vnto Paules text 1. Cor. 3. and affirme that they ſhoulde be ſaued thorough fire, S. Auſten anſwered, that Paules texte was vnderſtande of the ſpirituall fire, which is, temptation, affliction, tribulation &c. Thys wrote he in the 67. 68. of hys Enchiridion, to ſubuert that groſſe errour, that all ſhould be ſaued through ỹ fire of purgatory. Yet in the 69. he goeth a litle neare them and ſayth, that it may be doubted whether there be any ſuch purgatory or not. He durſt not yet openly cõdemne it, becauſe he thought that men could not at that time beare it. But after in his booke which he entituled, De vanitate huius ſæculi, there doth he fully ſhew his minde in theſe wordes: Scitote quòd cum anima a corpore auellitur, ſtatim aut pro meritis bonis in Paradiſo collocatur, aut pro meritis malis in inferni tartara præcipitatur. i. Wote ye well that when the ſoule is departed from the body, eyther it is by and by put into paradiſe according to hys good deſertes, or els it is thruſt hedlong into hell for hys ſinnes. Here he cleane condemneth purgatory: for if thys be done by and by aſſone as the ſoule is departed from the body, then can there be no purgatory: and ſo maketh S. Auſten wholy with vs. Thinke ye that S. Auſten diſſenteth from his companion S. Hierome, or from hys owne Maſter S. Ambroſe? Nay verely: Howbeit I will alleage theyr owne wordes, and then iudge.

S. Auſten ſheweth what hee thought of Purgatory

Saint Ambroſe.

SAint Ambroſe diſſenteth not from S. Auſtine, but doth ſtablyſh hys ſentence as fully as is poſſible: for he writeth in the ſecond chapter of hys booke which is called De bono mortis, on this maner bringing in the words of Dauid Pſal. 39. Aduena ego ſum in terra, & peregrinus ſicut omnes patres mei. Et ideo tanquam peregrinus ad illã ſanctorum communem omnium patriam feſtinabat. Petens pro huius commorationis inquinamento remitti ſibi peccata, priuſquam diſcederet de vita. Qui enim hîc non acceperit remiſſionem peccatorum illic non erit. Non erit autem, quia ad vitam æternam non potuerit peruenire, quia vita æterna remiſſio peccatorum eſt. Ideoq; dicit, remitte mihi vt refrigerer priuſquam abeam. &c. that is, I am a ſtraunger and a pilgrime in the earth as all my fathers haue bene. And therfore as a pilgrime he haſted vnto the common countrey of all ſaintes, requiring for the filthines that he had receaued in this bodely manſion, that his ſinnes might be forgeuen him before he departed from thys lyfe. For he that here hath not receaued forgeueneſſe of hys ſinnes, ſhall not be there. He ſhall not ſurely be there, for he can not come vnto euerlaſting life, for euerlaſting lyfe is the forgeuenes of ſinnes. And therfore he ſayth, forgeue me that I may be coled before I depart. Here may you euidently perceaue, that S. Ambroſe knew not of purgatory, nor of any forgeueneſſe that ſhould be after thys lyfe: But plainly affirmeth that he ỹ receaueth not forgeueneſſe of hys ſinnes here (that is, in thys life) ſhall neuer come in heauen. And for a more vehement affirmation he dubleth hys owne wordes ſaying: He that here hath not receyued forgeueneſſe of hys ſinnes, he ſhall not be there, he ſhall not ſurely be there. He meaneth that he ſhall neuer come to Heauen, which here hath not his remiſſion.

S. Ambroſe ſheweth his opinion of Purgatory.

Saint Hierome. Eccle. 9.

SAint Hieromes minde may ſone be gathered by hys expoſition of the ix. chapter of Eccleſiaſtes vpon thys text: The dead haue no part in thys world, nor in any worke that is done vnder the Sunne. There addeth Sainte Hierome, that the dead can adde nothing vnto that which they haue taken with them out of this life, for they can neither do good nor ſinne, neyther can they encreaſe in vertue or vice. Albeit (ſayth he) ſome will contrarie thys expoſition, affirming

All ſuffrages prayers & good deedes done for the deade are in vayne.

alſo that we may encreaſe & decreaſe after death.

Here are three things to be noted: 1. firſt, that the Text ſayth, that the dead are not partakers of any worke that is done vnder the ſunne. And there may you ſée that all ſuffrages, offringes, and diriges for the dead are in vaine, and profite them not, for they are partakers of nothing vnder the ſunne.

2. Secondarily, you may ſée S. Hieromes own minde, that the dead can neyther do good nor euill, neyther encreaſe in vertue nor vice. And ſo is purgatory put out: for if they can do no good, what ſhould they do in purgatory? And agayne, if they can not encreaſe in vertue, they be lyke to lye long in purgatorye. Peraduenture ſome man would thinke that they do no good, but onely that they ſuffer good. To that I aunſwer that he that ſuffereth good, doth good: for if a man ſhould ſuffer hys body to be burnt for the fayth of Chriſt, would you not ſay that he did a good deed? and yet doth he but ſuffer.

The dead can neither do good or euil, nor increaſe in vertue.

3 Thirdly ye may note, that S. Hierome was not ignorant that certeine (as they which did fayne purgatory) would denye hys expoſition, and ſay that we might encreaſe and decreaſe in vertue and vyce after death, yet notwithſtanding he held his ſentence condemning theyr opinion, whych thing he would not haue done (ſpecially ſith he knew that he ſhould haue aduerſaries for it) except he had bene ſure that his ſentence was right. Sée I pray you how that not onely ſcripture, but euen theyr owne doctoures condemne this phantaſticall purgatory: and yet my lords are not aſhamed to ſay that all make for them.

The ſayinges of the Doctors are no farther to be credited then they agree with ỹ ſcripture.

NEuertheleſſe, I wyll go further wyth hym. Be it in caſe that all the Doctours dyd affirme purgatory, as they do not: what were my Lord the nearer hys purpoſe? Verely not one iote: for the authoritie of doctors by my lordes owne confeſſion extendeth no further, but is onely to be admitted whileſt they confirme theyr wordes by Scripture, or els by ſome probable reaſon. For my Lorde writeth on this maner, Article xxxvj. The Pope hath not ſo allowed the whole doctrine of S. Thomas, that men ſhould beleue euery poynte he wrote were true. Neither hath the church ſo approued eyther S. Auſtine or S. Hierome, nor any other authors doctrine, but that in ſome places we may diſſent from them: for they in many places haue openly declared themſelues to be men, and many times to haue erred.

Rocheſter.

The doctors haue erred in many thinges.

Theſe are my lordes owne wordes. Now ſith the doctours ſomtime erre, and in certayne places are not to be admitted (as he graunteth himſelfe) how ſhould we know whē to approue them, and when to deny them? If we ſhould hang on the Doctoures authority, then ſhould we as well alow the vntruth, as the truth, ſith he affirmeth both. Therfore we muſt haue a iudge to diſcerne betwéene truth and falſehode. And who ſhoulde that be? the pope? Nay verely: for he being a man (as well as the Doctours were) may erre as they did, and ſo ſhall we euer be vncertaine. Our Iudge therefore muſt not be parciall flexible, nor ignoraunt (and ſo are all naturall men excluded:) but he muſt be inalterable, euen ſearching the bottome & ground of all thing. Who muſt that be? Verely the ſcripture and word of God, which was geuen by his Sonne, confirmed and ſealed by the holy Ghoſt, and teſtified by miracles and bloud of all martyres. This word is the iudge that muſt examine the matter, the perfit touchſtone that tryeth al thing, and day that diſcloſeth all iuggeling miſtes. If the doctours ſay any thing not diſſonant from this word, then it is to be admitted and holdē for truth. But if any of theyr doctrine diſcorde from it, it is to be abhorred, and holden accurſſed.

The worde of God is the touchſtone & tryeth all of all doctrine.

To this full well agréeth S. Auſten whiche writeth vnto S. Hierome on this wiſe: Deare brother, I thinke that you wil not haue your bookes reputed lyke vnto the woorkes of the Prophetes and Apoſtles: for I (the Scripture reſerued) do read all other mens workes on that maner, that I doe not beleue them becauſe the author ſo ſayth, be he neuer ſo well learned and holy, except that he can certifie me by the Scripture or cleare reaſon that he ſayth true. And euen ſo would I that other men ſhould read my bookes, as I read theirs. Theſe are S. Auſtēs wordes. And thus haue I proued both by S. Auſten and alſo by my Lordes owne wordes, that no man is bound to beleue the Doctors, except they can be proued true either by Scripture or good reaſon not repugnaunt to Scripture. Therefore let vs ſée what Scripture or good reaſon my Lord bringeth to approue his doctours withall. For els they can not helpe hym (as we haue declared both by S. Auſten & my Lordes owne confeſſion,) although they all made with hym, as they do not. Firſt he bringeth in the ſinne agaynſt the holy ghoſt. Math. 12. And Paule. 1. Cor. 3. And. 1. John. 5. And Apoca. 5. which tertes I paſſe ouer becauſe I haue aunſwered vnto them before in the ſeconde booke, agaynſt M. More.

S. Auſtine

S. Auſten read old auctors, and would alſo haue all mē read his workes.

THe firſt reaſon that my Lord hath which is not before ſoluted (for as I ſayd the reaſons that are already diſſolued will I now ouerpy) is this which he groundeth on diuers Scriptures. Of the ſoules that are departed, ſome are all ready damned in hell, and ſome are all ready in heauen. And to proue this true, he alledgeth the parable of the rich mā. Luke xvi. I am ſure my Lord is not ſo ignoraūt as to ſay that a parable proueth any thyng. But the right vſe of a parable is this, to expound an harde terte or poynte, that was before touched & could not entre into euery mans capacitie. Neither are all thynges lyke which are ſpoken in a ſimilitude, neither yet all thynges true that are touched in a parable: but we muſt conſider the thyng wherefore they be ſpokē, and apply them onely to that they are ſpoken for, and let the reſidue go: as William Tyndall hath well declared vnto you in the parable of wicked Mammon. This parable is very hard to be expounded. The cauſe is this, no man can wel eſpye by the text for what purpoſe it was ſpoken. But this ſhould ſéeme to be the cauſe, that there were many of the Phariſeis & other multitude which would not beleue the preaching of Chriſt although he confirmed his wordes with the authoritie of Moſes and the Prophetes, but they were curious and ſome deale phantaſticall and therfore would they not beleue his wordes except ſome apparitions had bene made vnto thē that they might haue bene aſſured by them that were before dead, that hys wordes were true.

Rocheſter. Luc. 16.

Parables in ỹ ſcripture proue nothing, but only open and expound darke and hard thinges.

Vnto ſuch it is lyke that hee ſpeaketh this parable, playnly concludyng that they ſhould haue no ſuch apparitions of the dead, and alſo that it was not neceſſary: but that they had Moſes & the Prophetes, to whom if they would geue no credence, then ſhould they not beleue although one of the dead ſhould ryſe againe & tell it them. Notwithſtandyng let me graunt it hym, that ſome are all ready in hell and ſome in heauen (which thyng he ſhall neuer bee able to proue by the Scripture, yea and which playnly deſtroyeth the reſurrection and taketh awaye the argumentes wherewith Chriſt and Paule doe proue that we ſhall ryſe) yet I ſay let me graunt it hym to ſée how he will cōclude. What foloweth on that?

By Moſes and the prophetes is meant the old Teſtament

Rocheſter. Neither it is credible (ſayth he) that all whiche are caſt into hell ſhould ſtreight way goe to heauen, therfore muſt we put a Purgatorye where they may be purged.

Frith. I aunſwere: All that liue are faythfull or vnfaythfull. If he be vnfaythfull then is he damned. John. 3. If he beleue then is he not condemned, but is gone from death to lyfe. John. 3. 5. The righteous man when hee dyeth ſhall reſt in peace. Sapi. 3. And euery faithful mā is righteous before God, as ỹ whole Epiſtle, to the Romaines proueth: Ergo, then euery faythfull man ſhall reſt in peace and be tormented in the paynes of Purgatory. And as touchyng this poynte where they reſt, I dare be bold to ſay that they are in the hand of God and that God would that we ſhould be ignorant where they be, and not to take vpon vs to determine the matter.

Abrahams boſome, what it ſignifieth.

Peraduenture you would enquire of me (ſith the parable ſayth that Lazarus reſted in Abrahams boſome) what Abrahams boſome is? To that would I aūſwere that Abrahams boſome were nothyng els then Abrahams fayth. For all we are called the children of Abraham becauſe of hys perfite fayth whiche we ought to folow. In this fayth are many and in a maner infinite degrées: notwithſtandyng if it be no greater thē a muſtard ſéde that is to ſay very ſmall, yet ſhal it ſaue vs. He that departeth in this fayth reſteth in peace, and wayteth for the laſt day when God ſhall geue vnto hys faythfull, that is, to his elect (for onely are the elect faythfull & the faythfull elect) the crowne of his glorie which he hath prepared for them that loue hym. This crowne doth Paule ſay that he ſhall receaue it in that day. 2. Timo. 4. that is in the day of iudgement. And in the meane ſeaſon God hath ſo prouided for vs, that they ſhall wayte vntill the number of their brethren which dayly ſuffer and ſhal ſuffer for Chriſt, be wholy fulfilled, and ſo ſhall they not be made perfite without vs. Hebr. xj. If my Lord will vnderſtād by Abrahams boſome heauen, I will not be contentious, let the Chriſten iudge which ſentence ſeemeth moſt true. But this is once a cleare caſe that of this he cā proue no Purgatory. For the vnfaythfull are all ready dāned, and the faythfull reſt in peace, let him call that what he wil, whether to reſt in heauen or to reſt in their fayth vntill the laſt day. For I am ſure there is no man ſo madde as to ſay, that to reſt in peace ſhould ſignifie to lye in the paynes of Purgatory.

The elect are faithful & the faythful are elect

Abrahams boſome can proue no purgatory.

To reſt in peace is not to lye in tormentes.

Furthermore, this text ſhal rather make ſore agaynſt hym thē any thyng with hym. For Lazarus whiles hée was lyuyng was not without ſinne, nor no man els. 1. John. 1. ſo that no man as long as he hath breath in hys body can ſay that he is without ſinne, for then ſhould hee make S. John a lyar. And yet was not Lazarus caried into purgatory to be purged of his ſinnes which were remainyng in his body the houre of his death: wherefore I may conclude that there is no ſuch Purgatory. For God is as iuſt vnto hym as vnto vs, and therefore would he purge hym as well as vs, & agayne he is as mercyfull vnto vs as vnto him, and will as wel forgeue vs as hym, without broyling on ỹ coales in purgatory: for his iuſtice and mercye are euer one and not alterable. But our perfite purgatiō is the pure bloud of Chriſt which waſheth away the ſinne of the world. And albeit we euer haue the remnauntes and dregges of ſinne, and rebellion of our mēbers as long as we haue lyfe, yet are they wholy finiſhed in death: for of ſuch efficacitie is Chriſtes death, that it hath turned the death of hys faythfull (which was layed vpon vs as the payne of ſinne) into a medicine agaynſt ſinne which fully cureth it and maketh an end of it, as it was well figured in Golias that was ſlaine with hys owne ſword.

1. Iohn. 1

A good concluſion agaynſt purgatory.

Chriſtes death hath ouercome our death, & turned it into life.

AND where as my Lord bryngeth for his purpoſe. Math. xij. that mē ſhal geue accounptes of euery idle worde. I haue ſoluted that before agaynſt M. More, that I thinke he ſhal ſay hym ſelfe that he is aunſwered. For if men ſhall geue a rekonyng for them on the day of dome (as the text ſayth) that ſhould rather argue that there were no Purgatory wherein thoſe ſinnes ſhould be purged, for if they had bene purged before of them, then ſhoulde they not geue an accounpte for them. And if it proued any thyng at all, it ſhould proue that there were a Purgatory after domeſday which no man was euer ſo foliſh as to graunt.

Rocheſter, Math. 12.

Frith.

If there be any purgatory it muſt be after domeſday, for before there can be none.

But the true vnderſtādyng of this text is this. There are two kyndes of men one faythfull, the other vnfaythfull. The faythful through their fayth in Chriſtes bloud are all ready fully purged in their hart, and their rebellious mēbers through death are wholly ſubdued. Theſe men ſhall geue no reckoning, neyther of idle wo3de, no3 euill dēd: fo3 all theyr ſinnes are couered of Chriſt, and hys bloud ſhall geue the whole accomptes fo3 them. The vnfaythfull to theyr vtter confuſion ſhall haue the boke of theyr conſcience opened, and there ſhall be pre-ſented befo3e them all theyr euill deades, woo3des, and thoughtes. And theſe are they that Chriſt ſpeaketh of which ſhall geue thys great accompt. Note alſo that in the text they are called men, which wo3d in Scripture is euer fo3 the moſt part taken in the wo3ſte ſenſe, and ſignifieth wicked men, fleſhly men, and men that folow their own luſtes and appetites.

Then confirmeth he purgato3y out of the 66. Pſalme, which ſayth: we haue gone through fire and water and thou haſt brought vs into coleneſſe. I am ſure you haue not fo3gotten that M. More alledgeth the Prophet Zachary in the .x. and affirmeth that there is no water in Purgato3y. It were hard to make theſe two agree, fo3 when mē ground them on a lye, then fo3 the moſt part theyr tales and probations are cōtrary and will not well ſtand together. Neuertheleſſe in one poynte they agree full well, that is, both of them ſay vntruly: fo3 neither nother text ſerueth any whit fo3 Purgato3y. And as concernyng the place of Zachary: it is ſufficiētly declared what it meaneth. And now wil I alſo declare you the vnderſtandyng of this text, and firſt that it can not ſerue fo3 purgato3y. I beſech you that haue the pſalter once to read the Pſalme & I thinke you ſhal wonder at their dotyng dreames and ignorannce which alledge this text fo3 Purgato3y. The text of ỹ Pſalme is this: Thou haſt bro3ght vs into a ſtraite & laden our backes with trouble o3 heynneſſe. Thou haſt ſet men vpon our heades, we haue gone thro3ugh fire & water and thou haſt led vs out agayn into a place of refreſhyng. tert immediatly befo3e ſayth, thou haſt ſet men vpon our heades. But the chiefeſt defenders of Purgato3y (and euē M. More hym ſelfe) ſay that they are not men, but deuils which torment the ſoules in Purgatory, notwithſtandyng my Lo3d of Rocheſter (gwd man) affirmeth that they are aungels whiche torment the ſoules there: but neuer man doted ſo farre as to ſay that men to3ment the ſoules in Purgato3y, wherefo3e I may conclude that this tert is not ment of purgato3y, but that the Prophet mēt that men ranne ouer the childrē of Iſraell & ſubdued them, and wrapped thē in extreme troubles which in the Scripture are ſignified by fire and water. Beſides that the tertes folowyng will not admit that this ſhould be vnderſtād of Purgato3y fo3 it folowth immediatly, I will enter into thy houſe with burt offrynges, I ſhall offer vnto thee fat ſacrifices with the reke of wethers I ſhall burne to the Oxen & Goates. Now is there no mā ſo mad as to thinke that the ſoules of Purgato3y ſhould offer vnto God any ſuch ſacrifices. So that the tert is playnly vnderſtand of the children of Iſraell, which thro3ugh the Lo3d were deliuered from their afflictiōs and enemies & then offred theyr loyall ſacrifices of prayſe and thankes to the Lo3d theyr ſhield and protection.

Then wareth his Lo3dſhyp ſomewhat hote agaynſt Martine Luther, becauſe he would that no man ſhould be compelled to beleue Purgato3y.

foꝛy. Foꝛ my Lord ſayth that it is profitable and wel done to compel men to beleue ſuch thynges whether they will or will not. And to ſtabliſhe his opinion he̓ plucketh out a Luke. 14. woꝛd of the parable of Luke.xiiij. that a certayne man made a great ſupper, and ſayd vnto his ſeruaũtes, go foꝛth quickly into the wayes and compell them to enter in.

Frith. Uerely there Chriſt ment no other thyng, but that his Apoſtles ſhould go foꝛth into all the woꝛld and pꝛeach his woꝛd vnto all nations, openyng vnto them the miſerable ſtate and conditiõ that they be in, and agayne what mercy God hath ſhewed thẽ in his ſonne Chriſt. This would Chriſt that his Apoſtles ſhould expound and lay out ſo euidently, by reaſons, Scriptures, and miracles vnto the Gentils, that they ſhould ẽ by their manifeſt perſuaſions be compelled to graunt vnto them that he was Chriſt, and to take vpon them the fayth that is in Chriſt. On this maner did Chriſt compel the Saduces to graunt the reſurrection. Math. xxij. And by theſe meanes compelled hee the Phariſeis to graunt in theyꝛ conſciences that he dyd his miracles with the power of God, & yet afterward of very hate knowyng in theyꝛ hartes the contrary, they ſayd ẏ he dyd them by the power of the deuill. Math. xij. But to ſay that Chriſt would haue his Diſciples to compell men with pꝛiſonment, fetters, ſcourgyng, ſwoꝛd and fire is very falſe and farre from the mildeneſſe of a Chriſtẽ ſpirite, although my Lord appꝛoue it neuer ſo much. Foꝛ Chriſt dyd foꝛbyd his Diſciples ſuch tyꝛãny, yea and rebuked them becauſe they would haue deſired that fire ſhould deſcende from heauen to conſume the Samaritanes which wold not receiue Chriſt. Luke Luke. 9. ix. But he commaunded them that if mẽ would not receiue their doctrine, they ſhould departe from thence and ſpꝛyncle of the duſt of their fẽte to be a teſtimony agaynſt the vnfaythfull that they had bene there & pꝛeached vnto them the woꝛd of life: But with violence will God haue no man compelled vnto his law. Paule alſo teſtifieth. 2. Coꝛ. 1. that he had not rule ouer the Coꝛinthiãs as touchyng theyꝛ fayth. By our fayth we ſtand in the Lord, & by our infidelitie we fall from hym. As no man can ſearch the hart but onely God, ſo can no man iudge oꝛ ordeꝛ our fayth but onely God thoꝛough his holy ſpirite.

Paul ſayth he had no power ouer their fayth.

Furthermoꝛe fayth is a gifte of God, which he diſtributeth at hys owne pleaſure. 1. Coꝛ. 12. If he geue
1. Cor. 12. it not this day, he may geue it to moꝛow. And if thou perceaue by any exterioꝛ woꝛke that thy neighbour haue it not, inſtruct him with Gods woꝛd, and pꝛay God to geue hym grace to beleue: that is rather a poynte of a chriſten man, then to compell a man by death oꝛ exterioꝛ violence.

Finally, what doth thy compulſion and violence? Uerely nothing but make a ſtarke hypocrite: foꝛ no man can compel the hart to beleue a thing except it ſée euidence and ſufficiente pꝛofe. I haue herd tell of a boy which was pꝛeſent at hys fathers burning foꝛ hys beléefe, and aſſone as the officers had eſpyed the boy, they ſayd eche to other, Let vs take hym and examine him alſo, peraduenture we ſhal finde him as great an heretike as hys father. When the boy ſaw that hys father was dead, and that the catchpoles began to ſnatch at him, he was ſoꝛe diſmayed, and thought that he ſhould dye to. And when one of them appoſed him, aſking him how he beleeued, he aunſwered, Maſter I beleue euen as it pleaſeth you. Euen ſo by toꝛmentes and crafty handling a man may be compelled to ſay that he beleueth the thing which he neyther thinketh, noꝛ yet can beleue: foꝛ a mãs fayth is not in his own power.

Fayth is not pꝛocured by violence, but is the mere & onely of gift of God

Feare maketh fayth no fayth at all.

But how doth God accepte thys thing, to ſay that I beleue that which indéede I beleue not? Uerely he vterly condemneth it, whether the opinion be true oꝛ falſe. Foꝛ if the opinion be true (as by example, that the fayth in Chriſtes bloud iuſtifieth me befoꝛe God) and I confeſſe it befoꝛe all the byſhops in England with my mouth, and beleue it not wyth mine hart, then am I nothing the better,

The parable of Luke 14. truly interpꝛeted.

How men ſhould be compelled to beleue.

Chriſt was meeke and gentle and no tyꝛannous ſchole maſter.

(for I ſhould haue no part of Chriſtes bloud) but I am much the worſe. For firſt God condemneth me, which iudgeth me after myne hart, and alſo mine owne hart condemneth me, becauſe I haue openly graunted that mine hart denyeth.

Fayth is firſt the gift of God and procedeth frem the hart, which may not be compelled.

And contrariwyſe, if I ſhould beleue thys fully in mine hart, and yet for feare of perſecution ſhould deny it when I were examined openly of my fayth, then ſhall I be condemned of God (except I repent,) and alſo myne owne hart ſhall be a witnes to condemne me. And ſo it is very noiſome & vngodly to be compelled vnto any thing: for God euer ſearcheth the hart which can not be compelled.

Rocheſter. But my Lord obiecteth writing vpon the xviij. article ſaying: If a man take away Purgatorye, for what entent ſhall we need any pardons? As long (ſayth he) as no man regarded purgatory, there was no man that ſought any pardon: for all the eſtimation of pardons hangeth thereof, ſo that we ſhall haue no neede of them, if there be no purgatorye.

Pardons.

Rocheſter ſayth herein very truly and yet was not ware of it.

Verely I care not though I graũt him that to. And I thinke that mony was the mother of them both. For out of the ſcripture ſhall he not be able to proue neyther nother.

But Mammon is a great god, euẽ of power enough to innent ſuch knackes, yea and ſo make them articles of the fayth, and to burne thoſe that can not beleue them. And it was a preaty practiſe to make ſuch pointes articles of the fayth. For after that our holy fathers had geuen vp preaching, and would take no more paynes, neyther ſerue theyr brethren any more, then ſette they vp ſuch articles of the fayth, as ſhoulde bring in money to vpholde theyr eſtats withall. And he that would not beleue them, rid him out of the way for feare of diſcloſing theyr iugling: for he that doubteth of pardons and purgatory, he plucketh our holye father by the bearde.

Purgatory and pardõs haue bene goodly marchaundiſe for the clergye.

Rocheſter. NOtwithſtanding my lord confirmeth both pardons and purgatory, by the text that Chriſt ſpake vnto Peter, Math. 16. To the will I geue the kayes of the kingdome of heauen: and whatſoeuer thou bindeſt vpon the earth, it ſhall be bound in heauen, and whatſoeuer thou loſeſt on the earth it ſhall be loſed in heauen. But theſe woordes (ſayth my lord) had bene ſpoken in vayne if he could not geue pardons, and loſe men out of purgatory. &c.

As touching the kayes, albeit they haue oftentimes bene declared, and in maner in euery treatiſe that hath bene put forth in the engliſh tongue, yet will I ſomewhat ſhew my minde in them. There is but one kaye of heauen, which Chriſt calleth the kaye of knowledge. Luc. 11. And this kay is the woorde of God. Chriſt rebuked the law geuers for taking away thys kay from the people: for they with theyr traditions, and falſe expoſitions had fully excluded the kaye of knowledge which is the word of God, and had cleane ſhut vp the Scripture, as ours haue done now a dayes. It is alſo called the kaye of Dauid, whych ſhutteth, and no man openeth: openeth, and no man ſhutteth. Apoc. 3. And becauſe of theſe two effectes which it worketh (for it both ſhutteth and openeth) hath it the nomination of kayes, and yet (as I ſayd) indeede it is but one, which is the woorde of God. Thys kay or kayes (now call it as you will ſith you know what it meaneth) Chriſt deliuered vnto Peter, and vnto hys other Apoſtles a like, which you ſhall eaſely perceaue if you marke where and when they were geuen. For Mat. 16. they were onely promiſed, and not yet geuen: for Chriſt ſayd, I will geue thee the kayes, and not, I geue thee. But after he was riſen from death, then performed he hys promiſe, and gaue the kayes to all indifferently, as thou mayſt ſee, Joh. 20. And Luke cap. 24 expoundeth it, that he opened theyr wittes to vnderſtand the Scripture, that repentaunce and forgeuenes might be preached. &c. Therfore it is the word that bindeth and loſeth thorough the preaching of it. For when thou thou tellest them theyr vices and iniquities condemning thē, by the law then bindest thou them by the worde of God: And when thou preachest mercy in Christ vnto all that repent, then dost thou lose them by the worde of God. Therfore he that preacheth not the worde of God, can neyther binde nor lose, no though he call him selfe pope. And contrarywise, he that preacheth his worde, he bindeth and loseth as well as Peter and Paule, although he be called but Sir John of the countrey. And consequently, to say that the pope cā deliuer any soule out of purgatory (if there were one) is but a vaine lie, except he can proue that he goeth downe vnto them, and preacheth vnto them the woorde of God (which is the salt that must season them, and kay that must let them out) for other losing there is none. And likewise, to say that the Pope can geue any pardon to redeme sinnes, except he preach me that Christes bloud hath pardoned me, is euen like vanitie.

To open, & to shut, to binde & to lose, what it is.

The pope can deliuer no soule out of purgatory, except he first go thether, & preach vnto them.

He thinketh also that he wadeth to deepe to descende to purgatorye by thys text. For the text saith, that what soeuer he bindeth on earth, shall be bound in heauen, and whatsoeuer he loseth on earth, &c. But now they graunt themselues, that purgatory is not on earth, but the thirde place in hell: And therfore it palleth his bondes to stretch his hand to purgatory: and so this text can not serue him.

Math. 16.

Purgatory is not on earth, but as Rochester sayth is the third place in hel.

NOtwithstanding my lorde is not content to geue him thys power onely, but he hath so farre waded in the popes power, that he hath graunted him full auctoritie to deliuer all men from hell, if they be not damned already. For (sayth he) whosoeuer hath committed a capitall crime, hath therby deserued damnation: and yet may the Pope deliuer hym both from the crime, and also frō the payne due vnto it. And he affirmeth that thre times in the xij. article for feare of forgetting.

Rocheſter.

Rochester is in this place far beside himselfe.

Frith. Upon this poynte will I a litle reason with my Lord, and so wil I make an end. If the Pope may deliuer any mā from the cryme that he hath committed & also from the payne due vnto it, as you affirme, then may he by the same authoritie deliuer .xx. an hundred, a thousand, yea & all the world: for I am sure you can shewe me no reason why he may deliuer some and not all. If he can do it, then let him deliuer euery man that is in the poynte of death both from the crime and frō the payne, & so shall neuer man more neither enter into hell nor yet into Purgatory: which were the best dede & most charitablest that euer hée dyd, yea & this ought he to do (if he could) although it should cost hym his owne lyfe and soule thereto (as Moses and Paule geue him exāple) but yet there is no ieoperdy of neither other. Now if he cā do it (as you say) and will not, then is he the most wretched & cruell tyraunt that euer lyued, euen the very sonne of perdition and worthy to bée damned in an hundred thousand helles. For if he haue receaued such power of God that hée may saue all men & yet wil not, but suffer so many to be damned, I report me vnto your selues what hée is worthy to haue?

A playne declaration of ỹ popes tyranny.

Exod. 32. Roma. 9.

The Pope a proude shameleſſe & tyranous Antichriſt.

Now if any man would solute this reason and say that he may do it, but that it is not méete for hym to do it, because that by theyr paynes Gods iustice may be satisfied: I say that this their euasion is nothyng worth, neyther yet cā I imagine any way wherby they may haue any apparēce to escape. For my Lord sayth hym selfe that the Pope must pacifie Gods iustice for euery soule that hée deliuereth from Purgatory, and therefore hath he imagined that the Pope hath in hys hand the merites of Christes passiō which he may apply at his pleasure where he will. And also he sayth that the merites of Christes passion are sufficient to redeme all the sinnes in the world. Now sith these merites on their part are sufficiēt to satisfie ỹ iustice of God and redeme the whole world, & also that the pope hath them in his hand to distribute at his pleasure, then lacketh there no more but euen the Popes distribution vnto the

the saluatiõ of the worlde. For he may pacifie Gods wrath and satisfie hys iustice (sayth my Lord) by applying these merites to them that lacke good workes. And so if the pope wil, Gods iustice may bée fully satisfied & the whole worlde saued. Now if hée may so iustly & easely saue the whole worlde (charitie also mouyng him vnto it) and yet will not apply these merites so frutefully, then is the faulte onely his, and he the sonne of perdition and worthy more payne then can be imagined. And so is not the reason improued but much more stablished, and as I thinke ineuitable.

The pope is the sonne of perdition worthy of more payne then can be imagined, if Rochesters doctrine be true.

Beholde I pray you whether my Lord of Rochester hath brought our holy father in auaunceyng hys power so high, euen into ỹ depest pit of hell, which (if my Lord sayd true) it is impossible for hym to auoyde. But it chaunceth vnto hym euen as it doth customably where such pryde raigneth: for whẽ they are at the highest, then fall they downe headlong vnto their vtter confusion and ruine.

If any man féele himselfe grieued, and not yet fully satisfied in this matter, let him write hys minde, and by Gods grace I shall make hym an aunswere, and that with spéde.

¶ An other booke agaynst Rastell, named the subsedye or bulwarke to his first booke, made by Iohn Frithe prysoner in the Tower.

IT neadeth not Christẽ reader (I thinke) now that thou hast ouerread and diligentlye pondered in thine inward sences that the treatise of Iohn Frith, wherein he confuteth all the reason which Rastel, More, and Rochester, made for the maintenance and vpholding of the bitter paynes of purgatory: to commende vnto thee thys briefe worke folowing, named a subsedy, defence, or bulwarke to the same. And much les nedeth it to dehorte thee from the vayne & childish feare, which our forefathers haue had of that place of purgatory, as theyr good woorkes which at this day remayne vppon the earth founded for theyr thence deliueraunce, do testifie. And forasmuch as, thou art a Christen man, and reioysest in Christ, I dare boldlye affirme for thee, that thou takest neyther pleasure nor ioy of that place, like as some persons do, which triumphed of late, and with much ioy and clapping of handes sent tidinges into all partes, that purgatorye was founde agayne: because they read in a booke named the Institution of a Christen man, this worde Purgatory. And yet haue I not heard hetherto, that the selfe same persons haue shewed any tokens of gladnes, for Gods woorde translated into english: so that to me they seeme to reioyce more, to haue the sely soules purged with punishmentes when they be departed, then to haue them purged with the woorde of God while they be here. Who wil think but as they haue vttered theyr hartes concerning Purgatory with theyr tongues, euen so say they in theyr stomakes, that their holy father the Pope (whome we may as iustly call the Bishop of Rome, seeing he is there the head of S. Peters church: as we may call the head of S. Paules church in London, Bishop of London) hath recouered agayne here in England his old authority, yea that he neuer yet lost, because they finde in theyr churches copes, ropes, bels and beades, with other lyke holinesse, and on themselues long-gownes, shauen crownes, and fingers annointed with the holy oyle of idlenes. For who will say but that these holy reliques declare the byshop of Rome as clarkly as this worde purgatory proueth a place to be where soules after the departure from theyr bodies suffer paines and punishmentes. Doth not this preaty pageant of purgatory signifie and prognosticate what Tragedye they will play here-

A subsedy, defence, or bulwarke.

Much ioy made for ỹ finding of purgatory although it were to small purpose.

Christ is deuided into Peter & Paule.

hereafter, when the worde of God shall blow and scatter from the face of the earth, the darke cloudes and mistes of mens inuentions, and shall scoure away ỹ rust of fleshly vnderstanding of the scriptures in other things likewise as it hath done in this, if ought may be found in that booke wherwith they may resist? that such thinges may be picked out of it, the fruite which commonly hath come of all counsels, conuocations, and synodes since the Apostles time (very few excepted) causeth me somewhat to feare: for if a mā wey the good with the bad that hath sprong from them, he will perchaunce thinke that the lay people of all estates may well and iustly say, farewell the one wyth the other: and no marualyll, for they haue not ben all the children of one father that haue bene in counsels, as they haue not bene all sheepe that haue gone in sheepes clothing: and oft times the greater part ouercommeth the better. which things gathered by experience and by reading, causeth me oftentimes to wishe, that they which would be counted sincere and true ministers of the Gospell, eyther might and would cleane abstayne from such counselles, that they haue no part in them, or els that they would geue no more place to the fruites of infidelitie (I meane mans inuentions and carnall interpretations which the fayth in Christ neuer begatte) then S. Paule gaue to Peter hys colleague, when he left the table of the Gentiles and went to the Iewes, which facte of Peter in my iudgement Paule might more conueniently haue approued, seeing Peter did it to the entent he would not offēd his weake brethren the Iewes wyth hys eating: then the true and sincere ministers of Christ in the Gospell may winke at many thinges vsed in these dayes among the disciples of the Gospell: much lesse may they approue thē with the fashion of theyr own liuing, and confirme them with the auctoritye of a Counsell, and with preching they say it is not time to speake against thē: yet is it time to leaue them, and no longer to seeme to allow them, vnlesse they entend alwayes to walk in them. Had the author of this booke looked after a time, as some do, he had not written against Purgatorye when he did. I feare me some maintaine blindnes more with theyr simulation, then they open the lyght with theyr preaching. But this haue I spoken (good Reader) besides my purpose, which was none other then to admonish the that although Rochester, Moze, and Rastell, haue all three (as thou perceiuest by reading thys former treatise) stiffely defended one heresie, yet shouldest thou not haue of all three, one iudgement or opinion.

Rochester, Moze, and Rastel, are all three defenders of one heresy.

Moze and Rochester were men of high dignitie in thys worlde, the one a Byshop, the other Chauncelor of this noble realme of England, both auncient in yeares, of so great wit, and so singular erudition in all kinde of learning, esteemed as well of themselues, as of many other, that no two lyke might in all this land be found: it was thought that for theyr dignity no man durst, for theyr yeares witte and learning no man was able to gaynsaye them: wherfore they were perswaded to be the most meete of all other to take in hand the defence of the terrible paynes of purgatory, eyther the very foūdatiō, or els the chief building set vpō ỹ foūdatiō of ỹ church of Rome. Rastell had nothing cōmon wt them. But onely many yeares, and a witte sophisticall, which he called naturall reason. As appertayning to Gods worde, he acknowledged himselfe ignoraunt therof: notwithstanding he had such opinion of his witte, that he thought he could as well proue purgatory by it, as the other two had done by the scriptures, wherin I thinke he was not deceiued. And as these three persons were not like, so tooke they the aunswer made to them not a like: Moze and Rochester thought foule scorne (see what the glory of this world, and high estimation of our selues doth) that a yong man of small reputation shoulde take vppon him so cleane contrary to theyr opinion to write against them, and (to be short) tooke the matter so grenously, that they could neuer be at quiet in theyr stomackes vntill they had dronken his bloud. Rastell though he perceaued his naturall reason to be sore sayd to, yet was he not malicious, as the other were: and therfore wrote he agayne. which worke of Rastell came to his handes, when he was prisoner in the Tower of London, where he made the aunswere following to the same: which aunswer after Rastel had read, he was well content to count his naturall reason foolishnes, and wyth harty thankes geuen to God, became a childe againe, and sucked of the wisedome which commeth from aboue and Moze and Rochester were mē of great auctoritie and learning.

Rastel was but an inferior to Rochester and Moze.

Moze and Rochester thoughte foule scorne of Iohn Frithes answere.

Rastel was not malicious, but gladly recognised his ignorance.

BRother Raſtell I thãke you that it hath pleaſed you to be ſo fauourable vnto me a poore priſoner, as to ſhew me a copie of your booke whiche you haue written to confute my reaſons and Scripture that I haue alledged agaynſt Purgatory, for that hath cauſed me to make a ſubſidie defẽce and bulwarke to my booke, whiche by Gods grace ſhalbe an occaſion to open more light, although not to you, yet at the leſtwiſe vnto them whoſe hartes the prince of this world hath not blinded but that the light of the Goſpell and glorie of Chriſt may ſhyne in them. And where as you write and proteſt that you will bryng no Scripture agaynſt me. But onely rehearſe my Scripture agayne which I haue alledged vnperfeitly and woũde me with myne owne dartes, and will but euen do as one that playeth at tennes with an other toſſing the balle agayne, I doe verye well admitte your ſimilitude.

2. Cor. 4.

Notwithſtanding you know right well that it is not inough for a man playing at tennes to toſſe the balle agayne, but he muſt ſo toſſe it that the other take it not. For if the other ſmite it ouer agayne then is the game in as great ieoberdy as it was before, beſides that hee muſt take heede that he neither ſmite to ſhort of the line not yet vnder, for then it is a loſſe and he had bene better to let it goe. And finally ſometyme a man ſitteth ouer and thynketh all won, and yet an vngracious poſt ſtandeth in the way and maketh the ball to rebounde backe againe ouer the corde & ſo loſeth the game. And that wil anger a man, and I aſſartayne you that ye haue toſſed neuer a ball but ye offende in one of theſe pointes, & yet beſides that ſometyme ye playe a touche of legerdemayne, and caſt me a ball which whẽ it commeth I perceaue to be none of mine, and all the court ſhall iudge the ſame. Theſe poyntes ſhalbe declared when we come to them and now I will aunſwere in order.

John Frith ſemeth that he could play well at tennice.

Raſtell.

IN your Prologue you aſſigned two cauſes of the making of your firſt booke of purgatory without allegyng any textes of ſcripture for ỹ proofe therof, which are the controuerſie of two ſortes of people. One ſorte you ſay be thoſe that beleue not in Chriſt, but deny Chriſt and his Scripture as dꝺ the Turkes Paynimes and ſuch other miſcreauntes. An other ſort be they that beleue in Chriſt & his ſcripture nor will deny no text of holy ſcripture, but yet they will conſtrue expounde and interprete theſe texts after theyr owne willes and obſtinate mynde. &c.

Raſtel alleageth two cauſes why he made hys fyrſt booke in the defence of purgatorie.

Now let vs conſider your forſayd cauſes & ponder whether your booke haue or may do any ſuch good as you ſay pretended, & whether it haue conuerted thoſe ſortes of people, or els be any thyng lykely to do ſuch a fact. And firſt let vs ſée what it profiteth ỹ firſt ſort which are infideles not beleuyng in Chriſt nor his ſcripture. Our ſauiour Chriſt ſayth, he that beleueth is not damned, & Iohn Baptiſt confirmeth the ſame ſaying: he that beleueth in ỹ ſonne hath euerlaſtyng lyfe, but he that beleueth not in the ſonne ſhal not ſée life, but the wrath of God abydeth vpon hym. Here it is euidẽt not by my expoſition, but by the conſent of all Chriſten men, that thoſe infideles are damned, for what entent then ſhould Raſtell teach them, that there is a Purgatory: without Chriſt ther is no way but dãnation, as ſcripture & all faythfull men teſtifie. Then would I know by what way he wold perſuade that there were a Purgatory (which ſhould be away & a meane to ſaluation and not to damnatiõ) for thẽ which beleue not in Chriſt. This I am ſure of (and I thinke Raſtell beleueth it alſo) that the infideles ſhall neuer come in it though there were one? This you may ſée that his firſt cauſe is very vayne, and that if they dyd beleue it they were in dãde deceyued.

John Frith anſwereth to Raſtels two cauſes.

Raſtelles firſt cauſe proued to be in vaine.

Now let vs procéde vnto the ſecond ſort of people (which beleue in Chriſt and his ſcripture) and yet miſconſtrue it expounding it after theyr own willes. And let vs ſée what frute they take of this booke & what it profiteth them & we ſhall finde that it leſſe ſerueth theſe men then the firſt: for if this men belene in Chriſt and in hys Scripture, then is it not poſſible that they ſhould receaue or admitte that thyng which is agaynſt the Scripture both by the expoſition of them ſelues & of all the worlde. For this is both agaynſt Scripture and all faithfull mē that there ſhould be any way to health if we exclude Chriſt and hys Scripture. And ſith Purgatory is counted away to health, he that would go about to proue it (ſecludyng Chriſt and Scripture) is agaynſt Scripture and all faythfull men.

Beſides that if they be ſo obſtinate that they will not receaue the verye Scripture but expounde it after their owne willes & wreſt it after the ſame, then wil they much leſſe receaue your booke which is ſo playne agaynſt ſcripture, & therfore if you would thinke that they could bee tamed by your booke which notwithſtandyng ſo wreſteth Scripture, then may I very wel lyken you to hym that hath a wilde horſe to tame which when he perceiueth that hee can not hold hym with a ſtokkiſhe ſnaffle will yet labour to breake him with a rotē twine threde: So that I can eſpye no maner of profite that cā come of your booke if you can alledge no better cauſes then you yet ſhew, but that it had bene a great deale better vnwritten.

An apt and good exāmple.

And brother Raſtel where you ſay that I auaūce & boaſt my ſelfe much more then becommeth me, and that I detract and ſlaūder my neighbours, & that I prouoke all men that read my booke rather to vyce then to vertue with ſuch other thynges as ye lay to my charge, I truſt I ſhall declare my inconuenience and geue you a ſufficient aunſwere.

Frith auūſwereth gently Raſtels bitter tauntes.

¶ An aunſwere to Raſtels firſt chapter which reproueth me for boaſtyng my ſelfe.

Raſtell. IN the firſt chapter of this booke Raſtell laboureth to proue that I am ſore ouer ſcene in laudyng & boaſtyng my ſelfe & that I lyke my ſelfe ſo well that he is ſure that other men do lyke me the leſſe, and that he feareth that God will therfore lyke me & fauour me rather the worſe then the better.

Frith. Here he iuggeleth wyth me, and would make me belene that he toſſed me mine own ball agayne, but when I beholde it, I perceaue it to be none of mine: for he hath cut out all that ſhoulde make for me, ſo that he hath geuen it cleane an other ſhape then euer I entended that it ſhould haue, as it appeareth by hys writing which rehearſeth my wordes in this maner.

Frith meteth here wyth a falſe ball.

Raſtell. I am ſure, there are many that marueil that I being ſo yong dare attempt to diſpute thys matter agaynſt theſe three perſons. But my wordes are theſe:

Frith. I am ſure that there are many that will much marueil, that I being ſo yong and of ſo ſmal learning dare diſpute this matter. &c.

Here Raſtell leaueth out the wordes, (and of ſo ſmall learning) for if he had put that in, he had bewrayed himſelfe. For I thincke no man ſo mad as to ſay, that he which ſayeth himſelfe to be both yong and of ſmall learning, ſhoulde prayſe and boaſte hym ſelfe.

Note here the modeſty of Iohn Frith.

Alſo immediatly after the wordes of hys firſt allegation I ſay on thys maner: And as touching my lerning I muſt needes acknowledge (as the truth is) that it is very ſmall, which I thinke is but a baſe boaſting: and anone after I ſay, I would not that any man ſhould admit my wordes or learning except they will ſtand wyth the ſcripture, and be approued therby. Lay them to the touchſtone, and trye them with Gods word, if they be found falſe and contrary, then damne them, and I alſo ſhall reuoke them with all mine hart. &c.

Finally, I exhorted them to read my booke, not aduertiſing who ſpeaketh the wordes, but rather what is ſpoken: by which wordes you might well ſee, that I entended not to boaſt my ſelfe, and all this haue I written, and he left it out euē in the firſt page (as he calleth it) wherin he reporteth that I boaſt my ſelfe.

Raſtell. Notwithſtanding one thing doth ſore vexe him, that I ſhould recite the Epiſtle of S. Paule, wherby he ſaith

I would haue men beleue that I had the ſpirite of God, and thinke that though I be young that I ſée viſions and eſpye the truth, and that myne elders haue dreamed dreames and wandered in phantaſies.

Frith. Thys he recounteth to be a great boaſt, and that thys one place ſhoulde winne him the fielde: whereunto I aunſwer that indéde my wordes do not proue that thing which you ſéeme ſo ſurely to gather of them: but my wordes do argue on this maner, that no man ought to condemne a thing before he read it, and then to geue ſentence, and becauſe you ſéeme ignoraunt in the matter, I ſhall declare it vnto you, and how it ſtandeth, It is a coulour of Rhetorike, and is called Auantopodoſis, that is to ſaye, An aunſwere to an obiection that a man might haue here made, on thys maner: thou graunteſt thy ſelf yong and of ſo ſmall learnyng, dooſt thou then thinke that we ſhall once read or regard thy booke, ſpecially ſith it is written againſt auncient mē both of great wit & dignity? To theſe two pointes I aunſwer preuenting theyr obiection, that they ſhould not deſpiſe it becauſe of my youth: for as the ſpirite of God is bound to no place, euen ſo is he not addict to any age or perſon, but enſpyreth where he will, & when he will, and bring in for an example that he enſpyred yong Timothy proning thereby, that the youth of it ſelfe is not to be deſpiſed, but according to the learning which it bringeth, and that therfore they may not deſpiſe my youth, but firſt read what doctrine I bring, and therafter to iudge it. No more in this I proue not, that I am enſpyred, and haue the ſpirite of God as Timothie had, but onely proue that God may enſpyre youth, as he did Tymothe, and that therefore ye ought firſt to read before you condemne: for you know not who is enſpyred, and who not, vntill you haue read theyr workes, or ſéene theyr factes. Thus you may ſée that my wordes define not, that all youth is enſpired, although ſome may be: but I exhort that no man deſpiſe prophecies, but proue all, and approue that is good. And to make the matter more playne I ſhall bring you an example out of Paule to the Hebrues, which exhorteth them to hoſpitalitie, for by that ſome men vnwares haue receaued Angels to harbour, be not therefore vnmindfull of it. Here Paule exhorteth you to hoſpitalitie, and ſhewing you that by thoſe meanes ſome men haue receaued angels into their houſe, he would not haue you thinke ỹ all the geſtes that you ſhall receaue ſhall be angels, but ſome ſhall be leud loſels. And likewiſe I in exhorting you to read my booke, and not deſpiſing my youth, becauſe that ſometime God enſpireth the yong, would not haue you thinke that the bookes made of yong men (which ye ſhall receaue) ſhall be holeſome doctrine, but ſome men be lewd and vnfruitfull, neuertheleſſe euen as if they receaued not thoſe geſts they ſhould alſo put away angels if any came. So if you deſpiſe to read ſuch bookes as be written by young men, you may alſo fortune to deſpiſe them which are written by the inſpiration of Chriſtes ſpirit, and therefore ye ought to read.

No man ought to cōdemne that which he hath not ſene.

God inſpireth youth aſwell as age.

1. Theſſ. 1.

Hebr. 13.

But be it in caſe I had indéde praiſed my ſelfe (as I haue not) and that I had ſayd that I had the Spirite of God, what inconuenience ſhould follow thereof? would you therof argue that my doctrine were falſe? & that were a good argument, then were Chriſtes Doctrine falſe, then were Paule a falſe prophet, and our fayth nothing: for Chriſt ſaid to the Iewes that he was the light of the worlde. And againe he ſayd, It is my Father that glorifie me, whome ye call your God. Now if it had bene a ſufficient argument to condemne hys doctrine becauſe the world calleth it boaſting, thē ſhould we haue beleued no truth at all. Beſides that Paul ſéemeth not a little to boaſt him ſelfe, if men loke on it with a carnall eye, for he ſayth, that he thinketh not him ſelfe inferiour vnto ỹ hyeſt Apoſtles: and ſayth againe, that if they glory to be the miniſters of Chriſt (though he ſpeake vnwiſely) he is more copious in laboures,

2. Cor. 11.

A mā may vſe godly & modeſt boaſting.

bours, in ſtripes aboue meaſure, in priſon more often, often at the poynt of death. &c.

Should we for theſe words thinke that his doctrine were not right? Nay verely that doth not improue the doctrine, but that it may be good & holeſome for a man may boaſt him ſelfe & do well ſo he referre ỹ prayſe to God from whom all goodnes commeth: but be it in caſe that I ſhould ſay that God of hys mere mercy and for the loue that he oweth me in Chriſt and hys bloud had geuen me hys ſpirite that I might be to his laude & prayſe to whom be thankes for euer. Amen. This is a thankfull, & godly boaſting.

Would you thinke that this were ſo greate a boaſtyng that the doctrine ſhould be impayred therby? Ah blinde guides I pray God geue you the light of vnderſtandyng, I beſeche you brother Raſtell be not diſcõtent with me if I aſke you one queſtion, be ye a Chriſten man or no? I am ſure you will aunſwere yes, then if I brought you the text of Paule which ſayth, he that hath not ỹ ſpirite of God is none of his, I pray you how will you auoyde it, notwithſtãdyng if you wold auoyde ỹ text, yet will I lay an other blocke in the way that ye ſhal not be able to remoue, and that is the ſaying of Paule. 2. Cozin. 13. Know ye not your ſelues that Chriſt is in you? except ye be reprobate perſons, now how ſoeuer you would iudge of your ſelues, I thinke verely that I am no ſuch & therfore whereas before I dyd not ſo write. Now I certifie you that I am Chriſtes, cõclude what ye wil, & the day ſhall come that you ſhall ſurely know that ſo it is, albeit in meane ſeaſon I be reputed a laughyng ſtoke in this world for I know in whom I truſt and he can not deceaue me. Roma. 8. 2. Cor. 13. Frith the faithful ſeruaunt and true martyr of Chriſt.

Raſtell. Then bryngeth he againſt me that I ſay we haue bene long ſecluded frõ the Scripture and alſo that our fore fathers haue not had ỹ light of Gods word opened vnto them.

Frith. I maruell what Raſtell meaneth by bryngyng this for his purpoſe, for I thinke it no boaſtyng of my ſelfe, but if ye thinke that it be vntrue, I thinke he is very blynde. For what Raſtell ſheweth himſelf to be very ignorant.

Scripture hath the poore commons bene admitted vnto euen til this day? It hath bene hid and locked vp in a ſtraunge tounge and from them that haue attayned the knowlege of that toung hath it bene locked with a thouſand falſe gloſes of Antichriſtes makyng and innumerable lawes. And where I ſay our forefathers haue not had the light of Gods worde opened vnto them, I meane that they haue not the Scripture in their owne mother toung, that they might haue conferred theſe iugglyng miſtes with the light of Gods word as the proceſſe of my wordes can teſtifie which he hath holy left out, but I beſech the Chriſtẽ reader once to read the place for my diſcharge and his confuſion, ye ſhall finde it in the ſecõd leafe of my booke. Frith ſheweth his meaning how ỹ ſcripture was kept from our forefathers

And now he alledgeth againſt me that I ſhould ſay this: iudge Chriſten reader what reaſons Raſtell hath brought and how he hath ſoluted thẽ, for in my minde both his reaſons and ſolutions are ſo childiſh and vnſauery, ſo vnlearned and baren ſo full of faultes and phantaſies that I rather pitie the mans deepe ignorance and blyndnes which hath ſo deceiued him ſelfe through Philoſophie and naturall reaſon, then I feare that he by his vayne probations ſhould allure any man to conſent vnto hym. Raſtell.

I thinke Raſtell layeth not this againſt me, becauſe I boaſt my ſelfe in theſe wordes: And verely as touchyng the truth of thoſe woordes I will adde thus much more vnto thẽ, that I neuer wyſt man ỹ was coũted wiſe whiche hath brought ſo ſlender reaſons except he entended to deſtroy a thing which ye ſeeme to haue build. Frith.

And finally where as I exhorte all men to iudge and conferre the Scriptures which Syr Thomas More and my Lorde of Rocheſter alleadge for theyr opinions and would haue them to ponder their reaſons and my ſolutions vnto them annerying theſe wordes I am ſure ỹ my ſmal learning hath condẽned their hygh eloquence, that my folye hath brought to nought their wiſedome & that my youth hath diſcloſed their fettered ignorance. Raſtell. Raſtell cauilleth.

Frith. There Raſtell thinketh that I ſtãd well in my owne conceite and boaſt my ſelfe aboue the Mone becauſe I touch M. More his kynſman: but let Raſtell take this for an aunſwere, if M. More would kẽpe him within his owne bondes that is with medling of worldly matters onely, I would neuer compare with him, yet he muſt remember that a dawber may correct hym in his owne craft, but it is euen as Socrates ſayeth, when a man is wiſe in one thyng then will hée take vpon him to define all thynges and be ignoraunt in nothyng and ſo diſdayneth the gift that he hath and proueth hym ſelfe vnwiſe.

More would not be ignorant in any thyng & therfore vnderſtood nothing as he ſhould haue vnderſtand, neyther his duty to the prince, nor yet to God.

Furthermore I ſée no great praiſe that I here attribute vnto my ſelfe: but confeſſe my ſmall learning, my folly, and my youth: neuertheleſſe if he recount it a prayſe, becauſe I ſay it hath cõdemned their hie eloquence and their wiſedome, and diſcloſed their ignoraunce, then let hym alſo annexe the wordes that I wrote ſaying. And it is euen the olde practiſe of God, to chooſe the foliſh things of the worlde to confound the wiſe, to chooſe the weak to confound the mighty, and to chooſe the vile things which are of no reputation to confound thē of hye degrée, that no fleſh might boaſt it ſelfe in his ſight, to whom onely be prayſe and thankes for euer. Amen.

A good concluſiõ made by Iohn Fruth againſt Raſtels firſt chapter.

Where all men may ſée that I referre all prayſe to him which onely is worthy: and ſo I may conclude, that you haue not loked indifferently on my booke.

An aunſwer vnto Raſtels ſecond chapter, which improueth me for rayling & diſpraiſing others.

Raſtell. IN the ſecond chapter he raungeth the field, and ſearcheth out with all diligence, what worde I haue ſpoken that might be take in the worſt ſence, and calleth them rayling, geſting, and ſcolding woordes: And becauſe he would haue me to be abhorred of the Reader, he alleageth not onely theſe wordes that are ſpoken againſt himſelfe, but alſo that are ſpoken againſt my lorde of Rocheſter, and ſyr Thomas More, not that he entendeth to aunſwer for them, or to defend their parties ye may be ſure, but onely to leaue nothing behinde which ſhould ſéeme to make for him, like a noble orator, the wordes that he reproueth are theſe:

Raſtell. There Raſtell taketh hys foundation vpon a ſtarke lye, and there he maketh two lyes: and there he maketh three lyes.

Frith. Here I would deſire my brother Raſtell to pardon me of a little ignoraunce, for ſurely I thought it had bene no more offence to call a lye, a lye, then to call a ſheape a ſheape: notwithſtanding ſith he recounteth it to be rayling, geſting, and ſcolding, I will hereafter temper my ſelfe, and chaunge my words, and will ſay that when he lyeth (that by hys leaue) he maketh a fitten.

Raſtell. It angreth him when I ſay, that Raſtel hath loſt his wit in purgatory, and therefore I will ſay ſo no more.

Frith. But thys I will affirme (be Raſtell neuer ſo furious) that whoſoeuer maketh ſuch reaſons and ſolutions, and counteth them good in earneſt, that he hath no wit in hys head, wherſoeuer he loſt it: but if you would read Raſtels firſt argument which I haue ſet in my booke in the twelf leafe, then you ſhall perceyue whether I ſay the truth, or not.

Raſtell. Alſo he aleageth that I ſhould ſay, that ſaying of Raſtell is againſt ſcripture: but if ye count that railing, and and would not haue me ſay ſo much vnto him, I will count the man ſomwhat ſtately: and this I enſure him, that if God ſuffer me to liue, I wyll ſay ſo agayne, take it as he will.

Frith.

Raſtell. Alſo he reciteth as a great reproch that I ſhould ſay, I marueyll how our ſcholemen may abide this felow. And ſurely the ſame I ſay agayne, for he proueth both ſainte Thomas and them alſo foles & double foles, which if I ſhoulde ſo do, would be counted haynous hereſie.

Frith.

Raſtell. Then he rehearſeth what I ſay of M. More, and my L. of Rocheſter, and all ſo helpe his matter, that when I ſay, the ſmall probations and ſlender reaſons that thoſe two witted men, Syr Thomas More, and my Lorde of Rochester had brought to confirme Purgatorye, made my hart to yerne.

and

Frith. What rayling or ieſting this is, let other men iudge, but thys I dare auow that I ſayd the truth: for what ſhould a man do or ſay, to ſée them ſo contrary in theyr tales. M. More ſayeth, that there is fire and no water in purgatory: and my lord of Rochester ſayth, that there is both fire and water. M. More ſayth, that the miniſters of puniſhment are deuils: and my lorde of Rochester ſayth, that the miniſters of puniſhment are angels. M. More ſayth, that both the grace & charity of them that lye in the paynes of purgatory are increaſed: my lorde of Rochester ſayth, the ſoules of purgatory obtayne there neyther more ſayth, nor grace, nor charitie thē they brought in with them. Now iudge good Reader, whether I haue rayled, or ſayde the trueth, but all this doth Raſtell leaue out full craftely: he reciteth full diligently both the head and tayle, but the middle which expoundeth the matter wil he not let you ſée.

Rochester contrary to More, and More contrary to Rochester.

Raſtell. He alleageth alſo againſt me, that I ſay, M. More is ſore deceaued, and ſet on the ſand euen at the firſt brunt, and in the beginning of hys voyage, and that I would wiſh M. More a little more witte.

Frith. Euen that I ſay agayne, and affirme it to be true, and is ſo euidently proued in the beginning of mine aunſwer agaynſt M. More, that I néed to ſay nothing, but only referre the reader vnto the place.

Raſtell. Alſo he impugneth me for ſaying in an other place, that M. More ſheweth him in one tert twiſe ignorant, and ꝓ he is to bulle, for he vnderſtandeth not the phraſe of ſcripture.

Frith. This and ſuch other ſayinges he alleageth (which I paſſe ouer:) for I count it folly to ſpend paper and labour about the rehearſing of them, for if you read my boke, you ſhall ſée all theſe points ſo plainly proued that he mought be aſhamed to make mention of them.

Raſtell. This he counteth gelling, ſlaundering, and rayling, ſaying that no reaſonable man will thincke theſe poyntes to be thinges belonging to vertue, but rather ſpices and braunches of pride, and that I ſhew not my ſelf therin charitable but rather malicious, nor no wiſedome therein but rather folly, adding that if I had bene halfe a yeare at two ſcholes, that is to ſay, the ſchole of diſcretion, and the ſchole of charitie, I ſhould more haue proſpered in vertuous learning, then I haue done in other ſcholes this .vj. yeare: and ſayth, that I haue bene at the ſcholes of ſlaundering, rayling, and gelling.

Raſtell is a bitter taunter.

Frith. Deare brother, if it had bene ſo, that I had ſpoken certayne wordes in déede, which might haue ſéemed in your eyes to be rayling, detracting, and ſlaundring (as I haue not, ſauing a little gelling) would you diſproue my doctrine thereby? What will you then ſay to S. John baptiſt which calleth the phariſies (then heades of the church, as are now our doctoures) generation of vipers? would you therefore conclude that his doctrines were naught? I thinke you be not ſo chyldiſh. And it ſéemeth this one ſentence to be more rayling, and ſlaundering, then all that I haue written.

Math. 3.

What wil you ſay to Chriſt which called the ſcribes and phariſies hypocrites, Math. 15. 16. 22. And in the 13. he ſéemeth to raple above meaſure where he calleth thē hypocrites, and blinde guides, paynted ſepulchers, whych outwardlye appeare righteous, but within are full of hypocriſie, ſerpents, and generation of vipers. Beſides that he calleth Herode Fore. Luc. 13: and the Iewes he called a froward and aduouterous generation, Math. 12. 16: and in the 17. he ſayth, O vnfaythfull and ouerthwart nation: would you thinke it ſhould excuſe the Iewes which refuſed his doctrine to ſay that he rayled, and that no reaſonable man would thinke thoſe things to be pointes, belonging to vertue, but rather ſpices and braunches of pride and that hee ſhewed not hym ſelfe charitable, but malicious, nor no wiſedome therein but folie, would it excuſe them to ſay (as you do to me) that if he had bene one halfe yeare at ſchole of diſcretion and charitie, he ſhould more haue proſpered in vertuous learning and that he had bene at the ſcholes of ſclandering, rayling and ieſting.

Finally S. Paule in your eyes might appeare to rayle and ſlaunder and to be cleane deſtitute of Gods ſpirite, Luc. 13. which as Luke ſaith replenished with the holy Ghoſt ſayd to Elemas that reſiſteth hym. Acte. 13. O thou full of all ſubtelty & deceite thou ſonne of the deuill and enemy of all righteouſnes ceaſeth not to peruerte the rightwayes of the Lord. I can bring many mo ſuch ſayinges of Peter, Iohn, Iames, and Iudas, and yet I thincke you will not improue their doctrine thereby but becauſe I ſtudye to be ſhorte, I ſhall count it ſufficient to haue warned the reader of this. Notwithſtanding peraduenture Raſtell wil not yet be aunſwered, but will ſay that albeit I haue touched inough as concernyng thoſe thynges that appeare railyng and ſlanderyng in his eyes, yet I brought none that ieſt as I do, whereunto I may aunſwere and alledge for me Helias the Prophet which both mocked the falſe Prieſtes and ieſted with them, ſaying call loude vnto your Gods for peraduenture they are a ſleepe and cā not here, or els they be gone out of towne. I cannot inough meruell that my brother Raſtell would vſe ſuch maner of reaſoning with me as to improue my doctrine becauſe of my rayling and ieſting.

The Prophetes and Apoſtles were great reprouers of the vngodly and wicked.

For ther with he hath made a foule hole in his kinſmans beſt coate for euery mā perceiueth that M. More his bookes are ſo full of rayling, geſting and baudye tales, that if the furious Momus & Venus had take out theyr partes there ſhould be very little left for Vulcanus.

Raſtell. After this Raſtell diſſenteth to the purpoſe of his matter & would proue that my expoſitions of Scripture are not good becauſe they are an occaſion to bring ỹ people to boldnes of ſinne and to moue the people to delite in other mens faultes, and to laugh therat, and to put you an exāple: he ſayth, if I ſhould take vpon me the expoſitiō of this text. In principio erat verbum & verbum erat apud deum &c. and expound it after this maner.

In the begynnyng of this yeare
Iohn Frith is a noble Clerke
He killed a mylſtone with his ſpere
Keepe well your geeſe your dogges do barke.

As it is a fond expoſition, ſo it is falſe metre.

I trowe ſayth Raſtell all wiſe men would thinke that this were a fonde expoſition & yet this expoſition would pleaſe childrē fooles and mad men, as well as the expoſition of S. Auſten or S. Hierome or any other Doctor of ỹ Church, becauſe it would make them to laugh, ſo (ſayth Raſtell) Frith maketh ſuch expoſitiōs with ieſting and rayling to make the people laugh, not regardyng to edifie the people, nor to prouoke them to vertue meekenes or charitie nor to leaue their ſinne, but rather geueth them boldnes & to beleue that there is no Purgatory nor hell, but mocketh and ieſteth at thoſe reaſons that bee made for proofe of Purgatory.

A ſore and fond ſaying of Raſtell.

Frith. Now as touchyng the firſt part, where he ſaith that my expoſitions be an occaſion to bring the people to boldnes of ſinne, I aſke hym why his aunſwere is becauſe I geue thē boldnes that there is no Purgatory, nor yet hell, thereto Raſtell by his leaue (maketh a fitten) I dare not ſay hee maketh a lye for that hee would call rayling for I neuer denyed hell, but affirme in many places of my booke & euē in the firſt ſide of myne aunſwere againſt him I affirme hell, and perpetuall damnation, but when ỹ come to the proofe of his wordes, then you ſhall ſee how wiſely the mā cōcludeth. for he thinketh that ab inferiori ad ſuū ſuperius confuſe diſtribue, men ſhall thinke it a good conſequent as if I ſhould ſay that we lacke fire in priſō, then would he cōclude that there lacked fire in all Middleſex. Or if I would ſay their were no wit in Raſtels head

Frith is a good ſcholer & ſone hath lerned his leſſon, he will ſay no more they lye, for that is bitter.

then

then would hee conclude that there were no witte in no mãs head, but he hath ſo long ſtudyed Philoſophy, that hee hath cleane forgotten his principals of Sophiſtry, notwithſtandyng we wil forgeue him this faute for the man is ſomewhat aged and therfore I thinke it is lõg ſince he read them, and that they are now out of his memory: neuertheleſſe he will ſay that hys argument is not ſoluted for although I denye not hell, yet I denye Purgatory, and ſo I geue the people an occaſiõ to ſinne, becauſe they feare not Purgatory, whereunto I haue ſo ſufficiently aunſwered in Raſtels thy. argument that I wonder that hee is not a ſhamed to bryng the ſame agayne but he truſteth that my bookes ſhall neuer be read, and his may go ſurely abroad, and therefore he may ſay what he will onely hee careth not what he ſaith ſo he hold not his peace.

Raſtell. And where hee reporteth that I make expoſitions to make the people to delite to heare of other mẽs faultes and to laugh thereat, therto will I ſay Frith. nay, till he be at layſure to proue it, and where he ſayth, if he ſhould take vppon hym to expounde, In principio erat verbum in this maner.

Raſtell. In the begynnyng of this yeare
John Frith is a noble Clerke
He killed a mylſtone with his ſpere
Keepe well your geeſe the dogges do barke.

Saying that all wiſe men would ſay that this were a fonde expoſition.

Frith. Therto I aunſwere that, ſaying: for the ryme & meter they might well ſay that a gooſe had made it for any reaſon, that is therin, and yet as touchyng the meter, the ſecond verſe lacketh a foote, and is ſhorter then his felowes, but if you put out this worde Frith, and put in this worde Raſtell for it, then ſhall his meter alſo be perfite, and that halting verſe ſhal runne merely with his felowes vppon hys right feete on this maner.

A gooſe would haue made better ryme and meter then Raſtell did.

In the begynnyng of this yeare
John Raſtell is a noble Clerke
He killed a mylſtone with his ſpere
Keepe well your geeſe the dogges do barke.

Thus I haue amended his meter, but as for the reaſon I leaue it to him ſelfe to amende it at his layſure. In the end of his ſecond chapter he ſayth that I entende with my expoſitions to bring the people to beleue in foure other great errours, wherof the firſt is that there is no hell, ordeined for any that is of Chriſtes faith, although he do neuer ſo many ſinnes but let vs ſee how he proueth it.

Frith taketh payne to amende Raſtels meter, but not his reaſon.

An Aunſwer to Raſtels third Chapter, which would proue that I deny hell.

Raſtell. IT ſeemeth (ſayth Raſtel) by the reaſons that Frith hathe alleaged that his entẽt is to bring the people in beleefe that there is no hel, for I alleage in my aunſwer to Raſtels dialoge the ſaying of S. Paule. Ephe. 1. Chriſte chooſe vs in him before the beginning of the world, that we might be holy & without ſpot in his ſight, and againe Eph. 5. Chriſt loued his cõgregation and gaue himſelf for it, that he might ſanctifie it in the fountaine of water thorow the word to make it wythout ſpot or wrincle or any ſuch thing, but that it ſhould be holy and wythoute blame.

Ephe. i.

Frithes aunſwere to Raſtels thyrd chapter.

Frith. And vpon theſe textes I conclude, that if Chriſte haue ſo purged vs that we are wout ſpot, wrinckle or blame in his ſight, (as Paule teſtifieth) then wil he neuer caſt vs into Purgatorie. For what ſhould be purged in them, that are withoute ſpotte, wrinckle or blame. And then ſomwhat to declare the matter how we be ſinners as lõg as we liue, and yet without ſynne in the ſight of God, adde theſe wordes which I would that all men did well note, and becauſe Raſtell leaueth out the beſt of the matter, I will rehearſe my owne wordes againe.

Peraduenture euery man perceiueth not what this meaneth that we are rightwiſe in his ſight, ſeing that euery man is a ſinner. 1. Joh. 2. therfore I will briefely declare the meaning of the Apoſtel. This is ſyrſte a cleare caſe, that there liueth no man vppon the earthe without ſynne, not withſtanding all they that were choſen in Chriſt before the foundation of the world were laid, are without ſpot of ſinne in the ſight of God. Epheſ. 1. ſo that they are both ſinners, & righteouſe if we conſider the imperfection of our faith and charitie, if we conſyder the conflict of the fleſh and the ſpirite. Galath. 5. if we conſider our rebellious membres whiche are vnder ſinne. Rom. 7. then are we greuous ſinners: and contrary wiſe, if we beleeue that of that merciſull fauor God gaue his moſt deare ſonne to redeme vs from oure ſinne, if we beleeue that he imputeth not our ſinnes vnto vs, but ý his wrath is pacified in Chriſte & his bloud, if we beleeue that he hath freely giuen vs his Chriſte, and with him all things, ſo that we be deſtitute of no gift. Rom. 8. then are we righteous in his ſight, and oure conſcience at peace with God, not throwe oure ſelues, but throwe oure Lorde Jeſu Chriſt. Ro. 5. So maiſt thou perceiue that thou art a ſinner in thy ſelfe, and yet art thou rightwiſe in Chriſte, for throw him is not thy ſinne imputed nor reckened vnto thee, & ſo are they to whome God imputeth not theyr ſinnes, bleſſed rightwiſe wout ſpot, wrinkle, or blame. Rom. 4. Pſal. 31. And therfore will he neuer thruſt the into purgatorie, and for proffe of this I alledge (as Raſtel beareth me witneſſe) diuers texts of S. Paul. Eph. 2. Rom. 4. 5. 7. 8. but that notwithſtanding Raſtel ſayth that I haue not recited them ſufficiently, for I haue left out ſomwhat which I haue reherſed for the opening of the truth, and then bringeth in that S. Paule exhorteth and biddeth vs we ſhall vſe no fornication, vnclenneſſe, auarice, filthe or fowliſh ſpeaches, for ſuch ſhall haue no inheritance in the kingdom of heaue, and euen ſo ſay I to, but iudge god reader, what is this to the purpoſe: for it neither maketh for purgatorie, neither agaynſt it. This text I coulde haue alleaged if I had endeuored my ſelfe that we ſhould doe god workes (which I neuer knew chriſtian man deny) but elſe as touching my matter it is nothing to the purpoſe, and as well he mighte haue improued me bicauſe I bring in no text to proue that ý father of heauen is god, or to proue that which neuer man doubted of.

Raſtell.

Then he alleageth Paul. Ro. 6. vij. ſaying, though grace doe raigne throw Chriſt, ſhall we therfore dwel in ſinne, nay God forbid ſayth Paule, & euen ſo ſay I againe: he alleageth Rom. viij. that there is no dampnation to them which be in Chriſt Jeſu if they liue not after the fleſhe, and euen ſo ſay I, but Raſtell will ſay the contrary anone.

Raſtell.

Raſtell ſetteth a trap wherein he wolde haue taken hym ſelfe.

Beſides that he alleageth Rom. iij. we be freely iuſtified by grace, by Chriſtes redemption to ſhew hys iuſtice for the remiſſyon of ſynne done before (and yet ſaythe Raſtell) Paule ſayth that the law is not deſtroyed by fayth but made ſtable, but thys hathe Frith left out of his boke to cauſe the people to beleeue that they be cleane purged by the bloud of Chriſte only, and that there neede no purgatorie.

Frith.

By theſe words you may euidently perceyue what Raſtell meaneth by thys alleaging of Paule, for the eſtabliſhing of the lawe, verely that the worke of the lawe ſhould iuſtifie and cleane purge you from ſynne whyche is contrary to Paul and all ſcrypture, for euen in thys ſame Chapter that he alleageth, Paule ſaith: that of workes of the law no fleſh ſhalbe iuſtified in hys ſyght, and ſayth that the rightwiſeneſſe of God commeth by fayth of Jeſu Chriſt vnto all, and vppon all that beleeue. But as touching good works, I wil touch more hereafter.

The workes of the law can not iuſtifie vs.

Raſtell.

Furthermore Raſtell ſayth, that if my argumentes coulde proue that there is no purgatory, it muſt follow as wel that there is no hell for vs that be chriſten men though we continue ſtill in ſinne: for if we be bleſſed without ſpot, wrinkle, or blame, and that therefore he will not caſt vs into purgatory, then he will not caſt vs into hell whatſoeuer ſinne we do commit.

Raſtelles blind argument.

Frith.

Here Raſtell vttereth his blindenes vnto you, and ſheweth you what vnderſtanding he hath in ſcripture: firſt he armeth himſelfe with a falſe ſuppoſition, and yet therupon he concludeth his argument falſly. His ſuppoſition poſition is this, that al men which are baptized with materiall water are very Chriſten men and haue the true fayth, and be thoſe which Paule affirmeth to be without ſpot, blame, or wrinkle. But thereto I ſay nay, for euen as the outwarde circumciſion made not the Iewes the elect people and childzen of ſaluation, ſo doth not the outwarde baptiſme make vs the faythfull members of Chriſt: but as they were the childzen of God, which were inwardly circumciſed, euen ſo they that are waſhed inwardly from the concupiſcens of thys worlde, are the members of Chriſt, whom Paule affirmeth ſo to be purged through his bloud. Agayne, you may know that Raſtell knoweth none other faith but that which may ſtand with all maner of ſinne, but the faith which we ſpeak of, is the ſame which worketh through charitie, wherof Paule ſpeaketh Gal. 5. They that haue thys fayth, are borne of God and ſinne not, theſe that haue this faith do hope and loke daily for deliuerance out of this thraldome and body of ſinne: and in the meane ſeaſon they purify themſelues as he is pure. For if a man will ſay that he knoweth Chriſt or beleeueth in him, and kepeth not his commaundementes, he is a lyar, and we renounce him to be any of this number that we ſpeake of. And when Raſtell ſayth, I woulde conclude there is no hell for them that be Chriſten men, though they continue ſtill in ſinne. I aunſwer, he that committeth ſinne is of the deuill, and I ſay agayne, that the Chriſten that we ſpake of, which are the childzen of God cannot continue ſtill in ſinne, but ſeeke all meanes to fulfill Gods commaundementes. Notwithſtanding the chriſten which Raſtel ſpeaketh of which are the childzen of the deuill, may do as they liſt: and indeede they had neede to make a frende of Raſtell to helpe them into his purgatory, if it be any better then hell: for they ſhall neuer come in heauen, except they repent and walke innocently in this world, as Chriſt and his little flocke haue euer done: for they that walke otherwyſe are none of his, though they weare miters.

Note well this worthy & learned argument.

Such chriſten people as are the childzen of God, will not dwell nor abide in ſinne, and ſo for the there is no hell.
Luke. 12.

This little flocke it is that are ſo purged (and not Raſtels multitude) and for this is there neyther hell nor purgatory ordeyned, euen as for the hope that continueth ſtill in ſin is ordayned no heauen. And that there is no hell ordained for theſe faythfull folowers of Chriſt, I will proue euen by this worde of Paule which Raſtel rehearſed before. Rom. 8. That there is no damnation to them that be in Chriſt Ieſu, if they liue not after the fleſh. Here Raſtell hath ſmitten the ball quite vnder the corde, and hath alleged that, that ſhall condemne him. For if there be no damnation, but becauſe you are ſomewhat ſlow in perceauing the matter, I ſhall reduce it into a Sillogiſmus on this manner: There is no damnation vnto them that be in Chriſt Ieſu if they liue not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirite. Euery hell is dãnation. Ergo, there is no hell to them that be in Chriſt Ieſu if they liue not after the fleſh but after the ſpirite. This is in the firſt figure made by Relarent. not by any prophete that I thinke that the power cõmõs can take by ſuch babblyng but onely to ſatiſfie your mynde and pleaſure. Notwithſtandyng one thyng I muſt put you in remembraunce, that you haue falſly tranſlated the text for the text hath not that cõditional although I was contented to take it at your handes to ſee what you could proue, but the text ſayth thus. there is no dãnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſu, which walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirite: where Paul doth certifie you that they which are in Chriſt Ieſu, walke not after the fleſh but after the ſpirite, ſo that you may gather by Paule that if they walke not after the ſpirit they are not in Chriſt Ieſu, that is to ſay: they are none of Chriſtes, although Raſtell will call them Chriſten men, therfore deare brethrẽ loke that no man deceiue hym ſelfe, for Chriſt is not ẏ miniſter of ſinnes. If we be deliuered frõ ſinne through Chriſt, then muſt we walke in a new conuerſation of our life, or els we are ſtill in darknes. Remember that we ments, and Paule Rom. viij. doe conclude that there is no hel nor dampnation to them that are in Chryſt Jeſu, and are hys faythfull followers, he thinketh it ſhould well folowe that if there be no hell for them, that there is no hell for no man: for in hys ſeconde chapter, and alſo in the beginnyng of the third, he ſayethe that I deny hell; and when we come to hys probation, there is nothyng ſayd but that whych Paul confyrmeth, that is, there is no damption for them that are in Chryſt Jeſu, which walke not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirite, whych are thorow Chryſte wythoute ſpotte wrynkle or blame. And ſo though Raſtel appeare to hymſelfe to conclude lyke a ſage Philoſopher, yet I anſwer you he cōcludeth lyke an ignorante Sophyſter as all mē may ſée, for it foloweth not: Paule and Fryth ſay there is no hel, as contrarywiſe it foloweth not there is no heauen for Raſkeiles Chryſten men whych contynue ſtyll in ſynne, Ergo there is no heauen for the deuyl theyr father, and yet is there heauen for Chryſte and hys electe. I haue before declared how Chryſtes elect are ſynners and no ſynners. And nowe bycauſe you ſhoulde not miſtake the textes of S. Johñ whych I before alleaged, I wyll ſhew you how they do commyt ſynne, whych I dyd alſo ſufficiently touch in my anſwer agaynſt Raſkels dialoge, euen two leaues frō the ende, and yet I wyll touche it agayne, bycauſe you ſhall not thyncke that I woulde not leade you in ignorance and darkneſſe.

There is a hel for ſuche as feare not God nor obey his cōmaundements.

As there is no heauē for good & euill, ſo there is no hell for good and euill.

There are two partes in a faythfull man, whych rebell eche agaynſte other, and are at contynuall ſtryfe, and both of them haue diuers names in ſcrypture, the one is called the inward man, the heart, the mynde, the wyll, and the ſpryte: the other is called the outward man, the rebellyous membres, the bodye of ſynne and the fleſhe, and theſe in a faythfull man kéepe contynuall warre, and albeit the one be ſubdued and taken pryſonner of the other, yet neuer conſenteth to hys ennemy, he can not leaue him, neyther will make peace wyth hym, but wyll laboure what he can, and wyll call for all that he thynketh wyll helpe hym to be deliuered from hys ennemie, and then warreth vppon hym a freſhe, what tyme the faithfull man is brought to the knowledge of God, and beléeueth in Chryſt, and hath his will and mynde renued with the ſpryte of God that conſenteth to the lawe of God, that is good, ryghteous and holy, and beginneth to loue the lawe, and hath a will and a deſire to fulfill the lawe of God, and not to deſpyſe hys heauenly father, and loke howe much he loueth the lawe, countyng it ryghtwiſe and holye. Euen ſo muche doth he hate ſynne whych the lawe forbiddeth and abhorreth it in hys heart and inward man, and then albeit the outwarde man and rebellious membres do at time aſſége him and take hym captyue vnder ſynne, yet doth not the inward man conſent that thys ſynne is good and the lawe naught, whych forbyddeth it, neyther dothe the heart delighte in thys ſame ſynne, neyther can it delyght in ſuche ſynne, bycauſe the ſpirite of God teſtifieth vnto hym that it is abhomynable in the ſyghte of God, and then fyghteth the inwarde man agaynſte the outwarde wyth faythe, práyer, almoſe déedes and faſtyng, and laboureth to ſubdue the membres, lamenting that he hath bene ouercome, bycauſe he feareth to diſpleaſe God hys father, and deſyreth him for the bloud of hys ſonne Chriſte, that he will forgeue that whych is paſt, and hys diligence that he taketh in tamyng hys membres,

If I doe that thyng that I hate, then is it not I that doe it, but the ſynne that dwelleth in me, and euen lykewyſe the faythfull folowers of Chꝛiſt commit no ſynne, foꝛ they hate it, and if they foꝛtune to be entangled wyth ſynne, it is not they that doe it (as Paule ſaith) but the ſynne that dwelleth in them, which God hathe left to exerciſe them, as he left ẏ Philiſtians to exerciſe and nurtoure the childꝛen of Iſraell, and if the remnauntes of ſinne foꝛtune at anye time to lꝛke aloft and begin to raigne, then he ſendeth ſome croſſe of aduerſitie oꝛ ſickneſſe to helpe to ſuppꝛeſſe them. And thus ſhall it be as long as we liue, but when we be once deade, then oure members rebell no moꝛe, and then nedeth neyther purgatoꝛie noꝛ anye other croſſe, foꝛ the outwarde man is turned into vanitie, and our inwarde mã was euer pure thoꝛow beléeuing the wꝛde of God, and neuer conſented to ſinne, and nedeth nother purgatoꝛie in this wꝛld noꝛ in the wꝛld to come, but only foꝛ ſubduing the outward man, and therfoꝛe after this lyfe he ſhall neuer haue any purgatoꝛie. Marke well what I ſay and reade it againe, foꝛ moꝛe ſhall reade it then ſhall vnderſtande it, but he that hathe eares let hym heare.

The

The ſeconde erroure that Raſtell layeth to my charge, is, that I wold bring the people in beleſe that repentance of a man, helpeth not foꝛ the remiſſion of his ſinne.

IN pꝛouing this ſecond erroꝛ againſt me, Raſtel taketh ſo great paynes, that he is almoſte beſydes hym ſelfe. Foꝛ he ſaith that I would make men beléeue that it foꝛceth not, whether they ſinne oꝛ no. Why ſo bꝛother Raſtel: verely becauſe I allege S. John, S. Paule, Ezechiell and Hiereinie to quenche the hotte fire of purgatoꝛie, and allege no authoꝛities to pꝛoue good wꝛkes, wherunto I anſwer (as I did beforꝛe) that it is nothing to my purpoſe, foꝛ the pꝛouyng of good wꝛkes doth neither make foꝛ purgatoꝛie noꝛ againſt it, I coulde haue alleaged all thoſe textes if I had entended my ſelfe to pꝛoue that I ſhoulde doe good wꝛkes (which I neuer knewe chriſten man denie) but as touchyng my matter it is nothyng to the purpoſe, and as well he mighte haue impꝛoued me, bicauſe I bꝛyng in no textes to pꝛoue that the father of heauẽ is god, oꝛ to pꝛoue that whych neuer manne doubted of, notwithſtanding if Raſtel had indifferent eyes, I ſpake ſufficiently of good wꝛkes in the. 34. argument againſt hys dialoge, let all men read the place and iudge.

Raſtel. Frith. Raſtel wold faine cauel, but he cannot tell at what.

Raſtel taketh the matter very grée nouſly that I attempt to allege howe S. John & S. Paul ſend vs to Chꝛiſt, and then adde that we know no other to take away ſinne but only Chꝛiſte, and becauſe I adde this wꝛde only, therfoꝛe he thinketh that I cleane deſtroy repentance, whereunto I aunſwere, that I added not thys wꝛde only foꝛ naught, but I did it by the authoꝛitie of S. John, which ſaith: if we walke in the lighte, as he is in the lyght, we haue felowſhip with eche other, and in the bloud of Jeſu Chꝛiſte hys ſonne, purifyeth vs frõ all ſinne, wherupon I ſay that foꝛ vs which are in the lyght, hys bloud only is ſufficient, but foꝛ your chꝛiſten men whych continue ſtill in ſinne, and walke in Raſtell. Frith. There is no meane to put away ſinne, but only by Chꝛiſte.

darkeneſſe after they̓r father the Deuill, muſte ſome other meanes be founde, or elſe they ſhall neuer enter into the kingdome of heauen.

For ſuche as dwell in the lyght of Chriſt, hys bloud onlye is ſufficiēt.

But bicauſe I will be ſhort, let Raſtell note that I fynde two manner of repentance, one is without faith, and is ſuche a repentaunce as Judas and Raſtels chriſten men which continue ſtill in ſinne haue at the latter ende, which dothe rather purchace them an halter then the remiſſion of ſinnes.

There are two maner of repentances.

Another repentance foloweth, iuſtification and remiſſiō of ſinnes, and is a floriſhing frute of faith, for when by faith we do perceiue the fauor and kindneſſe that our louing father hath ſhewed vs in his ſonne Chryſt Jeſu, and that he hathe reconcyled vs vnto hymſelfe by the bloude of hys ſonne. Thē begin we to loue him, the more we hate the body of ſinne, and lamēt and be ſory that our membres are ſo fraile, that they can not fulfil the lawe of God, and ſo in mourning and bewayling our infirmitie, it cauſeth vs to abſtaine from bothe meat & drinke and all worldly pleaſures, which is is the pure faſting that we talke of, but you vnderſtande it not: and thys repentaunce commeth not to purge the ſinnes which is cōmitted before, but only taketh an occaſyon by the ſinnes before committed, to knowe what poyſon there remained in oure fleſhe, and ſeketh all meanes to make vs hate this body of ſinne, and to ſubdue it wyth all manner of workes that God hathe appoynted, to the entente that it ſhould in time to come no more diſpleaſe God our moſte merciful father, which of gentleneſſe ſo often pardoneth and forgeueth vs, as I haue touched before. This is the maner of repentaunce which I finde in ſcripture, but this helpeth that we ſhoulde ſinne no more, but what Raſtell dreameth, I wot not. But to expreſſe to the vttermoſt what I meane by repentaunce, marke this example. If a man build an houſe which dothe coſt him muche labor and money, and haue layde no ſure foundation, but that when a tempeſt commeth, hys houſe dothe fall, then will he be very ſory, and repente that he hathe ſo fooliſhly beſtowed his money and labor. Notwithſtanding, all thys great ſorow & repentance can not ſet vp his houſe againe whych is fallen, but only it taketh an occaſion by the ruine of the houſe, to teache the owner witte againſte an other time, that when he buildeth againe, he may make a ſure foundation. Euen ſo though thou repent neuer ſo much, that can not get remiſſion for the ſinnes that is paſt, but that muſte be pardoned onely by the faithe of Chriſtes bloude. Neuertheleſſe it dothe teache thee witte, and learne thée to tame thy body and ſubdue it, and caſt a lowe fōdacion, that in time thou mayſte the better reſiſte the aſſaultes of the deuill, the worlde and the fleſhe. This doth Frith teach of repentaunce, let the worlde take it as they will, but Chryſtes ſhēpe doe heare his voyce.

True repētance is a floriſhing frute of faith.

What pure faſting is.

Repentāce lively declared by an example.

¶ The third errour which Raſtell layeth againſt me is, that I would make men beleue that they need not to do penaunce for the ſatiſfaction of their ſinnes.

EVery childe may aunſwer him to thys if he euer read or perceaue what I wrote before of repentaunce, for as they take repentaunce for the ſorow and mourning that followeth the crime, euen ſo they call penaunce the good workes that enſue of repentaunce, and theſe good workes which folow do mortifie the members, and exerciſe vs in Gods commaundementes that we ſinne no more: but they can get no more remiſſion of the ſinne which is once paſt, then that which they call repentaunce: and yet do we neyther deſtroy ſorowing for ſinne, nor good workes as he falſly reporteth by vs, but we teach you how they ought to be done, and that they are fruites of fayth, and mortifie our members, and are profitable to our neighbour, and a teſtimony vnto vs that we are the children of our heauenly Father, as by example I ſay, that neither the ſunne nor the mone do iuſtifie vs, or purchaſe remiſſion of How good workes do mortify our membres.

Good workes are the fruites of fayth.

of our ſinnes, and yet I woulde not that Raſtell ſhould ſay, that I deny or deſtroy the ſunne and the mone, for I ſay that without them we can haue no light, and that we can not be without them. And as touching the ſolution of this, that penaunce taking in his largeſt ſignification, both for good woꝛkes and taking of paynes, is not ſatiſfaction for ſinnes. I muſt tell you once againe that there are two maner of ſatiſfactions, the one is to God the other to my neighbour. To God can not all the woꝛld make ſatiſfaction for one crime: inſomuch that if euery graſſe of the ground were a mã as holy as euer was Paule or Peter, and ſhoulde pꝛay vnto God all theyr life long for one crime, yet could they not make ſatiſfaction for it, but it is onely the bloud of Chꝛiſt, that hath made ful ſatiſfaction vnto God for all ſuch crimes. Hebꝛ. 7: or els were there none other remedye, but wee ſhould all periſh. There is an other ſatiſfaction which is to my neighbour whom I haue offended, whom I am bound to pacifie as we two can agrée, and as the lawes of the realme determine betweene vs, as if I had defamed him, then am I bound to pacifie hym, and to reſtoꝛe hym to hys good name againe: if I haue murdered any man, then by the lawes of the Realme I muſt dye for it, to pacifie my neighbour & the common wealth: But yet I am ſure Raſtell is not ſo childiſh, as to thincke that thys ciuyle ſatiſfaction is the verye ſatiſfaction which pacifieth Gods wꝛath for bꝛeaking his law: For if thou murther a man, and ſhould dye a hundꝛed times for it, yet except thou haue ſatiſfaction of Chꝛiſtes bloud, thou ſhalt be damned thereto: and ſo I ſpake that no tẽpoꝛall paine was inſtituted of God for the intent that we ſhould ſatiſfye Gods wꝛath therby, as it is plaine in my booke if Raſtell could ſée.

There are two maner of ſatiſfactions.

Hebr. 7.

Satiſfactiõ to our neighbour.

¶ The fourth errour that he layeth agaynſt me is, that I would perſwade the people that good works ar nothing auailable.

NOw are we come to the fourthe errour, where Raſtell vntruly repoꝛteth on me that I would perſuade the people that good woꝛkes done by any man in thys woꝛlde is nothing auayleable vnto him that doth them, & that it is no hurt noꝛ hindꝛaunce vnto any man, though he neuer do none. Becauſe I ſay they iuſtifie not befoꝛe God, therfoꝛe he thinketh that other men would vnderſtand me as wiſely as he doth, and argue that they are nothing auayleable, but I muſt deſire him to put on hys ſpectacles and loke agayne vppon my booke, and he ſhall finde theſe woꝛdes. Peraduenture thou wilt aunſwere vnto me, ſhall I then do no good dœdes? I aunſwere, yes: thou wilt aunſwere me, wherefoꝛe? I aunſwere, thou muſt do them becauſe God hath commaunded thẽ. I aunſwere, thou art lyuing in thys woꝛlde with men, and haſt conuerſation with them, therfoꝛe hath God appoynted thée what thou ſhalt do to the pꝛofite of thy neighbour and taming of thy fleſh, as Paule teſtifieth, Ephe. 2. We are his woꝛke in Chꝛiſt Jeſu, vnto good woꝛkes, which woꝛkes God hath pꝛepared that we ſhoulde walke in them. Theſe woꝛkes God would haue vs do that the vnfaithfull might ſée the godly and vertuous conuerſation of his faythfull, and therby be compelled to gloꝛifie our Father which is in heauen. Math. 5. and ſo are they both pꝛofitable vnto thy neighbour, & alſo a teſtimony vnto thée, by the which a man may know that thou art the right ſonne of thy heauẽly Father, and a very chꝛiſt vnto thy neighbour: and after teacheth that we ought to do theſe woꝛkes without hauyng reſpect eyther to heauen oꝛ hell, but attending through charitie the wealth of our neighbour. &c.

Good woꝛkes are to be done and why?

Epheſ. 2.

Good woꝛkes are pꝛofitable to our neighbour and alſo a teſtimony that we are the childꝛen of God.

I wonder that Raſtell is not aſhamed to ſay that I would make them beleue that they are not auayable, therfoꝛe good reader note my woꝛdes, firſt I ſay we muſt do them becauſe God hath commaũded them, is it not auayable to kéepe the commaundements of God? ſecondaryly I ſay that they are to the pꝛofite of my neyghbours bour: is it not auayłable? thirdly I ſay that they tame our fleſh, is it not auailable? fourthly I ſay they are to the glory of God, is it not auailable? Fiftly I ſay they are a teſtimony to them that doth them by the which mē may know ẏ he is ẏ very ſonne of God, is that not auayłable? belyke Raſtell coũteth nothing auailable but that which iuſtifieth before God, he will ſay the ſonne is not auayłable becauſe it iuſtifieth not, fire is not auayłable in his eyes becauſe it iuſtifieth not. &c.

Then Raſtell ſayth that I make a wonders worke with ẏ Scripture, & alledgeth certaine tertes ẏ we ought to do good workes (which I neuer denyed) and thereupon would conclude that workes ſaue and iuſtifie, and playeth me the ball luſtly ouer the rode, but as God would there ſtode a poſt right in the way and he hytte it ſo full, that it made the ball to reboũd ouer agayne backward, for in the alledgyng of his purpoſe Paule ſayth. Ephe. 2. he hath cleane loſt the game: the wordes are theſe, by grace you be ſaued by your fayth and that is not of you, it is the gift of God and not of workes that no man ſhould glorifie hym ſelfe, we are the workes created of God in Chriſt Jeſu whiche God hath prepared that we ſhould walke in them, here becauſe he would haue the latter ende of the text to ſerue for hys purpoſe whiche teacheth good workes (which I neuer denyed) hee bryngeth in that thyng whiche cleane confuteth his opiniõ, for his opinion (which in all places he hath laboured to proue) is that we are ſaued by good workes, but now marke what he alledgeth out of Paule by grace you be ſaued by your fayth: and that is not of you, it is the gift of God and not of workes. For that no man ſhould glorifie him ſelfe, here Paule ſaith plainly that our ſaluatiõ is not of workes: and ſo hath Raſtell caſt down that he built before, and may be likened to a ſhrewde cowe, whiche when ſhe hath geuen a large melle of milke turneth it downe with her hele.

Raſtell hath here ouerthrowē all that he hath before built and ſet vp.

Thus haue I aunſwered to as much of Raſtels treatiſe as I could get, if there be any more whiche may come to my handes I ſhall do my diligence to diſcloſe hys diſceite ſo that God geue me leaue to kepe the court with hym he ſhall wynne but litle, except he conuey his balles more craftly, and yet the truth to ſay we play not on euen hand, for I am in a maner as a man bound to a poſt, and can not ſo well beſtow me in my play, as as if I were at libertie, for I may not haue ſuch bookes as are neceſſary for me, neither yet penne, inke, ne paper, but onely ſecretly, ſo that I am in continuall feare, both of the Lefetenaũt and of my kepper, leſt they ſhould eſpy any ſuch thyng by me: and therfore it is litle meruell though the worke be vnperfite: for when ſoeuer I heare the keyes rỹng at the dore, ſtraps all much be cõueyed out of the way (and then if any notable thyng had bene in my mynde) it was cleane loſt, & therfore I beſech thẽ good reader count it as a thyng borne out of ſeaſon, which for many cauſes can not haue his perfeite forme and ſhape, and pardon me my rudenes and imperfection.

Ephe. 2.

We are iuſtified by grace and fayth, whiche is not of our ſelues, but is the gift of God.

¶FINIS.

¶ Iohn Frith to the Chriſtian Reader.

THere is nothyng in this world that is ſo firme, ſtable or godly, but that it may be vndermined, and frowardlye wreſted of mē, and ſpecially if they be voyd of charitie. As it is euident by William Tracyes Teſtamēt and laſt will that he left, agaynſt the which many men, and that of long continuaunce haue blaſphemouſly barked. Whether of a godly zeale, or of a daſing brayne, let other mē iudge. But this I dare boldly profeſſe, that his godly ſayinges are vngodly hād led, which thyngs can not ſo iuſtly aſcribe vnto ignoraunce, as vnto rancour, vnto the furies I had almoſt ſayd, for if they had conferred all things vnto the rule of charitie, which enuyeth not, whiche is not puffed vp, whiche is not ſtyrred to vengeaunce, which thinketh none euill, but ſuffereth all things, beleueth all thyngs, truſteth all things, and beareth all thyngs, they would not ſo heddely haue cōdēned thoſe thynges, whiche might haue bene full deuoutly expounded, howbeit they haue not onely attēpted that thyng, but haue proceeded vnto ſuch madnes, that they haue taken vppon them to ſtryue with dead folkes, for it is a moſt common ieſt in euery mās mouth that after the maker of this Teſtament was departed, and buryed, they tooke vp hys body and burnt it, which thing declared their furye although he felt no fire, Therfore we hūbly require our moſt redoubted Prince, with all his nobles, & preſent aſſembly, that euen as all other thyngs do of right depende of their iudgement, that euen ſo they would by their diſcret aduiſe, cure this diſeaſe, ponderyng all thynges with a more equall ballaunce. So ſhall this enormous facte be looked vppon with worthy correction, and the condition of the common wealth ſhalbe more quyet, marke you therefore what thynges they are, which they ſo cruelly condemne.

Maſter Tracie.

IN the name of God. Amen.

I William Tracie of Todyngton in the Countie of Gloceter Eſquier, make my Teſtamēt and laſt will, as hereafter foloweth. &c.

The reſt of whiche Teſtament you ſhall fynde before in the woorkes of william Tyndall. fol. 429.

Iohn Frith.

IT is marueil but here be ſomwhat that they impʒoue, for their mynde is ſo intoricate that there is nothyng, but they will note it with a blacke coale, and yet all may be eſtabliſhed by the teſtimony of Scripture, for fayth is the ſure perſuaſion of our mynde, of God and hys goodneſſe towardes vs. And where as is a ſure perſuaſion of the mynde, there can be no doubtyng or miſtruſt, for he that douteth is like the floude of the ſea which is toſſed with wyndes & caried with violence, and let not that man thinke that he ſhal obtaine any thing of God Ja. i. And therfore, S. Auſten ſayth, if I doubt I ſhalbe no holy ſēde, furthermore where as he ſeketh through the grace and merites of Chriſt to obtaine remiſſion of his ſinnes, ſurely it is a faythful ſaying, and worthy to be cōmended, for it is euen the ſame that Peter profeſſed Actes. rb. where hee ſayth, vnto hym do all the Prophetes beare witnes, that through his name as many as beleue in hym ſhall receiue remiſſiō of their ſinnes, moreouer in that he truſteth through Chriſt to haue resurrectiō of body and soule they haue no cause to blame hym, for thus doth Paule argue, if Christ be risen, then shall we also ryse and if Christ be not risen, then shall not we rise, but Christ is risen, for his soule was not left in hell, therfore shall we also rise (whō Christ shall bryng with hym) and be immortall, both body & soule. 1. Cor. 15. And therfore he doth both righteously and godly deduce his resurrectiō by Christes, by whom the father hath geuē vs all thinges, or els we should not be, but there are some, that gather of his woordes, that hee should recount the soule to be mortall whiche thyng after my iudgement is more suttelly gathered then either truly or charitably, for seyng there was neuer Christen man that euer so thought (no not the very Paganes) what godly zeale, or brotherly loue was there whiche caused them so to surmise, for a good man would not once dreame such a thyng: but I pray you why should we not say that the soule doth verely rise which through Christ rising from the filth of sinne, doth enter with the body into a new conuersation of life, whiche they shall leade together without possibilitie of sinnyng, we say also of God (by a certaine phrase of Scripture) that he ariseth, when he openeth vnto vs hys power, and presence: And why may we not say the same thing of the soule which in the meane season semeth to lye secret, & then shal expresse vnto vs (through Christ) her power and presence, in takyng agayne her naturall body, why should ye then condemne these thynges? There is no man that can receiue venome by those woordes, except hee haue such a spyderous nature that he can turne an hony combe into perilous poyson. Therfore let vs loke on the residue.

Master Tracie.

And as touching the wealth of my soule. &c.

Here he onely cleaueth to God and hys mercye, being surely persuaded that according to the testimony of Peter, who so euer beleueth in hym, throwe hys name shall receyue remissyon of synnes. Act. 15. Paule also affirmeth, that who so euer trusteth in him shall not be cōfounded. Ro. 10. And who can denye but thys is moste true, when it is vnderstande of that fayth which is formed wyth hope and charitie, which ỳ Apostle calleth faith, that worketh by charitie. Gal. 5. Now sith these things may be expounded so purely, forsothe he vttereth his owne enuie, which woulde otherwise wrest the mynde of the maker of thys Testament.

And as touchyng the addition of this particle wout any other mannes worke, or workes: it seemeth that he had respect vnto thys saying of Peter, whych declareth that there is none other name vnder heauen geuen vnto men, in whych we shoulde be saued. Act. 4. Besides that, S. Paule committeth the power of sanctifying to Christ only. Heb. 2. where he sayth, bothe he that sanctifyeth (that is to say Christe) and they that are sanctified (that is to say the faithfull) are all of one (that is God) and surely if we labored to preuel eche other in loue and charitie, we should not condempne this innocent, but we shoulde rather measure hys woordes by the rule of charitie, in so muche that if a thyng at the first sight did appeare wycked, yet shoulde we take it in the best sense, not iudging wickedly of oure brother, but referring that secreate iudgemente vnto Christe whych can not be disceyued, and thoughe they be disceiued by the pretence of charitie, yet therein they may reioyse, and therfore they would be lothe to condempne the innocent, but lette vs passe these things, and see what foloweth.

Why loke you so solowerly good brethren? why do you not rather giue hym great thankes? sith he hathe opened ned vnto you ſuche a proper diſtinctiou, by the whiche you may eſcape the ſcholaſticall ſnares and maſes, he only deſerueth the name of a mid dealer, which being God, became man to make men Gods. And who cā by right be called a mid dealer betwæne God and man, but he that is both God and man, therefore ſithe we haue ſuche a mid dealer, which in all poyntes hath proued our infirmitie (ſauing only in ſinne) which is exalted aboue the heauens, and ſitteth on the right hande of God, and hath in all thyngs obtayned the nerte power vnto him, of whoſe Emperie all things depende, lette vs come wyth ſure confidence vnto the throne of grace. Heb. 4. All other he calleth peticioners whyche receyue grace, but are not able to empreſſe ꝥ power therof into any other man, for that dothe only God diſtribute wyth hys finger (that is to ſay, the ſpirite of God) thorowe Chriſte, I maruell that you are angrye with him that hathe done you ſuch a great pleaſure, howe be it I doe aſcribe this condemnation rather vnto the canonikes than vnto deuines. For the godly deuines wold neuer dote ſo farre, as to condemne ſo proper ſayings, but peraduenture this myght moue theyr pacience, that he will diſtribute no portion of hys goodes, for that entent that anye man ſhould ſay or doe for the weale of hys ſoule, are you ſo ſore afraide of youre market? Be not afraid, ye haue ſalues inoughe to ſouple that ſore, ye knowe that he is not bounde vnder payne of dampnation to diſtribute his goodes on that faſhion, for then thoſe holy fathers were in greuous cauſe, which cōtinuing in long penurie, ſcant lefte at theyr departing, a halfe pennie. Thou wilt peraduenture ſay, that they ſhall ſuffer the græuous paines of purgatorie, be it ſo, yet may they be quēched both with leſſe coſt ꝥ labor, the popes pardon is ready at hand, where bothe the crime and the paine are remytted at once, and verily there is ſuch plentie of them in all places, that I canne ſcantly beleeue that there liueth anye man that is worth an halfe peny, but that he is ſure of ſome pardones in ſtore, And as for thys man he had innumerable. Notwithſtanding this diſtribution is not of neceſſitie (for vnto him that is dampned, it profiteth nothing, and he that is not dampned, is ſure of ſaluation) why are ye ſo hot againſt thys mans are not hys goodes in his owne power? he ſhall giue a reckoning of them vnto God, and not vnto you, here you maye ſee of howe light iudgement you haue condempned theſe things, nowe let vs ponder the reſidue.

What hath he here offended which rehearſeth nothing but the wordes of S. Auſtine. If you improue theſe thinges then reproue you S. Auſtine himſelfe. Now if you can finde the meanes to allow S. Auſten, and charitably to expound his woordes, why do you not admit the ſame fauour vnto your brother, eſpecially ſeing charitie requireth it? Beſides that, no man can deny but that theſe thinges are true, although S. Auſtines auctoritie were of no reputation with you, for if theſe thinges were of ſo great value before God, then Chriſt had euill prouided for his martyres, whoſe bodies are commonly caſt out to be conſumed with fire and wild beaſtes: notwithſtanding I would be afrayde to ſay that they were any thing the worſe for the burning of theyr bodies or tearing of it in peces. Be therefore charitable towards your brother and ponder his woordes (which are rather Saint Auſtines) ſomewhat more iuſtly.

There is no man doubteth, but that fayth is the rote of the tre, and the quickning power out of which all good fruites spring, therfore it is necessary that this fayth be present, or els we should looke for good workes in vayne: for without fayth it is impossible to please God. Heb. 11. Insomuch that S. Austine called those workes that are done before fayth, swift running out of the way. Moreouer that our merite cannot properly be ascribed vnto our workes doth the Euangelist teach vs saying, When ye haue done all things that are commaunded you, say, we are vnprofitable seruaunts, we haue done but our duety. Luke 17. By the which saying he doth in a maner feare vs from putting any confidence in our own workes: and so is our glorious pride and hygh minde excluded: then where is our merite? Harke what S. Austine sayth, The death of the Lorde is my merite: I am not without merite as long as that mercifull Lorde fayleth me not. &c. This death of the Lorde can not profite me except I receaue it through fayth: and therfore he reckoneth right wel that the faith in Christ is all his merite, I meane the fayth which worketh through charitie, that is to say, fayth formed with hope and charitie, and not that dead historicall fayth which the deuils haue and tremble. Iam. 2. Furthermore what S. Austine iudgeth of our merite he expresseth in these wordes: marke the Psalme, how the proud head will not receiue the crowne when he sayth he that redemed thy life from corruption: which crowneth thee (sayth the Psalme) Hereuppon woulde a man say, which crowneth thee, my merites graunt that, my vertue hath done it, I haue deserued it, it is not freely geuen, but geue care rather to the pleasure, for that is but thine owne saying, and euery man is a lyer: but heare what God sayth, which crowneth thee in compassion and mercy, of mercy he crowneth thee, of compassion he crowneth thee, for thou wast not worthye that he shoulde call thee, and whome he should iustifie when he called thee, and whome he shoulde glorifie, when he iustifieth thee: For the remnantes are saued by the election which is by grace & fauour. Rom. 11. Now if it be by grace thē is it not of woorkes, for then were grace no grace. Rom. 4. For vnto hym that worketh is the reward imputed not of grace but of duety. Rom. 4. the Apostle sayth, not of grace but of duety, but he crowneth thee in compassion and mercy: and if thy merites haue proceeded, God sayth vnto thee, boult out thy good merites, and thou shalte finde that they are my giftes, this is the righteousnesse of God, not meaning the righteousnesse whereby he himselfe is right wise, but the righteousnes wherewith he iustifieth them whome he maketh right wise, where before they were wicked. These are Austines wordes.

Finallye, let not that moue you where he addeth, that a good worke maketh not a good man, but rather a good man maketh the woorke good, for there is no man but he is either good or euyll. If he be euill then can he not do good but euill: for according to Christes testimonye, A rotten tree beareth no good fruite. Math. 7. And agayne he sayeth, Howe can you say well seeing you your selues are euill. Math. 12. But if he be good, he shall also bring forth good fruite at his season: howbeit that fruite maketh not the man good, for except the man be first good he can not bring forth good fruite, but the tree is knowne by the fruite. And therfore sayth, as a quickening rote must euer goe before, whyche of wicked maketh vs right wise and good, which thing our workes coulde neuer bring to passe. But of thys fountayne springing those good woorkes which iustifie vs before mē, that is to saye, declare vs to be verye right wise, for before God we are verely iustified by that rote of fayth, for he searcheth the hart, and therefore this iust iudge doth inwardly iustifie or condemne, geuing sentence according to fayth: but men must looke for the woorkes, for theyr sight cannot enter into the hart, and therfore they first geue iudgement of workes, and are many times deceaued vnder the cloke of hypocrisie.

You may see that here is nothyng, but that a good man may expounde it well albeit the children of this worlde (which with their wiles deceiue thē selues enteryng so presumptuously in to Gods iudgement) do seeke a doubt where none is, Go ye therfore and let charitie be your guide, for God is charitie, and though our Lawyers hart would breake, yet must you nedes iudge him a Christē man, which saith nothyng but that Scripture confirmeth. And verely the iudgement of this cause came out of season and euē vngraciously vnto our Canonistes, for they are cleane ignorāt of Scripture & therfore condemne all thinges that they read not in their law, wherfore we renounce their sentence and appeale vnto the deuines, which will sone knowe the voyce of their shepheard and gladly admitte those thynges which are allowed by the Scripture whereunto they are accustomed.

¶FINIS.

¶A Letter which Iohn Frith wrote vnto the faythfull folowers of Christes Gospell, whyles he was prisoner in the Tower of London for the worde of God. Anno.M.D.xxxij.

¶Grace and peace from God the father through our Sauiour Christe Iesu be with all them that loue the Lord vnfaynedly. Amen.

IT can not bee expressed (dearely beloued in the Lord) what ioy and comfort it is to myhart to perceiue how the woorde of God hath wrought and continually worketh among you: so that I finde no smal number walkyng in ỹ wayes of the Lord, accordyng as he gaue vs commaundement, willyng that we should loue ech other, as he loued vs. Now haue I experience of the fayth which is in you, and can testifie that it is without simulation, that ye loue not in word and toung onely, but in worke and veritie.

Iohn.2. Iohn.15. Roma.12. Iohn.3.

What can be more triall of a fayth full hart, then to aduenture not onely to ayde and succour by the meanes of other (whiche without daunger may not be admitted vnto vs) but also personally to visite the poore oppressed, & see that nothyng be lackyng vnto thē, but that they haue both ghostly comfort and bodely sustenaunce, notwithstādyng the strayte inhibition and terrible manacyng of these worldly rulers: euen ready to abyde the extreme ieoperdies that tyrāts can imagine.

This is an euidence, that you haue prepared your selues to the Crosse of Christ, accordyng vnto the councell of the wise man which sayth: my sonne when thou shalt enter into the way of the Lord, prepare thy selfe vnto tribulation. This is an euidence that ye haue cast your accomptes, and haue wherewith to finish the tower which ye haue begon to builde. And I doubt not but that he whiche hath begon to worke in you, shall for his glory accōplish the same, euē vnto the commyng of the Lord, which shal giue vnto euery man accordyng to his dedes. Luke.14. Phil.1.

And albeit God of his secret iudgementes for a time kepe the rod from some of them that ensue his steppes yet let them surely reken vppon it for there is no doubt but all whiche will deuoutly lyue in Christ, must suffer persecution: for whom the Lord loueth he correcteth, and scourgeth euery child that he receaueth: for what child is that, whom the father chastiseth not. If ye be not vnder correction of which we are all partakers, thē are ye bastardes and not children. Roma.12. 2.Ti.3. Heb.12.

Neuertheles we may not suppose that our most louyng father should do that because he reioiseth in our bloud or punishment, but he doth it for our ſingular profite, that we may be partakers of holynes, and that the remnaunt of ſinne (whiche through the frayltie of our mẽbers) rebell agaynſt the ſpirite & will, cauſing our workes to go vnparfectly forwardes, & may ſomedel be ſuppreſſed, leſt they ſhould ſubdue vs and reigne ouer vs, as I haue ſufficiently declared in the Epiſtle of my booke whiche intreateth of Purgatory, to the which I remit thẽ that deſire to be further inſtructed in this matter.

Of theſe thynges God had geuen me the ſpeculation before, and now it hath pleaſed hym to put in vre and practiſe vpon me. I euer thought and yet doe thinke, that to walke after Gods word, would coſt me my life at one tyme or an other. And albeit that the kynges grace ſhould take me into his fauour and not to ſuffer the bloudy Edomites to haue their pleaſures vpon me, yet will I not thinke that I am eſcaped, but that God hath onely differred it for a ſeaſon to the intent that I ſhould worke somewhat that he hath appointed me to do, and ſo to vſe me vnto his glory.

And I beſeche all the faythfull followers of the Lord, to arme them ſelues with the ſame ſuppoſition, markyng thẽ ſelues with the ſigne of the croſſe, not from the croſſe as the ſuperſtitious multitude doth, but rather to the croſſe in token that they be euer readye willingly to receaue the croſſe, when it ſhall pleaſe God to lay it vpon them. The day that it cõmeth not, counte it cleare wonne, geuyng thankes to the Lord, which hath kept it from you. And then when it commeth, it ſhall nothing diſmay you: for it is no new thing, but euẽ that which ye haue continually loked for.

Cor. 10. And doubt not but that god which is faythfull ſhall not ſuffer you to be tempted aboue that which ye are able to beare, but ſhall euer ſend ſome occaſion by the which ye ſhall ſtand ſtedfaſt: for either he ſhall blind the eyes of your enemies and diminiſh their tyrannous power, or els when he hath ſuffred them to do their beſt, and that the Dragon hath caſt a whole floudde of waters after you, he ſhall cauſe euen the very earth to open hir mouth and ſwalow them vp. So faith full is he and careful to eaſe vs what time the veration ſhould be to heauy for vs. Apoc. 12.

He ſhall ſend a Joſeph before you againſt ye ſhall come into Egypt, yea he ſhal ſo prouide for you, that ye ſhall haue an hundred fathers for one, an hũdred mothers for one, an hundred houſes for one, and that in thys lyfe, as I haue proued by experience. And after this life, euerlaſting ioy wyth Chriſt our Sauiour. Marke. 1.

Notwithſtandyng ſith this ſtedfaſtnes commeth not of our ſelues (for as S. Auſten ſayth) there was neuer man ſo weake or fraple no not the greateſt offender that euer lyued but that euery man of hys owne nature ſhould be as fraple and committe as great enormities, except he were kept from it by the ſpirite & power of God I beſeche you brethren in the Lord Jeſu Chriſte and for the loue of hys ſpirite, to pray with me that we may be veſſels to his laude & prayſe, what tyme ſoeuer it pleaſeth hym to call vpon vs. Roma. 15.

The father of glory giue vs the ſpirite of wiſedome vnderſtandyng and knowledge, and lighten the eyes of our mynde, that we may know hys wayes, praiſing the Lord eternally. If it pleaſe any of our brethren to write vnto vs of any ſuch doubtes as peraduenture may be founde in our bookes it ſhould be very acceptable vnto vs, and as I truſt not vnfrutefull for them. For I will endeuour my ſelfe to ſatiſfie thẽ in all poyntes by Gods grace. To whom I committe to be gouerned and defended, for euer. Amen. Ephe. 1.

Iohn Frith the priſoner of Ieſu Chriſt, at all tymes abydyng his pleaſure.

I Was deſired of a faithfull frende (to whom I am ſo much bound that he might lawfully haue commaunded me) that I would make him a litle treatiſe, by the which he might be ſomewhat inſtructed to knowe himſelfe, and ſo geue God thankes for the beneſites which he hath ſo abundantly poured vpon him. This thing I toke vpon me very gladly, partly to fulfill his righteouſe requeſt, which I truſt ſhall be to the great profite of Chriſtes flocke, and partly to declare what I thinke both of my ſelfe, and of all other.

Herein may all men ſée, what they haue receaued of God, and how they ought to beſtow the talent that is cõmitted vnto them, which if you note well, it will cauſe you to ſay with the wiſe man Salomon: Vniuerſa vanitas omnis homo viuens, that is, Euery mã liuing is nothing but vanitie: which alſo the Prophet Dauid confirmeth ſaying, If all men liuing were pondered in one ballance, and vanitie hanged in the ballaunce agaynſt them, it ſhould quite way them downe, and be heauier then all they. As by example, if a man prayſe a very fole and thinke his witte good and profounde, then is that perſon in déede more fole thẽ the other. And euẽ ſo fith mã doth prayſe and commende riches, honour, beautie, ſtrength, and ſuch other vaine and tranſitorie things which are but as a dreame, and vaniſhe lyke a flower in the fielde, when a man ſhoulde haue moſte néede of them, it foloweth well that he hymſelfe is more vayne then thoſe thynges whych are but vanitie. For if it were poſſyble that thou ſhuldeſt haue al theſe things an hundreth yeare continually wythout any trouble or aduerſitie as neuer man had, yet were it but a vaine dreame if it be compared vnto that euerlaſting lyfe, whych is prepared for Chriſtes electe and faythfull followers. So that all fleſh is as hay, and all hys glory lyke a flower of the hay is withered, and the flower fallen, but God and his worde endure for euer. Eſay.40.

Therfore let not the wyſe man reioyſe in his wiſedom, neither ỹ ſtrong man in hys ſtrengthe, nor the ryche in hys riches. But he that reioyſeth, let hym reioyſe in the Lord, to whome be all honor & praiſe without end. Amen. Heb.9. 1.Cor.1.

The firſt Chapter.

That all goodneſſe commeth of God, and all euill of ourſelues.

THe Philoſophers to whome God had enſpired certaine ſparckles of truthe, knowledged that the cheefeſt poynte of wiſdome and direction of a mannes lyfe, was to know hym ſelfe, whych ſentence the ſcrypture eſtablyſheth ſo clerely, that no man may diſſent from the truthe of the ſame. For Salomon ſaythe that the feare of the Lord is the beginning of wiſedome. Nowe who can feare the Lorde, but only he that knoweth himſelfe, as the ſcripture teacheth him? For if I perceiue not the imperfection of my nature, which is ſubiect vnto corruption and voide of all ſtableneſſe: If I perceiue not the vnſtableneſſe of my fleſh being prone to all ſynne, and rebellyous to righteouſeneſſe, and that there dwelleth no goodneſſe in me: If I perceiue not the poyſon of the old ſerpent and hell, and ſynne whych lyeth hidde wythin me, vnto whych are prepared paines intollerable, I ſhall haue none occaſion to feare God, but rather to aduaunce my ſelfe equall wyth God, as Lucifer, Nabuchodonoſor, Herode and ſuch other haue done, which after were ſore chaſtened for theyr follye. And as touching our wiſedome, eloquence, long lyfe, victory, glory, and ſuch other, the ſcripture teſtifieth that they come of God and not of oure Iames.1 ſelues. For S. Iames ſaythe: If any lacke wiſedom, let hym aſke it of god, which giueth it abundantly. As it is
3. Kinge.3 euident by Salomon, whych of God deſired wiſedome to iudge betwéne good and euill. And the Lorde made hym aunſwere, that becauſe he aſked that thing, and not long lyfe, nor ryches, nor the deſtruction of hys ennemyes, but rather wiſedom to diſcerne in iudgement. Behold, I haue geuen vnto thée an heart full of wiſedome & vnderſtanding, in ſo muche that none before thée hathe bene like vnto thée, neyther yet after thée ſhall any be like vnto thée. And beſides that, I haue giuen thée riches and glory.

Furthermore, the moſte glorious giftes concerning oure ſoules, come from God euen of his méere mercye and fauoure whych he ſheweth vs in Chriſt, and for Chriſt, as predeſtination, election, vocatiõ and iuſtification: and albeit M. More wyth hys painted Poetrie and craftye conueyance doe caſt a miſte before your eyes, that you might wander oute of the right way, endeuoring hym ſelfe to inſtructe you that God hathe predeſtinate and choſen vs before the beginnyng of the worlde, becauſe he knewe before that we ſhould do good workes, yet will I ſet you vpon a cãdel which ſhall ſhine ſo bright, and ſo clerely diſpel his miſt & vaine Poetrie, that you ſhall plainely perceiue hym daunſing naked in a nette, whiche notwithſtanding thinketh himſelfe to go inuiſible. And although there be ſcriptures inoughe, bothe Tit. 3. and Rom. 11. to proue the ſame true, yet wil I let that paſſe, and alleage for me S. Auſtine, which is the candell that I ſpeake of, whiche ſhall diſcloſe hys iuggling, and vtter hys ignorance: for S. Auſtine ſaythe, ſome man will affirme that God dyd chuſe vs, becauſe he ſawe before that we ſhould do good workes: but Chriſt ſayeth not ſo, which ſayeth: ye haue not choſen me, but I haue choſẽ you, for (ſayeth he) if he had choſen vs becauſe he ſawe before that we ſhoulde doe good workes, then ſhoulde he alſo haue ſéne before that we ſhould firſte haue choſen hym, which is contrary to the wordes of Chriſt, and minde of the Euangeliſte. Héere may you ſée howe euidently S. Auſtine confuteth M. Mores Poetrie, and openeth hys ſerpentine deceite.

M. More daunſing in a net, thinketh hym ſelfe inuiſible. Iohn. 15.

Finally S. Paule ſaythe Epheſ. 2. Ephe.2. that we are ſaued thorowe grace, and that it commeth not of oure ſelues, it is the gifte of God, and commeth not of workes, leaſt any man ſhould boaſte himſelf, which wordes M. More might be aſhamed to heare if he were not an other Lucian, neither regarding God nor man. But S. Auſtine addeth thus much more vnto it: Non erit gratia vllo modo niſi fuerit gratuita omni modo: That is to ſay, that it cã in no wiſe be grace or fauoure, except it be alwayes frée. And therfore I may conclude that it is neyther of the workes going before, nor of the workes comming after, but only of the frée fauor of God.

And thys are we ſure of, ỹ whome ſoeuer he chuſeth, them he ſaueth of his mercy: and whome he repelleth, them of his ſecrete and vnſearchable iudgement he condemneth. But why he chuſeth the one and repelleth the other, enquire not (ſaythe S. Auſtine) if thou wilte not erre. In ſo muche that S. Paule coulde not attaine to the Roma.11 knowledge therof, but cried oute: O the depth of the riches and wiſedome of the knowledge of God, howe vnſearchable are hys iudgementes, and how incomprehenſible are his waies.

More's miſte.

But

But S. Poze had leuer loude to lye, and farre to erre, than to let God alone with hys ſecretes, oz to acknowledge hys ignozance in any thing.

And to be ſhozte, S. Paule ſaythe, what haſt thou that thou haſt not receiued? If thou haſt receiued it, whye doſt thou auaunce thy ſelfe, as though thou hadſt not receiued it? So we may conclude that all goodneſſe commeth of God, and all ſinne oz miſchefe of oure owne poyſoned nature. In ſo muche that we may ſay with the Pzophet Daniel: Tibi domine gloria, nobis autem confuſio faciei. O Lozd all glozy be vnto thée, and vnto vs ſhame and

The ſecond Chapiter.

For what intent God geueth vs theſe gyftes, and that they are rather a charge and a carefull burthen, then any pleaſure to reioyce at.

1.Cor.11. LIke as there are many members of oure body, and euery member hathe his office appoynted vnto hym which he muſt doe, not foz hys owne wealth and ſauegard only, but foz the preſeruation of the whole body, in ſo muche that the moſte honeſt member muſt ſerue the vileſt at his neceſſitie, foz if the hande woulde not ſerue the lowe belly, they ſhould bothe periſhe together, euen ſo hathe God appoynted his giftes, and diſtributed them in this wozld vnto vs (whych ſhoulde be as one body) that euery nation hathe néede of other, euery occupation néede of an other, and euery man néede of hys neighboure. This is ſo plain that it can not be denyed. Neuertheleſſe I will moze ſpecially touche the matter, becauſe I woulde haue it ſo roted in you, that you might endeuoure youre ſelues to fulfill it towards eche other.

If God haue opened the eyes of thy mynde, and haue geuen thée ſpirituall wiſedome thozough the knowledge of his wozd, boaſt not thy ſelfe of it, but rather feare and tremble, foz a chargeable office is committed vnto thée, whiche (if thou fulfill it) is lyke to coſt thée thy life at one tyme oz other with much trouble and perſecution. But if thou fulfill it not, then ſhal that office be thy damnation. Foz 1.Cor.9.
S. Paule ſayth: Wo is to me if I preach not. And by the Pzophet Ezechiel God ſaith: If I ſay vnto the wicked that he ſhall dye the death, & thou ſhew hym not of it, the wicked ſhall dye in his iniquitie, but I ſhal require his bloud of thy hand. Ezech.33.

But peraduenture our Diuines would expounde theſe textes onely vpon them that are ſent and haue cure of ſoules. Wherunto I anſwere that euery man whiche hath the light of Gods wozde reuelated vnto hym, is ſent when ſoeuer he ſéth neceſſitie, & hath cure of his neighbours ſoule. As by example. If God haue geuen me my ſight, and I perceiue a blynde man goyng in the way, which is redy foz lacke of ſight to fall into a pytte wherein he were lyke to periſh, then am I bounde by Gods commaundement to guide hym till hee were paſt that ieopardy, oz els if he periſh there in, (where I might haue deliuered hym) his bloud ſhalbe required of my hand. And lykewiſe if I perceiue my my neighbour lyke to periſh foz lacke of Chziſtes doctrine, then am I boũd to inſtruct hym with the knowledge that God hath geuen mee, oz els hys bloud ſhalbe required of my hand.

Paraduenture they will ſay that there is all ready one appoynted to watch the pitte, and therefoze if any man fall into it he ſhall make it good, and that therfoze I am diſcharged & néede to take no thought. Wherunto I aunſwere I would be glad that it ſo were. Notwithſtandyng if I perceaue that the watchman be a ſléepe, oz runne to ỹ ale houſe to make good cheare, oz gone out of the countrey a whozehunting and thozough his necligence eſpy my neighbour in daunger of the pitte, then am I neuertheleſſe bounde to leade hym from it, I thinke that God hath ſent me at that tyme to ſaue that ſoule frõ periſhyng. And the law of God and nature byndeth me therto, which chargeth me to loue my neighbour as my ſelfe, and Math.7. is in this caſe) but he would haue hys neighbour to helpe hym, and therfore is he bound to helpe his neighbour if he be in lyke ieopardy. And euen thus art thou bound to geue good counſell to hym that lacketh it, & to diſtribute what ſoeuer talent thou haſt receiued of God vnto the profite of thy neighbour. Moreouer beſides that ye can not auoyde this my ſolution, yet I deſire you to note how the text it ſelfe which I alleged doth condemne your vayne obiection, the wordes are theſe Ezech. iij. Marke I pray you that the Prophet ſaith not as you obiect that he which ſhould ſhewe the wicked his iniquitie, and doth not ſo, ſhall periſh only, and the wicked hym ſelfe to be ſaued, becauſe his faut was told him, by him which toke charge to teach him: But contrarywiſe ỹ wicked ſhall periſhe in his iniquitie (ſaith God by his prophet Ezechiel) and his bloud ſhall be required of the hand of him which ſhould haue inſtructed him in the truthe.

ding to his commaundementes. And that it ſo is thou mayſt well note by the parable of the riche man, whych was clothed in ſilke and fared delicately in this worlde, and after was buryed in hell. Wheruppon S. Gregory noteth that he was not damned becauſe he deſpoiled any other mens, but becauſe he did not diſtribute his owne, as ỹ proceſſe of ỹ Text doth alſo well declare. Wherefore if we muſt geue accompts of all that is geuē vs, then haue we litle cauſe to glory, but rather to feare and tremble, and to count him moſt happy, to whom leaſt is committed. For God to whom this accomptes muſt be made, can not be deluded, although the world may be blinded.

If God haue geuen thé thy perfite limmes and members, then gette to ſome occupation, and worke wyth thyne owne handes, that thy members which are whole and perfite, may miniſter to theyr neceſſitie that lacke theyr members: for that is acceptable in the ſight of God, and the contrarye ſo deteſtable, that if thou withdrawe thy members from ayding thy neighboures, thou ſhalt of God be recounted for a théfe and a murtherer.

therer. And therfore I affirme that all our holy hypocrites and idle belyed Monkes, chanons, and prieſtes, whether they be regulare or ſeculare, if they laboure not to preache Gods woorde are thæues and alſo murtherers: for they maintaine their ſtrong members in idleneſſe, which ought to labour for the profite of theyr neyghbours, that theyr perfite members might miniſter vnto the neceſſitie of them that lacke theyr members. As the eye muſt miniſter her fruite of ſight vnto the fæte, handes and other members which lacke it: or els are they in ieoperdie to periſhe at euery pit, and the eye giltie of their deſtruction for withdrawing her office from them. And this may we eſtabliſh by the woordes of S. Paule which ſayth, Ephes. 4. He that dyd ſteale, let hym ſteale no more, but rather laboure wyth hys owne handes that he may haue to diſtribute to them that lacke. And ſome doctoures do very well expounde it of certaine perſons that walked inordinately, and would not worke themſelues though they were ſturdye lubbers, but lined on other mens charitie, which thing the Apoſtle calleth theft, and exhorteth them to woorke with theyr own hands, that they may both helpe themſelues and other.

And for becauſe ſome perſons which fæle them ſelues græued, becauſe they are giltie, will not be contente to allow this expoſition I will alledge an other text of the Wiſe man, which ſhall not onely allow this ſentence, but alſo bite them better: for Eccl. 34. he ſayth, Panis egentium vita pauperis eſt, qui autem defraudat eum homo ſanguinis eſt. that is to ſay, The bread of the nædy is the life of the poore, and he that defraudeth him of it is a murtherer. This text holdeth their noſes ſo hard to the grindſtone that it clean diſfigureth theyr faces, for it proueth our Byſhops, Abbotes, and ſpirituall poſſeſſionaries double thæues and murtherers, as concerning the body (beſides their murdering of the ſoule for lacke of Gods woorde, which they will neyther preache, nor ſuffer any to doe it purely, but perſecute and put them vnto the moſt cruell death) firſte they are thæues and murtherers, becauſe they diſtribute not that which was appoynted by our faythfull forefathers to the entent it ſhould haue bene miniſtred vnto the poore (for then they ſeemed to be very vertuous) but now they beſtow it vpon hawkes, houndes, horſes, &c. vpon gorgious apparell and delicate fare. And glad are ỹ poore whē they may get the ſcrappes. They may haue not ſo much as a pigge of their owne ſow, no ſcant a fether of their own goſe. For he that may diſpend foure or v. thouſand markes a yeare, would thinke it were to much if he gaue xx. nobles of it vnto the poore, which notwythſtanding are the owners vnder God of all together the miniſters kuyng deduct, which (as the Apoſtle ſayth) hauing theyr foode and clothes to couer them ought therewith to be con- 1. Tim. 6. tent. And thus they defraude the poore of theyr bread, & ſo are they thæues, and (becauſe this bread is theyr life) as the aforeſayd text teſtifieth, he that defraudeth hym of it, is not onely a thæfe, but alſo a murtherer.

And when they thinke to beſtowe it very well and beſtowe it in buildyng palaces of pleaſure, yet are they therin much to be reproued. For as an old Doctour ſayth, they are in that poynt worſe then the deuill, for the deuill would haue had that Chriſt ſhould haue turned ſtones into bræde (which might haue ſuckored ỹ poore) & theſe builders turne the bread into ſtones. For they beſtow ỹ good which ſhould be geuen to the poore for their ſuſtenaunce, vpon an heape of ſtones.

But here they will obiect (as they Obiection. are neuer without euaſions) that if they ſhould diſtribute it among the poore accordyng as they are bounde, within a while all would be ſpent, & no good ſhould come of it, nor no man know where it is become or who fareth the better for it. Whereunto I Solution. aunſwere that in dæde ye be to wiſe for me, for ſith ye go about to correct Chriſt, and to ſet hym to ſchole and learne hym what is beſt, it were but folye for me to meddle with you. For Eccle.4. Esay.5. Christes minde and commaũdement is that we should distribute it and not withhold it from them. And sayth by his Prophet: wo be to them that couple and knit houses together, whiche I thinke may iustly be verified vpon you. Neuertheless this I dare say, that if a Bysshop which may dispende foure thousãd marke would vnto the powre of his Dioces distribute euery yeare, but the one halfe geuyng vnto one man. xl. shillyng, and lendyng to an other. xx. nobles to set vp his occupation with all, and so geue and lende as he sæth nede, he should within. v. or. vj. yeares make a flourishyng Dioces. And I thinke verely that his face should more be alowed before God, then if he had builded a thousand Abbayes: for Gods commaundement ought first to be done, & is much more acceptable to him then all the workes that procede of our imaginations and foolish phantasies.

Besides that they are thæues and murtherers for withdrawyng their perfite mẽbers from labour wherby they might minister vnto their neighbours necessity (I speake of as many as are not occupied about preachyng Gods worde) for in that they withdrawe their members from succouryng their powre neighbours, they are thæues. And because this succour is called their lyfe, they are murtherers for kæpyng it from them.

Here our beggyng orders of Friers would thinke to be exempt, because they haue not receiued rentes to be distributed. Notwithstandyng if we ponder this texte well we shall finde them cõdemned as dæpe as the other. For they enter into euery más house, and with vnshamefaced beggyng polle them so nye, that in a maner they leaue nothing behind for the very powre which are sicke, lame, cræple, blynd and maymed. For there is not the powrest desolate widowe, but with his fayre flatteryng he wil so deceiue her, that he will be sure either of money or ware: but deare brethrẽ mayntayne ye no such murtherers, lest ye bee partakers of their sinnes, but rather folow the counsell of the Apostle, which chargeth vs in ỳ name of our Lorde Jesu Christ, that we withdrawe our selues from euery brother that walketh inordinatly & worketh not and vpdeth if hee will not worke he should not eate. 2.Thess.3.

Now if they obiect that they liue in contemplation & study of Scripture, and say that they ought not to be let from that holy worke: for Christ sayd that Mary had chosen the best part whiche should not be taken from her.

Thereunto may I make the same aũswere which that holy father and Abbot S. Siluane made. This Siluane was an Abbot an holy man, hauyng many Monkes vnder him, whõ he caused after their prayers (whiche were nothyng so lõg as our Monkes vse now a dayes) whiche thinke for their many wordes to be heard, lyke as dyd the Pharisees whom Christ rebuked, he caused them I say to labour for their lyuyng, accordyng to the mynde of Paule. And vppon a tyme there came a religious man to hys abbay, and when he sawe his Monkes working, he asked the Abbot whye he so vsed them, and why they gaue not them selues to holye contemplation, seeing that Marie had chosen the best part. The Abbot made fewe wordes, but gaue this Monke a boke, and sent him into a sell, to be there occupied in studie and contemplation. And at dinner time ỳ Abbot called all his monks to meat, and let hym sit in contemplation. After none when he began to ware very hũgry, he came out againe to the Abbot Siluane, and asked whether his Monkes had not yet dined: And he answered, yes. And why called you not me, quod the Monke, to dine wyth them? Verily sayd the Abbot, I thought you had bene all spirituall, and had neded no meate. Nay quod the Monke I am not so spirituall nor feruent in contemplation, but that I must nedes eate. Verely sayde the Abbot, then muste you also nedes worke, for Mary hathe nede of Martha. When the Monke heard that, he repented and fell to worke as the other dyd. And I woulde to God that this aunswer would cause our religious euen so to doe, & to fall to worke, that they might succoure theyr nedie neighboures.

And as touching theyr studie in scripture, S. Austine sayeth: how shalt thou better learne to vnderstande the scipture, then by going about to fulfill that thou there readest? And if thou goe aboute to fulfill it sayethe he, then must thou worke with thy handes, for that dothe S. Paule teache thee. Of this I haue compiled an whole booke, which if God haue appoynted me to finishe it, and set it forthe, shalbe a rule of more perfection vnto oure religious, then any that they haue vsed this hundreth yeare.

The third Chapter.

The conclusion of this treatise, that no flesh should reioyce, but feare and tremble in all the gifts that he receiueth.

HEre maiste thou perceiue that no man liueth but he maye feare and tremble, and moste he may feare, to whome most is committed, for of him shall muche be required: and muche are we bounde to thanke God in all things. For of oure selues haue we nought but sinne and vanitie, but thorowe his gracious fauoure haue we all goodnesse, and be that we be. And sith all our goodnesse commeth of hym, we muste agayne be thanckefull vnto him, and kepe hys commaundements. For els we may feare least he take hys gifts from vs, and then shall we receiue the greater dampnation.

If thou haue receiued the knowledge of hys worde, geue hym thanks, and be a faithful minister thereof: for else he shall deliuer thee vnto thyne owne fantasticall imaginations, and cast thee headlong into an heape of heresies, which shall bring thee into vtter destruction.

If he geue thee faith in hys worde, geue him thanks, and bring forth the fruites therof in due season, for els he will take it away from thee, and sende thee into finall desperation.

If he geue thee riches, then geue hym thankes, and distribute them according to Gods commaundement, or else he shall take them from thee (if he loue thee) either by theues, by water, by death of thy cattell, by blasting thy fruites, or such other scourges, to Esai. 5. Ierem. 7. cause thee loue hym, because he wolde alienate thine heart from them, this I say he wil do, if he loue thee, to make thee put thine whole truste in him, and not in these transitorie things. But if Ierem. 12. he hate thee, then will he sende thee great prosperitie, and encrease them plenteously, and geue thee thy heauen in thys worlde vnto thine euerlasting dampnation in the lyfe to come, and therefore feare and take good hede whiles thou hast leasure.

If thou aske me what his honoure, praise, and thankes are? I answere, that his honor, praise and thankes, is nothing els but the fulfilling of hys commaũdementes. If thou aske me what his commaundementes are as touching the bestowing of thy goodes? I answer, his cõmaundemẽts are that thou bestowe them in the workes of mercye, and that shall he laye to thy charge at the daye of iudgement. He shal aske you whether you haue fedde the hungrie, and geuen drinke to the thirstie, and not whether you haue builded abbayes or chauntries. He shall aske you whether you haue harbored the harborlesse, and clothed the naked, and not whether you haue gilded images, or geuen copes to churches. He shall aske you whether you haue visited the sicke, and gone to the prisoners, and not whether you haue gone a pilgrimage to Walsingham or Canterburye. And thys I affirme vnto thee, that if thou builde a thousand cloisters, and giue as many copes and chalices to churches, and visitest all the pilgrimages in the worlde, and espiest and seest a poore man whome thou mightest help, perishing for lack of one grote, all these things whereon thou hast bestowed so muche money, shall not be able to helpe thee. Therefore take good hede, and say not but that ye be warned.

If God haue geuen thee thy perfite limmes and members then geue him thankes, and vse them to the tamyng of thy body, and profite of thy neighbour. For els if God loue thée he will ſend thée ſome mayne or miſchief and take them from thée, that thy negligence and none vſing of them be not ſo extremely imputed vnto thée. But if he hate thée, he ſhal kéepe thē whole and ſounde for thée, that the none vſing of them may be thy greater damnation. Therfore beware and feare geuing him thankes according to hys commaundementes. For we are hys creatures, and are much bounde to him that he hath geuen to vs our perfite members: for it is better for vs to haue our limmes and to worke with them diſtributing to other, then that other ſhould diſtribute vnto vs: for it is a more holy thing to geue thē to take: yea we are much bound vnto him, although he haue made vs imperfect and mutilate: for we were in his handes (as we are yet) to haue done with vs whatſoeuer had pleaſed him, euen to haue made vs the vileſt creature vpon the earth.

Ierem. 18.

I haue read of a ſhepheard which képing his ſhéepe in the field eſpyed a foule Toade, and when he had wel marked her, and conferred her ſhape and nature, vnto himſelfe and hys nature, he fell a weéping and cryed out piteouſly. At the laſt came a Biſhop by, riding right royally: and whē he ſaw the ſhepheard ſo ſore lamenting, he reynde hys horſe, & aſked him the cauſe of his great wayling. Then aunſwered the ſhepheard, Verely ſir I weépe for mine vnkindnes toward almightie God: for I haue geuen thākes to God of many thynges, but yet I was neuer ſo kind ſince I was borne, as to thanke him of this thing. What is that, ſayd the Biſhop? Syr (quod he) ſée you not this foule toade? Yes (quod the Biſhop) what is that to the purpoſe? Verely (ſayd the ſhepheard) it is the creature of God as well as I am, and God might haue made me euen ſuch a foule and vnreaſonable beaſt as this is, if it had pleaſed him, & yet he hath not done ſo, but of his mercy and goodnes he hath made me a reaſonable creature, after his owne ſhape and likenes: and yet was I neuer ſo kynde as to thancke him that he had not made me ſo vile a creature, which thing I greatly bewayle, and mine vnkindeneſſe cauſeth me now thus to weépe. With ỹ the Biſhop departed, and I truſt learned to do thereafter. And I beſéech God that we may ſo do, and be the faythfull followers of our Sauiour Chriſt Ieſu, to whom be prayſe, honour, and glory for euer. Amen.

A myrrour or lookyng glaſſe wherin you may beholde the Sacrament of Baptiſme deſcribed. Anno. M.D.xxxiij.

By me Iohn Frith.

Conſideryng the manifold & lamentable errours wherewith not the ignorant people onely, but alſo the learned (as they ſéeme) haue bene ſeduced long as touchyng the bleſſed Sacrament of Baptiſme. I thought it expedient therin to write my mynde. Truſtyng by that meanes to bryng agayn the blynde hartes of many vnto the right way, and I doubt not but that the elect and choſē of God, that know their ſhepheardes voyce, and haue the ſpirite to iudge all thynges, ſhall eaſely perceiue whether this be conformable to their maſters voyce, and ſhall hereby bee monished to leaue their wanderyng in the darke & lothſome wayes which leade vnto death, and to walke without ſtumblyng in the comfortable light which bringeth their conſciences to reſt, & ſuch peace that paſſeth all vnderſtandyng.

Iohn. 10. 1. Cor. 2.

Gods elect perceiue eaſely the ſpirituall meaning of his Sacramentes.

Walking in the truth bringeth reſt of conſcience. Phil. 4.

One errour is this. They put ſo great confidence in the outward ſigne that without diſcretion they condēne the the infantes, whiche dye or they be Baptiſed vnto euerlaſtyng payne, an other is this. They cleaue ſo ſtrongly vnto the weake ceremonies, that they thinke if a dronken Prieſt leaue out a word, as Volo ſaye, or Credo ſaye, or forget to put ſpittell or ſalt in ỹ childes mouth that ỹ child is not chriſtened, yea ſo much giue they thereunto the beggerly ſalt, that they will ſay ſpill not the ſalt, for it is our Chriſtendome, and vſe alſo to ſweare by it. Saying by this ſalt that is my Chriſtendome. Alas what blyndneſſe is this, theſe two errours are the principall that I do entend at this tyme to confute. For when they are fallen, the other that are grounded on theſe muſt nedes decay. Firſt we muſt marke thre thynges in euery Sacrament to be conſidered the ſigne, the ſignification and the fayth, whiche is geuen vnto vs by the wordes of God. The ſigne in Baptiſme is the ploungyng downe in the materiall water and liftyng vp agayne by the whiche as by an outward badge we are knowen to be of the number of them which profeſſe Chriſt to be theyr redemer and Sauiour.

Externall ſignes with out ſpirituall ſenſe taught and beleued of the blinde papiſtes.

Three thynges ought to be cõſidered in euery Sacrament.

Outwarde ſignes neyther miniſter vnto vs Gods ſpirit nor his grace.

This outward ſigne doth neither geue vs the ſpirite of God: neither yet grace that is the fauour of God. For if thorough the waſhyng in the water the ſpirite or grace were geuẽ, then ſhould it folow that who ſoeuer were baptiſed in water ſhould receiue this precious gift, but that is not ſo, wherfore I muſt nedes conclude that this outward ſigne by any power or influence that it hath, bryngeth not the ſpirite or fauour of God. That euery man receiueth not this treaſure in Baptiſme it is euidẽt: for put the caſe that a Iew or an infidell ſhould ſay that he dyd beleue, & beleued not in dede, and dyd his wordes were baptiſed in dede (for no man cã iudge what his hart is, but we muſt receiue him vnto Baptiſme if he confeſſe our fayth with his mouth albeit his hart be farre from thence) this miſcreant now thus Baptiſed hath receiued this outward ſigne and Sacrament, aſwell as the moſt faythfull man beleuyng. Howbeit he neither receiueth the ſpirite of God, neither yet any grace but rather condemnation. Wherefore it is euident that the exterior ſigne giueth not this gift whiche is alſo as certaine in all other Sacramentes, yea in the Sacrament of the altare whiche may be called a double Sacrament. For it is not onely a remembraunce that the naturall body of Chriſte was broken and hys bloud ſhed for our redemption as the Euangeliſtes do teſtifie, but alſo it is his ſpirituall body whiche is the congregation of the faythfull as S. Paul teſtifieth: ſaying, the bread which we breake is it not the partaking (that is to ſay we that are partakers) of the body of Chriſt? For we (ſayth he) though we be many yet are we one bread & one body. But for all that, the receiuyng of this Sacrament giueth vs not the ſpirite of God neither yet his fauor: for the wicked receiueth it as well as ỹ good. Howbeit that receiuyng is to theyr dãnation. Wherfore it foloweth that the outwarde ſigne giueth no mã any grace. Moreouer if the ſpirite of God and his grace were bounde vnto the Sacramentes, then where ỹ Sacramẽts were miniſtred there muſt ỹ ſpirit of grace waite on, and where they were not miniſtred, ſhuld be neither ſpirit nor grace. But that is falſe, for Cornelius & all his houſhold receiued ỹ holy ghoſt before they were Baptiſed. In ſo much that Peter ſayd may any man forbyd that theſe ſhould be baptiſed with water whiche haue receiued the holy ghoſt as well as we. And ſo he commaunded them to be baptiſed, in the name of the Lord, here may we ſee that as the ſpirite of God lighteth where he will, neither is he bounde to any thing. Yea and this example doth well declare vnto vs that the Sacramentes are geuen to be an outward witneſſe vnto all the cõgregation of that grace whiche is geuen before priuatly vnto euery man.

Marke well this example.

He that receiueth the ſigne of a ſacrament outwardly and not the ſignificatiõ inwardly in hart, receiueth his damnation.

Note.

The ſpirite of God is not bounde to the outwarde ſignes of ſacramẽtes.

Actes. 10.

Gods ſpirite not bounde to any place.

So is Baptiſme giuen before the congregation vnto hym which before he receiue it, hath either profeſſed the Religion of Chriſt, or els hath the Infidels must first beleue in Christ, and after receiue Baptisme as the badge of your fayth in him.

Note.

word of promise, by the whiche promesse he is knowen to be of the sensible congregatiō of Christ and for this cause when we baptise one that is come vnto the age of discretiō we axe of hym whether he beleue, if he answere yea and desire Baptisme then is he baptised so that we require faith in hym before he be baptised (whiche is the gift of God) and commeth of grace, and so it is an outward signe of hys inuisible fayth whiche before was giuen hym of God. If an infant be brought vnto baptisme whom his frendes offer vp willyng to sanctifie and fulfill the commaundement and ordinaunce of God, we enquire of his frendes before the congregatiō whether they will that theyr child be baptised and when they haue aunswered yea, thē receiueth he Baptisme. Here also went before the promise of God that hee of his grace reputeth our infantes no lesse of the congregation then the infantes of the Hebrues and thorough Baptisme doth the congregation receiue him whiche was first receiued thorough grace of the promise, thus may we see that Baptisme bryngeth not grace, but doth testifie vnto the congregation that he which is baptised had such grace geuen hym before, so is Baptisme a Sacrament, that is the signe of an holy thyng euē a token of the grace and frē mercy whiche was before geuen hym, a visible example of inuisible grace whiche is done and geuen through the gentlenesse of God. By this may we perceiue how grosse theyr ignorannce is which without discretion condemne the infantes that departe out of this worlde not baptised in our materiall water. For if that water geue no grace as I haue sufficiently proued, why should they condemne more before that washyng, then after. Beside that the election of God is frē and followeth not our fayth, but fayth followeth the electiō as it is writtē. And there beleued euen as many as were ordeined vnto euerlastyng lyfe for they that are chosen frō ỹ beginnyng are no doubt chosen before they had fayth, we ought not therfore to geue such vnaduised iudgement on these children which by their age haue not yet heard our fayth, seyng Gods election is hidde from our eyes.

The definition of Baptisme.

Fayth followeth our election.

Actes. 13.

Rashe iudgement in mistical matters not lawfull.

The children of Israell were a people which God had chosen from among all nations of the worlde, and gaue them Circumcision for a token and memoriall of that election, which circumcision was a figure of our baptisme, and they thought that the gentiles which were not carnally circumcised had bene all condemned. But their opinion deceiued them for there were also of the Gentiles which although they were not circumcised outwardly were electe of God & were spiritually circumcised, which onely is the thing that God regardeth, as Paule testifieth, saying, He is not a Iew which is a Iew outwarde, neyther is that circumcision any thyng which is outward in the flesh: but he is a Iew which is hid within the circumcision of the hart, which is the cutting off, of carnall desires, and is the true circumcision. This circumcision was in price with God, wyth the which the gentiles (as Iob) were circumcised. And in like maner may we say of our Baptisme, he is not a Christen man which is washed wyth water, neither is that baptisme which is outwarde in the flesh: but that is the very baptisme which God alloweth, to be baptised spiritually in the hart, that is, to subdue and mortifie out the braunches of sinne that it raigne not in your mortall bodies, and bring thē into bōdage vnder it: of ỹ which our Baptisme is but a signe. And there are many (I doubt not) which are thus spiritually baptized although theyr bodies touch no water, as there were gentiles thus spiritually circumcised and yet neuer cutte of the foreskinne of theyr privy members.

Furthermore the children of the vncircumcision are of the people and congregation of God aswell as the children of the Hebrewes vnder the law were members of theyr congregation. I take the congregation of God in thys place euen somewhat largely, that is, for all them that are thought thought or coũted to be the members of Chriſt, as it is taken, Mathew 13. where Chriſte compareth it vnto a nette which receyueth both good fiſh and euill: and agayne Mathew 25. where he likeneth the kingdome of heauen, that is to say, the congregation of God vnto x. virgins, of the which v. were wiſe, and v. foliſh: but I ſpeake not in this place of the elect ſanctifyed and inuiſible congregation, which is wythout ſpotte and wrinckle, and onely knowne vnto God which hath choſen her before the foundations of the worlde were layde, neyther is it to be eſtéemed but that God is as mercyfull vnto vs which are of the ſpirituall Iſraell, as he was vnto the carnall Iſraell. S. John, S. Paule and ſuch other were they not (being infantes) of the cõgregation of God elect in Chriſt Jeſu before the creation of the worlde? howbeit in theyr infancy they neither had fayth, nor yet knew any thing of this election. Mathew, Zacheus, the theef and Mary Magdalene were they not likewiſe ſo choſe, yet they themſelues knew it not vntill they were lightened of the holy Ghoſt, and drawne vnto Chriſt by our heauenly Father, neyther knoweth any man of an others election, but euery man may knowe hys owne through hys fayth and will that he hath to fulfill the law of God. Of this ſenſible congregation of Chriſt was Judas, yea and all the other which after forſoke Chriſt, neither wilt the Apoſtles but that Judas had bene of the elect, ſanctifyed, and inuiſible congregation of Chriſt, aſwell as Peter or John: ſo that our iudgement recounteth all faythfull and choſen, that ſéeme to be, but Chriſt knoweth them that are hys, and them that ſhall forſake him.

Gods elect Church is without ſpotte and onely knowen to God.

Man is vncertaine of his election vntill the holy ghoſt working in hym aſſure hym therof.

Good and bad are of the ſenſible Church.

Nowe is there an opinion riſen amõg certaine, which affirme ỹ childrẽ may not be baptiſed vntill they come vnto a perfecte age, and that becauſe they haue no faithe: but verely me thinketh that they are farre from the meekeneſſe of Chriſte, and his ſpirite, which when children were broughte vnto him, receiued them louingly, and embraced them in his armes. Mat. 9. and when his Diſciples blamed the bringers, he called them vnto hym, ſaying: ſuffer children to come vnto me, and forbid them not, for of ſuch is the kingdom of heauen. Luk. 18. And albeit they haue no faith, but are only of that inuiſible congregation, that is, wout ſpot or wrinkel: yet as I haue ſaide they haue a promiſe as well as the children of the Hebrewes, by the which they are of the viſible congregation, which thing only is teſtified in theyr baptiſme. So it appeareth that theſe men are ignorãt what baptiſme is. For oure baptiſme doth not teſtifie that we are of that pure congregation, which was choſen and ſanctified in Chriſte before the worlde began, which haue theyr names written in the booke of life, of the which it is not poſſible that one ſhoulde periſhe, for then were it a falſe teſtimonie: ſeing many whiche are baptiſed, fall afterward into perillous hereſies, and vtter deſperation which bringeth them vnto deathe euerlaſting. And as for faith if they haue none when they are baptiſed, lette them pray vnto God to giue it them afterwarde: for the lacke of fayth hurteth not the ſacramente, but the ſacrament may be as well miniſtred vnto a miſcreant as to a faithfull, if he ſay that he hathe faythe, or haue any promiſe of God, but thys matter will I paſſe ouer: for I truſte the Engliſh (vnto whõ I wryte this) haue no ſuch opinions.

Infantes may be baptiſed becauſe they be partakers of the promiſe although they as yet haue no fayth.

Nowe will I proceede wyth the ſecond poynte of this ſacrament, which is the ſignification. The ſignification of baptiſme is deſcribed of Paule in the. 6. of ỹ Romaines, that as we are plunged bodily into the water. Euen ſo we are dead & buried with Chriſte from ſinne: and as we are lifted again out of the water, euen ſo are we riſen with Chriſte from oure ſinnes, that we might hereafter walke in a newe conuerſation of lyfe. So that theſe two things, that is to be plunged in the water, and lifte vp againe, doe ſignifie and repreſent the whole pith and effect of baptiſme, that is the mortification of our olde Adam, & the rising vp of our new man. What is ỹ old Adam? verely euẽ that by naturall inheritaunce is planted thorough Adams fall in vs, as to be vnfaythfull, angrie, enuious, couetous, slouthfull, proud, and vngodly, these and suche other vses wherewith oure nature is venemed, ought we withall diligence to cutte of, and mortifie, that we may daily be more pacient, liberall, and mercifull according to that oure baptisme doth signifie. In so much that a Christen mannes lyfe is nothing els saue a cõtinuall baptisme, whych is begon when are dipped in the water, and is put in continuall vse and exercise, as long as the infection of sinne remaineth in oure bodyes, whych is neuer vtterly vanquished vntill the houre of death, and there is the great Golias slayn wyth hys owne sweard, that is deathe, whych is the power of sinne, and the gate of euerlasting lyfe opened vnto vs, and thus is Paule to be vnderstand. Galat.3. where he sayth. All ye that are baptised into Christ, haue put Christe on you, that is, you haue promised to dye wyth Christe as touching youre sinnes and worldly desires passed, and to become new mẽ, or creatures or members of Christ, this haue we all promised vnto the congregation, and it is represented in our Baptisme. But alas there are but few which in dede fulfil that they promise or rather that the Sacrament promiseth for them. And for this cause it is called of Paule the fountaine of the new byrth and regeneration. Tit.iij. bicause it signifieth that we wil in dede renounce & vtterly forsake our old life & purge our mẽbers frõ the workes of iniquitie thorough ỹ vertue of ỹ holy ghost, which as the water or fire doth clense the body, Euen so doth it purifie the hart from all vncleanesse: yea it is a commõ phrase in Scripture to cal the holy ghost water and fire, because these two elementes expresse so liuely hys purgyng operation.

The whole course of mans life is a continuall Baptisme.

Galat.3.

Tit.3. Baptisme is the fountaine of our new byrth.

The signification of Baptisme, that is to say, bantshyng the old mã and puttyng on the new acquired onely by fayth.

Now haue we expounded the signification of Baptisme which signification we may obtaine onely by fayth, for if thou be baptised a thousãd times with water & haue no fayth it auayleth thee no more towardes God, thẽ it doth a Gose when she ducketh her selfe vnder the water. Therefore if thou wilt obtaine the profite of Baptisme thou must haue fayth, that is, thou must bee surely persuaded that thou art newly borne agayne not by water onely, but by water and the holy ghost, John.iij. & thou art become ỹ child of God & that thy sinnes are not imputed to thee, but forgeuẽ through ỹ bloud & passion of Christ, according vnto the promise of God. This fayth haue neither ỹ deuils, neither yet the wicked. For the wicked cã not beleue ỹ remissiõ of their sinnes, but fall vnto vtter desperation and make God a lyer as much as in thẽ is. For they beleue not the testimony which he gaue his sonne, and this is that testimony, that all which beleue on hym haue euerlastyng lyfe John. v. And the deuils can not beleue it, for they haue no promise made vnto them. Thus through Christes bloud, wherof our Baptisme hath his full strength and vigour, are we regenerate and made at one with the father. For by our first naturall byrth, we are the children of wrath. Finally baptisme is an ordinaunce institute of God (and no practise of mans imagination) put in vse in Christes time, and after his resurrection commaunded to be ministred vnto all that beleeue, whether they were Iewes or Gentiles. For Christ sayth to his Apostles, Go ye & teach all nations baptizing them in the name of the Father, & of the Sonne and of the holy Ghost. Wherfore although it seeme neuer so exterior a thing, yet ought it to be had in great price and much reuerence because it was commaũded of God to be done. Beside that it is an outward signe or witnesse vnto the cõgregation of the inuisible promise geuen before by grace vnto euery priuate man, and by it doth the congregation receiue hym openly to be coũted one of thẽ which was first receiued by faith, or through the grace of the promise: it putteth vs as indifferent and to put no confidēce in them. For then should they hurte and vnquiet our conscience, if thorowe negligence, or otherwise any thinge were vndone, and so shoulde they be an occasion to plucke vs from Christe, which were institute for a meane to bring vs vnto him. Therfore the Seniours and ministers of the congregations ought to instructe their flockes to take these thinges indifferent, which neyther saue nor damne, whether they be done or vndone. And if they perceyue the people cleaue to fore to them, then ought they to sēke out a tyme conuenient, and to abrogate or alter those ceremonies, or elles they can not escape the wrath of God. For they that sēke health in such ceremonies are fallen from grace and treade vnder their fote the bloude of Christ, vnto their condemnation. But their bloude shal be required at your hādes, which better should haue instructed them. And as concerning the abrogation or alteration of ceremonies, we haue a godly ensample of the Sabaoth. The Sabaoth was instituted and cōmaūded of God to be kept of the chyldren of Israel. Notwithstanding because it was a signe or a ceremony, and did signifie vnto them that it was God which sanctified them with his spirit, and not themselues wyth their holy workes. And because also that all ceremonies and shadowes ceased whē Christ came. So that they might be done or left vndone indifferētly. Our forefathers, which were in the beginning of the church, did abrogate thys Sabaoth to the entent that mē might haue an ensample of Christē libertie, and that they might know that neyther the kēpyng of the Sabaoth, nor of any other day, is necessary according to Paule. Ye obserue dayes, tymes, and monethes, I am afrayde of you that I haue laboured in vayne towardes you. Howbeit, because it was necessary that a day should be reserued, in the which the people might come together to heare the worde of God, they ordayned in the stede of ỹ Sabbaoth which was Saterday, the next day folowing which is Sonday. And although they myght haue kept the Saterday wyth the Iewes as a thyng indifferent: yet did they much better to ouerset the day, to be a perpetuall memory that we are frē and not bounde to any day, but that we may do all lawful workes to the pleasure of God and profite of our neighbour. We are in maner as superstitious in the Sonday as they were in the Saterday, yea, and we are much madder. For the Iewes haue ỹ worde of God for their Saterdaye, sithe it is the seuenth daye, and they were commaunded to kēpe the seuēth day solempne. And we haue not the worde of God for vs but rather agaynst vs, for we kēpe not the seuenth day as ỹ Iewes do. But the first which is not commaunded by Gods lawe: but Paule byddeth that no man iudge vs as concernyng holy day feates, and such other exteryour thyngs, yea and in no wise will he that we obserue them, countyng them more holy then other dayes. For they were institute that the people should come together to heare Gods worde, receyue the sacramentes, and geue God thankes. That done, they may returne vnto their houses and do their businesse as well as any other day. Ye that thinketh that a man sinneth which worketh on the holy daye, if he be weake or ignoraunt, ought better to be instruct, and so to leaue his hōde. But if he be obstinate and perseuer in hys sentence, he is not of God, but of the deuill, for he maketh sinne in such as God leaueth frē. Accordyng to thys ensample, would I that our ceremonies were altered, because (as I haue sayd) the people sēke health in them. And what vilany can they do more to Christes bloude?

And as concerning Godfathers & Godmothers, they promise for their Godchildren that they shall mortifie the rote of sinne which springeth in the bodies, and subdue their lustes vnder the lawe of God. They promise also that they will instructe and bryng vp their Godchildren in the fayth of Christ: which office pertayneth

And no maruell for Sathan hym ſelfe, is ſome tyme tranſſigured into an aungell of light, therefore it is no great thyng, if that his miniſters do take vpon them a ſimilitude, as though they were the miniſters of iuſtice, whoſe ende ſhalbe accordyng to their workes. The Pope ſayth, if any man wyll receaue any office vnder vs, he ſhalbe ſworne before, yea, and geue a great ſumme of money. Ca. Signifi. de elect.

Iohn.19. 19. Chriſt had a crowne of thorne thruſt vpon his head, ſo that ỹ bloude ranne downe vpō his amiable countenaunce, and ſharpe nayles thorow his precious handes.

Ca. Conſtãt. diſt. nouã. The Pope muſt weare thrée crownes of golde, ſet with riche precious ſtones, he lacketh no Diademes, hys handes and fingers with owches and ringes are royally dight, he paſſeth poore Chriſt farre.

Math.10. 20. Chriſt toke the croſſe of painfull affliction vpon himſelfe, and cōmaūded his diſciples to folow him, ſaying, he that taketh not his croſſe, and folow me, is not méete for me.

The Pope and hys Byſhops take the croſſe of pryde, and haue it borne before them, well gilt and amelde, to haue a worſhippe of thys world, as for other croſſe know they none.

Luke.23. 21. Chriſt prayed his father to forgeue them that treſpaſſed hym, yea, and for them that put him to death.

Our Byſhoppes, pray the kyng to be auenged on them that reſiſte their myndes, with forgeuenes they haue no acquaintance.

Math.10. 22. Chriſt bad his diſciples to preach the Goſpell.

The Pope and his Byſhops wyll haue men to preach fables, and therto graunt letter and ſeall, and many dayes of pardon.

Iohn.19. 23. Chriſt commaunded hys diſciples to knowe his lawe, and bad the Exod.16. Iewes to ſerche the Scriptures. And Moſes exhorted ẏ Iſraelites to teach the lawe of God to their younge children. And that they ſhoulde haue it bounde as a ſigne in their handes, that it myght euer be before theyr eyes: And cauſed them to write it on the poſtes and dores of their houſes.

The Pope and his Biſhoppes ſay, that it is not mete for vs to knowe it, they make it hereſie and treaſon to ẏ kyng to know Chriſt or his lawes, they haue digged ciſternes of theyr owne traditions, and haue ſtopped vp the pure fountaynes of Iſraell. Oh Lord, (in whom is all our truſt) come downe from the heauens, why dooſt thou tary ſo long, ſeyng thyne aduerſary thus preuayling agaynſt thee?

Heb.9. 24. Chriſt approued hys lawe and confirmed it with his owne death.

The Pope and Byſhoppes be full buſie how they may deſtroy it, and magnifie more theyr owne lawe then Chriſtes, to maintayne theyr fatte bellyes.

Math.25. 25. Chriſt would men viſited priſoners, to comfort and deliuer them.

The Pope with his adherentes, diſcomfort the poore and the true, and put them in priſon for the truth.

26. Chriſt whom they call their example, did neuer priſon nor perſecute any.

The Pope and his champyons, perſecute, punyſhe, priſon, and put to death, them that are diſobedient to their voluptuous pleaſures. Ye ſee how ſtrayghte they followe Chriſtes ſteppes.

Math.18. 27. Chriſt cõmaunded his diſciples that if any man treſpaſſed agaynſt them, they ſhoulde go & reproue hym priuely, if he would not obey and be reconcyled, then ſhoulde they take with them one witnes or twayne, if he would not then heare them, that they ſhould tell it to the whole cõgregation. And if he would ſtill continue in his ſtubbernes, that they ſhould auoyde his company.

The Pope and Byſhoppes wyll caſt ſtraight into priſon, there to remaine in pryons to make them reuoke the truth, and graunt to their willes, and if he be ſtronge and will not forſake the truth, they will condemne him without audience, for feare of loſing of their temporall winning. And offering to their wombes, and taking away of their temporaltyes, wherewith the church is venomed.

28. Chriſt charged Peter thryſe, to Iohn.21. kéepe well and nouriſhe his ſhéepe.

The Pope chargeth much more to kéepe well his money. As for the ſhéepe he ſhereth and puniſheth wyth infinite exactions.

29. Chriſt healing the ſicke and do- Math.8. ing many myracles, did lightly, euer Marke.1. commaunde that they ſhoulde tell no Luke.5. man who did heale them.

The Pope and Byſhoppes, geue great giftes to minſtreiles and meſſengers, to lende lyers and flatterers to crye their name about, that they may haue worſhyppe in this worlde.

30. Chriſt had no ſecular courte to Math.5. pleade ẏ matters of his diſciples, for they would not reſiſt euill.

The Pope and Biſhoppes, haue many with men of lawe to ſpoyle ẏ poore againſt mercy, forgeue they will not, but euer be auenged.

31. Chriſt in cities and townes hun- Math.8. & ted the fendes out of men that they 17. dwelled in, with the wordes of hys mouth.

The Pope and Byſhoppes, hunt the wilde Deare, the For, and the Hare, in their cloſed parkes, wyth great cryes, and hornes blowinge, with Houndes and ratches running.

32. God was called the holy father Iohn.22. of Jeſu Chriſt his ſonne.

The Pope is called moſt holy father of Sathãs children, & taketh that name on him wyth Lucifers pride: his diſciples ſay ẏ he is god on earth, and we are taught by Chriſtes lawe to haue but one God.

33. Chriſt

Luke.2. 33. Chriſt ſate in the middes of the Doctors, aſking, and hearing them.

The Pope and Byſhoppes ſit in thrones wyth glorious myters, iudging and condemning by theyr owne made lawes. A litle matter long in pleating, which myght be ſone determined by the lawe of God, if they would vſe it, but then were their winning the leſſe, and their lawe wythout profite.

Math.5. 34 Chriſt taught that a man ſhoulde forſake his wife for no cauſe but for aduoutry.

The Pope and Byſchoppes wyll make deuorces for money, as often as they lift, and ſo they pille the poore and make themſelues rich, nothyng regardyng to breake the law of God.

Actes.2. 35. Chriſt ſent the holy ghoſt in feruent loue, to teach all the truth vnto them which were choſen of God.

The Pope and Byſhoppes ſende commaundements all about to curſe and aſke aungeaunce on them that reſiſte theyr tyranny, And abſoile thē agayne cleane for money: all their doctrines haue golden tayles, for money is euer the ende, geue them money, and you haue fulfilled all theyr lawes.

Math.3. 36. Chriſt fulfilled and kept the olde lawe and the new, and all righteouſneſſe.

The Pope and Byſchoppes kéepe their owne traditions and lawes, but the lawe of God is cleane out of their myndes.

Iohn.12. 37. Chriſt ſayd, that men ſhoulde know his diſciples by their charitie, becauſe they ſhould loue one another as he hath loued them.

The Pope cauſeth his to be knowen, by theyr ſhauen crownes, by gathering vp of tithes, maſſe pence, and offeringes, by the gylden trentalles, and ſalaryes to ſing, by Peter pence gathering, and ſhriuing for monye, by peny wedding, and holy water ſprinkling, and many mo markes hath he geuen them, As for charitie, they know it not at all.

Iohn.9. 38. Chriſt bad them that hee healed to go and ſinne no more.

The Pope and Biſhops haue layned penaunce, and commaunde men to faſt bread & water, to go barefote, without a ſhurt, & to offer to certaine idols money or cattell, ſome Maſſes muſt be ſong for them becauſe theyr confeſſours ſhould haue ſome profite, Some muſt go about the church, and Churchyard, with a taper burnyng in hys hand. And euer ſome be puniſhed by the purſe, though they offend not.

39. Chriſt ſent to preach ſeuēty and two Diſciples, whiche promiſed frēely heauen to them that would beleue in the name of Chriſt. Luke.10.

The Pope and Byſhops ſende about foure ſectes of beggers to geue pardon vnder their maſter Antichriſt. And to ſell heauen to whom ſo euer they liſte, the Apoſtles knew no ſuch thynges.

40. Chriſt was buryed in a garden in a poore monument without any funerall pompe. Iohn.19.

The Pope and Byſchops are buryed in tombes well gilt with many a torch and great ſolemnitie, with angels gloriouſly portered that beare their ſoules to heauen. Notwithſtandyng it is to be feared that they go to ſupper with the deuill.

41. Chriſt ſayth if thou wilt be perfite go and ſell all thy goodes and geue it vnto the poore for then ſhalt thou haue treaſure in heauen. Math.19.

The pope ſaith if thou wilt be perfite geue me thy money & I will geue thée a pardon that ſhall abſolue thée cleane a pœna & culpa I will for thy money geue thée, the kaye of heauen gates.

42. Chriſt ſaid vnto his Apoſtles the Kynges and Princes of the Gentiles haue rule and power ouer them, but you ſhall not ſo haue. Luke.22.

The Pope ſayth, all Emperours, Kynges and Lordes be my ſubiectes. This is dayly read in his Buls, wher in he commaundeth the nobilitie, like as a maſter doth his ſeruaunt.

43. Chriſt ſayth, he that among you wilbe greateſt, let him be all your ſeruauntes. Math.23. Marke.9.

The Pope ſayth, The Emperour muſt ſweare an oth vnto me as vnto his Lord, that he will be my ſubiect & exalte and worſhyp me with honour. Ca. Tibi Domino. Di. 63.

Math. 15. 44. Chriſt ſayth that we worſhyppe hym in vayne with mens doctrines & traditions.

The Pope ſayth my traditions in the ſpiritual law, ſhall be kept as duely, as if God had commaunded it him ſelfe, or S. Peter had preached it hym ſelfe. Ca. Si omnes. Diſt. 19.

Iohn. 14. 45. Chriſt ſayth I am the way and the treth folow me in my learnyng. And rule you by ỹ Scripture for that ſhall be your iudge.

The Pope ſayth, ye ſhall in all thynges folow the Church of Rome (by that meaneth he him ſelf and his Cardinals) Diſt. xi. Cap. quis neſciat. And as for the Scripture, it ſtandeth in my power & authoritie, for I may make of it what ſeeuer I will. Diſt. xix. Cap. Si romanorum.

Marke. 11. 46. Chriſt ſaith he that beleueth and is baptiſed, he ſhall be ſaued, but he that beleueth not ſhalbe damned.

The Pope ſayth hee that geueth much money for my pardõ ſhalbe abſoyled a pœna & a culpa. And thẽ muſt he nedes be ſaued. And he that teacheth otherwiſe is an hereticke, this teſtifieth his bulles and pardons.

Math. 4. 47. Chriſt promiſeth forgeuenes of ſinne. And the kyngdome of heauen vnto them that repẽt and will amend their lyues.

The Pope ſayth, that no man can be ſaued except he bee firſt ſhreuen of his Prieſtes & Friers, for they bryng in money. Cap. omnes.

Math. 5. 48. Chriſt ſayth you ſhall loue your enemyes, and ſhall do good vnto them that hate you.

The Pope ſayth, they that be enemyes, to me & my Cardinals, be curſſed with the great excommunication, and cã not be abſoyled without much money, this is euident inough.

Math. 17. 49. Chriſt commaunded his Diſciples not to reſiſt euill, but if a man ſtrike them on ỹ one cheke, that they ſhould offer him the other alſo.

The Pope ſayth we may auenge and driue away force with force. Deſen. excom. cap. dilecto.

50. Chriſt (ſayth God the father) is my deare ſonne, hym ſhall you heare, for hys yoke is ſweete and his burden lyght. Math. 11.

The Pope ſayth you ſhall heare me, and my commaundement ſhall be kept and receaued of euery mã. Diſt. 93. cap. Si cuius. And if my cõmaundement and burthen were ſo heauy that it cã not well be ſuſtained and borne, yet ſhall ye obey me. Diſt. 19. cap. In memoriam.

51. Chriſt ſayd vnto the .ij. brethren, who hath ſet me to be your iudge in temporal goodes. As though he ſhould ſay. It pertaineth not to me, but vnto worldly iudges. Luke. 12.

The Pope ſayth I am iudge in all maner of cauſes for they bryng money vnto me. 9. q. 3. Conqueſtus.

52. Chriſt ſaith geue the Emperour ſuch as pertayneth vnto hym as tribute and cuſtome, for I haue payde tolle for me and Peter. Math. 22. Math. 17.

The Pope ſaith I care not for this, But I excommunicate all them that aſke any toll or tribute of me and my ſhauelynges, for I haue made them all frée. Cap. Nouit. de ſenten. excom. Et ca. Si quis. de conſ. diſt. i.

53. Chriſt ſayth. Peter put vppe thy ſword into the ſheath, for he that ſtriketh with ſword ſhall periſhe with the ſword. Math. 26.

The Pope ſayth, you Emperours, kynges, Princes, and Lordes, take ſwordes, ſpeares, halberdes, clubbes and gunnes, and helpe me to ſlea thẽ, that will not obey my tyranny. This muſt an Emperour do or els he muſt be periured. After this maner hath Julius the Pope ſlayne .xvi. thouſand men in one day, was not that wel paſtored? Dyd not he well nouriſh the ſhéepe which Chriſt dyd committe vn to his tuition?

54. Chriſt ſayde. Drinke you all of this cuppe, for this is the bloude of my promiſe. Math. 26.

The Pope ſayth, I will not graũt this, for my prieſtes alone ſhal drinke of it (becauſe it may crye auengeaũce on them alone) the other ſhall not drinke of it in the payne of hereſy.

55. Chriſt ſayth: Ye are my frendes if Iohn. 15.

if you do all thinges that I my ſelfe commaunde you.

The Pope ſayth, you ſhall do as I bid you, for I haue power and authoritie to make lawes. And after them ſhall you liue. 25.q.1.ca. Sunt quidam.

Math.19. 56. Chriſt ſayth that chaſtitie is not geuen vnto euery mã, they that haue it geuen, let them take it geuing thãkes to God. And let the other vſe the remedy which God hath prepared, for it is better to mary then to burne.

1.Cor.7. The Pope ſayth, all monkes, Fryers, and Nunnes, ſhall bowe and ſweare chaſtitie, be it geuen them or not, my Prieſtes alſo ſhall not be wedded, but as for to kẽpe whores, and rauiſhe other mens daughters & wiues, ſhalbe diſpenſed withall. I will ſee no ſuch thinges, for my Byſhoppes haue yearely great mony by it, like as bawdes be wont to haue.

Math.15. Roma.14. Colloſ.2. Tit.1. 57. Chriſt ſayth, all meates that mã taketh with thankes ſtaineth not the ſoule, for all things are pure to them that are pure.

The Pope ſayth, he that eateth egges, butter, or fleſhe in theſe dayes that I haue commaũded to be faſted, doth not onely ſtayne his ſoule wyth ſinne, but alſo is to be denounced an hereticke. Diſt.4.ca.Statuimus. This agreeth with Chriſt euen as the lyght doth with the darckneſs. And yet haue ye bene thus blynded long, that we could neuer perceaue this Antichriſt till now in the laſt dayes.

Math.16. Math.18. Iohn.15. 58. Chriſt ſayd vnto his Diſciples, that you bynde in earth ſhalbe boũde in heauen, and that you loſe in earth ſhalbe loſed in heauen.

The Pope chalengeth greater authoritie for he will loſe ſoules out of Purgatory, and commaunde the angels to fetch them out and all for money, without money you get nothing.

Luke.17. 59. Chriſt ſayth whẽ you haue done all thynges that I haue commaunded you, yet ſay that you are vnprofitable ſeruauntes.

The Pope ſayth do thoſe thynges that I commaũd thee, and take a ſure conſcience vnto thee that thou art a iuſt and a religious mã, and that thou haſt deſerued heauẽ. And as for I my ſelfe, If I do wrong in euery thyng, & bring many thouſandes with me into damnation, yet ſhall no man rebuke me, but cal me the moſt holieſt father. Diſt.40.ca.Si Papa. Oh abhomination.

60. Chriſt teacheth vs to fulfill the woorkes of mercy to the poore, euer commendyng mercy aboue offerings and ſacrifice. Math.26. Oſea.6. Math.9.

The Pope teacheth vs to geue our money for pardons, maſſes, diriges, to images and Churches, ſo that we may offer vnto their bellyes. And he that ſayth it is better to geue our charitie to the poore (as Chriſt ſayth) is counted halfe an hereticke, becauſe he goeth aboute to marre the Popes market.

61. Chriſte ſuffered death for our ſinnes and aroſe for our iuſtification, or els we all ſhould haue periſhed. Roma.4. Iohn.11.

The Pope ſayth if thou bye my pardõ, or els be buried in a grap Friers coate thou muſt nedes be ſaued, ſo that Chriſt hath ſuffered in vayne, ſith a Friers coate will ſaue a man.

62. Chriſt onely is our mediatour which maketh vnite betwirt hys father & vs, howbeit the prayer of a iuſt man is very good and profitable. 1.Iohn.2. Iames.5.

The Pope ſayth. The greateſt power and ſaluation next to Chriſt is myne. Diſt.60.cap.Si Papa. I maruell then why he is ſo curious to cauſe vs to worſhip the Saintes ỹ are a ſleepe. And not rather hym ſelfe, ſith he chalengeth a greater power then euer they dyd while they lyued.

63. Chriſt ſayth, who ſoeuer breake one of my leſt cõmaundementes, ſhal be called the leſt (that is to ſay none) in the kyngdome of heauen. Math.5.

The Pope ſayth, what pertaineth his law vnto me. I am ſubiect to no lawes. 25.q.1.cap. Omnia. therefore doth the Pope but ſeldome right. And is alwayes agaynſt right yea and agaynſt his owne lawes, as often as men do bryng hym money, for that loueth he aboue all thynges.

64. Chriſtes law is fulfilled through charitie. Roma.13.

The Popes law is fulfilled by money, if thou haue no money to geue them, thou ſhalt carye a fagot, though thou offende not, money them & they ſée thée not, do what thou wilt.

Ephe. 1. Colloſ. 1. 1. Cor. 10. 65. Chriſt is the head of the Church as the Apoſtle doth teſtifie. And alſo the ſtone whereon the Church is buil ded. And this Church is the cõgregation of the faythfull and the very body of Chriſt.

The Pope ſayth, I am the head of the Church. Diſt. 19. cap. Enim vero. And the ſeate of Rome is the ſtone whereon the Church is builded. Diſt. 19. Ita Dominus. Can any thyng be more contrary vnto the honour and glory of God, then thus to diſpoyle hym of his kyngdome, whiche he ſo dearely hath bought thedyng his precious blond for it?

2. Pet. 2. 2. Timo. 3. 66. Chriſtes law whiche is the holy Scripture came by the inſpiryng of the holy ghoſt whiche dyd infuſe it aboundauntly into the hartes of the Apoſtles, and of the ſame ſpirite hath it his endurannce and interpretation.

The Pope ſayth, I am Lord of the Scripture to alow and diſalow it, for of me doth it take his full authority. ca. Si omnes. And for a token of this, is the Scripture of Chriſt, layd vnder his féete when he is at Maſſe.

Tit. 1. 67. Chriſtes Apoſtle ſayth, that a Byſhop ought to be ſo well learned, that he with the Scripture may be able to ouercome all them that be agaynſt the fayth.

The Pope and Byſhops will diſpute in Scripture with no man, but caſt them firſt in priſon, and proper engynes they haue inuẽted to wring their fingers ſo ſore, that the blonde ſhall braſte out at their fingers endes. they pyne them, and ſcourge thẽ with infinite other tormẽtes paynyng thẽ, to forſake the truth. And after make them ſweare on a booke that they ſhal, tell no man of it, thus cruelly do they entreate them againſt iuſtice. And if they can not ſubdue them to theyr willes, then do they committe them vnto ỹ ſeculare power to be burned.

Iohn. 19. 68. Chriſtes accuſation, and cauſe why he was condemned vnto death, was writtẽ ouer his head in Hebrew, Greéke, & Latine, that all men might know the cauſe, this was an argument that they vſed iuſtice (although they condemned him vniuſtly) ſithe men might ſée the offence and iudgement ioyned together.

The Pope and Byſhoppes condemne men, and committe them vnto the ſeculare power, that they ſhold execute the ſentence. But this is a miſcheuous abomination, that they will not ſuffer the ſeculare power, to know the cauſe why they put men to death, worſhipfull, diſ diuines, Maſter Doctor. O you gentle nobilitie, ponder this matter indifferently. Beware how you do execution, except you know the cauſe why. Thinke you the blonde ſhall not be requyred on you, if for an others pleaſure you deſtroy the worke of God. They will ſay vnto you, as the Iewes ſayde vnto Pilate concerning Chriſt: If he were not an euill doer we would not haue deliuered hẽ vnto you. Truſt not their wordes, for (no doubt) they are lyers, know the cauſe your ſelues, and heare the matter vnfaynedly. Thinke you they woulde not let you know the cauſe and iudgement, if they did iuſtice and not tyrannye? Be therefore no longer boyes to thẽ, which ought to be your ſeruauntes, God hath giuẽ you his ſpirite, grace and vnderſtanding, hide not the talent that God hath geuen you, but do your diligence to ſée iuſtice executed, ſecluding all tyranny, for that is your office appoynted you of God.

Luke. 6. 69. Chriſt ſayth, bleſſed are ye when men hate you, curſe you, and excommunicate you for the righteouſnes, that is to ſay, you nothing giltye nor worthy ſuch affliction.

The Pope and Byſhoppes ſaye that their curſe is ſore to be feared, yea and that it maketh men as blacke as a coole in the ſight of God, though they haue not offended. In ſo much that they muſt nédes be damned except they abſoile them agayne: howbeit Chriſt ſayth, that they are bleſſed: wherfore Chriſt is falſe, or els they are moſt vayne lyers.

Luke. 14. 70. Chriſt ſayde, when thou makeſt a dinner or feaſt, call not thy frendes, kinſmen, and neighbours that are riche, riche, but the poꝛe, lame and blinde, which are not able to recompẽce thée, then ſhalt thou be happye, foꝛ it ſhall be rewarded thée in the reſurrection of the iuſt.

The Pope and Byſhoppes wyll call none ſuch, foꝛ they thinke it great ſhame, but they call men of great authoꝛitie and riches, which wil receiue them wyth an other feaſt, they had leuer haue their bellies well ſtuffed in this woꝛld, then to tary foꝛ the pꝛomiſe of Chꝛiſt. They thinke it long a comming.

Math.5. Luke,6. 71. Chꝛiſt ſayth, eyther make ẏ tꝛée good and his fruite good alſo, oꝛ els make the tꝛée naught and his fruite naught alſo: meaning, that the tꝛée firſt ſhoulde be good, and then bꝛinge foꝛth good fruite, the fruite maketh not the tꝛée good, but the tꝛée maketh the fruite good, although we can not know that the tꝛée is good, but by hys fruite (foꝛ we can iudge nothing but by his outward operation) yet God ſæth the quicknes in the rote, which in the tyme that God hath appointed him, ſhall bꝛing foꝛth his fruite. And appꝛoueth ẏ tꝛée to be good, although he ſéme dead vnto vs. The tꝛée is fayth, which is the mother of all good woꝛkes, which euer woꝛketh by charitie when he ſæth occaſion.

The Pope and Byſhops ſay, that the fruite maketh the tꝛée good, cleane contrary to all Scripture and reaſon. And thus turne they the tꝛées and the rotes vpwarde, while they affirme that fayth ſpꝛingeth and is made good of woꝛkes. And not the contrary, euẽ as a man would ſay, the fruite bꝛingeth foꝛth and maketh good the tꝛée. And not the contrary. O what madnes is is? They woulde make men beleue if they ſhoulde longe continue, that ẏ Mone is made of grene cheſe.

72. Chꝛiſt ſayth, I am the doꝛe of the folde, he that entreth not in by the doꝛe, but by ſome other waye, is a thæfe & a murtherer, and regardeth not the ſhæpe.

The Pope, yea and all the cleargie (foꝛ the moſt part) enter not in by Chꝛiſt, but they runne in and are not called noꝛ ſent of Chꝛiſt, One entreth by a bagge of money, wherewyth he buyeth a fatte benefice. An other entreth by ſeruing great men, and coꝛping fauour. An other, becauſe he is a great man boꝛne, muſt be made a Cardinall, oꝛ els a Byſhop. Some haue boyſons of Abbayes and other places, to ſpeake a good woꝛde foꝛ them to the kyng oꝛ other great men. Some enter thoꝛowe their curious ſinging, and minyon daunſing, ſelwe oꝛ none foꝛ vertue & learninge.

73. Chꝛiſt ſayth, I am a good ſhepheard, A good ſhephead geueth hys lyfe foꝛ hys ſhæpe.

The Pope and Byſhoppes ſay alſo, that they are good ſhepheards, how be it, they pille and ſhere the ſhæpe ſo nigh, that they leaue not one locke of wolle on their backes. And in all pointes may be likened vnto the ſhepheardes that Zacharias pꝛopheſied of: which ſayth, I ſhall rayſe vp a ſhepheard in the earth, which ſhal not viſite the thinges that are foꝛſaken, and ſhall not ſéke that which is gone aſtray, neither yet heale the diſeaſed, noꝛ nouriſhe and mayntayne that which ſtandeth, but ſuch a ſhepheard that ſhall noꝛiſhe himſelfe and not the ſhæpe, and cryeth out of hym, ſaying. O thou ſhepheard and idoll, thynke you that this ſhepheard wyll geue his lyfe foꝛ the ſhæpe?

74. Chꝛiſt ſayth, deſire you not to be called maſter, foꝛ you haue but one maſter, which is Chꝛiſt, and all you are bꝛothers. Math.23.

The Pope will be called moſt holy, hys Cardinalles, moſt reuerend, hys Byſhoppes reuerend, hys Abbottes and Pꝛioꝛs moſt, and other glorious titles haue they, that paſſe maſter, farre. And except thou call them by thoſe names and titles, thou ſhalt runne farre into their indignation, let Chꝛiſt ſay what he wyll.

75. Chꝛiſt commaunded his Diſciples that they ſhould call no man father on the earth, ſhewing them that they had but one father, which is in heauen. Math.23.

The Pope muſt be called moſt holy father, if thou geue him not that name he will excommunicate you out of his ſinagoge, reaſon not with him, you may ſhew him the ſcripture, but it auayleth not, for he will wreſt it & wring it into a thouſand faſhions. And will neuer leaue it vntill he haue brought it vnto his owne purpoſe.

Acte.7. 76. Chriſtes faithfull ſeruaunt Stephen, ſayd, that God almighty dwelleth not in temples ỹ are made with mans hands, according vnto the prophetes ſaying. Eſay.66. Heauen is my ſeate, 2.King.7. and the earth is my foteſtole. What houſe will you builde for me, ſayth the Lorde? which is the place of my reſte? Did not my handes make all theſe thinges?

The Pope and his adherẽtes ſay, that he dwelleth in this place and that place, the Friers ſay we haue hym, you muſt bye hym of vs, the Monkes ſay, he is with vs, be good to our monaſtery, and you ſhall be ſure to haue hym. And ſo runne the ſely ſoules frõ Herode to Pilate. But they finde not Chriſt, for he dwelleth in no place but in the hart of a faithful mã, which 1.Cor.3. is the very temple of God.

77. Chriſtes Apoſtle Paule ſayth, Actes.17. We ought not to thinke that God is like gold, ſiluer, karued ſtones, or any ſuch thyng as man imagineth.

The Pope and his adherentes ſay that he is lyke a ſtocke and a ſtone, & cauſeth men to make images of hym, though God commaunded contrary Exod.20. ſaying. Thou ſhalt make no grauen image, neither any maner of ſimilitude of thoſe thynges whiche are in heauẽ aboue or on the earth beneath. Neither of thoſe thynges whiche are in the water, or vnder the earth, neither ſhalt thou honour or worſhyppe them. Good Chriſten beware of theſe Iohn.5. Idolles as Saint John councelleth thée, truely I thinke it be one of the greateſt cauſes of this errecation which God hath ſent into the world for ſinne.

78. Chriſt ſayd vnto Peter, thou art Symon the ſonne of Iona, thou ſhalt Iohn.1. be called Cephas which if it be enterpreted ſignifieth a ſtone as S. John ſayth in his Goſpell.

The Pope ſayth that Cephas ſignifieth the head, and of that gathereth he to be head of all the Byſhops, here doth he playnly contrary to Goſpell whiche expounedeth Cephas to bee a ſtone, what impudencie is this? I thinke he would ſay alſo that an Aſſe were a man if he thought to get any auauntage through it. Diſt.xxij. ca.ſacroſancta.

There are infinite other thynges wherein hee contrarieth Chriſt in ſo much that if it be diligẽtly examined, I thinke there is no word that Chriſt ſpake, but the other hath taught or made a law againſt it. Howbeit for to auoyde tediouſnes, we ſhall leaue them vnto your owne iudgement, for they are ſone ſearched out & eſpyed. Judge Chriſtẽ reader all theſe things with a ſimple eye, be not partially addict to the one nor to the other. But Judge them by the Scripture. And knowledge that to be the truth which Gods word doth alow, auoyding all other doctrine for it ſpringeth of Sathan, be not aſhamed to confeſſe pore Chriſt (and ſo take him for thy head) before theſe rauenous Wolues, for then ſhall he cõfeſſe thée agayn before Math.10. his father & the aungelles in heauen. Then ſhalt thou bee inheritour with Jeſu Chriſte, And the faythfull ſonne of thy father whiche is in heauen, to whom be all glory eternally. Amen.

¶Here endeth the Antitheſis betwene Chriſte and the Pope.

Tower of London, aunsweryng vnto M. Mores letter which he wrote against the first litle treatise that Iohn Frith made concernyng the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ, vnto which booke are added in the ende the articles of hys examination before the Bishops of London, Winchester and Lyncolne, in Paules Churche at London, for which Iohn Frith was condemned and after burned in Smithfield without Newgate the fourth day of Iuly. Anno. 1533.

¶ The Preface of this booke.

GRace and increase of knowledge from God the father through our Lorde Iesus Christ, be with the Christen reader, and with all them that loue the Lord vnfaynedly. Amen.

I chaunced beyng in these parties, to be in company with a Christen brother which for his commēdable conuersation, and sober behauiour, might better be a Byshop then many that weare miters if the rule of S. Paule were regarded in their election. This brother after much communication, desired to know my mynde as touchyng the Sacrament of the body and bloud of our sauiour Christ. Which thing I opened vnto hym accordyng to the gift that God had geuen me. First I proued vnto hym that it was no article of our fayth necessary to be beleued vnder payne of damnation. Then I declared, that Christ had a naturall body, euen as myne is (sauyng sinne) and that it could no more bee in two places at once thē myne cā. Thirdly I shewed him that it was not necessarie, that the wordes should so be vnderstand as they sound. But that it might be a phrase of Scripture, as there are innumerable. After that I shewed him certaine phrases and maner of speakynges. And that it was well vsed in our English toung and finally I recited after what maner they might receiue it according to Christes institutiō, not fearyng the froward alteration that the Priests vse contrary to the first forme and institution.

1. Timo. 3. Tit. 1.

The order that Iohn Frith keepeth in shewyng his mynde in the Sacrament of the body & bloud of Christ.

When I had sufficiently published my mynde, hee desired me to entitle the sume of my wordes, and write them for hym, because they seemed ouerlong to be well reteined in memorie. And albeit I was loth to take the matter in hand, yet to fulfill his instant intercession, I tooke vpon me to touche this terrible tragedie, and wrote a treatise, whiche beside my paynfull imprisonmēt, is like to purchase me most cruell death, which I am ready and glad to receiue with the spirite and inward man (although the flesh be frayle) when soeuer it shall please God to lay it vpon me. Notwithstādyng to say the truth I wrote it not to the intēt that it should haue ben published. For then I would haue touched the matter more earnestly, and haue written, as well of the spirituall eating & drinking which is of necessitie, as I dyd of the carnall which is not so necessarie. For the treatise that I made was not expedient for all men, albeit it were sufficient for them whom I tooke in hand to instruct. For they knew the spirituall and necessarie eatyng and drinkyng of his body & bloud which is not receiued with the teth and bellye, but with the eares and faith, and onely neded instructiō in the outward eating, whiche thing I therfore onely declared. But now it is cōmon abroad and in many mēs mouthes, in so much that M. More whiche of late hath busied hym selfe to medle in all such matters (of what zeale I will not define)

The occasiō that moued Iohn Frith to write on the Sacrament.

The spirituall eatyng of the Sacrament is by fayth.

hath sore labored to confute it, but some mē thinke that he is ashamed of his part and for that cause doth so diligently suppresse the woorke whiche he printed. For I my selfe saw the worke in Print in my Lord of Wincheſters house, vpon S. Stephens day last past. But neither I neither all the frēdes I could make, might attaine any copie, but onely one written copie whiche as it seemed was drawen out in great hast: notwithstandyng I can not well iudge what the cause should bee, that his boke is kept so secret: But this I am right sure of, that he neuer touched the foundation that my treatise was builded vpon. And therefore sith my foundation standeth so sure and inuincible (for els I thinke verely he would sore haue laboured to haue vndermined it) I will thereupon builde a litle more, and also declare that his ordinaūce is to slender to breake it downe, although it were set vppon a woorse foundation.

¶ The foundation of that litle treatise was, that it is no article of our fayth necessary to be beleued vnder payne of damnation, that the Sacrament should be the naturall body of Christ: which thyng is proued, on this maner.

The Sacrament to be the naturall body of Christ is no article of our fayth, necessary to be beleued vpon payne of damnation.

IRste we must all acknowledge that it is no article of our fayth which can saue vs, nor which we are bound to beleue vnder the paine of eternal damnation. For if I should beleue that hys very naturall body both flesh and bloud were naturally in the bread and wine, that should not saue me, seyng many beleue that, and receiue it to their damnation, for it is not his presence in the bread that can saue me, but his presence in my hart through faith in his bloud, which hath washed out my sinnes and pacified ỹ fathers wrath toward me. And agayne if I doe not beleue his bodely presence in the bread and wyne, that shall not damne me, but the absence out of my hart thorough vnbeleefe.

Now if they would here obiect that though it be truth that the absēce out of the bread could not damne vs: yet are we bounde to beleue it, because of gods word which (who beleueth not, as much as in him lyeth) maketh God a lyer. And therfore of an obstinate mynde not to beleue hys word, may be an occasion of damnation. Obiection.

To this we may answere, that we beleue Gods worde, and knowledge that it is true: but in this we dissent, whether it be true in the sence that we take it in, or in the sence that ye take it in. And we say agayne, that though ye haue (as it appeareth vnto you) the euident wordes of Christ, and therefore consiste in the barke of the letter: yet are we compelled by conferring of the scriptures together within the letter, to seeche out the mynde of our Sauiour which spake the wordes. And we say thirdly, that we do it not of an obstinate mynde: For he that defendeth a cause obstinately (whether it be true or false) is euer to be reprehended. But we do it to satisfie our cōsciēces, which are cōpelled by other places of Scripture, reasons, and Doctours so to iudge of it. And euen so ought you to iudge of your partie, and to defende your sentence, not of obstinacie, but by ỹ reason of Scriptures, which cause you so to take it. And so ought neither partie to dispise other, for eche seeketh the glory of God, and the true vnderstāding of the Scripture. Solution. Obstinate defendyng of any cause is worthy of reprehension. The foundation of Iohn Frithes first treatise vppon the Sacrament.

This was the foundation of my first treatise that he hath left vnshakē. which is a great argumēt ỹ it is very true: For els hys pregnant wit could not haue passed it so cleane ouer, but would haue assayled it with some sophisticall cauillation, which by hys painted poetrie he might so haue coulered, that at the lest he might make ỹ ignorant some appearance of truth, as he hath done agaynst the residue of my first treatise, which neuertheles is true, and shall so be proued.

And first, that it is none article of our fayth necessary to be beleued vn-

der payne of damnation, may thus bee further confirmed. The ſame fayth ſhall ſaue vs whiche ſaued the olde fathers before Chriſtes incarnation, But they were not bounde vnder payne of damnation to beleeue this pointe: therefore it ſhall followe that we are not bounde therto vnder the payne of damnation. The firſte part of myne argument is proued by S. Auguſtine ad Durdamũ. And I dare boldly ſay almoſt in an C. places. For I thinke there be no propoſitiõ which he doth more oftẽ inculcate thẽ this, ẏ the ſame fayth ſaued vs which ſaued our fathers. The ſecond part is manifeſt, that ẏ nedeth no probation. For how could they beleue ẏ thyng which was neuer ſaide nor done, and without the worde they could haue no fayth, vppon the truth of theſe two parties muſt the concluſion nedes follow. Notwithſtanding, they all dyd eate Chriſtes bodye and drynke hys bloud ſpiritually, although they had hym not preſent to their teeth. And by ẏ ſpirituall eating (which is the fayth in his body and bloud) were ſaued as well as we are. For as ſone as our forefather Adam had tranſgreſſed Gods precept, and was fallen vnder condemnation, our moſt mercyfull father of hys gracious fauour gaue hym the promiſe of health and comforte, whereby as many as beleued it, were ſaued from the thrauldome of their tranſgreſſion: the worde & promiſe was this: I ſhal put enmitie betwene thée and the woman, betwene thy ſéede and her ſéede, that ſéede ſhall treade thée on the head, and thou ſhalt treade it on the hele. In thys promiſe they had knowledge that Chriſte ſhould become the ſéede or ſonne of a woman, and that he ſhoulde deſtroye the deuill with all his power, and deliuer his faythfull from their ſinnes. And where he ſayde that the deuyll ſhould treade it on the hele, they vnderſtode right well that the deuyll ſhould finde the meanes by his wyles and wicked miniſters to put Chriſt to death. And they knew that God was true, and would fulfill hys promiſe vnto them, and hartely longed after this ſéede, and ſo did both eate his body and drinke his bloud, knowledging wyth infinite thankes, that Chriſt ſhould for their ſinnes take ẏ perfect nature of mãhode vppon him, and alſo ſuffer the death. This promiſe was geuen to Adam, and ſaued as many as did beleue and were thãk full to God for hys kyndnes, and after it was eſtabliſhed vnto our father Abraham by the word of God, which ſayde, In thy ſéede ſhall all nacions of the earth be bleſſed. And with hym God made a couenant that he would be his God, and do him good. And Abraham agayne promiſed to kéepe his preceptes and walke in his wayes. Then God gaue him the ſacrament of circumciſion, and called that his couenaunt, which thing notwithſtanding was not the very couenaunt in déede, although it were ſo called. But was onely a ſigne, token, ſacrament, or memorye all of the couenaunt that was betwene God and hym, which might erpounde our matter, if men had eyes to ſée. After that, God promiſed him a ſonne whẽ his wife was paſt childe bearing, and he alſo very olde. Neuertheleſſe, he doubted not of Gods worde. But ſurely beleued that he which promiſed it, was able to performe it. And that was recounted vnto hym for righteouſnes. This Abraham did both eate his body and drinke hys bloud (through fayth) beleuing verely that Chriſt ſhould take our nature, & ſpring out of his ſéede (as touching his fleſhe) and alſo that he ſhoulde ſuffer death to redéeme vs. And as Chriſte teſtifieth, he hartely deſired to ſée the day of Chriſt. And he ſawe it and reioyſed, he ſawe it in fayth and had the day of Chriſt, that is to ſay all thoſe thinges that ſhoulde chaunce hym, playnely reuelated vnto him, albeit he were dead many hũdred yeares before it were actually fulfilled and reuelated vnto ẏ worlde. And by that fayth was he ſaued, and yet neuer did eate his fleſhe with his téeth, nor neuer beleued that bread ſhoulde be his bodye and wyne hys bloud. And therfore ſith he was alſo ſaued without that fayth, and ẏ ſame fayth shall saue vs which saued hym, I thinke that we shall also be saued if we eate him spiritually (as he dyd) although wee neuer beleue that the bread is his body. Furthermore, that mercifull Moses whiche brought the children of Israell out of Egypt into the wildernes, obtayned of God by prayers, both Manna from heauē to fede his people, and also water out of the stone to refreshe and comfort thē. This Manna and water, were euen the same thyng vnto them, that the bread and wyne is to vs. For Saint Austen sayeth: Quicunq; in manna Christum intellexerunt, eundem quem nos cibum spiritualem manducauerunt.

Manna was to the Israelites the same that the Sacramēt is to vs now.

Quicunque autem de mãna solam saturitatemq; sunt manducabant & mortui sunt. Sic etiam eundē potū: petra enim erat christus. That is to say, as many as in that manna vnderstode Christ, did eate that same spirituall meate that we doe, but as many as sought onely to fill their bellies of that manna (the fathers of the vnfaythfull) did eate and are dead. And likewise ỹ same drinke, for the stone was Christ.

Auguſt. de vtilitate pœnitentiæ.

Here may you gather of S. Austen that the Manna was vnto them, as ỹ bread is to vs, and likewise, that the water was to them, as the wyne is to vs, whiche anone shall appeare more playnly. S. Austen sayth further, manducauit & Moses mãna, mãducauit & Aaron, manducauit & Phinees, manducauerunt ibi multi qui Deo placuerũt & mortui non sunt. Quare? quia visibilem cibum spiritualiter intellexerunt, spiritualiter esurierunt, spiritualiter gustauerunt, vt spiritualiter satiarentur. Omnes eandem escam spiritualem manducauerunt, & omnes eũdem potum spiritualem biberunt, spiritualem vtiq; eandem: nam corporalem alteram (quia illi manna, nos aliud) spiritualem vero eandem quam nos. Vt omnes eundem potum spiritualem biberunt aliud illi, aliud nos: sed specie visibili quod tamen hoc idem significaret virtute spirituali. Quomodo eundem potum bibebant (inquit Apostolus) de spirituali sequenti petra: petra autem erat Christus. That is to say, Moses also dyd eate Manna and Aaron and Phinées dyd eate of it, and many other dyd there eate of it, whiche pleased God and are not dead. Wherefore? Because they vnderstode the visible meate spiritually. They were spiritually an hungred, they tasted it spiritually, that they might spiritually be replenished. They dyd all eate ỹ same spirituall meate, and all dranke the spirituall drinke. Euen the same spirituall meate albeit an other bodely meate, for they dyd eate Manna, and we eate an other thyng, but they dyd eate the same spirituall, which we do. And they all dyd drinke the same spirituall drinke. They drāke one thyng and we an other: but that was in the outward apparence, which neuertheles dyd signifie the same thyng spiritually. How dranke they the same drinke? They (sayth the Apostle) dranke of ỹ spirituall stone folowyng them, and that stone was Christ. And thereunto Beda added these wordes. Videte autem fide manente signa variata. That is to say. Beholde that the signes are altered, and yet the fayth abydeth one.

A goodly saying of S. Augustine.

Beda super. 1. Cor. 10.

Of these places you may playnly perceiue not onely that it is no article necessary to be beleued vnder payne of damnation, seyng the old fathers neuer beleued it. And yet dyd eate Christ in fayth both before they had the Manna, & more expressly through the Manna with no lesse frute wheñ the Manna was ceassed. And albeit the Manna was to them as the Sacrament is to vs, and they eate euen the same spirituall meate that we do, yet were they neuer so mad as to beleue that the Manna was chaunged into Christes owne naturall body. But vnderstode it spiritually that as the outward man dyd eate the materiall Manna which comforted the body, so dyd the inward man thorough fayth, eate the body of Christ beleuyng that as that Manna came down from heauen and comforted their bodyes, so should their Sauiour Christ which was promised them of God ỹ father, come downe from heauen & strength their soules in euerlastyng life, redeming them from their sinne by his death and reſurrection. And likewiſe do we eate Chriſt in fayth, both before we come to the Sacrament, and more expreſſely through ỹ Sacrament, and with no leſſe fruite after we haue receaued the ſacramẽt, and nede no more to make it his naturall body then the manna was, but might much better vnderſtand it ſpiritually: that as the outwarde man doth eate the materiall breade which comforteth the bodie, ſo doth the inwarde man through fayth eate ỹ bodye of Chriſte, beleuyng that as the the bread is broken, ſo was Chriſtes bodye broken on the croſſe for our ſinnes, whiche comforteth our ſoules vnto life euerlaſting. And as ỹ fayth did ſaue them without beleuyng that the manna was altered into his bodie, euen ſo doth thys fayth ſaue vs although we beleue not that the ſubſtaunce of bread is turned into hys naturall bodye. For the ſame fayth ſhall ſaue vs which ſaued them. And we are bounde to beleue no more vnder payne of damnation, then they were bound to beleue. They beleued in God the father almighty, maker of heauen and earth, and all that is in them. They did beleue that Chriſte was the ſonne of God. They did beleue that he ſhoulde take our nature of a virgin. They beleued that he ſhoulde ſuffer the deth for our deliuerance, which thyng was ſignified in all the ſacrifices, and beſides that teſtified in euery Prophet, for there was verely not one Prophet but he ſpake of that poynt. They beleued ỹ his ſoule ſhould not be left in hell, but that he ſhould ariſe frõ death and reigne euerlaſtyng with hys father. And to be ſhort, there is no poynt in our Crede, but ỹ they beleued it, as wel as we do, & theſe articles are onely neceſſary vnto ſaluatiõ, For them am I bound to beleue, & am damned without excuſe, if I beleue them not.

But the other pointes contayned in ſcripture, although they be vndoubted verities, yet may I be ſaued without them. As be it in caſe ỹ I neuer heard of them, or when I heare of them, I can not vnderſtand them, nor comprehẽd them, or that I feare them and vnderſtãd them, and yet by the reaſon of an other texte miſconſtrue them, as the Bohemes do the wordes of Chriſt in the 6. chapter of John. All theſe I ſay may bee done without any ieoperdie of damnatiõ. In euery text is but onely one veritie for which it was ſpoken and yet ſome textes there be whiche of Catholicke Doctours are expounded in vj. or vij. ſondry faſhions. Therfore we beleue theſe articles of our Crede, in the other is no perill, ſo that we haue a probable reaſon to diſſent from them. But now to returne to our purpoſe, if we will examine the authorities of S. Auſten & Beda before alledged, we ſhall eſpy that beſide the probation of this foreſayd propoſition, they opẽ the miſtery of all our matter to them that haue eyen to ſee. For S. Auſten ſayth that we and the old fathers do differ as touchyng ỹ bodely meate for they dyd eate Manna, and we bread, but albeit it baryed in ỹ outward appearaunce, yet neuertheleſſe ſpiritually it dyd ſignifie one thyng. For both the Manna and bread do ſignifie Chriſt. And ſo both they and we do eate one ſpiritual meate, that is to ſay we both eate the thing which ſignifieth and repreſenteth vnto vs the very one ſpirituall meate of our ſoules whiche is Chriſt. And Beda doth playnly call both the Mãna and the bread ſignes, ſaying behold that the ſignes are altered and yet ỹ fayth abideth one. Now if they be ſignes, then they do ſignifie, & are not the very thing it ſelfe which they do ſignifie, for ỹ ſigne of a thyng differeth frõ the thyng it ſelfe which it doth ſignifie and repreſent. As the alepole is not the ale it ſelfe which it doth ſignifie or repreſent. Here thou wilt obiecte agaynſt me that if this faith be ſufficient what nedeth the inſtitutiõ of a Sacrament? I aunſwere that Sacramentes are inſtituted for thre cauſes: The firſt is aſſigned of S. Auſten which ſayth on this maner.

In nullum autem nomen religionis, ſeu verum, ſeu falſum, coagulari homines poſſunt, niſi ſignaculorum ſeu Sacramentorum viſibilium conſortio colligantur, Aug. contra Fauſtum Lib. 19. cap. 11.

There is no cauſe why we ſhould accompt the Sacramẽt to be Chriſtes naturall body, for that were to groſſe an imaginatiõ.

We are not bounde to beleue vpõ payne of dãnatiõ more then our fathers beleued.

quorum Sacramentorum vis inenarrabiliter valet plurimum. Et ideo contempta sacrilegos facit. Impie quippe contemnitur sine qua perfici nō potest pietas. That is to say: Men can not be ioyned into any kynde of religion, whether it be true or false except they be knit in felowshyp by some visible tokens or Sacramentes, the power of which Sacramentes is of such efficacie, that can not be expressed. And therfore it maketh them that despise it to be abhorred, for it is wickednes to despise that thyng without whiche godlynes can not be brought to passe. Thus it appeareth that necessitie is ỹ first cause. For there can no congregation be serued out of the multitude of men but they must nedes haue a signe, token, Sacrament, or common badge, by the which they may knowe eche other. And there is no difference betwene a signe or a badge and a Sacrament, but that the Sacrament signifieth an holy thyng, and a signe or a badge doth signifie a worldly thing as S. Austen sayth, signes when they are referred to holye thynges are called Sacramentes.

There be thre causes why ỹ Sacramentes were instituted.

The first is necessitie.

August. ad Marcellinū.

The second cause of the institution of Sacramentes.

The second cause of their institution is, that they may be a meane to bryng vs vnto fayth and to imprint it the deper in vs, for it doth customably the more moue a man to beleue, when he perceiueth the thyng expressed to diuerse senses at once, as by example, if I promise a mā to mete him at a day appoynted, he will somewhat truste my word: Notwithstandyng, he trusteth not so much vnto it, as if I dyd both promise hym with my word and also clap hādes with him or hold vp my finger for he coūteth that this promise is strong and more faythfull then is the bare word, because it moueth moe senses. For the word doth but onely certifie the thing vnto a mā by the sense of hearyng, but whē with my promise immediatly after I hold vp my finger, then do I not onely certifie him by the sense of hearing: But also by his sight, hee perceiueth that that fact confirmeth my word. And in the clappyng of handes hee perceiueth both by his sight and felyng (beside the worde) that I will fulfill my promise. And lykewise it is in this Sacrament, Christ promised them, that he would geue his body to be slayne for their sinnes. And for to establish the fayth of his promise in them, he dyd institute the Sacrament which he called his body, to the entent that ỹ very name it selfe might put them in remēbraūce what was ment by it, he brake the bread before them signifying vnto them outwardly, euen the same thyng, that he by his wordes had before protested and eue as his wordes had informed them by their hearyng, that he entended so to do, so the breaking of that bread informed their eye sight that he would fulfil his promise. Then he dyd distribute it amōg them to imprint the matter more deepely in them, signifying therby that euen as that bread was deuided among them, so should his body & frute of his passion be distributed vnto as many as beleued his wordes. Finally he caused thē to eate it, that nothyng should be lackyng to confirme that necessary point of faith in thē, signifiyng therby that as verely as they felt that breade within them, so sure should they be of hys body through fayth. And that euen as that bread doth nourishe the body, so doth fayth in hys body breaking, nourish the soule vnto euerlasting life. This did our mercifull Sauior (which knoweth our frailtie and weakenes) to establish & strēgth their fayth in his body breaking and bloud shedyng, which is our shoteanker and last refuge without which we should all perishe.

How diligently Christ set forth ỹ Sacrament of hys body & bloud that we might by that outward signe assure our fayth, that his very true body was crucified for our sinnes.

The third cause of the institution and profit that commeth of it, is this. They that haue receiued these blessed tydinges and worde of health, do loue to publishe this felicitie vnto other men. And to geue thanks before the face of the cōgregation vnto their boūteous benefactour, and as much as in them is, to drawe all people to the prayse of God with thē, which thing, though it be partly done by the preaching of Gods worde and fruitfull exhortations, yet doth that visible token and Sacrament (if a man vnderstand derſtand what is ment thereby) moze effectuouſly woꝛke in them both fayth and thankeſgeuing, thē doth the bare woꝛde: but if a man wot not what it meaneth, and ſeꝛketh health in the ſacrament and outwarde ſigne, thē may he wel be likened vnto a fond fellow, which when he is very dꝛye, and an honeſt man ſhew him an alepole and tell him that there is good ale inough, would goe and ſucke the alepole, truſting to get dꝛinke out of it, and ſo to quench his thꝛꝛſte. Now a wiſe man will tell him that he playeth the fole, foꝛ the alepole doth but ſignifie that there is good ale in the houſe where ẏ alepole ſtandeth, and will tell him that he muſt go neare the houſe, and there he ſhall finde the dꝛinke, and not ſtand ſucking the alepole in vayne, foꝛ it ſhall not eaſe him, but rather make him moze dꝛie, foꝛ the alepole doth ſignifie good ale: yet the alepole it ſelf is no good ale, neyther is there any good ale in the alepole. And likewiſe it is in all ſacramentes. Foꝛ if we vnderſtand not what they meane, and ſeꝛke health in the outwarde ſigne: then we ſucke the alepole and labour in vayne. But if we do vnderſtand ẏ meaning of them, then ſhall we ſeꝛke what they ſignifie, and goe to the ſignifications, and there ſhall we finde vndoubted health. As to our purpoſe in thꝛs ſacrament wherof we ſpeake, we muſt note what it ſignifieth, and there ſhall we finde our redemption. It ſignifieth that Chꝛiſtes body was bꝛoken vpon the croſſe to redeme vs from the thꝛaldome of the deuill, and that his bloude was ſhedde foꝛ vs, to waſhe away our ſinnes. Therefoꝛe we muſt runne thether if we will be eaſed. Foꝛ if we thinke to haue our ſinnes foꝛgeuen foꝛ eating of the Sacrament, oꝛ foꝛ heꝛing the Sacrament once a day, oꝛ foꝛ pꝛaying vnto it: thē ſurely we ſucke the alepole. And by thys you may perceiue what pꝛofite commeth of thoſe ſacraments, which eyther haue no ſignifications put vnto them, oꝛ els when their ſignifications are loſt and foꝛgotten. Foꝛ then no doubt they are not commended of God, but are rather abhominable, foꝛ when we knowe not what they meane, then ſeꝛke we health in the outwarde deede, and ſo are iniurious vnto Chꝛiſt and his bloud. As by example, the Sacrifices of the Iewes, were well allowed & accepted of God as long as they vſed them aright, and vnderſtode by thē ẏ death of Chꝛiſt, the ſheding of his bloud, and that holy oblation offered on the croſſe once foꝛ euer. But when they begun to foꝛget this ſignification, and ſought their health and righteouſnes in the bodely woꝛke, and in the ſacrifice it ſelfe: then were they abhominable in the ſight of God, and then he cryed out of them both by the Pꝛophet Dauid and Eſay: And likewiſe it is with our Sacramentes, let vs theꝛefoꝛe ſeꝛke vp the ſignifications, and go to the very thing which the ſacrament is ſet to pꝛeſent vnto vs. And theꝛe ſhal we finde ſuch fruitfull foode as ſhall neuer fayle vs, but comfoꝛt our ſoules into life euerlaſtyng.

The ſacrament is pꝛofitable to none but to ſuch as vnderſtād the doctrine therof.

An exaꝛple of the Alepole.

The true ſignificatiō of the ſacrament of the body and bloud of Chꝛiſt.

The ſacrifices of the Iewes as lōg as they were rightly vſed, were well accepted.

Now will I in oꝛder anſwer to M. Mores booke, and as I finde occaſion geuen me, I ſhall indeuoure my ſelfe to ſupply that thyng which lacked in the firſt treatiſe, and I truſt I ſhall ſhewe ſuch lyght, that all men whoſe eyes the Pꝛince of this woꝛlde hath not blynded, ſhall perceiue the truth of the ſcriptures and glozy of Chꝛiſt. And where as in my firſt treatiſe, the truth was ſet foꝛth with all ſimplicitie, and nothing armed againſt the aſſault of ſophiſters: that haue I ſomewhat redꝛeſſed in this booke, & haue bꝛought bones fitte foꝛ their teeth, which if they be to buſie, may chaunce to choke them.

¶ Thus beginneth the Preface of M. Mores booke.

IN my moſt harty wyſe More. I recommende me vnto you, and ſend you by this bringer the wryting againe which I receiued from you. Whereof I haue bene offered a cople of copies mo, in the mean while, as late as ye wot well it was.

Frith. Deare brethren, conſider theſe wordes, and prepare you to the croſſe that Chriſt ſhall lay vppon you, as ye haue oft bene counſayled. For euen
1. Pet. 2. Luke. 22. as when the Wolfe howleth, ỹ ſhepe had nede to gather thẽſelues to their ſhepheard, to be deliuered from the aſſault of the bloudy beaſt, likewyſe had you nede to flye vnto the ſhepheard of your ſoules Chriſt Jeſus, &
Epheſ. 6. to ſell your coates, and buye his ſpirituall ſworde (which is the word) of God) to defende and deliuer you in this preſent neceſſitie: for now is the tyme that Chriſt tolde vs of, Math. 10. that he was come (by his worde to ſet variaunce betwene the ſonne and his father, betwene the daughter and her mother, betwene the daughter in Math. 10. we that are his diſciples may looke for no better than he had himſelf: for the ſcholer is not aboue his maiſter.

2. Cor. 11. Saint Paule proteſteth ỹ he was in perill among falſe brethren, & ſurely I ſuppoſe that we are in no leſſe ieopardye. For if it be ſo that hys maſterſhip receiued one coppe and had a cople of coppes moe offered in the meane while, then may ye be ſure
Joh. Frith mette with falſe brethren. that there are many falſe brethren which pretend to haue knowledge, & in dede are but pykethankes, prouiding for their bellye: prepare ye therfore clokes, for the weather wareth cloudy, and rayne is like to followe. I meane not falſe excuſes and forſwearing of your ſelues: but that ye looke ſubſtantially vpon Gods worde, that you may be able to anſwere their ſubtle obiections. And rather chuſe manfully to dye for Chriſt and hys worde, than cowardlye to deny hym, for thys vayne and tranſitory lyfe, cõſidering that they haue no further power but ouer this corruptible bodye, which if they put it not to death, muſt yet at ỹ length periſh of it ſelfe. But I
2. Cor. 10. truſt the Lord ſhall not ſuffer you to be tẽpted aboue that you may beare, but according to ỹ ſpirite that he ſhall poure vppon you, ſhall he alſo ſende you the ſcourge, and make hym that hath receiued more of the ſpirite to ſuffer more, and him that receiueth leſſe thereof, to ſuffer according to his Talent. I thought it neceſſary firſt to admoniſhe you of this matter, and now I will recite more of M. Mores boke.

An exhortation to ſtand manfully by the profeſſion of Gods worde.

More. Whereby men may ſee how gredely theſe newe named brethren writeit out, & ſecretly ſpread it abroade.

Frith. The name is of great antiquitie, although you liſte to ieſte. For they were called brethrẽ ere our Biſhops were called Lordes, and had ỹ name geuen them by Chriſt, ſaying, Math. xxiij. all ye are brethren. And Luke ỹ xxij. Confirme they brethren. And the name was cõtinued by the Apoſtles, and is a name that nouriſheth loue & amitie. And very glad I am to heare of their gredy affection in writing out and ſpreading abroade the worde of Amos. 8. God, for by that I do perceiue the prophecie of Amos to haue place, which ſayth: In the perſon of God I will ſend hunger and thyrſte into the earth, not hunger for meate, nor thurſt for drinke: But for to here the worde of God. Now begynneth the kyngdome of heauen to ſuffer violence: Now runne the poore Publi- Math. 11.

ſinners, to the worde of God perfyng, both goodes and body in ieoperdy for the ſoule health. And though our Biſhops do call it hereſie, and all them heretickes that hunger after it, yet do we know that it is the Goſpell of the lyuyng God, for the health and ſaluation of all that beleue. And as for the Roma. 1.
name doth nothing offẽde vs, though they call it hereſie a thouſand tymes. For S. Paule, teſtifieth that the Phariſeis and Prieſtes which were counted the very Church in hys tyme dyd ſo call it, and therefore it forceth not though they, ruling in their rowmes, vſe the ſame names. Actes. 24.

More. Which young mã I here ſay hath lately made diuers other thynges, that yet runne in hoker moker ſo cloſe amõg the brethren that there comcommeth no copies abroad.

Frith. I aunſwere, that ſurely I can not ſpynne, and I thinke no mā more hateth to be idle then I do. Wherfore in ſuch thynges as I am able to doe, I ſhalbe diligēt as long as God lendeth me my lyfe. And if ye thinke I be to buſie you may rid me the ſoner, for

Joh. Frith feared not death. euen as the ſheepe is in the butchers handes ready bound and loketh but euen for the grace of the butcher whē he ſhall ſhed his bloud: Euen ſo am I bounde at the Bychops pleaſures, euer lokyng for the day of my death. In ſo much, that playne worde was ſent me, that the Chauncelour of Lōdon ſayd, it ſhould coſt me the beſt bloud in my body, whiche I would gladly were ſhed to morow, if ſo be, it might open the kyngs graces eyen.

And verely I maruell that any thing can ranne in yoker moker or be hyd from you. For ſith you mought haue ſuch ſtore of coppes, concernyng the thyng whiche I moſt deſired to haue ben kept ſecret, how ſhould you then lacke a coppe of thoſe thynges whiche I moſt would haue publiſhed? And hereof ye may be ſure, I care not though you and all the Bychops with in England loke on all that euer I wrote, but rather would be glad that ye ſo dyd. For if there be any ſparkle of grace in your breaſtes, I truſt it ſhould geue occaſion ſomewhat to kyndle it, that you may conſider and know your ſelues, whiche is the firſt poynt of wiſedome.

Frith wiſheth all his workes to be ſeene.

More. And would God for his mercy (ſayth M. More) that ſith there can nothing refrayne their ſtudie, from deuiſing and compaſsyng of euill and vngracious writyng, that they would and could keepe it ſo ſecretly, that neuer man ſhould ſee it, but ſuch as are ſo farre corrupted, as neuer would be cured of their cāker.

Frith. It is not poſſible for hym that hath his eyen and ſeeth hys brother whiche lacketh ſight in ieoperdie of perihing at a perilous pit, but that hee muſt come to hym and guide hym, till he be paſt that ieoperdye, & at the leſt wiſe, if he can not come to hiu, yet will he call and crye vnto hym to cauſe hym chooſe the better way, except his hart bee cankered with the contagion of ſuch hatered that he can reioyſe in his neighbours deſtruction. And euē ſo is it not poſſible for vs whiche haue receiued the knowledge of gods worde, but that we muſt cry and cal to other, that they leaue the perillous pathes of their owne folliſh phantaſies. And doe that onely to the Lord, that he cō- Deut. 12.

maundeth them, neither addyng any thyng nor diminiſhyng. And therfore vntill we ſee ſome meanes fownde, by the whiche a reaſonable reformation may be had on the one partie, and ſufficient inſtruction for the poore tomōs I inſure you, I neither will nor can ceaſe to ſpeake, for the worde of God boyleth in my body, like a feruēt fire, and will nedes haue an iſſue and breaketh out, when occaſion is geuē. Note here the earneſt zeale of Frith.

But this hath bene offered you, is offered, and ſhall be offered: Graunt that the worde of God, I meane ỹ tert of Scripture, may go abroad in our Engliſh toung, as other nations haue it in their tounges, and my brother William Tyndall, and I haue done, & will promiſe you to write no more. If you wil not graunt this condition, then will we be doing while we haue breath, and ſhew in few wordes that the Scripture doth in many: and ſo at the leſt ſaue ſome. An offer made to the Clergie by Io. Frith.

More. But a lacke this will not be, for as S. Paule ſayth, the contagion of hereſie creepeth on, lyke a canker. For as the canker, corrupteth the body further and further and turneth the whole parties into the ſame deadly ſickneſs, ſo doth theſe hereſies creepe forth among good ſimple ſoules, till at the laſt it be almoſt paſt remedy.

Fr.... This is a very true ſaying and maketh well agaynſt his owne purpoſe, for in deede this contagion began to ſpring euen in S. Paules tyme. In ſo much that the Galathians were in a maner wholy ſeduced from his doctrine. And he ſayd to the Theſſalonians the miſtery of iniquitie euē now beginneth to worke. And S. John teſtifieth that there were all ready many Antichriſtes riſen in hys dayes. 2. Theſ. 2. 1. Iohn. 4.

And alſo Paul prophecied what ſhold folow after his tyme. Actes. 20. ſaying: take ye hæde to your ſelues and to all the flocke, ouer whiche the holy ghoſt hath put you ouerſeers, to fæde the congregation of God whiche he purchaſed with his owne bloud. For I know this wel, that after my departyng ſhall enter in greuous Wolues among you, which ſhall not ſpare the flocke. And euen of your ſelues ſhall ariſe men, ſpeaking peruerſe things, to draw Diſciples after thē and therfore watch. &c. This canker then began to ſpread in the congregatiō, and dyd full ſore noy the body, in ſo much that within iiij. C. yeare, there were very many ſectes ſcattered in euery coſt. Notwithſtandyng there were faythfull fathers that diligently ſubdued them with the ſworde of Gods word. But ſurely ſince Silueſter receiued ſuch poſſeſſions, hath the canker ſo crept in ỹ Church, that it hath almoſt left neuer a ſounde member. And as Ciſtercenſis writeth in the 8. booke, that day that hee receiued reuenues was a voyce heard in ỹ ayre, crying ouer the court whiche ſayd, this day is venime ſhed into ỹ church of God. Before that tyme there was no Byſhop gredy to take a cure. For it was no honour and profite as it is now, but onely a carefull charge which was lyke to coſt him his lyfe at one tyme or other. And therefore no man would take it, but he that bare ſuch a loue and zeale to God and his flocke, that he could be content to ſhed his bloud for them. But after that it was made ſo honorable and profitable, they that were worſt both in learnyng and lyuyng, moſt laboured for it. For they that were vertuous wold not entangle them ſelues with the vayne pride of this world, and weare thæ crownes of gold, where Chriſt dyd weare one of thorne. And in concluſion it came ſo farre, that who ſoeuer would geue moſt money for it or beſt could flatter the Prince (which he knew wel all good men to abhorre) had the preheminence and gote the beſt Byſhoprike, and then in ſtead of Gods word, they publiſhed their own commaundements, and made lawes to haue all vnder them, and made mē beleue they could not erre what ſoeuer they dyd or ſayd, & euen as in the rowmes and ſtede of Moſes, Aaron, Eliazer, Joſue, Calib, and other fayth full folke, came Herode, Annas, Cayphas, Pylate and Judas, whiche put Chriſt to death. So now in the ſtede of Chriſt, Peter, Paule, James and John and the faythfull folowers of Chriſt, we haue ỹ Pope, Cardinals, Archbyſhops, Byſhops, and proude Prelates with their Proctour, the malitious miniſters of their maſters the deuill, which notwithſtandyng tranſforme them ſelues into aungels, as though they were the miniſters of righteouſnes whoſe end ſhalbe accordyng to their workes. So that the body is cankered long agone, and now are left but certaine ſmall members, whiche God of his puiſſaunt power hath reſerued vncorrupted & becauſe they ſee that they can not be cankered as their owne fleſh is, for pure anger they burne them, leſt if they cōtinued there might ſeeme ſome deformitie in their owne cankered carkaſe, by the comparyng of theſe whole members to their ſcabbed body.

Teacheth in a few leaues ſhortly al the poyſon that Wickleff, Oecolampadius, Huſkyn, Tyndall and Zwynglius haue taught in all their bookes before. Cōcerning the bleſſed Sacrament of the aulter: not onely affirmyng it to very breade ſtill (as Luther doth) but alſo (as theſe other beaſtes do) ſayth it is nothing els. And after, the ſame Syr Thomas More ſaith. Theſe dregges hath he dronken of Wickleffe, Oecolampadius, Tyndall, and Zwinglius, and ſo hath he all that he argueth here beſide, which iiij. what maner folke they be, is metely well perceyued and knowen, and God hath in part, with hys open vengeaunce declared.

Luther is not the pricke that I run at, but the ſcripture of God. I do neither affirme nor deny any thyng, becauſe Luther ſo ſayth: but becauſe the Scripture of God doth ſo conclude & determine. I take not Luther for ſuch an author that I thinke hee can not erre, but I thinke verely that he both may erre and doth erre in certayne poyntes, although not in ſuch as concerne ſaluation and damnation, for in theſe (bleſſed be God) all theſe whom ye call heretickes do agrée right well. And likewiſe I do not alow this thing becauſe Wickleffe, Oecolampadius, Tyndall and Zwinglius ſo ſay, but becauſe I ſée them in that place more purely erpoũde the Scripture, and that the proceſſe of the text doth more fauour their ſentence.

And where you ſay that I affyrme it to be bread ſtill as Luther doth, the ſame I ſay agayne, not becauſe Luther ſo ſayth, but becauſe I cã proue my wordes true by ſcripture, reaſon, nature, and doctors. Paule calleth it 1.Cor.10. bread ſaying: the bread whiche we breake, is it not the fellowſhip of the Paule calleth the Sacrament bread. body of Chriſt? For we though we be many, are yet one body and one bread, as many as are partakers of one bread. And againe he ſayth: as often as ye eate of thys bread, or 1.Cor.11. drinke of thys cuppe, you ſhall ſhewe the Lordes death vntill he come. Alſo Acſtes.2. Luke calleth it bread in the Actes ſaying: they continued in the fellowſhip of the Apoſtles and in breaking of bread, and in prayer. Alſo Chriſt called the cuppe, the fruite of the vyne Luke.22. ſaying: I ſhall not from hence forth drinke of the fruite of the vyne, vntill I drink that new in the kingdome of my father. Furthermore, nature doth teach you that both ỹ bread and Nature ſayth there is bread in the Sacrament. wine continue in their nature. For the bread mouleth if it be kept long, yea and wormes brẽde in it. And the pore mouſe will runne away with it, and deſire no other meate to her dinner, which are euident inough that there remayneth bread. Alſo the wine The wyne will ware ſowre if it be kept lõg. if it were reſerued would ware ſower, as they confeſſe them ſelues, and therefore they houſell the laye people but with one kinde onely, becauſe the wine can not continue nor be reſerued, to haue ready at hand whẽ nede were. And ſurely as if there remayned no bread, it could not mould nor ware full of wormes. Euẽ ſo if there remained no wine, it could not ware ſower, and therefore it is but falſe doctrine, that our prelates ſo long haue publiſhed. Finally that there remayneth bread might be proued by the authoritie of many doctors, which call it bread and wine, as Chriſt and his Apoſtles did. And though ſome ſophiſters would wreſt their ſayings and expound them after their phantaſie, yet ſhall I alleage them one doctor (which was alſo Pope of Rome) that maketh ſo plaine with vs, that they ſhall be compelled with ſhame to hold their tongues. For Pope Gelaſius writeth on thys maner. Certe ſacramenta quæ ſumimus corporis & ſanguinis Chriſti diuine res ſunt & propterea per illa, participes facti ſumus diuinæ naturæ, & tamẽ nõ deſinit eſſe ſubſtantia vel panis & vini ſed permanent in ſua proprietate naturæ. Et certe imago & ſimilitudo corporis & ſanguinis Chriſti in actione miſteriorum celebrantur. That is to ſay: Surely the ſacramentes of the body and bloud of Chriſt, are a godly thing, and therfore through them are we made partakers of the godly nature. And yet doth it not ceaſe to be the ſubſtance, or nature of bread and wine, but they continue in the propertie of their owne nature, and ſurely the image and ſimilitude of the body and bloud of Chriſt are celebrated in the acte of the myſteries. Thys I am ſure was the olde doctrine which they can not anoyde. And therefore with the Scripture, nature, and fathers, I will conclude that there remaineth the ſubſtaunce and nature of bread and wine.

The Doctors proue that bread remayneth in the Sacrament.

Gelaſius a Pope. Contra Eutych. & Neſtorium.

This is the ſaying of Gelaſius a Pope.

And where ye ſay that we affyrme it to be nothing els, I dare ſay that ye vntruely report on vs all. And here after I will ſhewe you what it is more then bread. And where ye ſay that it is metely well knowen what maner of folke they be, and that God hath in part with his open vengeance declared.

Oecolampadius. And as for Oecolampadius, whō you alſo call Huſkyn, his moſt aduerſaries haue euer commended his conuerſation, and godly life, which when God had appoynted hys tyme, gaue place vnto nature (as euery mā muſt) and dyed of a canker.

Tyndall. And Tyndall I truſt liueth, well content with ſuch a poore Apoſtles life, as God gaue hys ſonne Chriſt, and hys faythfull miniſters in thys worlde, which is not ſure of ſo many mites, as ye be yearely of poundes, although I am ſure that for hys learning and iudgement in Scripture, he were more worthy to bee promoted, then all the Biſhops in England. I receaued a letter from hym, which was written ſince Chriſtmas, wherein among other matters he writeth thus. I call God to recorde agaynſt the day we ſhall appeare before our Lorde Jeſus to geue a reckoning of our doings, that I neuer altered one ſillable of Gods worde, agaynſt my conſcience, nor would doe thys day, if all that is in earth, whether it be honour, pleaſure, or riches, might be geuen me. Moreouer, I take God to recorde to my conſcience, that I deſire of God to my ſelfe in thys worlde, no more then that without which I can not kepe hys lawes. &c. Iudge Chriſtē reader whether theſe words be not ſpoken of a faythfull, clere innocent hart. And as for hys behauiour is ſuch, that I am ſure no man cā reproue hym of any ſinne, howbeit no mā is innocent before God which beholdeth the hart.

Tyndall declareth his innocency.

Zwinglius Finally Zwinglius was a man of ſuch learning and grauitie (beſide eloquence) that I thinke, no man in Chriſtendome might haue compared with hym, notwithſtanding he was ſlaine in battell in defending hys Citie and common wealth, agaynſt the aſſaulte of wicked enemies, whiche cauſe was moſt righteous. And if hys maſterſhip meane, that that was the vengeaunce of God, and declared hym to be an euill perſon becauſe he was ſlaine: I may ſay nay, and ſhew euident examples of the contrary, for ſometyme God geueth the victorye agaynſt them that haue moſt righteous cauſe, as it is euident in the booke of Iudges, where all the children of Iſraell were gathered together, to punyſhe ỹ ſhameſull ſodomitrie of the Tribe of Beniamin, which were in number but 25. thouſand. And the Iſraelites were 400. thouſand fighting men, which came into Silo, and aſked of God who ſhould be theyr Captaine agaynſt Beniamin. And they being but 25. thouſand ſlue of the other Iſraelites 12. thouſand in one day. Then fledde the children of Iſraell vnto the Lord in Silo, & made great lamentation before hym euen vntill night: and aſked hym counſell ſaying: Shall we go any more to fight agaynſt the tribe of Beniamin our brethren or not? God ſayd vnto them yes, goe vp and fight agaynſt them. Thē went they the next day & fought agaynſt them, and there were ſlaine agayne of the Iſraelites 18. thouſand men. Then came they backe agayne vnto the houſe of God, and ſat down and wept before the Lord, and faſted that day vntill euen, and aſked hym agayn, whether they ſhould any more fight agaynſt theyr brethren or not. God ſayd vnto them yes, to morrow I will deliuer them into your handes. And the next day was ỹ tribe of Beniamin vtterly deſtroyed, ſauyng 600. men which hid thē ſelues in the wildernes. Here it is euident that the children of Iſraell loſte the victorye twiſe, and yet notwithſtanding had a iuſt cauſe, and fought at Gods commaundement. Beſides that, Judas Machabeus was ſlaine in a righteous cauſe, as it is manifeſt in the firſt booke of the Machabees. And therfore it can Zwinglius ſlayne in a iuſt and righteous cauſe.

Iudic. 20.

Here note that the children of Iſraell fought at Gods commaundement and in a righteous cauſe, & yet were twiſe ouerthrowen.

it can be no euident argument of the vengeance of God, that he was ſlaine in battell in a righteous cauſe, and therefore me thinketh that thys man is to malaparte, ſo bluntly to enter into Gods iudgement, and geue ſentence in that matter before he be called to counſell. Thus haue I ſufficiently touched hys Preface, for thoſe pointes ẏ he afterward touched more largely, haue I willingly paſſed, becauſe I ſhall touch thē earneſtly hereafter. Now let vs ſē what he proueth.

M.More. ¶ It ys a great wonder to ſee vpon how light and ſleight occaſiōs he is fallē vnto theſe abhominable hereſies. For he denieth not nor cā not ſay nay, but that our Sauiour ſayd him ſelfe, my fleſhe is verely meate & my bloud is verely drinke he denieth not alſo that Chriſt him ſelfe at his laſt Supper, takyng the bread into his bleſſed handes, after that he had bleſſed it ſayd vnto his diſciples? Take you this and eate it, this is my body, that ſhalbe geuen for you. And likewiſe gaue thē the chalice after his bleſſyng and conſecracion, and ſayd vnto them, this is the chalice of my bloud of the new teſtament, which ſhalbe ſhed out for many, do ye this in remembrance of me.

Frith. ¶ It is a great wonder to ſee how ignorāunt their pr[illegible]tour is, in the playne ſtates of ſcripture. For if he had any Iudgmēt at all he might wel perceiue ẏ when Chriſt ſpake theſe wordes, my fleſh is verely meate and my bloud is verely drinke, he ſpake nothing of ẏ ſacramēt. For it was not inſtitute vntill his laſt ſupper. And theſe wordes were ſpokē to ẏ Iewes long before, & ment them not of ẏ carnall eatyng or drynking of his bodye or bloud, but of the ſpirituall eating, which is done by fayth and not with tothe, or bellye. Wherof S. Auſtyn ſayth vppon his goſpell of John why preparеſt thou other tothe or bellye? beleue and thou haſt eaten him. So ẏ Chriſtes wordes muſt here be vnderſtāded ſpiritually. And that he calleth hys fleſhe very meat becauſe that as meate by the eating of it & diſgeſting it in our bodye doth ſtrengthen theſe corruptible mēbres, ſo likewiſe doth Chriſtes fleſhe by the beleuing that it taketh our ſinne vpon it ſelfe & ſuffered the death to deliuer vs & ſtrengthen our immortall ſoule. And likewiſe as drinke when it is dronken, doth comfort and quicken our fraple nature. So likewiſe doth Chriſtes bloud by the drinkyng of it into the bowelles of our ſoule that it is by the beleuing and remembring that it is ſhed for our ſinnes, comfort and quicken our ſoule vnto euerlaſting lyfe. And this is the eating and drinking ẏ he ſpeaketh of in that place. And that it is ſo you may perceaue by the text following which ſayth, he that eateth my body & drinketh my bloud dwelleth in me and I in him, which is not poſſible to be vnderſtād of the ſacrament. For it is falſe to ſay that he ẏ eateth the ſacrament of his body and drinketh the ſacrament of his bloud, dwelleth in Chriſt and Chriſt in hym For ſome man receiueth it vnto his condemnation, And thus doth Saint Auſten expound it ſayinge, Hoc eſt enim Chriſtum manducare, in illo manere & illum manentem in ſe habere. This is the very eating of Chriſt to dwell in him & to haue him dwelling in vs So ẏ who ſo euer dwelleth in Chriſt (ẏ is to ſay beleueth ẏ he is ſēt of God to ſaue vs from our ſinnes) doth verely eate and drinke his body and bloud although he neuer receiued the ſacrament. This is ẏ ſpirituall eating neceſſary for all ẏ ſhal be ſaued for there is no man that cōmeth to God wout this eating of Chriſt, that is the beleuing in hym. And ſo I denye not but that Chriſt ſpeaketh theſe wordes but ſurely he ment it ſpiritually, as Saint Auſten declareth, and as the place playnely proueth.

The Papiſtes doe falſly alledge this text.

Aug. in Ioān. tract. 26

To beleue in Chriſt is to dwell in Chriſt.

And as touching ẏ other wordes ẏ Chriſt ſpake vnto hys diſciples at the laſt Supper I deny not but ẏ he ſayd ſo, but ẏ he ſo fleſhly ment as ye falſly faine, I vtterly deny. Ieremy.19 broken potsherd was cauled Hierusalem, not for that they were so in dede but for certaine similitudes in the properties, and that the very name it self might put men in remẽbraunce what is ment by the thing, as I sufficiently declared in my first treatise.

More. He must nedes confesse, that they that beleue that it is the very body and his very bloud in dede, haue the playne wordes of our sauiour him selfe vpon their side, for the ground & foundacion of their fayth.

Frith. That is very true and so haue they ỹ very wordes of god, which say that a broken potsherd is Hierusalem, and that Christ is a stone, and that Christ is a vine and a doore. And yt yf they should beleue or thinke that he were in dede any of these things, they were spirituall and nevertheless deceiued. For though he so sayd, yet I say hys wordes were spiritually to bee vnderstanded. And where you say that I flye from the fayth of playne and open scriptures, & for the allegory destroy the true sence of the letter. I aũswere that some textes of Scripture are onely to be vnderstand after the Roma.4. letter: as when Paule sayeth, Christ died for our sinnes and arose agayne for our iustification. And some textes are onely to be vnderstand spiritually or in the way of allegory: As when 1.Cor.10. Paule sayth, Christ was the stone, &
Iohn.15. when Christ sayth him selfe, I am a Iohn.10. very vyne I am the dooze, and some must be vnderstand both litterally, & spiritually: As when God sayd, out of Egipt cauled I my sonne, which although it were literally fulfilled in the childre of Israell whẽ he brought Osea.11. them out of Egipt with great power and wonders yet was it also ment & verified in Christ hymselfe, his very spirituall sonne, which was cauled out of Egipt after ỹ death of Herod. Math.2. And agayne it is very spiritually fulfilled in vs whiche through Christes bloud are deliuered frõ the Egypt of sinne, & from the power of Pharao ỹ deuil. And I say that this text of scripture: This is my body, is onely spiritually to be vnderstand, & not litterally. And ỹ doth S. Austen also cõfirme which writeth vnto Adamantus and sayth, These sentenses of scripture, Christ was the stone, the bloude is the soule, and this is my body. are figuratiuelie to bee vnderstande (that is to say spiritually or by the waye of an allegorie) and thus haue I Saint. Augustin wholly on my side, whiche thing shall yet heare after more plainly appeare.

The Scripture speaketh diuersly and hath diuers senses.

M.More. Now his example of his bridegromes ring I very well alow, for I take the blessed sacrament to beleft with vs for a very token and a memoriall of Christ in dede. but I say that the hole substaunce of the same token and memoriall is his owne blessed bodie. And so I say that Christ hath left vs a better token then this man would haue vs take it for, & therein he seemeth like a man to whõ a bridgrome had deliuered a goodly gold ryng with a riche rubie therein, to deliuer his bride for a tokẽ. And thẽ he would like a false shrewe, keepe away that gold ring, & geue the bride in stede therof, a proper ring of a rishe, and tell her that the bridgrome would send her no better. Or els like one that when the bridgrome had geuẽ such a ryng of golde to hys bride for a token, will tell her plaine, and make her beleue that the ring were but coper or brasse, to minishe the bridgromes thanke.

More is a mocker and trifler.

Frith. I am right glad ỹ ye admit myne example, and graunt that the sacrament is left to be a very token and a memoriall of Christ in dede. But where where you say, that the whole substaunce of the same token and memoriall is his owne blessed bodye, that is soner sayd then proued. For S. Austen sheweth the cõtrary, as it is partly before touched, and here after shalbe declared more plainelye. & where you say that we fare like a false shrew that would kepe the gold ring from ỹ bride, and geue her a ring of a rishe, or tell her that her golde ring were copper or brasse, to minish the bridegromes thanke. I aunswere that we denye not but that the ring is most fine gold, and is set with as rich Rubyes as can be gotten. For that ryng (I meane the Sacrament) is not onely a most perfite token and a memoriall of the bridgromes benefites and vnfayned fauour on his partie but it is also on the other partie Eucharistia: that is to say, a thankes geuyng, for the gracious giftes which the vndoubtedly knowledgeth her selfe to haue receiued. For as verely as that bread is broken among them, so verely was Christes body brokẽ for their sinnes. And as verely as they receiue that bread into their bellye thorough eating it, so verely do they receiue the frute of his death into their soules by beleuyng in hym. And therefore they assemble to that Supper, not for the valure of the bread, wyne or meate that is there eaten, but for the entent th gouẽ ỹm thankes commonly among thẽ all, for his inestimable godnes. But to procede vnto our purpose, if a man would come vnto the bryde, and tel her that this godly gold ryng were her owne bridgrome, both flesh bloud and bones (as you do) thẽ I thinke if she haue any wytte, she might aunswere him, that he mocked and the more he sayd it, the lesse she might beleue hãn, and say that if that were her owne bridgrome, what should she then nede any remẽbraũce of hym or why should hee geue it her for a remembraunce? For a remembraunce presupposeth the thyng to be absent, and therefore if this be a remembraunce of hym, then can he not here be present.

In aunswere to Mores tryfyng.

Eucharistia

The right cause why we should come to the Table of our Lord.

More hath here a cheke mate.

M.More. I maruell me therfore much, that hee is not afearde, to affirme that these wordes of Christ, of his body and of his bloud, must needes be vnderstand by waye of a similitude or an allegorye as the woordes bee of the vyne and the doore. Nowe this he wottes well, that though some wordes spoken by the mouth of Christ be to be vnderstand onely by way of a similitude or an allegory, yet foloweth it not thereupon, that euery like word of Christ in orher places was no other but an allegory, for such was the shift and cauillation that the wicked Arrians vsed which tooke frõ Christes person his omnipotent Godhead.

Frith. I graunt that the Arrians erred, for as M. More sayth, though in some place a woord be taken figuratiuely, it foloweth not therfore in euery other place, it should likewise be taken. But one question must I aske his mastership how doth he know that there is any woorde or text in Scripture that must be taken figuratiuely? that is by the way of a similitude or as hee calleth it a necessary allegory? I thinke (though some men may assigne other good causes and euidences) that the first knowledge is by other textes of Scripture. For if other textes be conferred vnto it, and wil not stand with the litterall sence, thẽ I thinke it must nedes be take spiritually or figuratiuely as there are infinite textes in Scripture. Now when I see that S. Thomas which felt christ his woũds and put his finger in his side, called hym his Lord and God, and that no text in scripture repugneth vnto the same, but that they may well stand to gether me thinketh it were foly to affirme that this woorde, God, in that text should be taken figuratiuely or by way of an allegory: But now in our matter the processe of Scripture will not stand with the litterall sense, as shall hereafter appeare. And therfore necessitie compelleth vs to expounde it figuratiuely, as doth also S. Austen and other holy Doctours, as hereafter shall playnly appeare.

Why certeine places of ỹ Scripture must be vnderstand spiritually.

If euery man that can finde out a new fonde phantasie vppon a text M.More of holy Scripture, may haue hys owne mynde taken and hys owne exposition beleued agaynst the expositions of the olde cunnynge Doctours and Saintes, thē may you surely see that no article of the christen faith, cā stand and endure lōg. And then he alledgeth S. Hierome which sayth, that if the exposition of other interpretours, and the cōsent of the common Catholicke Church, were of no more strength, but that euery man might be beleued that could bryng some textes of Scripture, for hym expounded as it pleased hym selfe, then could I (sayth this holy man) bryng a new sect also, and say by Scripture, that no mā were a true Christē mā nor a mēber of the Church, that kepeth ij. coates. And in good faith (sayth M. More) if that way were alowed, I were able my selfe to find out xv. new sectes in one fore noone.

Frith. S. Peter sayth, that the Scripture is not expounded after the appetite of any priuate person, but euē as it was geuen, by the spirite of God and not by mans will. So must it be declared by the same spirite. And therefore I will not that any man shalbe beleued, by bringyng his own mynde & phantasie. But if he wil be beleued, let him bryng either an other playne texte, which shal expounde the first, or els at the lest he must bryng such a sentēce, as will stand with the processe of the Scripture. Why was S. Hierome alowed agaynst the determination of the counsell of Malta, sith he was alone, and they a great multitude? but onely because he brought euidēt scripture, whiche at the tyme of their sentence, none of them remembred: and yet when it was brought, they could not anoyde it. And likewise except I bryng euidēt scripture which they all shal expoūd as I do, I desire not to be beleued. And where M. More sayth, that in good sayth he were able to find out xv. new sectes in one fore noone, he may thāke God that he hath such a pregnaunt wytte: But yet I trust he should not find one (if there were any peril of damnatiō therin) but that we would wt a plaine text cōfute it, which he should not be able to anoyde.

No man is to be beleued that bryngeth hys owne iudgement onely vpon any sentēce of Scripture.

More is here pretely nypped.

And ouer this the very circumstaunces of the places in the gospel in whiche our Sauiour speaketh of that Sacrament, may well make open the difference of his speche in this matter and of all those other, and that as hee spake all those but in an allegorye, so spake hee this playnly, meanyng that he spake of his very body and hys very bloud, beside all allegoryes. For when our Lord sayd, he was a very vyne, and when he said he was the dore, there was none that heard him, that any thyng marueiled therof. And why? For because they perceyued well, that he ment not that he was a materiall vyne in deede, nor a doore neither: But when he sayd that hys flesh was very meate, and his bloud very drinke, and that they should not be saued, but if they dyd eate his flesh and drinke his bloud, then were they all in such a wonder therof, that they could not abyde. And wherefore, but because they perceyued well by hys wordes and his manner of circumstaunces, that Christ spake of his very flesh and his very bloud in dede. M. More.

Frith. It is openly knowen & confessed among all learned men that in the 6. Iohn. 6. chapter of Joh. Christ spake no one worde concernyng the sacrament of his body and bloud (whiche at that tyme was not yet institute) but all that he there spake was of the spirituall eating and drinking of his body, and bloud, into our soules, which is the fayth in his body and bloud, as I haue touched before. And the circumstances of this place do in dede proue that they were fleshly minded, & vnderstode not the spirituall wordes of our sauiour Christ, and therfore wōdered & murmured Insomuch that Christ sayd vnto thē, doth this offend you? what will you say then when ye shall see the sonne of man ascending thether where he was before? Then (addeth S. Austen) you shall know that he ment not to geue his flesh to eate wt your teth: for he shall

ascende hole. And Christ addeth, it is the spirite that quickeneth, the flesshe profiteth nothing, the wordes that I speake, are spirite and lyfe: that is to say, sayth S. Austen, are spiritually to be understand. And where Christ sayth, that the flesshe profiteth nothing (meaning of his owne flesh, as S. Austen sayth) he meaneth that it profiteth not, as they understode hym ẏ is to say, it profiteth not, if it were eaten. But it doth much profit to be slayne, that thorough it and the shedding of his blood, the wrath of God our father is pacified, and our sinnes forgeuen. And wher his maistership sayth, that the people perceiued well what he ment, and therfore he wondred so sore and could not abide, because they perceiued well by his wordes and māner of circūstances what his meaning was. I wil say as I did before, that they understood hym not. Now here he will say vnto me, if it be but your naye & my yea, thē I would thinke to be beleued as sone as you, and surely ẏ were but reason. Not withstanding (thankes be to God) I am able to bring in auctorite to Judg betwene vs both, whose iudgment I trust his maistership will accept. This auctor is S. Austen whiche sayth. Discipuli enim eius qui eum sequebantur expauerunt & exhorruerunt sermonem non intelligentes. That is to say, his his disciples which followed hym were astonied, and abhorred his wordes and understode them not. And because your maistership shal not thinke that he ouershot him selfe, and spake he wist not what, we shall allege hym saying the same wordes in an other place. Cum diceret. Nisi quis manducauerit carnem. &c. illi (non intelligentes) dixerunt ad inuicem, Durus est hic sermo, quis potest eum audire? That is, when Christ sayd, except a man eate my flesh and drinke my bloud, he shal haue no lyfe in him, they (because they understode him not) sayd to ech other, this is an hard saying, who can heare him? Thus I trust you will geue place (although not to me) yet at the least vnto S. Austen, and receiue the truth which is so plainely

How the flesshe of Christ profiteth nothyng and how it doth profite.

proued. And where his maistership allegeth this text for the sacrament, that except they did eate his flesh and drinke his bloude the could not be saued, it semeth that he is fallen into the error of Pope innocent, which likewise understanding this text vpon the sacrament (as M. More doth) caused yong children and infantes to receiue the sacrament, as though they had all bene damned which died and had not receiued it. And of this carnall minde were many mo Bushoppes a great while (as are now the bohemes) whom he after dispraysseth, and yet expoundeth the text as they doo, but afterward they loked more spiritually vpon the matter and confessed their ignorance (as I trust M. More will) but now will I shew you S. Austens minde vpon this text which shall helpe for the exposition of all this matter. S. Austen in the third boke De Doctrina Christiana the 16. chapiter teaching how we shall know the tropes, figures, allegories & phrases, of the scripture sayth. Si autem flagitium aut facinus iubere videntur, figuratiua locutio est. Nisi mãducaueritis (inquit) carnẽ filij hominis et biberitis eius sanguinem, non habebitis uitam in vobis. Facinus vel flagitium videtur iubere: Figura est ergo precipiẽs passionis dominicæ esse commicandum, et suauiter atque vtiliter in memoria recondendum quod pro nobis caro eius crucifixa & vulnerata sit. That is to say, when soeuer the scripture or Christ, semeth to commaund any foule or wicked thing, then must that text be taken figuratiuely (that as it is a phrase, allegorie and manner of speaking, and must be understand spiritually and not after the letter) Except (sayth Christ) ye eate the flesh of the sonne of man and drinke his bloud ye shall haue no life in you. He semeth (sayth S. Austen) to commaũde a foule & a wicked thing. It is therfore a figure, commaunding vs to be partakers of his passion, and sweetlye and profitablye to print in our mynde that his flesshe was crucified and wounded for vs. This truth (thankes be to God) doth S. Austen declare vnto vs, which thing beside

M. More fallen into the errour of pope Innocent.

Aug. Lib. 3. de doctrina Christiana.

Here S. Augustine sheweth plainly that Christes woordes were a figuratiue speech the opening of this text againſt M. Mores mynde, doth plainely ſhew what he thought in the worde of chriſtes ſupper. For ſith he called it a foule & a wicked thing, to eate his fleſhe, then may you ſone perceiue, that he thought it was as foule & as wicked a thing to eate his body, ſeing his body is fleſh and then conſequently it ſhall follow, ỹ eyther this worde eate (where Chriſt ſayd take this and eate it) muſt be taken ſpiritually, or els that this ſaying of Chriſt, this is my body, muſt be figuratiuely ſpokē, but this worde eate is taken after the letter (for they did in dēde eate the bred) therfore it muſt nēdes followe, that this ſentence (this is my body) muſt bee figuratiuely ſpoken Or els is S. Auſten not to be approued in this place, which thing our Byſhops I thinke, will not say nay.

Beſides that S. Auſten ſayth: Auguſtinus in ſermone ad infantes Quando loquebatur dominus noſter Ieſus Chriſtus de corpore ſuo, niſi (inquit) quis manducauerit carnem meam & biberit ſanguinem meum, non habebit in ſe vitam. Caro enim mea vere eſt cibus, & ſanguis meus vere eſt potus, intellectus ſpiritualis credentem ſaluum facit, quia litera occidit ſpiritus eſt qui viuificat. That is to ſay: When our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ſpake of his body, except (quod he) a man eate my fleſhe and drinke my bloud, he ſhall haue no life in him ſelf, for my fleſh is very meat, and my bloud is very drinke. The ſpirituall vnderſtandyng ſaueth him that beleueth, for the letter killeth, but the ſpirite quickneth. Here may you playnly perceaue, that this terte muſt onely be taken ſpiritually. For he ſayth, that to take it after the letter, it kylleth and profiteth nothyng at all, and therfore I wonder that we haue bene led ſo long in this groſſe errour.

This ſaying doth ỹ famous clarke Origine confirme, ſaying. Origi. in leui ho. 7. Agnoſce quod figuræ ſunt quæ in voluminibus Domini ſcriptæ ſunt: & ideo tanquam ſpirituales & non tanquam carnales, examinate & intelligite quæ dicuntur. Si enim ſecūdum literam ſequaris hoc ipſum quod dictum eſt, Niſi manducaueritis carnem. &c. occidit hæc litera. That is to ſay. Marke ỹ they are figures which are written in the Scripture of God, and therefore examine them as ſpirituall men and not as carnall, and vnderſtand thoſe thinges that are ſpoken. For if thou followe after the letter, thys thyng that is ſpoken: except ye eate the fleſhe of the ſonne of man and drinke hys bloud, you can haue no life in you, thys letter kylleth. Alas deare brethren, why ſhould any man be offended with thys doctrine, ſith it is approued ſo plainly, by ſuch auncient and holy fathers?

Chriſtes wordes are ſpirituall and not carnall.

Againe S. Auſten ſayth: Auguſti. ſermo. circa ſacra feria Paſche. Qui manducat carnem meam & bibit meum ſanguinem in me manet & ego in illo. Hoc eſt ergo manducare illam eſcam & illum bibere potum, in Chriſto manere & illum manentem in ſe habere, ac per hoc qui nō manet in Chriſto & in quo non manet Chriſtus proculdubio non manducat eius carnem nec bibit ſanguinem, etiam ſi tantæ rei ſacramentum ad iudicium ſibi mäducet & bibit. That is to ſay. He that eateth my fleſh & drynketh my bloud, abydeth in me, and I in hym. Thys is therfore the eatyng of that meate, and drinkyng of that bloud, to abyde in Chriſt, and haue hym abyding in vs. And therefore he that abydeth not in Chriſt, and in whom Chriſt abydeth not, without doubt he eateth not hys fleſh, nor drinketh not hys bloud, although he eate and drinke the ſacrament of ſo great a thyng vnto hys damnation. And euen ỹ ſame wordes hath Bede vppon the Corinthians. 1. Cor. 10. Thys one place, is ſufficient for to proue my purpoſe though he ſayd not one word more. For here he doth playnly determine, that he which abydeth not in Chriſt, that is to ſay, he ỹ is wicked or vnfaythfull, doth not eate hys fleſh nor drinke hys bloud, although he eate and drinke the Sacrament of ſo great a thyng. And ſo muſt it nēdes follow, that the Sacrament is not the very naturall body of Chriſt. For then the vnfaythfull ſhould eate hys fleſh, ſeing he eateth the ſacrament of hys body. But that doth S. Auſten denye: wherfore it muſt nēdes followe, that it is but onely

The eating & drinkyng of Chriſt, what it is.

Idem Beda ſuper. 1. Cor. 10.

The wicked eate not the fleſhe of Chriſt.

onely a token of a remembrance, and a signe of hys body breakyng, and a representation of hys passion, that we might kepe hys facte in memory, and geue him thankes for his tender loue and kindenes, which when we were hys enemyes toke vpon hym to suffer most vyle death, to reconcile vs vnto hys father, and make vs hys frendes. Thys saying hath S. Austen in an other place also, where he writeth on thys maner: Qui non in me manet, & in quo ego non maneo, non se dicat aut existimet manducare corpus meum, aut bibere sanguinē meum. Non itaque manent in Christo, qui non sunt eius membra: non sunt autem membra Christi, qui se faciunt mēbra meretricis. That is to say: He that abydeth not in me, and in whom I abyde not, let hym not say or thynke that he eateth my body or drinketh my bloud: They abyde not in Christ which are not his members. And they are not hys mēbers which make them selues the mēbers of an harlot. And these are also the very wordes of Bede. Here it is playne proued agayne by the authoritie of S. Austen and Bede, that the wicked and vnfaythfull (which are not the members of Christ) doe not eate hys body nor drinke hys bloud, and yet they do eate the sacrament as well as the other. Wherefore you must nedes graunt, that the Sacrament is not ỹ naturall body of Christ but a figure, token, or memoriall therof. Now good Christen people count not thys new learning which is firmed by such olde Doctors and faythfull fathers.

The sacrament is a figure, token, and a memoriall of the breaking of Christes body & sheding of hys bloud.

Now were this inough for a Christen man that loued no contention. But because there are so many sophisters in ỹ world which care not what they say, so they holde not their peace. I must nedes set some bulwarke by thys holy Doctor to helpe to defend hym, for els they will shortly ouerrunne hym (as they do me) and make hym an hereticke to. Therefore I will alleage hys master S. Ambrose. Saint Ambrose sayth: Non iste panis est qui vadit in corpus, sed ille panis vitæ æterna qui animæ nostræ substantiam fulcit. That is: It is not thys bread that goeth into the bodye, but that bread of euerlasting life whiche vpholdeth the substance of our soule. Furthermore the great clerke Prosper confirmeth the same saying. Qui discordat a Christo nec carnem Christi manducat, nec sanguinem bibit, etiamsi tantæ rei sacramentum ad iudicium suæ præsumptionis quotidie indifferenter accipiat. That is: He that discordeth from Christ, doth neyther eate hys flesshe nor drinke hys bloud, although he receaue indifferētly euery day the sacrament of so great a thing vnto the condemnation of hys presumption. And these are also the very wordes of Bede vpon the xj. Chapter of the first Epistle to the Corinthians.

Now you may see, that it is not S. Austens minde onely, but also the saying of many moe. And therefore I trust you will be good vnto hym. And if ye condemne not these holy fathers, then am I wrongfully punished. But if you condemne thē, then must poore Frith be content to beare the burthen with them.

¶ The mynde and exposition of the old Doctours vppon the wordes of Christes maundey.

AND where M. More sayth, that if Christe had not ment after the plaine literal sēce, that both the hearers at that tyme, and the expositours since, and all Christē people beside this xv. c. yeare would not haue taken onely the litterall sence beyng so straunge and maruelous that it might seme impossible, & decline from the letter for allegories in all such other thynges beyng (as hee sayth) and as in deede they be, so many farre in nomber mo. More.

As touchyng ỹ hearers they were deceiued and vnderstode him not (I meane as many as toke his wordes fleshly as you do.) And they had their aunswere of Christ (when they murmured) that his wordes were spirite and lyfe: that is (as S. Austen sayth) Frith.

spiritually to bee vnderstand and not fleshly, as is before declared. And as for the expositours. I thinke he hath not one of the old fathers for him, but certaine new felowes: as Dominic. S. Thomas, Occam, and such other whiche haue made the Pope a God. And as I haue shewed. S. Austen maketh full for vs, and so do all the old fathers, as Oecolãpadius hath well declared in his booke, Quid veteres senserint de Sacramẽto eucharistiæ. And some of their sayinges I shall alledge anone. And where you say that all Christen people haue so beleued this 1500. yeares, that is very false. For there is no doubt, but that the people thought as holy S. Austen and other faithful fathers taught them. Which as I said, make with vs. Notwithstãdyng in dede, sith our Prelates haue bene made Lordes and haue set vp their lawes and decrées contrary to the prerogatiue of all Princes, & lyke most sutle traytours, haue made all mẽ beleue that they may make lawes and bynde mens consciences, to obey them: and that their lawes are Gods lawes blindyng ẏ peoples eyes with two or thrée textes wrongfully wrested, to aduaunce their pride, where they ought to obey Kyngs and Princes, and be subiect to their lawes, as Christ and his Apostles were euẽ vnto ẏ death. Sith that tyme I say they haue made men beleue what they list and made articles of the faith at their pleasure. One article must be ẏ they be the Church, and can not erre: And this is the grounde of all their doctrine. But the truth of this article is nowe sufficiently knowen. For if Quéene Katherine be kyng Henries wife, then they do erre, and if she be not, then they haue erred, to speake no more cruelly: It is now become an article of our fayth ẏ the Pope of Rome must be ẏ head of ẏ Church & the Vicare of Christ: & that by Gods law. It is an article of our fayth that what soeuer hee byndeth in earth, is bounde in heauen, in so much that if he curse wrongfully, yet ye must be feared, and infinite such other which are not in our Crede, but blessed bee God that hath geuen some light into our Princes hart. For he hath lately put foorth a booke called the glasse of truth, whiche proueth many of these articles very foolishe phantasies and that euen by their owne Doctours, & so I trust you shalbe proued in this poynt of the Sacrament for though it be an article of our fayth it is no article of our Crede in ẏ rij. articles wher of are sufficient for our saluatiõ. And therefore we may thinke that you lye without all ieoperdye of damnation.

Moze hath no olde author to maintaine hys quarelling Papistry.

To beleue the articles contayned in our crede is sufficient for our saluation.

Neuertheless seing his masterships saith that all make for him, and I say cleane contrarie, that all the olde fathers make against him, or at the lest wise not with him, It were necessary that one of vs should proue his purpose. But indeede in this poynt he would loke to haue the vauntage of me. For he thinketh that men will soner beleue hym which is a great man then me which am but a poore man, and that therfore I had more nede to proue my part true, then he to proue his. Well I am content and therfore geue eare (deare reader) and Iudge betwéene vs.

Frith alleageth authoritics to proue hys doctrine true.

The Papistes haue corrupted the Scriptures and aduaunced themselues aboue Kinges and rulers.

Articles of our fayth made by the Pope.

First I will begin with Tertulian, because he is of most antiquitie. Tertulian speaking of Christ, sayth: Nec panem reprobauit quo ipsum corpus suum representat. That is to say. Christ him selfe did not reproue or discommend bread whereby he doth represent hys very body. For the vnderstanding of thys place, you must knowe that there was an hereticke called Marcion, which dyd reproue creatures, and said that all maner of creatures were euill. Thys thyng doth Tertulian improue by the Sacrament and sayth: Christ dyd not reproue or discõmend bread whereby he doth represent hys body: as though he shoulde saye, if Christ had counted the bread euill, then woulde he not haue left it for a Sacrament to represent hys body, meaning that it is a sacrament, signe, token and memoriall of hys body, and not the body it selfe. And that thys is hys minde, doth playnly appeare in hys fourth booke, where hée sayth: Christus acceptum panem & distributũ discipulis,

Tertul. lib. 2. contra Marcionẽ.

Tertul. lib. 4. contra Marcionẽ.

diſcipulis, corpus ſuum illud fecit: hoc eſt corpus meum dicendo, id eſt, figura corporis mei figura autem non fuiſſet, niſi veritatis eſſet corpus. Cæterum vacua res quod eſt phantaſma, figuram capere non poſſet. That is to ſay: Chriſt taking bread and diſtributing vnto hys diſciples made it hys body, ſaying: thys is my body, that is to ſay, a figure of my bodye, but thys bread coulde not haue bene a figure of it, except Chriſt had had a true bodye. For a vaine thyng or a phantaſie can take no figure. For the vnderſtãding of thys place, you muſt marke that thys hereticke Marcion, agaynſt whom thys author writeth, dyd bold opinion that Chriſt had no naturall body, but only a phantaſticall body, and thys opinion doth thys Doctor improue by the ſacramẽt of ẏ altar, ſaying: the ſacrament is a figure of hys body: ergo, Chriſt had a true body, and not a phãtaſticall bodie: For a vaine thing or phantaſie cã take no figure, Lo, here doth this olde father which was long before S. Auſten: or S. Hierome, expound theſe wordes of Chriſt This is my body: that is to ſay, a figure of my body therfore you are to blame to call it new learning. Nowe becauſe they ſhall not of temerarious preſumption reiecte this olde father, I ſhall eſtabliſhe his wordes by S. Auſtẽ which commendeth Chriſtes meruelous ſentence for ſuffering ſo long ẏ traitor Iudas, as though he had bene a good man, and yet was not ignorant of his wicked thoughtes. Adhibuit (inquit) ad conuiuium in quo corporis & ſanguinis ſui figuram diſcipulis commendauit ac tradidit. That is to ſay he admitted hym (ſayth S. Auſtẽ) vnto the maundye wherein he did betake and deliuer vnto the diſciples ẏ figure of his body and bloud, Here doth this holy father S. Auſten call it a figure of his body. And I am ſure there is no man ſo childiſhe, but that he knoweth that the figure of a thing is not the thing it ſelfe. As by example the figure of Chriſt is not Chriſt hym ſelfe, the figure of S. Peter is not S. Peter him ſelfe. And yet we do neuertheleſſe cõmonly call thoſe figures by the name of the thing that they do repreſent. As I may ſay when I ſee ẏ figure of S. Peter, this is S. Peter to whom Chriſt deliuered ẏ keyes of the kingdome of heauen. And yet he were a foole that would thinke that figure to be S. Peter him ſelfe: for it is only a repreſẽtatiõ of him. Beſides that S. Auſten ſayth, Non hoc corpus quod videtis eſtis manducaturi, nec bibituri illum ſanguinem quem effuſuri ſunt qui me crucifigent. Sacramentũ aliquod vobis commendaui, ſpiritualiter intellectum viuificat vos. That is, to ſay, you ſhall not eate this body that you ſee, nor drinke that bloud which they that crucifie me ſhall ſhed out. I haue geuen a certayne ſacrament vnto you if it be ſpiritually vnderſtãd it quickeneth you: What thinges can bee more playnly ſpoken?

This is my body, that is to ſay, a figure of my body.

Furthermore S. Auſten ſayth. *Sepe ita loquimur vt paſcha appropinquãte craſtinam vel perendinam Domini paſſionem dicamus: cum ille ante tam multos annos paſſus ſit, nec omnino niſi ſemel illa paſsio facta ſit. ter fidei Sacramentum, et conuertere se ad Deum propter conuersionis Sacramentum. Quia & ipsa responsio pertinet ad celebrationem Sacramenti. Sicut de ipso Baptismo apostolus consepulti (inquit) sumus Christo per Baptismum in mortem. Non ait sepulturam significamus, sed prorsus ait, consepulti sumus. Sacramentũ ergo tantæ rei non nisi eiusdem rei vocabulo nuncupauit. That is to say: We often vse to say, when Easter draweth nye, that to morow or the next day is the Lordes passion, and yet it is many yeares sith he suffered, and that passiõ was neuer done but once. And vppon that Sonday we say, this day the Lorde dyd rise agayne, and yet it is many yeares since hee rose. Now is there no man so folish to reproue vs as lyers for so saying, because we name these dayes after the similitude of those in whiche these thynges were done so that it is called the same day, whiche is not the very same, but by the reuolution of tyme, like it. And it is named to be done the same day through the celebration of the Sacrament (through kéepyng the memoriall of the thyng once done) whiche is not done that day, but was done lõg agone. Was not Christ once crucified in his owne person: and yet in a mysterye (whiche is the remembraunce of his very passion) he is crucified for the people not onely euery feast of Easter, but euery day: neither doth he lye which (when he is asked) answereth that he is crucified: for if the Sacramentes, had not certayne similitudes of those thynges whereof they are Sacramentes, then should they be no Sacraments at all. And for this similitude for the most part they take the names of the very thynges, and therefore as after a certaine maner the Sacrament of Christes body is Christes body, and the Sacrament of Christes bloud is Christes bloud, so the Sacrament of fayth is faith. For it is no other thing to beleue then to haue fayth, and therfore when a mã answereth that the infant beleueth which hath not the effect of fayth, he aũswereth that it hath fayth for the Sacramẽt of fayth: And that it turneth it selfe to God, for the Sacrament of conuertion. For the answere it selfe perteineth vnto the ministryng of the Sacrament. As the Apostle writeth of Baptisme: we are buried (sayth he) with Christ through Baptisme vnto death. He sayth not we signifie burying, but vtterly sayth we are buryed. He called therfore the Sacrament of so great a thyng euen with the name of ỹ very thing it selfe. &c. If a man would auoyde cõtention and loke soberly on those wordes of S. Austen, hee shall soone perceiue the mystery of this matter. For euen as the next good Friday shalbe called the day of Christes passion: & yet he shall not suffer death agayne vpon that day for hee dyed but once and is now immortall: euen so is the Sacramẽt called Christes body. And as that day is not the very day that he dyed on, but onely a remembraũce thereof: so the Sacrament is not his very naturall body, but onely a remembraunce of his body breakyng, & bloud sheddyng. And likewise, as the next Easter day shalbe called the day of his resurrection, not that it is the very same day that Christ dyd rise in, but a remembraunce of the same: euen so the Sacrament is called his body: not that it is his body in déede, but onely a remẽbraũce of the same. And furthermore, eue as the Priest doth offer hym, that is to say crucifie hym at Masse, & so is the Sacrament his body. But the Masse doth but onely represent hys passion. And so doth the Sacrament represent his body. And yet though the Masse doth but represent his crucifying, we may truly say he is crucified, euen so though the Sacramẽt do but signifie or represent his body, yet may we truly say that it is his body. Why so verely (sayth he) for the Sacramentes haue a certaine similitude of those thinges wherof they are Sacraments. And for this similitude for the most part, they take the names of the very thynges. Blessed be God whiche hath so clearely discussed this matter by this faythfull father. Notwithstandyng hée doth yet expresse it more playnly saying: after a certaine maner

The sacrament is the memoriall of Christes death.

The sacrament of Christes body and bloud, after a maner, is Christes body and bloud.

Good Friday next is called the day that Christ suffered hys passion, and yet it is not so, for that good Friday is past lõg sithens.

Frith writeth of the Masse according to the cõmon opiniõ that was at that time.

After a certaine maner the Sacrament of Christes bodye is Christes body.

maner, the Sacramēt of Chriſtes body is Chriſtes body. Behold deare brethren, he ſayth after a certaine maner the Sacrament is Chriſtes body. And by that you may ſone know that he neuer ment that it ſhould be his very naturall body in deede, but onely a token and memoriall to keepe in memorie the death of his body, and ſo to noriſhe our fayth. Beſides that his ſimilitude which he after alledgeth of Baptiſme, doth wholy expound this matter, for (ſayth he) ỹ Apoſtle ſayth not we ſignifie burying: but he ſayth, we are buryed (and yet in deede the Baptiſme doth but ſignifie it.) And thereupon S. Auſten addeth, that he called the Sacrament of ſo great a thyng euen with the name of the very thyng it ſelfe. And lykewiſe it is in our Sacrament. Finally to be ſhort I will paſſe ouer many places which I haue gathered out of his holy father, and will touch but this one more. S. Auſten ſayth. Non enim Dominus dubitauit dicere, Hoc eſt corpus meum, cum daret ſignum corporis ſui. Et in eodem capite exponit. Sic eſt enim ſanguis anima, quomodo petra erat Chriſtus, nec tamen petra (ait) ſignificabat Chriſtum, ſed ait petra erat Chriſtus. That is to ſay. The Lord doubted not to ſay, this is my body, when he gaue a ſigne of his body. And after in the ſame chapiter he expounded it. For truly ſo the blood is ſoule, as Chriſt was ỹ ſtone. And yet the Apoſtle ſayth not, the ſtone dyd ſignifie Chriſt, but he ſayth the ſtone was Chriſt.

Auguſt. contra Adamantum. cap. 12

Chriſte gaue to his Diſciples the ſigne of his body.

Here. S. Auſten ſayth playnely that Chriſt called the ſigne of his body, his body, and in this chapter doth cōpare theſe three textes of ſcripture, this is my body, the bloud is the ſoule, and Chriſt was the ſtone: and declareth them to be one phraſe and to be expounded after one faſhion. Now is there no man ſo mad, as to ſay, that Chriſt was a naturall ſtone (except he be a naturall foole) whoſe iudgment we nede not greatly to regard therfore we may well conclude that the ſacrament is not his naturall body, but is cauled his body, for a ſimilitude that it hath wherein it ſignifieth & repreſenteth his body. And that the ſacrament of ſo great a thing is called euen with the name of the very thing it ſelfe, as S. Auſten ſayd immediately before.

This were proufe inough to conclude that all ỹ olde fathers did holde the ſame opiniō, for who would once furmiſe (ſeing we haue S. Auſten ſo playne for vs which is the chiefeſt among them all) who would once ſurmiſe I ſay, that he diſſented in this great mattter from the other faythful fathers, or they from him? neuertheleſſe I dare not let him ſtand poſt alone, leſt ye diſpiſe him. And therfore I will ſhew you ỹ minde of certaine other alſo: and firſt of his maiſter S. Ambroſe.

S. Ambroſe wrighting vpon the Epiſtle of Paule to the Corinthians in the xi. chapter ſayth. Quia enim morte Domini liberati ſumus huius rei memoris in edendo & potando, carnem & ſanguinem que pro nobis oblata ſunt ſignificamus. That is to ſay, becauſe we be deliuered by the death of the Lord being mindfull of this thinge, meaning of the ſacrament, we ſignifie the fleſhe and bloud which were offered for vs. Here doth S. Ambroſe ſay inough if mē were not ſophiſters, but would be content with reaſon. For he ſayth that in eating and drinking the ſacrament of Chriſtes body, we ſignifie or repreſent the fleſh and bloud of our Sauiour Ieſus. Not withſtanding becauſe you are ſo ſlippery, we ſhall bynde you a lytle better by this mans wordes.

Ambroſi: ſuper illud mortem domini annūciatis.

S. Ambroſe ſayth. Sed forte dices ſpeciem ſanguinis non video. Sed habet ſimilitudinis Sicut enim mortis ſimilitudinem ſumpſiſti, ita etiam ſimilitudinem precioſi ſanguinis bibis. That is to ſay But peraduenture thou wilt ſay, I ſe no appearaunce of bloud, but it hath a ſimilitude. For euen as thou haſt taken the ſimilitude of death, euen ſo thou drinkeſt the ſimilitude of the precious bloud. Here may you ſee by ỹ conferring of theſe two ſacrmentes, What S. Ambroſe iudged of it For he ſayth euen as thou haſt taken a ſimilitude of his death in the ſacramēt of baptiſme, ſo doſt thou drink a ſimi litude of his precious bloud in the ſacrament of the altar. And yet as S. Auſten ſayd before, the Apoſtle ſayth not we ſignifie burning, but ſayth, we are buried. And likewiſe here Chriſt ſayd not this ſignifieth my body, but this is my body, calling the ſacrament, ſigne, token and memoriall of ſo great a thing, euen with ẏ name of the very thing it ſelfe, thus doth S. Ambroſe choke our ſophiſters. Neuertheleſſe I will alleage one place more out of S. Ambroſe, where he ſaith. Dicit ſacerdos, fac nobis inquit hanc oblationẽ ſcriptã rationabilẽ, quod eſt figura corporis Domini noſtri Ieſu Chriſti. That is, ẏ Prieſt ſayth make vs this oblation acceptable. &c. For it is a figure of the body of our Lord Ieſu Chriſt. Here he cauleth it plainly a figure of Chriſtes body, which thing you can not auoyde. Therfore geue prayſe vnto God & let his truth ſpreade which is ſo plainely teſtified, by theſe holy fathers. Now let vs ſee what S. Hierome ſayth.

Ambroſ. Libro. 4. de Sacramen. Cap. 5.

The Sacrament is a figure of Chriſtes body.

S. Hierome writyng vpon Eccleſiaſte, ſayth on thys maner: Caro Domini verus cibus eſt, & ſanguis eius verus potus eſt, hoc ſolum habemus in præſenti ſeculo bonũ, ſi veſcamur carne eius cruoreq; potemur, non ſolum in myſterio, ſed etiam in ſcripturarum lectione, verus enim cibus & potus, qui ex verbo dei ſumitur ſcientia ſcripturarum eſt. That is to ſay. The fleſſ of the Lord is very meate, & hys bloud is very drinke. This is onely the pleaſure or profite that we haue in thys worlde, that we may eate hys fleſhe and drinke hys bloud, not onely in a myſterye, but alſo in the readyng of Scriptures. For the very meate and drink, which is taken out of Gods worde, is the knowledge of Scriptures. Here may ye ſée Saint Hieromes minde in few wordes. For firſt he ſayth, that we eate hys fleſhe and drinke hys bloud in a myſterye, which is the ſacrament of hys remembraunce and memoriall of hys paſſion. And after he addeth that we eate hys fleſh and drinke hys bloud in the reading and knowledge of Scriptures, and calleth that very meate and very drinke. And yet I am ſure ye are not ſo groſſe, as to thinke that the letters which you read are turned into naturall fleſhe and bloud. And likewiſe it is not neceſſary that the bread ſhoulde be turned into hys body, no more then ẏ letters in ſcripture are turned into hys fleſhe. And neuertheleſſe through fayth we may as well eate hys body in receauing of the ſacrament, as eate hys fleſhe in reading of the letters of the Scripture. Beſides that S. Hierome calleth the vnderſtanding of the Scripture very meate and very drinke: which you muſt néedes vnderſtand in a myſtery and ſpirituall ſenſe, for it is neither materiall meate nor drinke that is receaued with the mouth and téeth, but it is ſpirituall meate and drinke, and is ſo called for a ſimilitude & propertie: becauſe that as meate and drink comfort the body alſo outward man, ſo doth the readyng and knowledge of Scripture comfort the ſoule and inward man. And likewiſe it is of Chriſtes body, which is called very meate and very drinke, which you muſt néedes vnderſtand in a myſterye or ſpirituall ſenſe (as S. Hierome called it) for hys body is no materiall meate nor drinke that is receaued with the mouth or téeth, but it is ſpirituall meate and drinke, and ſo called for a ſimilitude and propertie, becauſe that as meate and drinke comforteth the body, ſo doth the fayth in hys body breaking and bloudſheding, refreſhe the ſoule vnto lyfe euerlaſtyng. We vſe it cuſtomably in our dayly ſpeach to ſay, when a childe ſetteth all hys mynde and delight on ſport & playe: It is meate and drinke to thys childe to playe. And alſo we ſay by a mã that loueth well hawking and hunting: it is meate and drinke to this man to hawke & hunt. Where no man doubteth, but it is a figuratiue ſpeach. And therefore I wonder that they are ſo blinde in thys one poynt, of Chriſtes body: and can not alſo take the wordes figuratiuely, as theſe olde Doctors dyd. Agayne S. Hierome ſayth. Poſtq; myſticum paſcha fuerat impletum & agni carnes cum Apoſtolis

Hieroni. ſuper eccle. Cap. 3.

We eate the very fleſh of Chriſt & drinke hys bloud in a myſtery.

The vnderſtandyng of the Scripture is very meate & very drinke

Chriſtes body is no materiall meate or drinke.

Hieronimus super. Math. 26.

Apostolis comederat, assumit panem qui comfortat cor hominis, & ad verum paschæ transgreditur sacramentum, vt quomodo in præfiguratione eius Melchisedech summi Dei sacerdos, vinum & panem offerens fecerat, ipse quoque veritatem corporis & sanguinis repræsentaret. That is to say. After the mystical Easter Lambe fulfilled, and that Christ had eaten the Lambes flesshe with the Apostles, he toke breed which comforteth the hart of man, and passeth to the true sacrament of the Easter Lãbe: that as Melchisedech brought forth breed and wyne figuryng hym, so might he likewyse represent the truth of hys body and bloud. Here doth S. Hierome speake after the maner that Tertullian dyd before: that Christ with breed and wyne dyd represent the truth of hys body. For except he had had a true body, he coulde not leaue a figure of it, nor represent it vnto vs. For a vayne thyng or phãtasie can haue no figure, nor can not be represented: as by example, how shoulde a man make a figure of hys dreame or represent it vnto our memorye? But Christ hath left vs a figure and representation of hys bodye in breed and wyne: therefore it followeth that he had a true bodye. And that this was S. Hieromes mynde it doth manifestly appeare by ỹ wordes of Beda, which doth more copiously set out the saying of Hierome. For he writeth on thys maner: Finitis paschæ veteris solennijs quæ in commemorationem antique de Ægypto liberationis agebantur, transit ad nouum quod in suæ redemptionis memoriam Ecclesia frequentare desiderat, vt videlicet pro carne agni vel sanguine, suæ carnis sanguinisq; sacramentum in panis ac vini figura substituens, ipsum se esse monstraret cui iurauit Dominus & non pœnitebit eum: Tu es sacerdos in æternum secundum ordinem Melchisedech. Frangit autẽ ipse panem quem porrigit, vt ostendat corporis sui fractionem nõ sine sua sponte futuram. &c. Et paulò post. Similiter & calicem post quam cœnauit dedit eis. Quia ergo panis carnem confirmat, vinum vero sanguinem operatur in carne, hic ad corpus Christi mystice, illud refertur ad sanguinem. That is to say. After the solemnitie of the olde Easter Lambe was finished (which was obserued in the remembraunce of the olde deliueraunce out of Egypt) he goeth vnto the new which the Church gladly obserueth in the remembraunce of hys redemption, that he in the stead of the flesshe and bloud of the Lambe, might institute and ordayne the Sacrament of hys flesshe and bloud in the figure of breed and wyne, and so declare hym selfe to be the same vnto whom the Lord sware and will not repent, thou art a perpetuall Priest after the order of Melchisedech. And he hym selfe brake the breed which hee gaue, to shewe that the breakyng of hys body should not be done without hys own will. &c. And a little after. And lykewyse he gaue them the cuppe after he had supped. And because breed doth confirme or strength the flesshe, and wyne worketh bloude in the flesshe, therefore is the breed mystically referred vnto the bodye of Christ, and the wyne referred vnto hys bloud.

Where there is no true body there can be no figure of the same.

Breed and wine is mistically referred to the body & bloud of Christ.

Here may you note, first that as the Lambe was a remembraunce of their deliueraunce out of Egypt (and yet the Lambe deliuered them not) so is the Sacrament a remembrance of our redemption (and yet the Sacrament redeemed vs not). Besides that he sayth, that Christ in the stead of the flesshe and bloud of the Lambe, dyd institute the Sacrament of hys flesh and bloud in figure of breed and wyne. Marke well, he sayth not that in the stead of Lambes flesshe & bloud he dyd institute hys owne flesshe and bloud, but sayth that he dyd institute the Sacrament of hys flesshe & bloud. What thyng is a Sacrament: verely it is the signe of an holy thyng, and there is no differẽce betwene a signe and a Sacrament, but that the signe is referred vnto a worldly thyng, and a Sacrament vnto a spirituall or holy thyng: as S. Austen sayth: Signa (cum ad res diuinas pertinẽt) sacramenta appellantur: That is to say: Signes when they pertain vnto godly things are called sacramentes. Therefore when Beda sayth, that they did institute

A Sacrament what it is?

Ad Marcellum.

tute the sacrament of hys flesshe and bloud in the figure of bread & wyne it is as much to say (by S. Austens definition) as that he dyd institute the figure of hys holy flesshe and bloud in the figure of bread and wyne, that is to say, that bread and wyne shoulde be the figure and signe representyng hys holy flesshe and bloud vnto vs, for a perpetuall remembrance. And afterwarde hee declareth the propertie for which the bread is called the body and the wyne the bloud: sayyng hée speaketh not so darkely as I now do, but plainly saith, that the bread is mystically referred vnto the bodye of Christ: because that as bread doth strength the flesshe, so Christes bodye whiche is figured by the bread doth strength ỳ soule through fayth in hys death. And so doth he clerely proue my purpose.

Bread and wyne represent vnto vs the flesh and bloud of Christ.

Chrisostō. Super. Math. 26.

Now let vs sée what Chrisostome sayth which shall describe vs the faith of the ould grecyās and (I doubt not) he had not lost the true fayth, how so euer the worlde go now a dayes. Chrisostome sayth in this manner. Si enim mortuus Iesus non est, cuius signum et simbolum hoc sacrificium est? vides quantū ei studiū fuerit vt semper memoria teneamus pro nobis ipsū mortuū fuisse That is to say, for if Iesus haue not died, whose memoriall and signe is ỳ sacrifice? Thou séest what diligence he gaue that we should continuallye kéepe in memory that he died for vs. Here you may sée that Chrisostome calleth the Sacramēt simbolū & signū: that is to say, a memoriall & signe of Christe, and that it was institute to kéepe his death in perpetuall remembraunce. But of one thing thou must beware or els thou art deceiued, he calleth it also a sacrifice, and there thou must wisely vnderstād hym. For if it were the sacrifice of Christes body, thē must Christes body be slayne there agayne, which thing God forbyd. And therfore thou must vnderstand him when he calleth it a sacrifice, that he meaneth it to be a remēbraunce of that holy sacrifice where Christes body was offered on ỳ crosse once for all: For he can be sacrifised no more, seing he is immortall. Notwithstanding our prelates will heare note me of presumption, that I dare bee so bolde to expounde his minde on this fashiō: For in déede the take him otherwise, and thinke that it is a very sacrifice. And therfore I will bring one other text, where Chrisostome shall expound him selfe. Chrisostome sayth: Nonne per singulos dies offerrimus? offerrimus quidem, sed ad recordationem mortis eius facientes &c et paulo post. Non aliud sacrificium (sicut pontifex) sed id ipsum semper facimus: magis autem recordationem sacrificij operamur. That is to say, do we not dayly offer or do sacrifice? yes surely, But we do it for the remembraunce of his death, for this sacrifice is an example of that we offer, not an other sacrifice as the Bysshoppe (in the olde lawe) dyd, but euer the same; yea rather a remembraunce of the sacrifice, firste he sayth that they dayly do sacrifice, but it is in remembraunce of christes death, then hee sayth that the sacrifice is an example of that: Thyrdly he sayth that they offer not an other sacrifice (that is to say an oxe or a goate as the Bysshops of the old law,) but euer the same, Marke this poynt: for though it be one at ỳ firste sight to make with thē yet doth it make so directlye against them, that they shall neuer be able to auoyde it. Chrisostome sayth they do not offer an other sacrifice as the Bysshops dyd, but euer the same. They offer other breade and wyne this day then they did yesterday: they shal say an other Masse to morowe thē they dyd this day. Now if this bread and wyne, or the Masse be a sacrifice, then do they offer an other sacrifice, as well as the Bysshops of the ould lawe. For this sacrifice did signifie ỳ Christ should come & shed his bloud, as well as the bread, wine & Masse do representhat he hath done it in déede. And therfore if it be a sacrifice, thē do they offer any other sacrifice, representing his passiō, aswell as ỳ Bishop of ỳ ould law, But ỳ doth Chrisostome denye, and sayeth that they offer euery day the same. What same? verely euen the same that was done and sacrifised Sacrifice.

Christes body a sacrifice offered on the crosse once for all.

The Sacrifice that we offer in bread and wyne is the remembraunce of Christes death.

crificed when Chriſt ſhed his bloud, In this ſacrifice is Chriſt bound and buffeted and led from Anna to Cayphas: he is brought to Pilate & condemned: he is ſcourged and crowned with thorne and nayled on the croſſe and his hart opened with a ſpeare, & ſo ſhedeth his bloud, for our redemption. Why Chriſoſtome, and do you the ſelfe ſame ſacrifice euery day? yea verely. Then why doth S. Paule ſay that Chriſt is riſen from death, and dieth no more, if he dye no more, how do you dayly crucifie hym? Forſoth Paule ſayth truth. For we do not actually indede, but onely in a miſtery And yet we ſay, that we do ſacrifice hym, and that this is his ſacrifice, for the celebration of the ſacrament and memory of ỹ paſſion which we kepe. And for this cauſe it hath the name of the thing that it doth repreſent & ſignifie. And therefore I expounde my mynde by a rethorical correction and ſay, magis recordationem ſacrificij, that is to ſay, yea rather the remẽbraunce of the ſacrifice. Graunt mercies (good Chriſoſtome:) now do I perceaueỹ pith of this matter: euen as the maſſe is the very death and paſſion of chriſt ſo is it a ſacrifice. Now it doth but only repreſent the very death and paſſion of Chriſt, therefore it doth follow that the Maſſe in very dede doth but one repreſent a ſacrifice. And yet notwithſtãdyng many tymes it is called a ſacrifice of holy Doctours, and hath the name of ỹ very ſame thyng that it doth repreſent & ſignifie. And euen ſo we may ſay of this ſacramẽt, that as the Maſſe is the very ſacrifice and paſſion of Chriſt, ſo is the Sacrament his very body & ſacrifice that is offered. Now the Maſſe doth but onely repreſẽt & ſignifie the paſſiõ: ſo the Sacrament doth but onely repreſent and ſignifie the body and very ſacrifice once offered for euer. Notwithſtãdyng many tymes the Maſſe is called a ſacrifice of holy Doctours: and ſo the Sacrament is called the body and a ſacrifice. And hath the name of the very ſame thyng that it doth repreſent and ſignifie.

Roma. 6.

Is S. Auſten declareth afore ad Bonifacium.

The maſſe is called a ſacrifice, becauſe it repreſenteth the death & paſſion of Chriſt that was ſacrificed on the Croſſe.

Chriſoſt ſuper.

Furthermore Chriſoſtome ſayth. Ipſe quoq; bibit ex eo, ne auditis verbis illis dicerent: quid igitur ſanguinem bibimus & carnem comedimus? ac ideo perturbarentur. Nam & quando prius de his verba fecit multi ſolummodo propter verba ſcandalum paſſi ſunt. Ne igitur tunc id quoq; accideret, primus ipſe hoc fecit, vt trãquillo animo ad cõmunicationem miſteriorum inducerent. That is to ſay: he alſo dranke of it, leſt whẽ they heard his woordes, they ſhould ſay, why do we thẽ drinke bloud and eate fleſh? and ſo ſhould be troubled. For when hẽ ſpake before of thoſe thyngs many of them were offended with his woordes. And becauſe that ſhould not now alſo chaunce, he hym ſelfe dranke firſt of it, that he might cauſe them to come without feare to the partaking of thoſe miſteries: here Chriſoſtome noteth ỹ Chriſt dranke of it, to draw them from the groſſe vnderſtãdyng of his woordes, and by his drinkyng to teſtifie vnto them that it was not his natural bloud nor his natural fleſh in dede, but onely memorials and repreſentations of his body and bloud. And therfore he called thẽ miſteries: that is to ſay ſacramentes. For in this place a Sacrament and a miſtery is all one thyng. Notwithſtãdyng ſometyme this woord miſtery is more commõ and large in ſignifying then this worde Sacrament. And I haue ſhewed you before, that a Sacrament is the ſigne of an holy thyng it ſelfe, that it repreſẽteth: albeit ſome tyme it beare the name of the very thyng it ſelfe, as the Image of S. Peter is not S. Peter him ſelfe and yet it beareth his name.

Math. 26.

Chriſt by drinkyng of the cup, dyd ſhewe the miſtery and that it was no naturall nor carnall bloud.

Chriſoſtome ſayth. Caro non prodeſt quicq̃: hoc eſt ſecundum ſpiritum verba mea audienda ſunt. Qui ſecundum carnem audit, nihil lucratur, nihil vtilitatis accipit. Et paulò poſt. Quid eſt autẽ carnaliter intelligere? ſimpliciter vt res dicuntur, neq; aliud quippiam excogitare. Miſteria omnia interioribus oculis conſiderãda ſunt, hoc eſt ſpiritualiter. That is to ſay. The fleſh profiteth nothing: that is, my woordes muſt be vnderſtãd after the ſpirit. He that vnderſtãdeth them after ỹ fleſh wynneth nothyng, nor taketh any profit. And a litle after Super Ioh. cap. 6. Hom. 46.

All misteryes must be considered spiritually.

What meaneth this, to vnderstand after the flesh or carnally? verely to take the thynges simply as they are spoken, and to thinke no other thyng. All misteries or Sacramentes must be considered with the inward eyes, that is to say, spiritually.

And after he expoundeth him selfe on this maner. Interiores autem oculi vt panem viderunt, creaturas transuolant, & non de illo pane a pistore cocto cogitãt: sed de eo qui dixit se panẽ vitæ, qui per mistꝛium panẽ significatur. That is to say. The inward eyes as sone as they se the bread, they passe ouer the creatures, & thinke not of that bread which is baken of the baker, but of hym that called him selfe the bread of lyfe which is signified by the misticall or sacramentall bread. Would you haue hym say any more? hee telleth you playne, that Christ which is the very bread of lyfe, is signified by this sacramentall bread. And that is the thyng whiche our Byshops so fleshly denye now a dayes, which thyng yet you may se the old fathers conclude with one assent. Notwithstãdyng yet I will alledge mo old Doctours, so that from hence forward they may be ashamed to call it new learnyng.

The plaine saying of Chrisostome.

Fulgentius. x. Lib. de fide.

Fulgentius sayth. In illis enim carnalibus (tempore legis) victimis, significatio fuit carnis Christi, quam pro peccatis nostris, & ipse sine peccato fuerat oblaturus, & sanguinis quem erat effusurus in remissionem peccatorum nostrorum. In isto autem sacrificio gratiarum actio atq; commemoratio est carnis Christi quam pro nobis obtulit, & sanguinis quem pro nobis idem Deus effudit. That is to say. In these carnall sacrifices (in the time of the law) was a signification of the flesh of christ which he without sinne, should offer for our sinnes, & of the blood which he should shed out in remission of our sinnes. But in this sacrifice is a thãkes geuyng & remembraunce of the flesh of Christ whiche hee offered for vs, and of the blood which the same God shed out for vs. First note that he calleth it a sacrifice which notwithstãdyng is but a remẽbraũce of that sacrifice offered on the crosse once for all, as it is proued before out of Chrisostome. Then he playnly calleth it a thankes geuyng, & remembraunce of Christes flesh and blood: and so concludeth with vs. Neuertheless because Sophisters wold some thinke to auoyde this place, I will alledge one other saying of the same author, whiche they shall neuer be able to auoyde.

The Sacrament of Christes body is a thankes geuyng.

Fulgentius.

Fulgentius saith, as Haymo testifieth. Hic calix nouum Testamentũ est: id est, hic calix quem vobis trado, nouum Testamentum significat. That is to say This cup or chalice is the new Testament: That is, this cup or chalice which I deliuer you doth signifie the new Testamẽt. In this place he doth playnly shew his mynde, whiche can not be auoyded. For euen as the cup is the new Testament, so is the bread the body. Now the cup doth but signifie the new Testament, and therefore I may conclude that the breade doth but signifie the body.

This cup is the new Testamẽt, is as much as this cup signifieth the new testament.

Eusebius.

Eusebius sayth. Quia corpus assũptum ablaturus erat ex oculis nostris & sideribus allaturus, necessarium erat vt nobis in hac die sacramentum corporis & sanguinis consecraret, vt colleretur iugiter per mistꝛium quod semel offerebatur in pretium. That is ta say, Because he would take away out of our eyes the body that he toke and cary it into heauen, It was necessary that in this time he should consecrate to vs the sacrament of his body and blood that that which was once offerd for the price of our redemption, might continually be honored through the mistery.

Consecrat.

To consecrate a thing, is to aply it vnto an holy vse. Here you may see ỹ he calleth it the sacrament of his body and blood, which body is caried vp in the heauen: And also he calleth it a mistery whiche is inough for them that will see.

Druthmarius.

Also Druthmarius, expoundeth these wordes this is my body on this manner: Hoc est corpus meum in mistꝛio. That is to say: this is my body in a mistery. I thinke you know what a mistery meaneth, Christ is crucified euery day in a mistery: that is to say euery day his death is repꝛesẽted by the the sacramentes of remembraunce. The Masse is Christes passion in a mistery: that is to say: the Masse doth representh his passion and kæpeth it in our memory. The bred is Christes body in a mistery: that is to say, it representeth his body that was broken for vs, and kæpeth it in our remembraunce

You haue heard all ready the mind of the doctours how the sacrament is Christes body. And now I shall shew you how the sacrament is our body, which doth not a litell helpe to the vnderstanding of these wordes which are in controuersie. The sacrament of the aulter is our body as well as it is Christes body. And euen as it is our body, so is it Christes. But there is no man that can say that it is our naturall bodie in dæde, but onely a figure, signe, memoriall or representation of our body. Wherfore it must also followe, that it is but onlye a figure, signe, memoriall or representation of Christes body. The first part of this argumēt may thus be proued S. Austen writyng in a sermon sayth on this manner. Corpus ergo Christi si vultis intelligere, apostolum audite dicētem, Vos estis corpus Christi & mēbra. 1. Cor. 12. Si ergo estis corpus Christi et membra, misterium vestrumque in mēsa Dominī positum est, misterium Dominī accipitis, ad id quod estis, Amen respondetis, & respondendo subscribitis. That is to say: If you will vnderstand the body of Christ, heare ỹ apostle which sayth, ye are the body of Christ and members. 1 Cor. 12. therfore if ye be the body of Christ & members, your mistery is put vpon the Lordes table ye receiue the mistery of the Lord, vnto ỹ you are, you aunswere Amen And in aunswering subscribe vnto it. Here may you se that the sacrament is also our body, and yet is not our naturall body, but onely our body in a mistery, that is to say, a figure, signe, memorial or representation of our body, for as the bread is made of many graines or cornes, so we (though we be many) are one bread & one body. And for this propertie and similitude it is called our body and beareth the name of the very thing which it doth represent and signifie.

The Sacrament how it is our body.

Augustinus in sermone ad infantes.

Agayne S. Austen sayth. Quia Christus passus est pro nobis, commendauit nobis in isto sacramento corpus et sanguinem suum, quod etiam fecit & nos ipsos. Nam et nos ipsius corpus facti sumus, & per misericordiam ipsius quod accipimus nos sumus. Et postea dicit. Iā in nomine Christi tanquam ad calicem Domini veniſtis, ibi vos estis in mensa & ibi vos estis in calice. That is, because Christ hath suffered for vs, he hath betaken vnto vs in this sacrament his bodie and bloud which he hath also made euen our selues. For we also are made his body, and by his mercy we are euen the same thing that we receiue. And after he sayth, now in ỹ name of Christ ye are come, as a man would say, to the chalice of the Lord, there are ye vpon the table and there are ye in ỹ chalice. Here you may se, that the sacrament is our body. And yet it is not our naturall body, but onely in a mistery as it is before sayd.

Aug. in sermo. de sacra feria pascha.

Here you may see that ỹ Sacrament is our body.

Furthermore S. Austen sayth. Hūc itaque cibum & potum societatem vult intellegi corporis & membrorum suorum quod est sancta ecclesia in prædestinatis et vocatis, et iustificatis, et glorificatis sanctis & fidelibus eius. Huius rei sacramētum alicubi quotidie, alicubi certis inter vallis dierū in dominico preparatur, & de mensa Dominī sumitur, quibusdā ad vitam, quibusdam ad exitium. Res vero ipsa cuius est omni homini ad vitam nulli ad exitium, quicūque eius particeps fuerit. That is to say, he will that this meat and drinke should be vnderstād to be the felowshipp of his body & mēbers, which is the holy Church in the predestinate, and called and iustified and glorified his saintes & faythfull, The sacrament of this thing is prepared in some place dayly, & in some place at certaine appoynted dayes, as on ỹ Sonday And it is receiued from the table of the Lord, to some vnto life, and to some vnto destruction, but the thing it selfe whose sacrament this is, is receiued of all men vnto life and of no man to destruction, who so euer is partaker of it. Here doth S.

August. de sacra feria paschæ.

S. Austen calleth it by the name of Sacramēt meanyng the figure, signe or token of Christes body &c.

Auſten firſt ſay, that thys ſacrament is the fellowſhip of hys bodye and members which are we. And yet it is not our naturall bodye, as is before ſayd. And then he ſayth, that the Sacrament of thys thyng is receaued of ſome vnto life and ſaluation, and of ſome vnto death and damnation, for both faythfull and vnfaythfull may receiue the ſacrament. And after he ſayth, that the thing it ſelfe whoſe ſacrament it is, is receiued of all men vnto lyfe, and of no man vnto deſtruction, who ſo euer is partaker of it. And of this ſaying it muſt nedes follow, that onely the faythfull eate Chriſtes body, and the vnfaithfull eate not: For he is receiued of no mā vnto deſtruction. And of this it muſt alſo follow that the ſacrament is not Chriſtes body in dede, but onely in a myſterye, for if the ſacrament were his naturall bodye, then ſhould it follow, that ỹ vnfaithfull ſhould receiue his bodye, which is contrarye to the minde of S. Auſten, and againſt all truth. Thus haue we ſufficiently proued the firſt parte of our argument, that the ſacrament is our body, as well as it is Chriſtes. And now will I proue the ſecond part more plainely although it be inough declared all ready, to them that haue eares, that euen as it is our bodye ſo is it Chriſtes.

The wicked and vnfaythfull do not receaue the body of Chriſt and yet they receaue the Sacramēt to their dāmation.

Fyrſt you ſhall vnderſtand that in the wyne whiche is called Chriſtes bleud, is admired water, which doth ſignifie the people that are redemed with hys bleud: ſo that ỹ head which is Chriſt, is not without hys bodye which is the faythfull people, nor the body without hys head. Nowe if the wyne when it is conſecrated, be turned bodely into Chriſtes bloud, then is it alſo neceſſarye that the water which is admired be bodely turned into the bloud of the faythfull people. For where as is one conſecration muſt follow one operatiō. And where as is lyke reaſon, there muſt followe lyke myſtery. But whatſoeuer is ſignified by the water as concerning the faythfull people, is taken ſpiritually. Therefore whatſoeuer is ſpoken of the bloud in the wine, muſt alſo nedes be taken ſpiritually. Thys reaſon is not myne, but it is made by one Bartram vppon a 700. yeares ſince, when thys matter was firſt in diſputation. Whet eupon at the inſtance of great Charles the Emperor he made a boke profeſſing euen the ſame thyng that I do, and proueth by the olde Doctors & faythfull fathers, that the Sacrament is Chriſtes body in a myſtery, that is to ſay, a ſigne, figure or memoriall of hys body which was broken for vs, and not hys naturall body. And therefore that doctrine is new which otherwyſe teacheth, & not mine, which is not myne, but the doctrine of Chriſt and of the olde fathers of Chriſtes Church, till Antichriſt began to ſit and reigne in the temple of God.

Bartram.

The Sacrament is Chriſtes body in a myſtery.

Beſides that Cyprian ſayth, that the people is annexed in the Sacrament through the mixture of water. Therefore I maruell me much that they are ſo contentious and will not ſée, that as the water is the people, ſo the wyne is Chriſtes bloud, that is to ſay, in a myſtery, becauſe it repreſenteth Chriſtes bloud, as ỹ water doth the people.

Cyprianus ad cecilium.

As water is the people, ſo wine is Chriſtes bloud.

Furthermore Euſebius ſayth: Dū in ſacramentis vino aqua miſcetur, Chriſto fidelis populus incorporatur & iungitur, & quandam ei copula perfectæ charitatis vnitur. That is to ſay: Whiles in the Sacrament water is admixte with the wyne, the faythfull people is incorporate and ioyned with Chriſt, and is made one with hym, with a certayn knot of perfite charitie. Now where he ſayth, that we are ioyned and incorporate with Chriſt, what fondneſſe were it to contend, ſith we are there onely in a myſtery, and not naturally: to contend I ſay with ſuch pertinacitie that hys naturall bodye muſt be there: and not rather that he is ioyned with vs, as we are ioyned with hym and both in a myſtery, by the knot of perfite charitie.

Euſebius.

By ỹ mixture of water, ỹ faithfull people are in corporate with Chriſt.

The Sacrament as it is our body ſo it is Chriſtes of Gods word in euery other place and seeke an allegorie, and forsake the playne common sense. For he confesseth that he would not so do saue for necessitie: because (as he sayth) that the cõmon literall sense is impossible. For the thing he saith that is ment therby cã not be true: That is to witte, that the very body of Christ can be in the sacrament, because the sacrament is in many diuers places at once, and was at the Maundy: that is to witte, in the handes of Christ and euery of his Apostles mouthes. And at that time it was not glorified. And then he sayth that Christes body not being glorified, could no more be in two places at once then his owne can. And yet he goeth after further, and sayth no more it can whē it is glorified too. And that he proueth by the saying of Saint Austen, whose wordes be, that the bodye with which Christ arose, must be in one place. &c.

Frith. Hetherto hath M. More reasoned reasonably: but now he beginneth to decline from the dignitie of diuinitie into the dirtie dregges of vayne sophistrye. For where I say that I must of necessitie seeke an allegorie because the literall sense is impossible, and cã not be true, meaning that it can not stand with the processe of Scripture, but that other textes doe of necessitie constrayne me to construe it spiritually. There catcheth he thys worde (can) and thys worde (impossible) and woulde make men beleue that I ment, it coulde not bee true because reason can not reach it, but thinketh it impossible. And there he triũpheth (before the victory) and would know what article of our fayth I coulde assigne, in which reason shall not driue awaye the strength of my proofe, and make me leaue ỹ literall sense wherin my proofe shoulde stand, and send me to seeke an allegorye that might stand with reason, and driue away ỹ fayth. But now deare brethren, sith I speak not of the impossibilitie of reason, but of the impossibilitie to stand with other textes of Scripture, ye may see ỹ thys royall reasõ is not worth a rush. Thẽ would he fayne know the place where S. Austen so sayth, which thing although it were harde for me to tell, sith I haue not hys bookes to looke for it, yet I thanke God my memorye is not so bad, but I cã shew hym where he shall finde it. And because I thinke that hee is more accustomed to the Popes lawes then to Saint Austens workes (sith hee is become the Prelates proctour and patrone) I say he shall not fayle but find it in hys lawes de consecratione. And where as hee would wrest the wordes of S. Austen, which sayth that the bodye in which Christ arose, must nedes bee in one place: saying that he might meane, not that hys body myght not be in diuers places at once, but that it muste be in one place, that is to say, in some one place or other, he speaketh (sayth M. More) nothyng of the sacrament, nor sayth not hys body with which he rose must nedes be in one place, that it can by no possibilitie be in any moe. Thys seemeth to some a goodly glose, and yet it shall proue but a vayne euasion. For if a man woulde saye that the kings graces body must be in one place, and then an other woulde expound ỹ notwithstãdyng hys wordes hys graces body might be in two places at once: I thinke mẽ myght soone iudge that he delighted to delaye, and myght say, what nede hee to determine, that he must be in one place, except he thought in deede, ỹ he myght be in no moe but onely one. And though men myght so argue on other mens words, yet of S. Austens words thys must nedes follow, for he bringeth them in (as God would) by a contrary Antithesis saying: Corpus in quo resurrexit in vno loco esse oportet, veritas autem eius vbiq; diffusa est. That is to say, Hys body wherein he rose, must be in one place, but hys truth is dispersed in all places. Where he plainly concludeth by the cõtrary Antithesis, that as hys truth is dispersed in all places, so must hys body nedes be in one place onely. As by example, if a man shoulde say: The kyng hys graces bodye must needes be in one place, but hys power is throughout hys realme. Where no mā doubteth, but that in saying one place, he meaneth one place onely. And therefore though in some place, ỹ worde must, doth not signifie such a necessitie as excludeth all possibilitie, yet in thys place it doth so signifie, as the contrary Antithesis doth euidently expresse.

And where ye say, that he speaketh nothing of the sacrament, I would ye should sticke still to that saying. For thys is playne, that he speaketh of his naturall body, and therefore if hee speake not of ỹ sacrament, then haue you concluded that the sacrament is not hys naturall body: the contrary whereof you would haue mē beleue. Thus haue I shewed euidence, both where he shall finde the wordes of S. Austen, and also that I haue rightly alleaged them.

Notwithstandyng sith he maketh so much of hys paynted sheth, I shall alleage hym more authoritye that Christes naturall body is in one place onely. Which thyng proued, doth vterly conclude ỹ the Sacramēt is not his naturall body, but only a memoriall and a representation of the same. And first let vs see S. Austens mynde.

August. ad Dardanū.

S. Austen writyng vnto Dardanus doth playnly proue that the naturall body of Christ must needes be in one place only, and also ỹ his soule can bee but in one place at once. The occasiō of his Epistle is this: Dardanus dyd write vnto S. Austen for the expositiō of those wordes that Christ spake vnto the theefe saying: This day shalt thou be wᵗ me in Paradise: and wist not how he should vnderstād it, whether Christ mēt that the theefe should be in Paradise with Christes soule, or with his body, or with his Godhead: Thereupon S. Austen writeth that as touchyng Christes body, that day it was in the sepulchre. And saith that it was not Paradise, although it were in a gardē that he was buryed. For Christ (he sayth) ment of a place of ioy: And that was not (sayth S. Austen) in hys sepulchre: And as for Christes soule, it was that day in hel, and no man will say, that Paradise was there. Wherefore (sayth S. Austen) the text must needes bee vnderstand, that Christ spake it of his Godhead. Now marke this Argument of S. Austen, and ye shall see my purpose playnly proued. For seing he expoundeth this text vpō Christes Godhead, because his manhode as touching the body, was in the graue, and as touchyng his soule, was in hell: you may soone perceiue, that S. Austen thought that whilest his body was in ỹ graue, it was not in Paradise to: ꝛ because his soule was in hell, it could not be in paradise also. And therfore he verifieth the text vppon his diuinitie. For if he had thought that Christes body or soule might haue bene in diuerse places at once, hee would not haue sayd, that the text must needes be vnderstand of his diuinitie, but it might full well, yea ꝛ much better haue ben vnderstand of his manhode. Marke well this place which doth determine the doubt of this matter. Notwithstandyng the faythfull father leaueth not the matter on this fashion, but also taketh away such fonde imaginations as would cause men to surmise, that Christes body should be in moe places at once then one. For he saith. Cauendum ỹ ne ita diuinitatem astruamus hominis, vt veritatē auferamus corporis. Non est autem consequens vt quod in Deo est, ita sit vbiq;. Nam & de nobis veracissime Scriptura dicit, quod in illo viuimus, mouemur & sumus. Nec tamē sicut ille, vbiq; sumus, sed aliter homo ille in Deo, quoniā & aliter Deus in illo homine, proprio quodam & singulari modo. Una enim persona Deus & homo est, & vtrumq; est vnus Christus Iesus, vbiq; per id quod Deus est, in cœlo autem per id quod homo. That is to say we must beware that we doe not so affirme the diuinitie of the man, that we take away the truth of his body. For it foloweth not that the thyng whiche is in God should be in euery place as God is. For the Scripture doth truly testifie on vs, that we lyue, moue and be in hym. And yet are we not in euery place as he is. Howbeit, that man is otherwise in God, and God otherwise in that man by a certaine

How S. Austen laboureth to proue that Christes body might not be in mo places at once then in one.

taine peculiar and singular way: For God and mā is one person, and both of them one Christ Jesu whiche is in euery place in that he is God, and in heauen, in that he is mā. Here S. Austen doth say, that if we should graūt Christ to be in all places as touchyng his manhode, we should take awaye the truth of his body. For though his manhode be in God, and God in hys manhode, yet it foloweth not, that it should bee in euery place, as God is. And after hee concludeth that as touchyng hys Godhead hee is in euery place, and as touchyng his manhode hee is in heauen. What nēde he to make these wordes and Antitheſis, but becauſe hee thought verely that though hys Godhead were in euery place, yet his manhode was in heauen onely.

If we affirme that the body of Christ is in many places at one instant, thē we should take away the truth of his body.

Augustin. ibidem.

But yet this holy Doctour goeth further (ſo that they may be aſhamed of their party) and sayth. Secundum hominem namque in terra erat, non in cœlo (vbi nunc eſt) quando dicebat, nemo aſcendit in cœlū niſi qui deſcendit de cœlo, filius hominis qui eſt in cœlo. That is to say, as touching his manhod he was in the earth and not in heauen (where he now is) when he sayd, no man aſcendeth into heauen but he ỹ deſcended from heauen, the ſonne of man which is in heauē. Now I truſt you will be content and let the truth ꝓued. For I am ſure it is not poſſible for you to auoyde it for he sayeth, that as touching his manhode he was in the earth and not in heauen, when he spake thoſe wordes: & ſo ꝓued that he was not in mo places at once then onely one place. For els yf S. Austen had thought ỹ he could haue bene in mo places at once then one with his body, then might he not haue sayd, that he was in earth and not in heauen. For then a man might ſone haue deluded hym & haue sayde Austen you can not tell, for he may be in euery place. But they that ſo thinke after S. Auſtens mynde, do take away ỹ truth of his naturall body, and make it a very phantaſticall body: from the which hereſie God deliuer his faythfull. Beſides this S. Auſten doth saye, Chriſtum Dominum noſtrum vnigenitum DEI filium eqalē patri, eundemque hominis filium, quo maior eſt pater, & vbique totum preſentem eſſe non dubites tanquam Deum, & in eodem templo DEI eſſe verum DEVM, & in aliena parte cœli propter corporis modum. That is to say, doubt not but that Christ our Lord the onely begotten ſonne of God equall to the Father and the ſame being the ſonne of man wherin the father is greater, is hole preſent in all places as touching hys Godhed and dwelleth in the ſame temple of God, as God, and in ſome place of heauen for the conditiō of his very body. Here is it euident by S. Auſtens wordes that as touching his godhed he is in all places, and as touching his manhode he is onlye in heauen, yea and not that onely, but that he being in heauen as touching the meaſure, nature, condicion, and qualitye of his naturall body, is only in one certaine place in heauen, and not in many places at once. Thus much is ꝓued out of S. Auſten.

Christ as touching his Godhead is in all places.

Thys truth is not onely ꝓued by S. Auſtens authoritie, but alſo by ỹ noble clerke Fulgentius which writeth on this maner. Vnus idemq; homo localis ex homine, qui eſt Deus immenſus ex patre, vnus idemq; ſecundum humanam ſubſtātiam abſens cœlo cum eſſet in terra, & derelinquens terram, cum aſcendiſſet in cœlum. Secundum diuinam vero immenſamq; ſubſtantiam, nec cœlū dimittens cum de cœlo deſcendit, nec terram deſerens, cum ad cœlum aſcendit: Quod ipſius Domini certiſſimo ſermone poteſt cognoſci, qui vt localem oſtenderet ſuam humanitatem, dicit Diſcipulis ſuis: Aſcendo ad patrem meum & patrem veſtrum, Deum meum & Deum veſtrum, De Lazaro quoq; cum dixiſſet, Lazarus mortuus eſt, adiunxit dicens, & gaudeo propter vos (vt credatis) quoniā non erā ibi immenſitatem vero ſuæ diuinitatis oſtendens Diſcipulis dicit: Ecce ego vobiſcum ſum vſque ad conſummationem ſeculi. Quomodo autem aſcendit in cœlum niſi quia localis & verus eſt homo, aut quomodo adeſt fidelibus ſuis, niſi quia idē immenſus & verus Deus eſt. That is to say, The ſame one man is locall (that is to say, conteined in one place) as touchyng his manhode, which is also God vnmeasurable from the father: the same one man as touchyng the substaunce of his manhode, was absent from heauen, when hee was in earth, and forsakyng the earth, when he ascended into heauen, but as touchyng his godly & vnmeasurable substaunce neither forsoke heauen whē he descended from heauē, nor forsoke the earth, when he ascēded vnto heauen. Which may be knowen by the most sure word of the Lord which to shew his humanitie to be locall (that is to say, contained in one place onely) dyd say vnto his Disciples. I ascēd vnto my father and your father, my God and your God, of Lazarus also when hee sayd, Lazarus is dead, hee said further, I am glad for your sakes (that you may beleue) for that I was not there. And agayne, shewyng the vnmeasurableneſſe of his Godhead, he sayd vnto his Disciples, beholde I am with you vnto the worldes ende, how dyd he ascende into heauen, but because he is locall and a very man? Or how is he present vnto his faythfull, but because he is vnmeasurable & very God? Here may you conclude by the authority of this Doctour also, that Christes body is onely in one place at once. For he saith, that Christ as touchyng his manhod is locall: that is to say, conteined in one place onely. And that hee proueth by the Scripture euen of Christes owne woordes. Now if this be true (as my conscience doth testifie, how so euer other men shall Iudge) then must it nēdes folow that his naturall body can not be in the Sacrament. And the authoritie, I am sure no man can auoyde, it is so playne.

Christ ascended into heauen, because he is locall and a very man.

More.

Now as for his natural reasōs be not worthy the reasonyng. For first that the body of Christ vnglorified could no more be in ij. places at once then his owne can, because he is a naturall body, as he is. I will not examine no cōparison betwen there ij. bodyes: but if Christ wold tell me that he would eche of both their bodyes to be in fiftene places at once, I would beleue hym, and would neuer aske hym whether he would first glorifie them or not. But I am sure glorified or vnglorified, if he sayd it, hee is able to do it. For the matter is not impossible to God.

Frith.

Truth it is, that if Christ so sayd & in so saying so mēt, there is no doubt, but he were able so to do. But that he in dēde so grossely ment ye shall neuer proue. And in dēde if he had so meant that hys owne body naturall should haue continued in the Sacrament which is the meate of the soule through fayth, and not of the body by eatyng it, and may as well be eaten through faith although it remayne in heauen, as if it were here present to our mouthes: if I say he had so ment, thē wold he neuer haue geuē vs such Scriptures as he dyd. For I say, that this grosse imagination may not stād with the processe of the Scripture whiche is receiued as it shall appeare by certaine textes.

The flesh profiteth nothing.

1. First where our Sauiour sayth: ỹ flesh profiteth nothyng. The waight of those woordes doth compell vs to vnderstād our matter spiritually, for by this short sentence we are no lesse plucked backe frō the carnall eatyng, thē was Nichodemus that he should not once dreame of the carnall regeneratiō, when Christ sayd vnto hym: that what soeuer was of flesh was flesh. For this is a playne conclusion, that when Christ sayd, the flesh profiteth nothyng, hee ment it euen of hys owne flesh that it could not profite (as they vnderstode hym) to be eatē with the teeth. Albeit it doth much profite to bee slayne for our redemption and eaten thorough fayth. Whiche thyng we may do, although his natural flesh be not in ỹ sacrament. For I may as well beleue in hym (though he be in heauen) as if he were in earth and in the Sacrament, & before myne eyes. And that Christ spake these woordes of his owne body, it is playne by S. Austens woordes writyng vppon the same place: And therefore he sayth, that they must be vnderstand spiritually, and addeth: if thou vnderstand them them ſpiritually, they are ſpirite and lyfe. And though thou vnderſtād thē carnally, yet neuertheles they are ſpirite and lyfe: But vnto thē they are not ſpirite and lyfe, which vnderſtande not ſpiritually, thoſe things that I haue ſpoken.

The flesh of Christ profiteth much if it be eaten with fayth.

August. tract. super 6. Ioan.

Athanaſius. 3. lib. qui dix. Serb.

Alſo Athanaſius ſayth. Spiritus eſt qui viuificat, caro nō prodeſt quicq̄, verba quæ ego locutus ſum, ſpiritus ſunt & vita. Nam & hoc loco vtrumq̄ de ſeipſo dicit carnem & ſpiritum, & ſpiritū ab eo quod eſt ſecundum carnem diſtinxit, vt non ſolum viſibile, ſed etiam inuiſibile quod in ipſo erat credentes diſcant, quod & ea quæ dicit nō ſunt carnalia, ſed ſpiritualia. Quō enim comedētibus ſufficiſſet corpus, vt totius mundi alimonia fiat? Sed ea propter meminit aſcenſus filij hominis in cœlum vt illos a corporali cogitatione auelleret, & poſthac diſcant carnem dictum cibum cœleſtem ſuperne veniētem & ſpiritualem alimoniam quā ipſe det, nā quæ locutus ſum (inquit) vobis ſpiritus ſunt & vita. That is to ſay, it is the ſpirite that quickeneth, the fleſhe profiteth nothyng: the wordes whiche I ſpeake vnto you, are ſpirite & lyfe. For in this place alſo hee meaneth both of his owne fleſhe and his owne ſpirite, & he deuided the ſpirite from the fleſh: that they might know through fayth not onely the viſible part but alſo the viſible part that was in hym, & alſo that the wordes which he ſpake were not carnall, but ſpirituall. For what body ſhold haue ſuffiſed to haue ben the meate of all the world? And euē therfore dyd he make mention of the Aſcenſion of the ſonne of man into heauē, that he might withdrawe them frō the bodely imagination, that they might hereafter learne, that the fleſh was called heauenly meate which cōmeth from aboue and ſpiritual meate whiche hee would geue. For (ſayth Chriſt) the wordes that I haue ſpokē vnto you, are ſpirite and lyfe. Here you may ſee that Chriſt ſpake it of his owne fleſhe, and ment playnly that it dyd nothyng profite, as infidelles dyd vnderſtād hym. For els it geueth life, as it is receiued of the faythfull in a myſterie. For as Bartram ſayth, in this myſterie of the body and bloud, is a ſpiritual operation which geueth lyfe. Without the whiche operation thoſe myſteries do nothyng profite, for ſurely (ſayth hee) they may fede the body, but the ſoule they can not fede.

Bartram.

The bread and wyne in the Sacrament why they are called myſteries.

2. Beſides that the Scripture ſayth, that, that entreth in by the mouth doth not defile a man, for as Chriſt ſayth, it is caſt forth into the draught. And by the ſame reaſon it foloweth that it doth not ſanctifie or make a man holy. But the Sacrament entreth in by the mouth: therfore it doth follow that (of it ſelfe) it doth not ſāctifie or make holy, & of this text ſhould folow two inconueniences, if the Sacrament were the naturall body of Chriſt. Firſt it ſhould folow that the body of Chriſt ſhould not ſanctifie the faythfull becauſe it entreth in by the mouth. And agayne it ſhould folow, that the body of Chriſt ſhould be caſt out into the draught, whiche thyng is abominable. Wherefore it muſt nedes folow, that the Sacrament can not be hys naturall body.

If the Sacrament of the body of Chriſt, were his naturall body, thē note what inconueniences muſt folow

3. Furthermore Chriſt would not ſuffer that deuoute woman which of loue ſought hym at hys ſepulture, to touch hys naturall body, becauſe ſhe lacked a poynt of fayth, and dyd not count hym to be equall with hys father. And much more it ſhall follow that the wicked which haue no fayth nor loue towardes hym, ſhall not be ſuffered to eate hys fleſhe with theyr teth, and ſwallowe it into their vncleane bodyes: for that were much more then to touch hym. And yet notwithſtandyng they receaue and eate the Sacrament. Wherupon it ſhould follow, if the ſacrament were hys naturall body, that they ſhould in deede eate hys body: which thyng may be counted a blaſphemye agaynſt God. Moreouer Chriſt ſayth, he that eateth my fleſhe & drinketh my bloud, dwelleth in me and I in hym. Now we know right well that the wicked doe eate the Sacrament, and yet neither dwell in Chriſt, nor Chriſt in them. Wherefore it muſt followe that the Sacrament is not the very fleſhe of Chriſt. And ſurely I can not excuſe

The wicked may not nor can not eate the body of Chriſt.

The wicked eate the Sacramēt, but yet dwell not in Chriſt.

them of blaſphemye, which ſo directly contrary Chriſtes wordes.

How can you auoyde theſe textes which Chriſt ſpeaketh vnto hys diſciples ſaying: yet a little while am I with you, and then I depart to hym that ſent me. And agayne: It is expedient for you that I depart. For except that I departe, that comforter ſhall not come vnto you. And agayn he ſayth: I forſake the world and go to my father. And to be ſhort he ſaith: Poore men ye ſhall euer haue with you, but me ſhall you not euer haue. Now we know right well that hys Godhead is in all places, and that as touchyng hys Godhead hee forſoke not the world, when he aſcended vnto his father. Wherfore it muſt nedes follow that he forſoke it as touching hys fleſhe and manhode. And thereto agreeth the expoſitions of S. Auſten and Fulgentius before alleaged, yea and al other old faithful fathers. Now if he haue forſaken the world as touching the preſence of hys naturall fleſhe and manhode (as all Doctors define) then ment he not that hys naturall fleſhe ſhoulde be preſent in the Sacrament, to bee eaten with our teth: And therfore though Chriſt ſo tell you, yet muſt you take hym as hee meaneth, or els you be begyled. For if ye thinke that God both maye and will fulfill and verifye all thynges according to the letter as he ſpeaketh them, I may call you an obedient mā, as S. Bernard doth hys Monk Adam. And may ſay (as he doth) that if that be the right way, ſo ſimply to receaue all thyng, we may put out the terte of Scripture which warneth vs to be wiſe as Serpentes. For the text following is ſufficient, which biddeth vs to be ſimple as Doues.

Iohn. 6. Iohn. 6. Iohn. 6. Math. 26. Mark. 14. Iohn. 12.

Why doth your matterſhip graunt a neceſſary allegorye, whē Paul ſayth, Chriſt is a ſtone, or whē Chriſt ſayth that he is a dore? The ſcripture ſayth hee is both twaine, and ſyth God ſo ſayth, he is able ſo to make it. And therfore by your reaſon we ſhall nede none allegorye in all ſcripture, and then he that is moſt ſimple and fooliſh, may be counted moſt faythfull. And ſo ſhall we nede no faythfull fathers to expoūd the text, but it ſhall be moſt merite, to beleue the letter. Thys I denye not, but that God coulde haue done it if he had ſo intended, when he ſpake the wordes: But now ỹ ſcripture ſtandyng as it doth, I thinke he can not doe it. As by example: I thinke that God by the bloud of hys ſonne Chriſt myght haue ſaued all men, both faythfull and vnfaythfull, if he had ſo intended, and that it had ſo pleaſed hym. But now the Scriptures ſtandyng as they do, I ſay hee can not doe it, and that it is impoſſible for hym. For then he might make hys ſonne a lyer which ſayth: He that beleueth not is damned. And againe: He that beleueth not ſhall not ſee life, but the wrath of God abydeth vpon hym. And euen as it is impoſſible to ſtand with the proceſſe of Scripture, (wherin God hath declared his will) that the vnfaythfull ſhoulde be ſaued although God might haue done it at the firſt if he had ſo would. Likewiſe it is impoſſible, the Scriptures ſtanding as they do, that the naturall body of Chriſt ſhoulde be preſent to our teth in the Sacrament. And as for our fayth, it nedeth not to haue hym preſent in the bread. For I may as wel eate him and drinke him through fayth, that is to ſay, beleue in hym, as though he were as preſent in the Sacrament, as he was hanging on the Croſſe.

God may do all thing but yet ſo as he cānot denye hys truth, neither reſtore virginitie. &c. Iohn. 3.

The naturall body of Chriſt is not preſent to our teeth in the Sacrament.

1. And becauſe you ſay, that my naturall reaſons be not worth the reaſoning. I will alledge you ſome moe, to ſee what you can ſay to them. Firſt euery ſacrament is the ſigne of an holy thyng: but the ſacrament of the altar is a ſacrament (as all faythfull mē confeſſe) ergo it muſt follow that the ſacrament of the altar is the ſigne of an holy thyng. Now if it be the ſigne of an holy thyng, then it is not the holy thyng it ſelfe which it doth ſignifie and repreſent. Why ſhoulde we then feare, to call that bread a figure, that is to ſay, a ſacrament of that holy body of our Lord and Sauiour.

Arguments to proue that Chriſtes naturall body is not in the Sacrament of his body and bloud.

2. Beſides that I woulde know of what neceſſitie or profite hys fleſhe muſt muſt be preſent in the ſacrament. For the preſence of hys fleſhe can no more profite vs, then doth the remẽbrance of hys body, but thys remembraunce may as well be done by the ſacramẽt, as though hys bodye were preſent. And therefore ſith God and nature make nought in vayne, it followeth cõſequently, ẏ his naturall fleſh is not there, but onely a memoriall therof.

3. Furthermore the end and finall cauſe of a thyng is euer better then thoſe thynges which are prouided for the end (as the houſe is better then the lyme, ſtone, and timber, which are prouided for the houſe) but the ende and finall cauſe of the ſacrament is the remembraunce of Chriſtes body: and thereupon it muſt followe that if the ſacrament be hys naturall bodye, that the remembraunce of Chriſtes body ſhould be better then hys body it ſelfe. Which thyng is to be abhorred of all faythfull men.

4. It were fondnes to ſayne that the ſoule did otherwiſe eate then do the Angels in heauen, and their meate is only the Joy and delectation that they haue of God and of his glory, and euen ſo doth the ſoule which is here vpon the earth eate throughe faith the body of Chriſt which is in heauen. The ioyfull eatyng of Chriſt, is by fayth. For it deliteth and reioyceth whiles it vnderſtandeth throughe fayth, that Chriſt hath taken our ſinnes vpon him, and pacified the fathers wrath. Neyther it is neceſſarie that for that or for this cauſe, that his fleſh ſhould be preſent. For a man may as well loue and reioyce in the thing, which is from him & not preſent, as though it were preſent by hym of that manner.

5. Moreouer the bread is Chriſtes body, euen as ẏ breaking of ẏ bread is the death of his body. Now the breaking of bread at the maundy is not the very death of Chriſtes body, but onely a repreſentatiõ of the ſame (al be it the minde throughe fayth doth ſpirituallye behold his very death) & euen likewiſe that naturall bread is not the very body of our Lord, but only a ſacrament, ſigne, memoriall, or repreſentation of this ſame, albeit throughe the moniſion therof ẏ mynde throughe fayth, doth ſpiritually behold the very body: And ſurely therof if a man be faythfull, the ſpirite of God worketh in his hart very ſweetely at his communion.

6. Finally, it was not lawfull to eate or drinke the blond not onely of man but alſo of a brute beaſte, and the Apoſtels them ſelues moued by ẏ rule of Charitie, did inſtitute ẏ mẽ ſhould abſtayne from blond, ſomewhat fauoring the infirmitie of ẏ Jewes. Now if the Apoſtels had taught (as ye do) that in the ſacrament his very fleſhe and blond is eaten and dronke with the teeth and mouth of faythfull and vnfaythfull, what could haue bene a greater occaſion to haue excluded the Jewes from Chriſtes fayth euen at once? Thinke you that Apoſtles would not haue bene to ſcrupulous to haue dronkẽ his very blond? ſeing it was ſo playne agaynſt Moſes lawe if they had vnderſtand hym ſo groſſely as ye do? Peter had a cloth ſent downe from heauen, in which were all manner of beaſtes forbidden by ẏ law, and was commaunded to ſlay & eate them. And he aunſwered, God forbid for I neuer eate any vncleane thing, meaning therby that he neuer eate any thyng forbidden by the law. Wherof it muſt nedes follow that either he neuer receiued the ſacramẽt (whiche is playne falſe) or elles that hee more ſpiritually vnderſtode the wordes of Chriſtes maundie, then ye fallye fayne. For it was plainely forbidden by the law, to eate or drinke any maner of blond. And I know but one reaſon that they haue which they count inſoluble: how be it by Godes grace we ſhall ſone auoyde it.

The Apoſtles did ordeine that we ſhould abſteine frõ blond, incaſing all naturall blond.

Actes. 10.

The Wyne in the Sacrament is no naturall blond.

Obiection.

There reaſon is this, Paule ſayth, he that eateth and drinketh this ſacrament vnworthely, ſhall be gilty of the body and blond of the Lord. Now ſay they, how ſhould they be gilty of the Lords body and blond which receiue it vnworthely: except it were the very body and blond of the Lord?

This argument I ſay, is very weake and ſlender. For I can ſhew many examples by the which it may be dissolued for he that despiseth the kinges seale or letters offendeth agaynst his owne person, and yet the letter or seale is not his owne person. He that violently plucketh downe his graces armes or breaketh his broade seale with a furious minde or violence, committeth treason against his owne person. And yet his armes and broad seale are not his owne person. He that clippeth the kings coyne committeth treason against ỹ kynges person and the common wealth, and yet the mony is neither his graces person nor the common wealth. And therfore your argumēt is but weake and slender For euen as a man doth offende against the princes person by dispising his armes, seale or letters, So doth a man offend agaynst Christes body and bloud, by abusing the sacrament of his body and bloud, although he be not there present, as ỹ kinges person is not present in his armes, seale or letters.

To pull downe violently the kynges armes is treason agaynst hys owne person, and yet the armes are not the kinges person.

Besides that S. Paule saith that euery man which prayeth or prophecieth with couered hed shameth his hed and his hed is Christ: shall we therfore Imagin that Christ is naturallye in euery mans hed as your argument cōcludeth For soth that were a prety phantasie. Finally S. Austen sayth ỹ he doth no lesse sinne which negligently heareth ỹ worde of God then doth the other whiche vnworthely receiueth ỹ sacrament of Christes body & bloud. Now if this be true, then is your reason not worth a rishe For Christes naturall body is not in ỹ word which is preached, as all men knowe. And yet he sinneth no lesse that negligently heareth it, then doth he, that vnworthely receiueth the sacrament. And thus you see their insoluble argument easely dissolued.

To be negligent in the hearyng of the word of God is a great offēce

M. More. But now must this yong man consider againe that him selfe confesseth, that the cause for which him selfe sayth that Christ in so saying did so meane, is because that if he should haue ment so, it was impossible to God to bring his meaning about: that is to say, that Christes body might be in two places at once. And therfore but if he proue that thing impossible for God to doe, els he confesseth that God not onely sayd it but also mēt it in dede. And yet ouer this, if Christ had neuer sayd it, yet doubted I nothing, but he is able to doe it, or els were there sum what that he could not doe: And then were God not almighty.

Here M. More would myre me wᵗ his sophistrie, and with wiles would winne his spores. For as he before did discant on these wordes, can and impossible, and would haue made men beleue that I ment it could not be, because it could not be by reason and that I ment impossible because reason could not reache it. So now he disputeth with lyke maner of sophistication cōcluding that I confesse that it is impossible and can not be, because that if God should haue ment it was impossible for God to bring his meaning about. Deare brethren this babelyng is sufficiently discused all ready. For I ment not that it was impossible For God to bring it about If he had so ment, but I meant that it is impossible to stand with the proceise of the scripture which we haue receyued. And I saye more ouer, that though it was possible for God to haue done it (if it had pleased hym) yet now the scripture thus standing, it is impossible for him to do it For then he must make his sonne a lyar. And I say, that if he had so ment as the letter standeth, that he would thē haue geuen vs other scripture, and would not haue sayd that he must depart to him that sent him, with other textes as are before rehearsed. Frith. M. More is a quarelyng brabler.

And where M. More sayth that if there were sumwhat ỹ he could not doe, than were God not almighty. I say it is a shame for our prelates that they haue gotten such an ignorant proctore to defend them. And I am sure that they them selues could haue sayd much better: for els how should they instructe other and leade them in the right way? if they them selues were so rude and vnlearned, should they not know what this meaneth ỹ

M. More an ignoraūt proctor, for the Clergy.

God

God is almightie which is a peece of the firſt article of our Crede, then how ſhould there chip haue haue any ſure ſlight? More thinketh that God is cauled almighty, becauſe he can do all things. And then indéede it ſhould follow that he were not almightye for all thinges he can not do, he can not ſaue the vnfaythfull, he can not reſtore virginitie once violate, ſayth S. Thomas. and alſo (as I remember) S. Hierome writyng of virginitie vnto Paule and Euſtochium: he can not ſinne ſayth Dunce: he can not deny hym ſelfe ſayth S. Paule. Now if this mans leraning were alowed thé might not God be almightye, becauſe there is ſomewhat ỹ he can not doe: but they that are acuſtomed with ſcripture, do know that he is called almightye, not becauſe he can doe all things: but becauſe there is no ſuperiour power aboue hym, but that he may doe all that he wyll: and all that his pleaſure is to doe that may be bring to paſſe, and no power is able to reſiſt hym, but he hath no pleaſure nor will to make hys ſonne a lyer nor to make hys ſcripture falſe, and in dede he may not doe it. And yet notwithſtanding he abideth almighty, for hee may doe all that hee will.

God is almighty, and yet cannot doe all thynges.

2. Timo. 2.

God is ſaid to bee almighty becauſe there is no ſuperiour power aboue hym, and he can do all that he wil.

M. More. Then M. More touching the reaſon of repugnaunce ſayth, that many thynges may ſeme repugnaunt both to him and me which thinges God ſeeth how to make them ſtād together well inough, and addeth ſuch blynd reaſons of repugnaūce as induce many men into a great errour: ſome aſcribyng all thyng vnto deſtiny without any power of mās frewill at all, and ſome geuing all to mans owne will, and no foreſight at all to the prouidence of God, and all becauſe the poore blynd reaſon of man can not ſee ſo farre, as to perceiue how Gods preſcience and mans frewill can ſtand together, but ſeeme clearely to be repugnaunt.

Frith. As for hys digreſſion of mans frée will I will not greatly wraſtle with hym. But thys one thyng I may ſay, that if the ſonne of God deliuer vs, then are we very frée. And where the ſpirite of God is, there is frédome: I meane not freedome to doe what you will, but freedome from ſinne, that we may bee the ſeruauntes of righteouſnes. But if we haue not the ſpirite of Chriſt, then will I ſay with S. Auſten, that our freewill is wretched, and cā do nought but ſinne. And as touching ſuch textes of repugnancy, if they be ſo diffuſe that mans reaſon, (which is the light of hys vnderſtanding) can not attayne to ſet them together, then were you beſte to make them none articles of our fayth. For I thinke as many as are neceſſary vnto our ſaluation, are contayned in the Crede which I thinke euery man beleueth. I beſech you lay no bigger burthen vpō vs then thoſe faythfull fathers dyd which thought that ſufficient. And then I am ſure, we ſhould haue fewer heretikes. For I neuer heard of hereticke that euer helde agaynſt any article of our crede, but all that ye defame, by thys name, are onely put to death, becauſe they ſay that we are not bound to beleue euery poynt that the lawes and tyrannye of the clergie alowe & maintayne. Which thyng how true it is (bleſſed be God) is meetely well knowen already. For els had I and many moe bene dead ere thys day.

John 8. 2. Cor. 3.

Roma. 6.

Aug. de ſpiritu & litera.

The articles in our Crede are as many as are neceſſary for our ſaluation.

I wot well that many good folke haue vſed in this matter many fruit full examples, as of one face beholden in diuers glaſſes, and in euery peece of one glaſſe broken into twentie: and of one word cōming whole to an hūdreth eares at once: and the ſight of one little eye preſent and beholding an whole great countrey at once, with a thouſand ſuch maruells moe, ſuch as thoſe that ſee them dayly done (and therfore maruell not at them) ſhall yet neuer be able, no not thys younge man him ſelfe, to geue ſuch a reaſon by what meane they maye bee done, but that he may haue ſuch repugnancy layd agaynſt it, that he ſhall be fayne in concluſion (for the chiefe and moſte euident reaſon) to saye, that the cause of all those thynges is because God that hath so caused them to bee done, is almighty of hym selfe, and may doe what hym lyst.

Frith. As touching the examples that M. More doth here alledge, I may sone make answere. For they that are like our matter, make cleane against hym, and the other can not make for hym. The glasse I graunt is a good example, for euen as the glasse doth represent the very face of man so doth this Sacrament represent the very body and bloud of Christ. And like as euery peece of the glasse doth represēt that one face, so doth euery peece of that Sacramēt represent that one body of Christ. But euery mā knoweth right well that though ỹ glasse represent my face, yet the substaunce of the glasse is not my very face, neither is my very face in the glasse. And euen so though the Sacrament doe represent the body of Christ, yet the substaunce of the Sacrament is not hys very body, no more then the glasse is my face, neither is his very body in ỹ Sacrament, no more then my very face is in the glasse and thus this exāple maketh well for vs. And for that one word comming whole to an hundreth eares, I say that worde is but a sounde and a qualitie and not a substaunce, and therfore it is nothyng to our purpose, and can not be likened to Christes body which is a substaūce. And as concernyng the sight of the litle eye, I say that though the eye discry and sée an whole countrey, yet is not that whole coūtrey in the eye: but as the countrey is knowen by ỹ sight of eye (though the countrey be not in it), so is the death of Christ and hys bodye breakyng and bloude shedyng knowen by the Sacrament, though his naturall body be not in it. And thus his exāples make nothyng with hym, but rather much against hym. And where hee sayth that the young man hym selfe can geue hym no reaso, by what meane they may be done: I may say vnto hys maisterhyp, that whē I was seuen yeare yonger then I am this day, I would haue bene ashamed if I could not haue geuen an euident reason at the Auskens in Oxford before ỹ whole Vniuersitie. And albeit I now vouchsafe, not to spend labour and paper about Aristotles doctrine, yet haue I so much touched hys examples, that he may be wery of them.

The glasse that representeth the face, is not the face.

The body of Christ is no more in the Sacrament then my face is in the glasse Christes deathe and body breakyng, is knowen by the Sacrament & yet it is not the naturall body of Christ.

Also I can not see why it shoulde be more repugnaunt that one body may be by the power of God in two places at once, then that two bodyes may bee together in one place at once. And that poynte I thinke this young mā denieth not. M. More.

The beyng of our body in two places at once is against nature, & Scripture cā not alow it. But that two bodyes should bee in one place séemeth more reasonable. For I haue good experience that though my body cā not be in two places at once (both in the Tower and where I would haue it beside) yet blessed be God in this one place, I am not without cōpany. But if M. More meane that in one proper and seuerall place, may be two bodies at once, that I will deny, till he haue laysure to proue it. And yet at the length I am sure, his proue shall not be worth a pudyng pricke. For I am sure it must bee, Ratione porositatis vt in igne & ferro: nam penetrationem dimensionum nunq̄ probabit. And then he is as neare as he was before. Frith. Frith speaketh merely.

Now his last reason wherwithe he proueth it impossible for the body of Christ to bee in two places at once, is this: you cā (sayth he) shew no reason why he should be in many places at once & not in all. But in all places he can not be. Wherefore we must conclude that he can not be in many places at once. This is a maruelous concluded argument. I am sure that euery childe may soone see that this consequēt cā neuer folow vpon these two premisses of this antecedent. M. More.

When I made this reason & compiled my treatise I had no regard to the cauillations of sutle Sophisters: for I thought no Sophisters should haue medled with that meate. But neuertheles sith nowe I perceiue Frith.

that they principally are pouryng on it, sekyng some pray to set their teeth a woorke. In this booke I haue somewhat prouided for them, and haue brought such hard bones, that if they be to buse, may chaunce to choke thē. And yet is not the Argument so feble as he sayneth. For the first part (if he lyst to consider the sense and mynde, and bee not to curious) where I say that they can shew no reason why hée should bee in many places and not in all, is thus to be vnderstand of wyse men, that the very reason and cause, that he shold be in many places, must be, because ỹ body is so annexed with the Godhead, that it is in euery place as the Godhead is. This I say must be the cause and reason of his beyng in many places. And neither you nor no man els can iustly assigne any other. Now of this maior or first proposition thus vnderstand, doth the cōclusion folowe directly. For if this should be ỹ cause (as they must nedes graunt). And this cause proued false by Scripture: then must they nedes graunt that the thyng whiche so foloweth of this cause, must nedes be false. And so is my purpose proued, & they concluded. As by example, the Astronomers say: that the naturall course of the Sunne is frō the weast to the East. Now if a mā should aske them what is then the cause that we see hym dayly take the cōtrary course, from the East to the Weast agaynst hys nature, they aunswere. Because the hyghest sphere (whose course is from the East to the Weast) with his swift mouyng doth violently drawe the inferior spheres with hym. This is the cause that they alleage, and no man can assigne any other. And now sith I cā proue this sense false by scripture. And S. Austen (for Scripture sayth that ỹ sphere is fastened Hebr. viij. chap. And S. Austen expoundyng that text improueth the Astronomers whiche affirme that it moueth, sith I say, this cause is proued false by scripture, they must nedes graūt that the thyng whiche foloweth of this cause must nedes be false. And so we may conclude against them all, that the naturall course of the Sunne is not frō the Weast to the East (as the Astronomers say). But contrary from the East to the Weast. And lykewise sith the cause that Christes body should be in many places, is assigned of learned men to be, because hys body is so annexed with the Godhead (which is in euery place) that it is also in all places with it, & no man can assigne any other. And that this cause is proued false by Scripture, for when the women sought Christ at his graue, an aungell gaue the aunswere that hé was not there. But if his body had bene in euery place, then the aungell lyed. Also Christ sayd vnto his Disciples of Lazarus which died at Bethania. Lazarus is dead. And I am glad for your sakes (that you may beleue) because I was not there. Now if hys body were in euery place as is the Godhead, then Christ sayd not truly, when he said he was not there. Therfore sith (as I sayd) this is the cause assigned, & yet proued false by Scripture, they must nédes graūt, that the thyng whiche foloweth of this cause, must also nédes be false. And so we may cōclude against thē all, ỹ Christs body is in one place onely. And now you may sée how my consequent foloweth the premisses.

Astronomers say that the naturall course of the Sunne is from the west to the East.

I conclusiō agaynst the Astronomers.

Mark. 14.

Luke. 16.

Iohn. 11.

Christes body is in one place onely.

For he can no further conclude, but that we can shewe no reason why he should be in many places at once. What had he wonne by that? might he then conclude therupon, that he could not be in many places at once? As though it were not possible for God to make his body in two places at once, but if we were able to tell how, and why, and wherby, and shewe the reason. M. More.

How far I can conclude is shewed immediatly before. For though of the bare wordes as ye toke them, it was hard to conclude any thyng, yet haue I now declared them, and so farre cōcluded, that you cā not anoyde them. And where he sayth, that though they can shew no reason, yet I had wonne nought by it: I thinke he woulde be angrye if I should so aunswere. But surely they are in good case, for it is Frith.

inough for them to say, thus it is, and nede neuer to shew any cause or reason why they so say. For they are the Church and can not erre: so that if they teach contrary thynges, yet all is good inough. And whē they se that no mā can make the Scriptures to agree with their doctrine, then they say, that their doctrine is true inough, but no man can vnderstand the Scripture. And though the scripture seme neuer so repugnant both to them and to vs, yet God seeth well inough (say they) how to set them together, and it is possible for God to make it agree though they cā not tell how. But this doctrine hath longe inough deceaued vs: For men haue seene to long with your spectacles, yet now (thankes be to God) they begin to see with their owne eyes. And as touching how thys matter was possible to God, and how it is not possible, is sufficiently declared before to al that liste to loke.

what soeuer the Papistes say, that must stand for reason.

M.More. Howbeit as for me (though I be not bounden to it) I am content yet to proue, that God may make the body of Christ to be in all places at once. And becaufe this yong má coupleth that propoſition with the other: ſo will I doe to. And I proue therefore that God cā make his body be both in many places at once, and in all places at once, by that that he is almightie, and therefore can do all thing.

Frith. Now is the good man in hys olde dreame agayne, & thinketh that God is called almightie, becaufe he can do all thinges. And then in dede it ſhould followe that he were not almightye. For all thynges he can not do, he can not ſaue the vnfaithfull, he can not reſtore virginitie once violated, hee can not ſinne, he can not denye him ſelfe. Now if thys mans learning were allowed, then myght not God be called almighty, becaufe there is ſomewhat that he can not doe. But they that are accuſtomed with ſcripture, do know that he is called almighty, not becaufe he can not do all thynges, but becaufe there is no ſuperiour power aboue hym, but that he may doe all that hee will, and all that hys pleaſure is may be bring to paſſe. But he hath no will, pleaſure nor power to make hys ſōne a lyer, and to make hys Scripture falſe, and yet notwithſtandyng he abydeth almighty and may do what he will. And euen as it is impoſſible to ſtand with the proceſſe of the Scriptures (wherin God hath declared his will) that the vnfaythfull ſhoulde bee ſaued (although at ẏ firſt God might haue done it, if he had ſo would) likewiſe it is impoſſible (the Scriptures ſtanding as they do) that the naturall body of Chriſt ſhoulde bee preſent to our teeth in the Sacrament. And as for our fayth it needeth not to haue hym preſent in the bread: For I may as well eate him & drink him, through fayth (that is to ſay, beleeſe in hym) though he continue ſtill in heauen, as though he were as preſent in the Sacrament, as he was hangyng on the croſſe. But yet hys maieſtie hath left one thyng vnproued, and that is euen the pith of hys purpoſe. For though hee had proued (as hee hath not) that God by hys almightynes myght make Chriſtes body in many places, and in all places, and in the Sacrament, yet he forgotte to proue that God hath ſo done. And therfore albeit I dyd graunt hym (as I will not) that he myght ſo do, yet therof it doth not followe, that he hath ſo done in deede. For God may do many thynges which he doth not. And therefore hys argumēt doth not proue hys purpoſe. Now if he do but thinke that God hath ſo done, I am well pleaſed and will not put hym to the payne to proue it. For anone ye ſhall ſee hym ſo intangled in briers, that he ſhall not witte where to become.

More harpeth vppon a falſe ſtring.

More ſaith that God may do all thynges, but he doth not proue that he hath ſo done.

M.More. But yet thys young man goeth about to proue the poynt by ſcripture. For except we graūt him that point to be true, he ſayth that els we make the angell a lyer that ſayd, he is not here, and alſo that els we make as though Chriſtes body in his aſcenſion did not goe vp in the cloud into heauen from earth, but onely hid him ſelf in the cloud, and playeth bo peepe, & taried beneath ſtill. Here in the end he forgetteth him selfe so foule, that when he was a young sophister, he would I dare say, haue bene full sore ashamed so to haue ouerseene him selfe at Oxford at a peruise. For ye wotte well that thing which he sayth, & which he must therfore, proue, is that the body of Christ can not be in euery place at once by no meane that God could make. And the textes that he bringeth in for the proofe, say no further but that he was not in all places at once.

Frith. There are two thinges disputed betwene M. More and me: the one is, whether God can make the body of Christ in many places, and in the Sacrament. And thereto hys mastership sayth ye: For God is almightye and may do all things. And I say nay, and affirme that God is not called almightie because he may do all things, but because he may do all that he will, and I say that he will not make hys sonne a lyer, nor hys scripture false, and that he can not do it and yet abydeth almightye. The other thyng is thys, whether he haue done it or not. For albeit I did graunt hym that it were possible, yet is he neuer ẏ nere, except the other cā proue that he hath done it in deede, or els thinke that God hath so done. For as I sayd God can dos many thinges which he doth not. And ẏ controuersie of thys doubt is resolued by the Angell and Scripture, which (as M. More graunteth hym selfe) proueth that he was not in all places at once. And thereof it followeth, that God hath not done it, although it be possible. And so is hys mastership at a poynt. For if I should graūt it neuer so possible, yet if scripture proue that it be not so in deede, then is he neuer the neare hys purpose, but much the further from it. And thys is euē it, that I sayd before: that it was not possible to stand with the processe of the Scripture which we haue receaued. And now hys mastership hath graunted it hym selfe, which you may be sure he would not haue done if hee coulde otherwyse auoyde it. And here you may see how sore I haue ouerseene my selfe.

Two thinges disputed betwen More and Frith.

God forbid that any man should be the more prone & ready to beleue this yong man in this greate matter, because he sayth in the beginning that he will bring all men to a concord & a quietnes of conscience. for he bringeth men to the worst kinde of quietnes that may be deuised when he telleth vs as he doth, that euery man in this matter, may without perell beleue which way he list, Euery man may in euery matter without any counsell, sone set hym selfe at rest, if he list to take that way and to beleue as he list him selfe, & care not how. But and if that way had bene sure S. Paule would neuer haue shewed that many were in perill of sicknes and death to, For lacke of discerning reuerently the body of our Lord in that sacrament when they came to receiue hym. More.

When Christ should depart this Frith.
worlde and go to his Father he gaue his desciples a commaundement that Iohn. 15.
they should loue ech other, saying by this shall all men knowe, that ye are Christes badge is loue.
my disciples, if you loue ech other, as I haue loued you. This rule of charitie wolde I not haue broken, which notwithstanding is often in Ieopardie among faythfull folke, for this sacrament of vnitie, This thing considered, I thought necessarie, to aduertise both parties to saue this rule of charitie, and proued in ẏ first That the sacrament is the naturall body, is none article of our fayth necessary to be beleued vpon payne of damnation.
chapter of my treatise, that it was no article of the fayth necessary to be beleued vnder payne of damnatiō and therfore that they were to blame that would be contencious for the matter. For sith it is no article of the fayth, that may lawfully dissent without all Ieoperdye: ¶ nede not to breake the rule of charitye, but rather to receiue the other like pore brethren. As by example, Some thinke that the mariage betwene our most redoubted prince ¶ Quene Katerine is lawfull ¶ may stand with ẏ lawes of God: ¶ some thinke that it is vnlawfull and ought to be disanulled. now if we should for this matter breake the rule of charitie, and euery man hate his neighbour that would not thinke as he doth, then were we greatly to blame and in ieoperdie of condemnation. This I say I proued in ỹ firſt chapter againſt which More maketh no buſines, and improueth it not, whereby you may ſoone gather that it is very true. For els ſith his maſterſhip ſo laboureth in theſe other pointes, he would not haue left ỹ vntouched, you may be ſure. This is the concorde that I woulde bring them vnto. And as touching quietnes of conſcience, I haue knowne manye that haue ſore bene combred with it And among all, A certaine maſter of arte which died in Oxford confeſſed vpon his death bed, that he had wept lying in his bed an hundreth nyghtes within one yeares ſpace, becauſe he coulde not beleue it. Now if he had knowne it had bene no neceſſarye article, what comfort & quietnes ſhould it haue bene vnto hym. Furthermore euery man can not ſo quiet him ſelfe, as M. More Imagineth. For there are many that thinke them ſelues no ſmall ſoles, which when they haue receiued ſome foliſh ſuperſtition, eyther by their owne Imagination, or by beleuing their goſſepes goſpel and olde wiues tales by and by thinke the contrary to be deadly ſinne, and vtterly forbidden by Chriſtes Goſpell. As by example, I know an houſe of Religion, wherein is a perſon that thinketh it deadly ſinne, to go ouer a ſtrawe if it lye a crooſſe. And if their be on the pauement any paynted picture or any Image grauen on a dead mans graue, he will not tread vpon it, although he ſhould goe a forelong about. What is this but vayne ſuperſtition wherewith the conſcience is combred and corrupted? May not this be wéded out with the word of God, ſhewing hym that it is none article of the fayth ſo to thinke, & then to tell hym that it is not forbidden by the ſcripture, and that it is no ſinne? Now albeit his conſcience be ſo cankerd that the ruſt will not be rubbed out: yet with Gods grace, ſome other whom he hath enfecte with the ſame map come agayne to Gods word and be cured full well, which ſhoulde neuer haue bene able to quiet thẽſelues And likewiſe there are ſome which beleue as your ſuperſtitious hartes haue informed them, and theſe can not quiet thẽſelues, becauſe they beleue ỹ you haue fet your doctrine out of ſcripture: But when it is proued to them, and they them ſelues perceiue that ſcripture ſayth not ſo, then can they not be content to thinke the contrary, and iudge it no ſinne at all. And as touching S. Paule, ſuerely ye take hym wrong, for I will ſhew you what proceſſe he taketh, and how he is to be vnderſtode, but becauſe it is not poſſible to finiſhe it in fewe words, I ſhall deferre it vnto ỹ bokes ende, and then I ſhall declare hym at large.

More. And what a facion is this, to ſay that we may beleue if we liſt, that there is the very body of our Lord in dede, and then to tell vs for a truth, that ſuch a fayth is impoſſible to be true: For God him ſelfe can neuer bring it about, to make his body be there.

Frith. Yf a man take the bare wordes of Chriſt, and of ſimplicitie be deceiued, and thinke that his very body be in ỹ ſacrament preſent to their teeth that eate it, I dare not ſay that he ſinneth therein, but will referre the matter vnto Gods iudgement, and yet without doubt, I dare ſay he is deceaued. As by example: If a man (deceaued by the literall ſenſe) would think that men ſhould preach to fiſhes (as Saint Fraunces did) becauſe Chriſt bad his diſciples goe preach to all creatures, yet would not I thinke ỹ he ſinned therein, but will referre hym vnto Gods Judgment. But yet I wene euery woman that hath any wit, will ſay that he was deceiued.

A man may iudge of ꝛ: but God onely muſt be iudge of condemnation.

Frith is no haſty iudge.

More. I am very ſure that the olde holy doctours which beleued Chriſtes body and bloud to be there, and ſo taught other to beleue, as by there bookes playnly doth apere, if they had thought eyther that it could not be there or that it was not ther in dede, they would not for all the good good in this world haue written as they haue done. For would those holy men (wene you) haue taught that men be bound to beleue, that the very body and bloud of Christ is there, if thē selues thought they were not bound, there to? woulde they make men honoure and worship that thing as the very body & bloud of Christ which them selues thought were not it? this geare is to childish to speake.

Frith. This the old Doctours and faythfull fathers so taught or thought as ye fayne of them, is very false. For S. Austen as I haue shewed, maketh wholly for vs. Besides that, there is none of the old fathers but they call it a Sacrament, a misterie, and misticall meate, whiche is not eaten with toth or bely, but with eares & fayth. And touchyng the honour and worshyp done vnto it, I say it is playne Idolatry. And I say, that he falsely reporteth on the old holy doctours. For they neuer taught men to worshyp it, neither cā he alledge one place in any of them all which would haue men to worshyp the Sacrament. Peraduenture he may alledge me certaine new fellowes for his purpose, as Dunce, Dorbell, Durand & such drasse which by their doctrine haue drenched the world with damnable Idolatrie. But I speake of the old holy fathers & Doctors as S. Austē, Ambrose, Hierom, Cyprian, Cirille, Chrisostome, Fulgentius, and such other: these I say, do not teach mē to worshyp it, and by that I dare abide. Of this point I am so sure, that I will vse it for a contrary argument, that his naturall body is not there present. For if the holy fathers before named had taken this text after the letter and not onely spiritually, then in there woorkes they would haue taught men to worshyp it, but they neuer taught men to worshyp this Sacrament, therfore it followeth they toke not the text after the letter, but onely spiritually. Now do I prouoke you to seeke a proofe of your purpose. Neuertheless I will not deny, but ỳ these holy Doctors in diuers places, do call it his body, as Christ and Paule do, & so do we likewise, and say also that his very body is there eaten. But yet we meane, that it is eaten with fayth (that is to say by beleuing ỳ his body was broke for vs) and haue his body more in memory at this maundy then the meate that we there eate. And therfore it hath the name of his body, because the name it selfe should put vs in remembraunce of his body, and that his body is there chiefly eaten, euen more (through fayth) then the meate with the mouth. And so are they also to be vnderstand. Note.

To honor and worshyp the sacrament is plaine idolatry.

The olde holy fathers haue not taught to worshyp the sacrament.

More. Yet one great pleasure he doth vs, in that he putteth vs all at libertie, that we may without perill of damnatiō beleue as we did before: that is to witte, that in the blessed Sacrament the whole substance of the bread and the wine is transmuted & chaunged into the very body and bloud of Christ. For if we may without perill of damnation beleue thus, as him selfe graunteth that we may, then graunteth hee that we may also without perill of damnation beleue that him selfe lieth, where hee sayth, the truth of that beleefe is impossible.

Frith. The beleuing of thys poynt, is of it self not damnable, as it is not damnable to thinke that Christ is a very stone or a vine, because the litterall sense so sayth: or if you beleue that you ought to preach to fishes and goe Christen them an other while, as ye do belles. And I insure you, if there were no worse mischiefe that ensued of thys beleefe, then it is in it selfe, I would neuer haue spoken agaynst it. But now there followeth vppon it damnable idolatry. For through the beleefe that thys body is there, mē fall downe and worshyp it. And thinking to please God, do damnably sinne agaynst hym. Thys I say, is the cause that I so earnestly write agaynst it, to auoyde the idolatry that is committed through it. Part of the Germanes do thinke that his naturall body is present in the Sacrament and take the woordes fleshly, as Martine taught them. But none of them worshyp it

Martin Luther sayth ỳ the natural body of Christ is present in ỳ sacramēt, but he would not haue it worshipped for ỹ Martine forbydeth both in hys wordes and workes, and so blessed be god they auoyde that ieoperdy which thyng if you will also graunt and publish but this one proposition, that it ought not to bee worshypped, I promise you I will neuer write agaynst it. For then is the ieoperdy taken away, and then I am cõtent that your mastershyp thinke I lye. But in the meane seasõ I must thinke that ye fill the world with damnable Idolatry. And thus haue you also aũswere vnto ỹ conclusion which you alledge out of the hyghes graces booke. For I say in your way is no hurt, as lõg as you do but onely beleue the bare wordes of the text (as S. Fraunces dyd, whẽ he preached to fishes. But if through the occasion of those wordes, ye fall into the worshypping of it, then I say that in your way is vndoubted damnation. And so is there great ieoperdy in your way, & none at all in ours. For though he were there in dede, yet doe not we sinne if we worshyp it not, for we are not commaunded to worshyp the Sacrament. But if he be not there, then do you commit damnable Idolatry.

¶The consecration of the Sacrament.

NOwe as for an other quietnes of euery mãs conscience this young man biddeth euery mã be bold, whether the blessed Sacrament be consecrate or vnconsecrate (for though he most especially speaketh of the wyne, yet he speaketh it of both) & byddeth vs not care, but take it for all that vnblessed as it is becawse the Priest (hee sayth) can not deceiue vs nor take from vs the profit of Christes institution, whether hee alter the woordes or leaue them all vnsayd. Is not this a wonderful doctrine of this young man? We wotte well all, that the Priest can not hurt vs by his ouersight or malice, if there be no fault vpon our owne partie, for that perfection that lacketh on the Priestes part, the great mercy of God as we trust of his owne goodnes supplyeth. And therfore as holy Chrisostome sayth, no man can take harme but of him selfe. But now if we see the thyng disordered our owne selfe by the Priest and Christes institution broken, if we then wittyngly receiue it vnblessed & vnconsecrated, & care not whether Christes institutiõ be kept and obserued or no, but rekon that it is as good without it as with it, then make we our selues partakers of the fault and leese the profit of the Sacramẽt, and receiue it with damnation: not for the Priestes fault, but for our owne.

Frith. I had thought that no Turke wold haue wrested a mans woordes so vnfaythfully, for hee leaueth out all the pith of my matter, for my wordes are these. I will shew you a meanes how ye shall euer receiue it accordyng to Christes institution, although the Priest would withdraw it from you. First ye nede to haue no respect vnto the Priests wordes which ministreth it. For if ye remember for what intẽt Christ dyd institute this Sacrament, and know that it was to put vs in remembraunce of hys body breakyng & blond shedding, that we might geue hym thankes for it and bee as sure of it through fayth accordyng to his promises, as we are sure of the bread by eatyng of it: if as I say, ye remember this thyng (for which intent onely the Priest speaketh those wordes) then if the Priest leaue out those wordes or part therof, he can not hurt you. For you haue all ready the effect and final purpose for ỹ which he should speake them. And agayne if he should wholy alter them, yet he cã not deceiue you. For then ye be sure that he is a lyer, and though you se the Priest bryng you the wyne consecrated yet neuer sticke at that. For as surely shall it certifie your conscience and outward senses though be consecrate it not (so thou consecrate it thy selfe: that is to say, so thou know what is ment therby and geue hym thankes) as though hee made a thousand blessynges ouer it.

I meane how we may receaue ỹ sacrament according to Christes institution, though the minister be negligent.

The worthy receauer of the sacrament may consecrate the same to him selfe.

it. And so I say that it is euer cõsecrated in hys hart that beleueth, though the Priest consecrate it not. And contrarywise if they consecrate it neuer so much, and thy consecration be not bye, it helpeth thée not a rishe. For except thou know what is meant therby, and beleue, geuyng thankes for hys body breakyng & bloudshedyng, it can not profite thée.

M.More. Now where you say, that if we see the thyng disordered by the Priest, and Christes institution broken, and wyttingly receiue it, we make our selues partakers of the cryme.

Frith. I aunswer that if the reformation thereof laye in our handes, then sayd you truth, but sith it is written to priuate persons which may not reforme this matter, and that the reformation therof resteth onely in ỹ hand of your Prince and Parlament (for ỹ erroure consisteth not in the misordering of the matter by one Priest only but rather of the doctrine of them all sauing such as God hath lightened) to these priuate persons I say ỹ your doctrine should soner be the occasion of an insurrection which we labour to eschew, then any quieting of them by Christes doctrine. And therfore sith there is an other waye to woõ (sauing all vpright) we will auoyde that perylous path. But when ye se Christes institution broken and the one kinde left out vnto the laye people, why are ye partaker thereof.

M.More. Howbeit as for his beleife that taketh it no better but for bare bread & wine, it maketh him litell matter consecrated or not, sauing that the better it is consecrated the more it is euer noyous to him that receiueth it, hauing his conscience combred with such an execrable heresie, by which well appeareth that he putteth no difference betwene the body of our Lord in the blessed sacrament, and the comon bread that he eateth at his dinner, But rather he estemeth it lesse, for the one yet I thinke or he begyn, if he lack a priest, he will blesse it him selfe, the other hee careth not as he sayth, whether it be blessed or no.

Frith. What I reacon it more thẽ bread and wine I will shew you here after in declaring the minde of S. Paule vppon this sacrament, & that in the conclusion of this boke. And in the meane season I will say no more but that he belyeth me. And as for their blessinges & consecration profit not me, except I consecrate it my selfe with fayth in Christes bloud, & with geuing him prayse & thankes for his inestimable goodnes, which when I was his enemy reconciled me vnto his father by his own death: This consecration, must I set by, if I will haue any profit of his death which ỹ sacrament representeth vnto me. And if I my selfe do thus consecrate it, then shal I be sure of ỹ fruite of his death. And I say agayne, that as ỹ Priestes doe now vse to consecrate it, it helpeth not the poore comens of a rishe. For their consecracion should stand in preaching vnto them the death of Christ, which hath deliuered thẽ out of the Egipt of sinne & from ỹ fiery fornace of Pharao the deuill. And as for their wagging of their fingers ouer it, and saying, hy. or hy. wordes in latten, helpeth them nothing at all for how can they beleue by ỹ meanes of his wordes when they know not what he sayth? And as touching the common bread that I eate at my dynner, whether I haue a Priest or not, I blesse it with my hart (and not with my fingers) and hartly geue God thankes for it. For if I haue an hundreth Priestes to blesse it, yet am not I excused therby. For except I blesse it my selfe, it profiteth me no more then if it were vnblessed. And if I blesse it my selfe, then I care not what the Priest prate. For as long as I vnderstand him not it profiteth me nothing, but in good fayth I wene the bishops and their proctour wote not what a blessing meaneth. Therefore deare bretheren hearken to me. To blesse God, is to geue him prayse and thankes for his benefites: To blesse a king or a prince is to thanke him for his kindnes, and to pray to God for him that he may long raigne to the laude of God & wealth of his tomens. To bleſſe a mans neighbour is to pray for him and to do him good. To bleſſe my breade or meate, is to geue God thankes for it To bleſſe my ſelfe, is to geue God thankes for his benefites that I haue receiued of him, & to pray God that of his infinite goodnes he will increaſe thoſe giftes that he hath geuen me & finiſhe his worke which he hath begone in me, vnto his laud and prayſe and as touching this fleſhe, to fulfill his will in it, and not to ſpare it but ſcurge, cut and burne it, onely that it may be to his honour & glory. This is the forme of bleſſing, and not to wag two fingers ouer them. But alacke, of this bleſſing our Byſhops be ignorant.

Bleſſyng what it is.

M.More, But as for thoſe that are good and faythfull folke, and haue any grace or any ſparcle of reaſon in their heades, will (I verely thinke) neuer to be ſo farre ouerſeene, as in this article (the truth wherof God hath him ſelfe teſtified by as many open miracles as euer he teſtified any one) to beleue thys younge mā vpō his barren reaſons againſt the fayth and reaſon both of all old holy writers and all good Chriſten people this xv. C. yeares.

Frith. As for the miracles, I maruell not at them, neither may they make me the ſoner to beleue it, for Chriſt told vs before that ſuch deluſions ſhoulde come, ỹ if it were poſſible, ỹ very elect ſhould be deceaued by them. And S. Paule exhorteth vs to beware of ſuch ſignes and wonders: And therefore I do as Moſes teacheth me when I heare of ſuch a wonder, then ſtraight I loke on the doctrine that is annexed with it. If it teach me to referre all the honor to God and not to creatures, and teach me nothyng but that will ſtand with Gods worde, then will I ſay, that it is of God. But if it teach me ſuch thynges as will not ſtand with hys word, then will I determine that it is done by the deuill, to delude the people with damnable idolatrye. When Paule and Barnabas preached at Liſtra and had done a miracle among them, the people ranne and would haue donę ſacrifice vnto them. But the Apoſtles ranne among them and tare their clothes, crying vnto them, ſyrs what do you? we are euen corruptible men as ye are, and preach vnto you, that you ſhould leaue thys vayne ſuperſtition, and worſhip the liuing God, which made heauen, earth, the ſea, and all that is in them. &c. Here the Apoſtles refuſed ſuch honour & worſhip. And therefore I am ſure they would not ſuffer their images to haue it. Now when I ſee a miracle done at any image, and perceaue that it bringeth men to the worſhipping of it ſelf, contrary to the facte and doctrine of the Apoſtles, which would not receaue it them ſelues, I muſt nedes conclude, that it is but a deluſion done by the deuill to deceaue vs and to bryng the wrath of God vppon vs. Euen ſo I ſay of the ſacrament, ſith the miracles that are done by it, do make mē thinke otherwiſe then Scripture will, and cauſe men to worſhip it: I doubt not but they are done by the deuill, to delude the people. Thou wilt peraduenture ſay that God will not ſuffer hym to abuſe the ſacrament of hys body and bloud. Yes verely, God will ſuffer it, and doth ſuffer it, to ſee whether we will be faythfull and abide by hys worde or not. And maruell not therof, for God ſuffered hym to take vp the very naturall body of hys ſonne Chriſt and ſet him on a pinnacle of the temple. And after he toke hym vp agayne, and lead hym to an exceding mountaine. And therfore thinke not but that he hath more power ouer the Sacrament then he had ouer Chriſtes owne body. And therfore whē they tell me, loe here is Chriſt, loe there is Chriſt (as Chriſt prophecied) loe he is at thys altar, loe he is at that, I will not beleue them.

¶ D. Barnes did graciouſly eſcape M. Mores hands.

M.More. AND alſo Frier Barnes albeit (that as ye wote well) he is in many other thinges a brother of this yong mans ſecte, yet in this, he ſore abhorreth his hereſie, or els he lyeth him ſelfe. For at his laſt being here he wrote a letter to me, wherin he writeth that I laye that hereſie wrõgfully to hys charge. And ſheweth him ſelfe ſo ſore greued therewith, that he ſayth, he will in my reproch make a booke againſt me: wherin he will profeſſe and proteſt his fayth concerning this bleſſed ſacrament. But in the meane ſeaſon it well contenteth me, that Frier Barnes being a man of more age & of more ripe diſcretion, and a Doctor of diuinitie, and in thoſe thinges better learned then this young man is, abhorreth this yongmans hereſie in this poynt, as well as he liketh him in many other.

Frith. The more your matterſhyppe prayſeth Doctour Barnes, the worſe men may like your matter. For in many poyntes he doth condemne your damnable doctrine, as in hys booke appeareth. And therfore if ſuch credence muſt be geuen to hym, then much the leſſe will be geuen to you. But peraduẽture you wil ſay, ẏ he is to bée beleued in this point, although he erre in other. Where vnto I aunſwere that if you will conſent vnto him I would be well apayd and will promiſe you to wright no more in that matter. For in this we both agrée, that it ought not to be worſhiped (yea and bleſſed be God all the other whom you call heretickes) And ſo both of vs do auoyde Idolatry which you with ſo great daunger do daylye commit. And therfore if you alowe his learning then am I content that you diſſent from me. For let it not be worſhiped, and thinke as you will: for then is the perill paſt. And ſith we agrée in this poynt, doubt not but we ſhall ſone agrée in the reſidue and admitte eche other for faythfull brothers. And your matterſhip ſayeth, that he wrot you a letter proteſting that you lay ẏ hereſie wrongfully to his charge I thinke it was more wiſdom for him twiſe to haue written to you, then once to haue come and tell you of it. For it was plainely told hym, ẏ you had conſpired his death, and that not withſtanding his ſafe conduyte, you were minded to haue murthered him: and for that cauſe he was compelled both being here, to kéepe him ſelfe ſecreatly, and alſo priuely to departe the realme.

Q The Sacrament may not be worſhypped.

The Papiſtes ſay that no promiſe nor couenaunt is to be kept with an hereticke.

And bleſſed be God, you haue ſufficienly publiſhed your purpoſe in your aunſwere againſt W. Tyndall, Where you ſay, that you might lawfully haue burnte hym. Here mẽ may ſée how periable you are addict to our prelates. And how prone ye were to fulfill their pleasures contrary to our Princes prerogatiue royall. And thankes bee to GOD which gaue you such grace in the sight of our soueraigne, that he shortly withdrewe your power. For els it is to be feared, that you would further haue proceded agaynst his graces prerogatiue which thyng whether it be treason or not let other men define. But this I dare say, that it is printed and published to our Princes great dishonour: For what learned man may in tyme to come, trust to hys graces safeconduite, or come at his graces instaūce or request, sith not onely the spiritually (whiche of their profession resiste hys prerogatiue) but also a laye man promoted to such preheminence by hys graces goodnes, dare presume so to depresse hys prerogatiue, and not onely to say, but also to publishe it in print: that notwithstanding his graces safe conduite, they might lawfully haue burnt hym.

More a Popish and a malicious tyraunt.

But here he would say vnto me as he doth in his booke, that hee had forfayted his safeconduite, and therby was fallen into his enemyes handes. Whereunto I aunswere, that this your saying is but a vayne glose: For I my selfe dyd read the safeconduite that came vnto hym, which had but onely this one condition annexed vnto it, that if he came before the feast of Christmasse then next insueing, he should haue free libertie to departe at his pleasure. And this condition I know was fulfilled, how should hee then forfayte his safeconduite? But M. More hath learned of his maisters our Prelates (whose proctour he is) to depresse our Princes prerogatiue that men ought not to kepe any promise with heretickes. And so his safe conduite could not saue hym. As though the Kynges grace might not admitte any man to go and come freely into his graces realme, but that he must haue leaue of our Prelates. For els they might lay heresie agaynst the person, and so slay hym cōtrary to the Kyngs safeconduite, which thyng all wise men do know, to be preiudiciall to his graces prerogatiue royall. And

The condition conteined in Barnes safe cōduite.

No promise nor licence made to heretickes by the kyng, without the consent of our Prelates is to be kept and obserued.

yet I am sure that of all ỹ tyme of hys beyng here, you cā not accuse hym of one cryme, albeit (vnto your shame) you say that hee had forfaited his safe conduite. These wordes had ben very extreme and worthy to haue bene loked vpon, although they had bene written by some presumptuous Prelate. But that a lay man so highly promoted by his Prince, should speake them, and also cause them openlye to be published among his graces commons, to reiect the estimation of hys royall power, doth in my mynde deserue correction. Notwithstanding, I leaue the iudgement and determination vnto the discretion of his graces honorable counsell.

M. More. And as for that holy prayer that this deuote young man as a newe Christ, teacheth to make at the receiuyng of this blessed Sacrament, all his congregation: I would not geue the paryng of a peare for hys prayer, though it were better then it is, pullyng away the true fayth therefro, as he doth. Howbeit hys prayer there is so deuised and penned and paynted with laysure and study, that I trust euery good Christen woman maketh a much better prayer at the tyme of her housell, by faythfull affection and by Gods good inspiration sodenly. Frith is an vnmete master to teach vs what we should pray at the receiuyng of the blessed Sacrament, when he wil not knowledge it as it is, but take Christes blessed body for nothyng but bare bread, and so litle esteme the receiuyng of the blessed Sacrament, that he forceth litle whether it be blessed or not.

Frith. Where he discōmendeth my prayer & sayth that I am an vnmete master to teach men to pray, seing I take away the true faith from it, and sayth that euery woman can make a better when she receiueth the Sacrament. I would to God that euery woman were so well learned that they could teach vs both. And surely I intended not to prescribe to all men that prayer onely but hoped to helpe the ignoraunt, that they might either speake those wordes, or els (takyng occasion at them) to say some other to ỹ laude and prayse of God. And as for your fayth (which you call the true fayth) must I nedes improue. For it will not stand with the true tert of Scripture as it playnly appeareth. But to the fayth in Christes bloud I exhorte all men, and teach them to eate hys body with fayth (and not with teeth) which is by hauyng hys death in continual remembraunce, and digestyng it into the bowels of theyr soule. And because you so sore improue my prayer, to conclude my aunswere agaynst you, I will write agayne. And let all men Judge betweene vs.

Christes body is to be eaten with fayth & not with the teeth.

A prayer made by Johñ. Frith to be sayd before the receauyng of the Communion.

Blessed be thou most deare & mercyfull father whiche of thy tender fauour and benignity (notwithstãding our grenous enormities committed agaynst thée,) vouchsauedst to sende thyne owne and onely deare sonne, to suffer most vyle death for our redemption. Blessed be thou Christ Jesu our Lord and Sauiour, whiche of thyne aboundaunt pitie considerynge our miserable estate, willingly wokest vppon thée to haue thy most innocent body broken and bloud shed, to purge vs and wash vs which are laden with iniquitie. And to certifie vs thereof, hast left vs not onely thy word which may instructe our hartes, but also a visible token, to certifie euen our outward sẽses of this great benefite, that we should not doubt, but that the body and fruite of thy passion are ours (through faith) as surely as the bread, whiche by our senses we know that we haue with in vs. Blessed be also that spirite of veritie whiche is sent frõ God our father through our Sauiour Christ Jesu, to lightẽ our darke ignorance, & leade vs through fayth into the knowledge of hym whiche is all veritie. Strengthe we beseech thée our fraple nature and increase our fayth: that we may prayse God our most mercyfull father and Christ hys sonne our Sauiour and redemer. Amen.

A godly & good prayer.

The Paschall lambe and our sacrament are here compared togither.

The Paschall lambe and our sacrament cõpared togither.

NOw we shall shortly expresse the pith of our matter and borow the figure of the Paschall lambe which is in all pointes so lyke, that the offeryng of the Paschall lambe did signifie the offering of Christes body is playne by Paul which sayth, Christ our paschall lambe is offered vp for vs. When the children of Israell were very sad and heuye for their sore oppression vnder the power of Pharao (for the more myracles were shewed, ỹ worse were they handeled). God sent vnto them by Moyses, ỹ euery housholde should kill a lambe to be a sacrifice vnto God and that they should eate him, with their staues in their handes, their loynes girded & shoes on their fete euẽ as mẽ ỹ were going an hasty Journey. This lambe must they eate hastely and make a mery maundye. Now because they should not say, that they could not bee mery, for their oppression, and what could the lambe helpe them: he added glad tydynges vnto it and sayd, this is the passing by of the Lord. Which this night shall passe by you and slay all ỹ first begotten, with in the Land of Egipt, & shall deliuer you out of your bondage, and bring you into ỹ land that hée hath promised vnto your fathers. Marke the processe and conueyaunce of this matter, for euen likewise it is in our sacrament. The Apostels were sad and heauie, partlye cõsidering ỹ bondage of sinne wherwith they were oppressed & partly because hee told them that he must departe frõ them in whõ they did put all their hope of their deliueraunce. While they were in this heauynes, Christ thought to cõfort thẽ & to geue them the seale of their deliueraunce, and toke in his hande bread, blessed & brake it, and gaue it to his disciples saying: this is my body which shalbe geuen for you. For this night shall ỹ power of Pharao ỹ dwell be distroyed, and to morow shall you be deliue-red from Egypt ỹ place of sinne, and shall take your iourney towardes the heauenly mansion which is prepared of God for all that loue him. Now cõpare them togeather.

The comparison of the Paschall lambe with Christes Supper.

1 The paschall lãbe was instituted & eaten the night before the children of Israell were indeede deliuered from Egipt, Likewise was the sacrament instituted and eatẽ ỹ night before we were deliuered from our sinnes.

2 The pascall lambe was a very lambe in deede And so is the sacrament very bread in deede.

3 The pascall lambe was cauled the passing by of ỹ Lord which destroyed the power of Pharao and deliuered thẽ. The sacrament is called the body of ỹ Lord whiche destroyed ỹ power of the deuill and deliuered vs.

4 ¶ As many as did eate the pascall lambe in fayth, were very mery and gaue God greate thankes. For they were sure the nert day to be deliuered out of Egipt, as many did eate his sacrament in fayth, were mery & gaue God great thãkes, for they were sure the next day to be deliuered frõ there sinne,

5. They that did not eate the pascall lambe in fayth, could not be merye. For they were not so sure of deliuerance from the power of Pharao. They ỹ did not eate this Sacrament in fayth, could not be mery: For they were not sure of deliuerance from the power of the deuill.

6. They that beleued the worde of the Lord did more eate the passing by of the Lord which should deliuer thẽ, then they did the lambe. They that did beleeue the word of the Lord did more eate ỹ body of the Lord, which should be geuen for their deliuerance then they did the bread. For ỹ thing doth a man moste eate ỹ he most hath in memory & most reuolueth in mynd as appeareth by Christ, John. 4. I haue meate to eate ỹ ye know not.

7. They that beleeued not ỹ next day to be deliuered from Egipt, did not eate ỹ passing by of ỹ Lord, although they did eate the lambe. They ỹ beleued not the nert day to be deliuered from sinne, dyd not eate the body of the Lorde, although they eate the breade.

8. The children of Israell were but once deliuered from Egypt, notwithstanding they did euery yeare eate ỹ lambe, to kẽpe that facte in perpetuall remembraunce. Euen so Christ bought and redemed vs but once for all and was offered and sacrificed but once for all though ỹ sacrament therof be daylye broken amonge vs to kẽpe that benefite in continuall memorye.

9. As many as dyd eate ỹ Paschall Lambe in fayth, and beleued Gods worde as touching their deliueraunce from Egypt, were as sure of their deliueraunce through fayth, as they were sure of the Lambe by eating it. As many as doe eate this sacrament in fayth, and beleeue Gods word as touching their deliueraũce frõ sinne, are as sure of their deliueraunce through fayth, as they are sure of the bread by eating it.

10. As many as did eate of that Paschall Lambe did magnifie theyr God, testifying that he onely was the God almighty, and they his people sticking to hym, to be deliuered by his power from all daunger. As many as do eate of thys sacrament doe magnifie their God, testifying that he only is the God almighty, and they his people sticking by him to be deliuered by hys power from all danger.

11. When the Israelites were deliuered frõ Egypt, they eate neuertheleſſe the Paschall Lambe which was still called the passing by (because it was ỹ remẽbraunce of the passing by of ỹ Lord) and hartely reioyced, offering hym sacrifice, & acknowledging wt infinite thãkes, that they were the fellowship of thẽ that had such a mercifull God. Now Christes electe are deliuered frõ sinne, they eate neuertheleſſe the sacramẽt which is still called hys body that once dyed for their deliueraunce, and hartely reioyce, offering to hym the sacrifice of prayse, & knowledging with infinite thãkes, that they are of the fellowship of thẽ that haue such a mercifull God.

12. The Paschall Lãbe after their

deliueraunce it was yearely eaten, brought as much myrth and ioye vnto them that did eate it in fayth, as it did to their fathers which felt Pharao hys fury, and were not yet deliuered. For they knew right well that except God of his mercy and wonderful power had so deliuered them, they shoulde also them selues haue been bond in the land of Egypt and vnder that wicked prince Pharao, of which bondage they greatly reioyced to bee rid already, and thanked God highly because they found thē selues in that plenteous land which God prouided for them. The sacrament which after our deliueraunce is yearely and daply eaten, bringeth as much myrth and ioye vnto vs that eate it in fayth, as it did to the Apostles which were not yet deliuered. For we know right well that except God of hys mercye & through ỹ bloud of hys sonne, had so deliuered vs, we shoulde also our selues haue been bonde in Egypt the place of sinne, vnder ỹ wicked prince the deuill, of which bōdage we greatly reioyce to be rid already, & thanke God highly because we finde our selues in ỹ state of grace, & haue receaued through faith the first fruites and a taste of the spirite which testifyeth vnto vs ỹ we are the childrē of God.

The maūdy of remēbraūce that Paule receaued of the Lorde, & deliuered to the Cozinthians.

¶ Thys Maundy of remēbraunce was it that Paule receaued of the Lorde and deliuered to the Cozinthians in the xi. chapter. For though he borrowe one propertie and similitude of the sacrament in the x. chapter, that in my minde maketh neither with vs nor against vs, albeit some thinke that it maketh whole for the exposition of Christes wordes, this is my body. But in my minde they are deceaued. For ỹ occasion that Paule spake of it in the x. chapter was thys. The Cozinthians had knowledge that all meates were indifferent, and whether it were offered to an Idole or not, that the meate was not the worse, and they might lawfully eate of it, whether it were solde thē in the Shambles, or set before them when they dyned and supped in an vnfaithfull mans house, asking no questions:

1. Cor. 10.

except some man did tell them that it was offered to an Idoll, and then they should not eate of it for offendyng his conscience that so tolde them (albeit they were els frē and the thing indifferent) thys knowledge because it was not annexed with charitie was the occasion of great offending. For by reason thereof they satte downe among the Gentiles at their feastes, where they eate in the honor of their Idols, and so did not onely wound the conscience of their weake brethrē, but also committed Idolatrye in dede: And therfore S. Paule said vnto thē: My deare beloued flee from worshipping of Idols, I speake vnto them which haue discretiō. Iudge ye what I say. Is not ỹ cup of blessing which we blesse, the fellowship of the bloud of Christ? Is not the bread which we breake the fellowship of the bodye of Christ? For we though we be many, are yet one bread and one body, in as much as we are partakers of one bread. Christ did call him selfe bread, and the bread his bodye: And here Paule calleth vs bread, and the bread our body. Now may you not take Paule that he in thys place should directly expound Christes minde. And that the very exposition of Christes wordes, when he sayd, this is my body, should be that it was the fellowship of hys body (as some say which seeking the key in this place of Paule locke them selues so faste in, that they can finde no way out): For Christ spake those wordes of his owne body which should be geuen for vs, but the fellowship of Christes body (or congregation) was not geuē for vs. And so he ment not as Paule here sayth, but ment his owne bodye. For as Paule calleth the bread our body for a certaine propertie, euen so doth Christ call it his body for certaine other properties. In that ỹ bread was broken, it was Christes owne body, signifying that as that bread was broken, so should hys body be broken for vs. In that it was distributed vnto hys disciples it was hys owne bodye, signifying that as verely as ỹ bread was distributed vnto them, so verely

God hath ordeyned all meates to be indifferent.

Paule.

Christ called hym self bread, and Paule calleth vs bread.

How the wordes of S. Paule are to bee vnderstād.

should the death of his body and fruit of his passion bee distributed to all faythfull folke. In that the bread strengtheneth our bodyes it is hys own body, signifying that as our bodyes are strengthened and comforted by bread, so are our soules by ỹ fayth in hys body breaking: And likewyse of the wine in that it was so distributed, and so comforteth vs and maketh vs mery. Furthermore the bread and wine haue an other propertie, for the which it is called our body. For in that the bread is made one bread of many graines or cornes, it is our body, signifying that we though we bee many, are made one bread, that is to say, one body: And in that the wine is made one wine of many grapes, it is our bodye, signifying that though we are many yet in Christ & through Christ we are made one body & members to ech other. But in thys thyng Paule and Christ agrée. For as Paul calleth the bread our body and vs the bread because of thys propertie, that it is made one of many: euen so doth Christ call it hys body because of the properties before rehearsed. Furthermore in thys they agrée, that as Paules wordes must be taken spiritually (for I thinke there is no man so mad, as to iudge that the bread is our body in deede, although in that propertie it representeth our body): euen so must Christes wordes be vnderstand spiritually, that in those properties it representeth his very body. Now when we come together to receaue thys bread, then by the receaning of it in the congregation, we doe openly testifie that we all (which receaue it) are one body, professing one God, one fayth, and one baptisme, and that the body of Christ was broken and his bloud shed for remission of our sinnes. Now sith we so do, we may not company nor sit in the congregation or fellowship of them that offer vnto Idols and eate before thē. For as Paule sayth: ye cā not drinke the cup of the Lorde, and the cup of the deuils: ye can not be partakers of the table of the Lord and of the table of the deuills. I would not that you should haue fellowship with deuills. The heathen which offered vnto Idolls were the fellowship of deuils, not because they eate the deuills body or dranke the deuils bloud, but because they beleued & put their confidence in the Idoll or deuill as in their God, and all that were of that fayth had their ceremonies, and gaue hartye thākes to their God with that feast which they kept. They came to one place and brought their meate before the Idoll and offered it: and with their offering gaue vnto the deuill godly honour. And then they sat down and eate the offering together geuing prayse and thankes vnto their God, and were one body and one fellowship of ỹ deuill which they testify by eating of that offering before that idole. Now doth S. Paule reprehend the Corinthians for bearyng the gentiles companye in eating before the Idole. For they know that the meate was like other meate. And therefore thought them selues frée to eate it or leaue it. But they perceiued not that that congregregation was the fellowship of deuiles which were there gathered (not for the meat sake) but for to thanke and prayse the Idole there God in whō they had their confidēce. And all that there assembled and dyd there eate, and did openly testifie, ỹ they al were one body, professing one fayth in their God that Idole, So Paule rebuked them, for because ỹ by there eating (in that place and fellowship) they testified openly, that they were of the deuils body and reioyced in the Idole their God in whō they had fayth and confidence. And therfore sayth Paule, that they cā not both drinke the cup of the Lord testifying hym to be their God in whom onely they haue trust and affiaunce, & the cup of the deuill testifiyng ỹ Idole to bée their God and refuge.

Here you may note that the meate and the eatyng of it in this place & fellowshyp is more then ỹ cōmon meate and eatyng in other places. For elles they myght lawfully haue dronkē the deuils cup with them the one day, & the cup of the Lord the next day with his hys Disciples. What was it more, verely it was meate which by the eatyng of it in that place and felowshyp, dyd testifie openly vnto all men, that he was their God whose cuppe they dranke, and before whom they eate in that felowshyp: and so in their eating they praysed and honored the idole. And therfore they that had their trust in the lyuing God and in the bloud of his sonne Christ, might not eate with them. And lykewise it is the in sacrament, the bread and the eatyng of it in the place and felowshyp where it is receiued, is more then common bread. What is it more? Verely it is bread which by ẏ eatyng of it in that place and felowshyp, doth testifie openly vnto all men, that he is our very God whose cup we dranke and before whom we eate in that felowshyp, & that we put all our affiaūce in hym and in the bloud of hys sonne Christ Iesu, geuyng God all honour & infinite thankes for his great loue wherwith he loued vs, as it is testified, in the bloud of hys sonne, whiche was shed for our sinnes. So that in this place and felowshyp may no mā eate nor dranke with vs, but he that is of our fayth and knowledgeth the same God that we doe. As by example, if a mā were well beloued among hys neyghbours (albeit he haue some enemyes) and were long absent from hys frendes in a straunge countrey: when he were come home, his neighbours that loued hym would greatly reioyse and peraduenture would bye a Capon or an other pēce of meate to geue hym his welcom home, and get them to some honest mans house or to a Tauerne, and make good cheare together, to testifie openly that he is welcome home, & that they all which are at ẏ banket reioyse of his cōming home. Now I say, that this banket is more then an other meale, for at this banket hys enemies may be loth to come, because they can not reioyse at his comming home, and therfore can not make good chere among thē, testifiing that he is welcome home: but rather abhorreth the meate and dranke ẏ is there eaten, because their hart doth not fauour the person for whose sake it is prepared. Notwithstanding if a capons legge were reserued for one of his enemies and afterward geuen him when the banket were done, he might lawfully eate it. For then it were but bare meate such as he eateth at home. And likewise ẏ enemies of Christ which beleeue not that they haue remission of sinnes through his bloudshedyng, can not reioyce of his body breaking. And therfore can make good chere among thē, but if any be reserued after the maundy, he may lawfully eate it for is but bread. And his louers that are there preſēt do rather come thether to geue him his welcome home then for the meate, and they more eate his welcome home then the meate. But if anye of his enemies fortune to be there they eate onely the meat, and not his welcome home. For they reioyce not at his comming home. Likewise the faythfull that are there present, do rather come thether to reioyce in ẏ faith of his body breaking, thē in breaking or eating of the bread or meate. But if any of the vnfaythfull fortune to be there they eate onely the bread, and not his body breaking. For they reioyce not at his bodie breaking. Here peraduenture some will suppose that I were cōtrary to my self. For before I sayd, ẏ it was more then meate ẏ was eaten at ẏ gentiles feast & more then meate ẏ was eaten at my neighbors welcome home, & more thē bread that is eaten at the receiuyng of the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ. And now I say, that if a mās enemye be there, he eateth onely the meate and not ẏ welcome home. And lykewise the vnfaythfull eateth onely breade and not the body and bloud of Christ. How may these wordes stand together? I aunswere, that they eate but onely bread or meate ẏ profiteth them, but indeede they eate more to their hinderaunce, & euen their owne damnation. For they that did eate in ẏ fellowship of ẏ gentiles, did but onlye eate the meate to there profite but in eating they? meate their fate, dyd openly testifye that they honoured ẏ Idole for their God (although their

Besides that, he that enuyeth hys neighbour and commeth to that banket, eateth but onely ỹ meate that profiteth hym: notwithstandyng in hys owne hart, he eateth the rancor & malice of his mynde, to his great greuaũce, when he seeth them so reioyse. And of hys owne companions which are also these mans enemyes, he doth purchase hym selfe hatred, because with his fact hee testifieth that hee loueth him, although his hart be otherwise, and of God shalbe condemned.

This I am compelled to doe, to stop the chateryng mouthes of Sophisters, albeit to them that be sober, it had been inough to haue sayd, they eate onely bread, & not the body broken &c. For they right well vnderstand it by the contrary Antitheſie, & know that I meant not by that (onely) that he should eate the bread & nothyng els but onely bread: but that I meant by this worde (onely) that hee should eate the bread without the body. And so lykewise in other exãples. Thus haue we sufficiently declared Paules mynde in the. 10. Chapter.

1.Cor.11. In the xj. chapter Paule maketh much mencion of the maundye & describeth it to ỹ vttermost. First he saith when ye come together in one place, a man can not eate the Lords supper. For euery man beginneth afore to eate his owne supper, and one is hungry and an other is dronken. Haue ye not houses to eate and drinke in? or els despise ye the congregation of God and shame them that haue not what shall I saye vnto you? shall I prayse you? In this I prayse you not. Paule did instruct according to Christes mynde, ỹ the Corinthians should come togither to eate the Lordes supper. Whiche lyeth not so much in the carnall eatyng as in the spiritual: and is greatly desired to be eaten, not by the hunger of the body, but by the hũger of the faithfull hart, which is gredy to publishe the prayse of the Lord and geue hym harty thankes, & moue other to the same that of many, prayse might be geuen vnto our most mercyful father for the loue which he shewed vs in the bloud of his owne most deare sonne Christ Jesu. Wherewith we are washed from our sinnes and surely sealed vnto euerlastyng lyfe. With such hũger dyd Christ eate the Paschall lambe, sayeng to hys Disciples: I haue inwardly desired to eate this Easter lãbe with you before that I suffer. Christes inward desire was not to fill hys belly with his disciples, but hee had a spirituall hũger: both to prayse his father with them, for theyr bodely deliueraũce out of the land of Egypt: and specially to alter the Paschall lambe and memory of the carnall deliueraunce, into the maundy of myrth and thãkesgeuyng for our spirituall deliueraunce out of the bondage of sinne. In so much that when Christ knewe that it was his fathers will and pleasure, that he should suffer for our sinnes (wherin his honor, glory and prayse should be published) then was it a pleasure vnto hym, to declare vnto his Disciples that great benefite, vnto his fathers prayse and glory: & so did institute that we should come together and breake the bread in the remẽbraunce of his body breakyng and bloud shedyng: and that we shuld eate it together reioyeng with ech other & declaryng hys benefites.

The true eating of the Sacrament is the spirituall eating of the same.

Luke.22.

Now were the Corinthians fallen from this hunger, and came not together to the intent that Gods prayse should bee published by them in the middest of the congregatiõ, but came to fede their flesh and to make carnal cheare. In so much that ỹ rich would haue meate and drinke inough, and take such aboundaunce ỹ they would be dronke (and so made it their owne per & not the Lordes, as Paule saith, and did eate onely the bread & meate, and not the body breaking, as I haue before said, & the poore which had not (that is to say that had no meate to eate) were ashamed and hungry, and so could not reioyse and prayse the Lord: by the reason that the delicate fare of the riche was an occasion for the poore to lament their pouertie and thus the rich dyd neither prayse God them selues, nor suffered the poore to doe it, but were an occasion to hynder them.

They should haue brought their meate and drinke and haue deuided it with their poore brethren, that they might haue ben mery together, and so to haue geuen them occasion to be mery and reioyse in the Lorde with thankes geuyng. But they had neither lust to prayse God nor to comfort their neighbour. Their fayth was feble and their charitie cold, and had no regard but to fill their body and fede their flesh: And so despised ỹ poore cõgregation of God whom they should haue honoured for ỹ spirite that was in them & fauour that God had shewed indifferently vnto them in ỹ bloud of hys sonne Christ. When Paule perceiued that they were thus fleshly minded and had no mynde vnto that spirituall maundy which chiefly shuld ther bee aduertised, hee repeateth thẽ soze, rehearsing ỹ wordes of Christ. That which I gaue vnto you I receiued of the Lord. For the Lord Iesus the same night in the which hee was betrayed, tooke bread and thanked and brake it and said: take ye and eate ye, this is my bodye which is broken for you, this do ye in the remembraunce of me. After the same maner hee tooke the cup when supper was done saying, this cuppe is the new Testament in my bloud, this doe ye as ofte as ye drinke it in the remembraunce of me. For as oft as ye shall eate this bread & drinke of this cup, ye shall shew the Lordes death, til he come. As though hee should say, ye Corinthians are much to blame whiche at this Supper seeke the fode of your flesh. For it was institute of Christ, not for the intent to norishe the belly, but to strẽghten the hart and soule in God. And by this you may know that Christ so meant. For he calleth it hys body which is geuen for you, so that the name it selfe might testifie vnto you, that in this supper you should more eate his body whiche is geuen for you (by digesting that into the bowels of your soule) then the bread which by the breakyng, and the distributyng of it, doth represent his body breakyng and the distributyng therof vnto all that are faythful. And that hée so meaneth is euident by the wordes folowyng, which say, this do in the remembrance of mee: and likewyse of the cuppe. And finally concludyng of both, Paule sayth, as often as ye shall eate this bread & drinke of this cuppe (in this place and felowshyp) ye shall shew ỹ Lordes death vntill hée come, prayeng the Lord for the death of his sonne and exhortyng other to doe the same, reioyeng in hym with infinite thãkes. And therfore ye are to blame whiche seeke onely to fede the belly with that thyng which was onely institute to fede the soule. And therupon it foloweth.

why Christ did institute the Sacrament.

The sacrament was ordained to fede our soules, and not our bodyes.

Wherfore who soeuer doth eate of this bread and drinke of this cup vnworthely, is gilty of the body and bloud of the Lorde. Ye eateth this bread vnworthely, which regardeth not the purpose for the which Christ ordinstitute it, which cõmeth not to it with spirituall hũger, to eate through fayth his very body, which the bread representeth by the breaking and distributing of it: which commeth not with a mery hart, geuing God harty thankes for their deliueraunce from sinne: Which doe not much more eate in their hart ỹ death of his body, then they doe the bread with their mouth. Now sith the Corinthyans did onlye seeke their belly and flesh, and forgat Gods honour and prayse (for which it was instituted, ỹ thãkes should be geuen by the remembrance of his body breaking for vs) they eate it to Gods dishonour & to their neighboures hinderaunce, & to their owne condemnation, & so for lacke of fayth were giltye of Christes body which (by fayth) they should there chiefely haue eaten to their soules health. And therefore it followeth.

* Let a man therfore examyne him selfe and so let him eate of the bread, and drinke of the cuppe.

What it is to proue & examine a mans owne selfe.

This prouing or examinyng of a mans selfe is first to thinke with him selfe with what lust and desire he cōmeth vnto the maundy & will eate that bread: whether he be sure that he is the child of God and in the faith of Christ: And whether his cōscience do beare him witnesse that Christes body was broken for him: And whether the lust ỳ he hath to prayse God and thanke hym with a faythfull hart in the middes of the brethren, do driue hym thether warde. Or els whether he do it for ỳ meates sake or to kepe the custome: for then were it better that he were away. For he that eateth or drinketh vnworthely, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation, because he maketh no differēce of the Lordes body. That is, as it is sayd before, he that regardeth not the purpose for which it was instituted, & putteth no difference betwene his eating and other eating (for other eating doth onely serue the bellye) but this eating was instituted and ordayned, to serue the soule and inward man. And therfore he that abuseth it to the flesh, eateth and drinketh his owne damnation, And he commeth vnworthelye to the maundye where the sacrament of Christes body is eaten: ye where the body of the Lord is eaten: not carnally with the teth and bellye but spiritually with the hart and faith. Upon this followeth the text that M. More allegeth and wresteth for his purpose.

For this cause many are weake & sicke among you, and many slepe. yf we had truely Judged our selues, we should not haue bene Judged when we are Judged of the Lorde, we are chastened because we should not be damned with the world. Wherfore my brethren, whē ye come togither to eate, tary one for an other. Yf a man hunger, let him eate at home, that ye come not togither vnto condemnation.

The meaning of S. Paules former wordes.

For this cause (that is) for lacke of good examinyng of our selues (as is before touched) many are weake and sicke in the fayth, and many a slepe, and haue lost their fayth in Christes bloud, for lacke of remembraunce of his body breaking & bloud shedding: yea & not that onely but many were weake and sicke euen stricken with bodelye diseases for abusing ỳ sacrament of his body, eating the bread with their teth and not his body with their hart and minde and peraduenture some slayne for it, by the stroke of God, which if they had truely iudged and examined thē selues for what intent they came thither and why it was instituted, should not haue bene so iudged and chastened of the Lorde. For the Lorde doth chasten to bring vs vnto repentaunce and to mortifie our rebellious mēbers, that we may remember hym. Here ye may shortly percepue the mynde of Paule.

An Epitome and short rehearsall of all this booke, shewing in what poyntes Frith dissenteth from our Prelates

An Epitome of this whole booke.

Now to be short, in these three poyntes Frith dissenteth frō our Prelates, and from M. More which taketh vpon hym to be their proctor.

The opinion of the Prelates.

1. Our Prelates beleue that in the Sacrament remaineth no bread, but that it is turned into the naturall body of Christ both flesh, bloud, and bones. Frith sayth that it is no article of our Crede: and therefore let them beleue it that will. And he thinketh that there remayneth bread still, and that he proueth three maner of wayes. First by ỳ scripture of Paule, whiche calleth it bread, saying: the bread which we breake, is it not the fellowship of the body of Christ? For we we though we bee many, are yet one body and one bread, as many as are partakers of one bread. And againe he sayth: as often as ye eate of thys bread or drinke of thys cup, you shall shew the Lordes death vntil he come. Also Luke calleth it bread, saying in the Actes: they continued in the fellowship of the Apostles, and in the breaking of the bread & prayer. Also Christ called the cup the fruite of a vyne, saying: I shall not from hence forward drinke of the fruite of the vyne, vntill I drinke that new in the kingdome of my father.

1.Cor.11.

Actes.2.

Math.26. Marke.14. Luke.22.

Nature teacheth that there is both bread and wyne in the Sacrament.

Furthermore nature doth teache you that both the bread and wine cõtinue in their nature. For the bread mouldeth if it be kept long, yea and wormes brede in it: and the poore mouse will runne away with it and eate it, which are euidence inough that there remayneth bread. Also the wine if it were reserued, would waxe sower, as they confesse them selues, and therefore they housell the lay people but with one kinde onely, because the wine can not continue nor be reserued to haue ready at hand when nede were. And surely as if there remayned no bread, it could not mould nor waxe full of wormes: euen so if there remayned no wine, it could not waxe sower. And therefore it is but false doctrine that our prelates so lõg haue taught and published.

The olde Doctours proue that there is bread in the Sacrament.

Fyrstly ẏ there remayneth bread, might be proued by the authoritie of many Doctors which call it bread and wine, euen as Christ and hys Apostles did. And though some sophisters would wrest their saying, and expoũd them after their owne phantasie, yet shall I alleage thẽ one Doctor which was Pope, that maketh so playne with vs, that they shall neuer bee able to auoyde them.

Gelasius in concilio Ro.

For Pope Gelasius writeth on thys maner: Certe sacramenta quæ sumimus corporis & sanguinis Christi, diuinæ res sunt, propter quod & per eadem diuinæ efficimur consortes naturæ. Et tamen non desinit esse substantia vel natura panis & vini, sed permanet in suæ proprietate naturæ. Et certe imago & similitudo corporis & sanguinis Christi in actione mysteriorum celebrantur. That is to say. Surely the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ which we receaue, are a godly thing, and therefore through them are we made partakers of the godly nature. And yet doth it not cease to bee the substance or nature of bread and wine, but they continue in the propertie of their owne nature. And surely the image and similitude of the body and bloud are celebrated in the acte of the mysteryes. Thys I am sure, that no man can auoyde it, nor so wrest it, but that all men shall sone espye hys folly, and therefore I may conclude that there remayneth the substaunce and nature of bread and wine.

The second poynt wherin Frith dissenteth from our Prelates and their Proctor.

The fayth of the Prelates.

THe Prelates beleeue that hys very flesshe is present to the teeth of them that eate the sacrament, and that the wicked eate hys very body.

The opinion of Iohn Frith.

Frith sayth that it is no article of our Crede, and therefore hee reckoneth that hee is in no ieoperdy though hee beleeue it not. And hee thinketh that his flesshe is not present vnto the teeth of them that receaue the Sacrament. For hys flesh is onely in one place at once: And ẏ hee proueth both by ẏ authoritie of S. Austen ad Dardanum, and also by the authoritie of Fulgentius *ad Thrasimundum lib.*2o. as before appeareth in ẏ booke. And Frith sayth that the wicked eate not hys very flesshe, although they receaue the sacrament: And that hee proueth by the Scripture, Doctors, and good reason grounded vpon the scriptures.

The Scripture is this: hee that eateth Christes body hath euerlasting life, but the wicked hath not euerlasting life, ergo then the wicked eate not his body. Agayne the Scripture sayth: hee that eateth Christes flesshe and drinketh hys bloud, abydeth in Christ and Christ in hym, but ẏ wicked abyde not in Christ, nor Christ in him, ergo the wicked eate not hys fleſhe nor drinke hys bloud.

August. in ſerm. de ſacra fe. paſſcha. Thys may alſo bée confirmed by good authoritie. For S. Auſten ſayth: hée that abydeth not in Chriſt, and in whom Chriſt abydeth not, without doubt hée eateth not hys fleſhe, nor drinketh hys bloud, although hée eate and drinke the ſacrament of ſo great a thing vnto hys damnation.

Beda. And euen the ſame wordes hath Beda vpon the x. chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians.

Aug. de Ciuitate Dei in libro. 21. Cap. 25. Agayne S. Auſten ſayth: hée that abydeth not in me, and in whom I abyde not, let hym not ſay nor thinke, that hée eateth my body or drinketh my bloud. And euē the ſame wordes hath Beda vpon the vi. chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians. And euen ỹ ſame ſentēce hath Ambroſe, and Proſper, and Beda vpon the xi. chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians.

Finally thys may bée proued by good reaſon grounded vpon the ſcripture. Chriſt would not ſuffer Mary (though ſhée loued hym well) to touch hym, becauſe ſhée lacked one poynt of fayth, and dyd not beléeue that hée was equall with his father. And therfore by reaſon it muſt follow, that hée will not ſuffer the wicked (which neither haue good faith nor loue towards hym) both to touch hym and eate him into their vncleane bodyes.

The wicked eate not Chriſtes body.

Now ſith thys is proued true, that the wicked eate not thys body, it muſt alſo thereof nedes followe, that the ſacrament is not hys naturall bodye. For they doe eate the ſacrament as all mē know. Beſides that the faythfull doe not eate Chriſtes body with their téeth. And therefore it muſt followe that the wicked doe not eate it with their téeth. The antecedent or firſt part of the reaſon is proued by the wordes of Chriſt, which ſayth,

John. 6. that the fleſh profiteth nothyng at all, meaning that it doth not profite as they vnderſtode hym, that is to ſay, it profiteth nothyng to bée eaten carnally with their téeth and belly, as they vnderſtode hym. For els it profiteth much to bée eaten ſpiritually, that is to ſay, to beléeue that through hys body breakyng & bloud ſhedding our ſinnes are purged. And thus doth Origene, S. Auſten, Beda, Chryſoſtome, and Athanaſius expound it, as appeareth in the boke before. And therfore Frith ſayth that onely faythfull men eate hys body, not with their téeth and mouth, but with their fayth and hart, that digeſt it into ỹ bowells of their ſoules through beléeuing that it was broken on the croſſe, to waſhe away their ſinnes. And the wicked eate not hys body but onely the bread and their damnation, becauſe they eate hym not ſpiritually, that is, becauſe they beléeue not in hys bodye breaking and bloud ſhedding.

Only the faythfull do eate Chriſtes body and drinke his bloud.

❧ The third point wherin Frith diſſenteth from our prelates and their proctoure.

The fayth of the Prelates. 3. THe Prelates beléeue that men ought to worſhip the ſacramēt. But Frith ſayth nay, and affirmeth that it is Idolatry to worſhip it. And hée ſayth that Chriſt and his Apoſtles taught vs not ſo to doe: neither did the holy fathers ſo teach vs. And

The opinio of Frith. Frith ſayth, that the authors of thys worſhipping are the children of perdition which haue ouerwhelmed this world with ſinne. Neuertheleſſe we muſt receaue it reuerently, becauſe of the doctrine that it bringeth vs. For it preacheth Chriſtes death vnto vs, and deſcribeth it before our eyes, euen as a faythfull preacher by the worde doth inſtill it into vs by our eares and hearing. And that it ſupplyeth the roome of a preacher is euident by the wordes of S. Auſten which ſayth. Paulus quamuis portaret farcinam corporis quod aggrauat animā, potuit tamen ſignificando predicare Dominum Ieſum Chriſtum, aliter per linguam ſuam, aliter per epiſtolam, aliter per ſacramentum corporis Chriſti. That is to ſay, though Paule did bere the burthen of the body which doth honorate the ſoule, yet was he able in ſignifyng to preach ỹ lord Jeſus Chriſt, one way by his tonge, and an other way by an epiſtle, & an other way by the ſacrament of Chriſtes body. &c.

For

For as the people by vnderſtanding the ſignification of the wordes which he ſpake did heare the glorious Goſpell of God, and as by the reading of his piſtle they vnderſtode his minde and receiued the word of the ſoules health, ſo by the miniſtration of the ſacrament they might ſée with their eye the thing which they heard & read and ſo haue their ſences occupied about the miſtery, that they might the more earneſtly print it in their minde. As by example: The Prophet Hieremie being in Hieruſalem in the tyme Ierem. 27. of Sedechias king of the Iewes, prophelyed and preached vnto them, ỹ they ſhould be take̅ priſoners of Nabugodonoſar the king of Babilon, & the Iewes were angry with him and woulde not beléue his wordes. And therfore he made a chayne or fetters of wood and put them about his neke and prophelied agayne and preached that they ſhould be taken priſoners & led captiue into Babilon. And as his wordes did certifie their eares ỹ they ſhould be ſubdued, ſo the chayne dyd repreſent their captiuitie euen before their eye. Whiche thyng did more behemently woorke in them then the bare wordes could doe, and euen ſo it is in the Sacrament. For likewiſe as the woordes dyd inſtill into our
The miniſtration of the Sacrament doth lyuely expreſſe the death and paſſion of Chriſt. eares, that his body was geuen for vs, and his bloud ſhed for the remiſſion of our ſinnes, euen ſo did the myniſtration of the ſacrament expreſſe ỹ ſame thing vnto our ſight, and doth more effectuouſly moue, then the bare wordes might doe and make vs more attent vnto the thing, that we may wholye geue thankes vnto God and prayſe him for his bounteous benefites. And therfore ſeyng it is a preacher, expreſſing vnto our ſight ỹ ſame thing that ỹ wordes doe to our eares repreſẽt you muſt receyue it with reuerence & ſober behauiour, aduertiſing ỹ thing, that it repreſenteth vnto you. And euen ỹ ſame honour is dew vnto it which is geuen vnto the ſcripture that is the word of God. For vnto ỹ muſt a man deuoutlye geue eare and reuerently take the boke in hys hande: yea and if he kiſſe ỹ boke for the doctrines ſake that he learneth thereout, he is to bée cõmended, Neuertheleſſe if he ſhould goe ſence hys boke, men might well thinke that he were very childiſhe. But if he ſhould knéele downe and pray to this booke then he dyd commyt playne Idolatrye Conſider deare bretheren what I ſay and auoyde this Ieoperdye. Which thing auoyded, I care not as touching the preſence of his body, though you beléue that hys naturall fleſh be there in déede (and not onely in a miſterye as I haue taught) For when ỹ Ieoperdye is paſt, he were a fole that would bee contẽtious for a thing as long as there cõmeth no hurt therbye.

The Germanes which beléue the preſence of his body, do not worſhyp it, but playnly teach the contrary and in that poynt (thankes be to God) all they whom you call hereticks, do agrée fullwell. Onely auoyde this Idolatry and I deſire no more.

¶The concluſion of this treatiſe.

NOwe deare bretheren I beſéech you for the mercy ỹ ye loke for in Chriſt Ieſu, that you accepte this worke with a ſingle eye and no contentious hart. For neceſſitie hath compelled me to write it, becauſe I was informed both of my Lord of Wincheſter and other credible perſõs, that I had by the meanes of my firſt treatiſe offended many men. Which thing may well be true: For it was to ſlender, to inſtruct all them which haue ſince ſœne it, albeit it were ſufficient for their vſe to whõ it was firſt deliuered. And therfore I thought it not onely expedient, but alſo neceſſary, to inſtruct them further in the truth, that they might ſée plaine euidence of that thyng wherein they were offended.

By this worke you ſhal eſpye their blaſphemyes & the venemous toũges where with they ſlaunder not onelye them that publiſh the truth, but euen the truth it ſelfe. They ſhame not to ſay ỹ we affirme it to bee onely bread and nothing els. And we ſay not ſo: but we ſay, that beſide the ſubſtaunce of bread, it is ỹ ſacrament of Chriſtes body and bloud. As ỹ Iuye hanging before the tauerne dore is more then bare Iuye. For beſide the ſubſtaunce of Iuye, it is a ſigne, and ſignifieth that there is wine to bee ſold. And this ſacrament ſignifieth vnto vs and poynteth out before our eyes that as verely as that bread is broken, ſo verely was Chriſtes body broken for our ſinnes: and as that bread is diſtributed vnto vs, ſo is his body & fruite of hys paſſion diſtributed vnto all his faythfull. And as the bread comforteth the body, ſo doth ỹ fayth in Chriſtes death comfort our ſoules. And as ſurely as we haue that bread and eate it with our mouth and teeth, & know by our ſenſes that we haue it within vs, & are partakers therof: no more neede we to doubte of hys body and bloude, but that thorough fayth, wee are as ſure of them, as we are ſure of that bread. As it is ſufficiently declared in my booke.

ſay

(The Sament beſide the ſubſtaunce of of bread is Chriſtes body and bloud.)

Agayne you may percepue how wickedly they report on vs which affirme that we diſhonour it whiche geue it the right honour that it ought to haue. And you doe playnly diſhonour it, whiche geue vnto it the honor that is onely due vnto God. We geue it the ſame honour that we geue vnto the holy Scripture and word of God, becauſe it expreſſeth vnto our ſenſes the death of our Sauiour, and doth more depely Print it within vs. And therefore we call it an holy Sacrament, as we call Gods word, holy Scripture. And we receiue this Sacrament with great reuerence, euen as we reuerently read or heare preached the holy word of God which conteineth the health of our ſoules. And we grannt that his body is preſent with the bread as it is with the word, and with both it is verely receiued & eaten through faith. But if we ſhould kneele downe and pray vnto the holy Scripture, men might coũt vs fooles, & might lawfully ſay, that we doe not honour the ſcripture by that meanes, but rather diſhonour it. For the right honour of a thyng is, to vſe it for that intent that it was inſtituted of God. And hee that abuſeth it to any other purpoſe, doth in deede diſhonour it. And lykewiſe it is in the Sacrament which was inſtituted to keepe in memory the death of Chriſt, which if we doe any otherwiſe honour, then we doe the holy Scripture (vnto ỹ which we may in no wiſe make our prayers) I ſay that then we ſhould bitterly diſhonour it. Auoyde therfore this poynt of Idolatry, and all is ſafe.

(They diſhonour the Sacramẽt that geue it that honour that is due vnto God.)

Finally we ſay that they ſpeake well & faythfully whiche ſay that they goe to the body and receiue the body of Chriſt, and that they ſpeake vilanously and wickedly whiche ſay that they onely receiue bread or the ſigne of hys body for in ſo ſaying they declare their infidelitie. For the faythful will reckon that hee is euill reported of, and reputed for a traytour and an other Iudas, if mẽ ſhould ſay of him that hee dyd onely receiue the Sacrament, and not alſo the thyng whiche the Sacrament doth ſignifie. For albeit hee onely eateth the bread and ſacrament with hys mouth and teeth: yet with hys hart and fayth inwardly, hee eateth the very thyng it ſelfe which the Sacramẽt outwardly doth repreſent.

(Frith here ſheweth what hee thinketh of the Sacrament.)

And of this, ſpeyng the maner of ſpeakynges that the olde fathers doe ſometyme vſe, which at the firſt ſight mought ſeeme contrary to our ſenſes. But if they bee well pondered, it may ſone bee ſeene, how they ſhould be taken. For many times when they ſpeake of the Sacramẽt and outward eating, they apply vnto ỹ Sacrament and outward eatyng the fruite & conditions of the inward eatyng & thyng it ſelfe, becauſe that in a faythful man they are ſo ioyntly ioyned that the one is neuer without the other. As by example, Mary is named the mother of God, and yet ſhe is not the mother of hys Godhead by the which part onely he is called God, but becauſe ſhe is his mother, as touching his mãhode, & the Godhead is ſo annered with the mãhode that they both, make but one per-person, therfore is she called the mother of God, whiche in dede if it be wisely weyed, shalbe founde to be abused speach. And yet neuertheles it may very well be vsed, if men vnderstand what is ment thereby, but if thorough the vse of this speach, men shoulde fall into such an errour that woulde affirme our Ladye to be in dede the mother of his Godhead, the necessitie should compell vs to make a distinction betweene the nature of his Godhead and the nature of hys manhode, and so to expoūde the matter vnto them, and bryng them home agayne into the right vnderstanding. As we are now constrayned to doe in this Sacrament, because you misconstrue the sayinges of the Scripture & Doctours. Which notwithstandyng (if a man vnderstand them) say very well.

And many such maner of speaches are contayned in the Scripture: As where Christ sayth. Joh. 3. There shall noman ascend into heauen, but he that discendeth from heauen, the sonne of man which is in heauen. This text doth say that the sonne of man was then in heauen, when he spake these wordes vnto Nicodemus here on earth: which thing, all wise men cōsent to be vnderstanded, propter vnitatem personæ: That is to say, for the vnitie of the person. For albeit his godhed was in euery place at that time, yet was not his manhode (by the which he was called the sonne of man) in heauen at that time. And yet Christ sayde that it was in heauen for the vnitie of his person. For his Godhed was in heauen, and because the Godhed and manhode made but one person, therefore it was ascribed vnto ỹ manhode, which was onely verified vppon the Godhed, as S. Augustine ad Dardanum doth diligently declare.

August.

Of Baptisme.

And likewise in the sacrament of Baptisme, because the inwarde worcking of the holy ghost is euer annexed in the faithfull, vnto the outwarde ceremony: therefore sometime the fruite of the inwarde Baptisme is ascribed vnto the outward worke. And so the scripture vseth to speake of the outward baptisme as though it were the inwarde: that is to say, the spirite of God. And therfore S. Paul saith, that we are buried with Christ thorough baptisme. And yet as S. Augustine expoundeth it, ỹ outward Baptisme doth but signifie this burial. And agayne Paule sayth, as many as are babtised haue put Christ vppō them. And yet in dede our outward baptisme doth but signifie, that we haue put Christ vppon vs. But by the inwarde baptisme (which is the water of life and spirite of God) we haue in dede put him vpon vs & liue in him, and he in vs. Which notwithstanding is very false for all the outwarde baptisme, in them that receiue it not in fayth. And vnto them it is but a bare signe, wherof they get no profite, but damnation.

Augustinus ad Bonifacium.

And here you may euidently perceiue how it is sometyme in scripture ascribed vnto the inwarde worke and ceremony, which is onely true in the outwarde veritie. And this place shall expounde all the olde doctoures which seme contrary to our sentēce. And therefore marke it well.

Thus haue you my mynde farther vppon the Sacrament of the bodye and blood of Christ. Wherein, if you recken that I haue bene to long in repeating one thing so often, I shall pray you of pardon. But surely, me thought I coulde not be shorter. For the worlde is such now a dayes, that some woulde heare and can not, and some doe heare and will not. And therfore I am compelled so oftē to repeate that thing which a wise man woulde vnderstand with halfe the wordes.

¶ Praye Christen reader that the worde of God may encrease, and that God may bee glorified thorough my bondes. Amen.

The Articles wherfore Iohn Frith dyed, whiche hee wrote in Newgate the .23. day of Iune, the yeare of our Lord. 1533.

I Doubt not deare bre-thren, but that it doth, some deale vere you, to se the one part haue all the wordes, and frely to speake what they like, and the other to be put to silence, and not to be heard indifferently. But referre your matters to God, whiche shortly shall iudge after an other fashiõ. But in the meane reason, I shall rehearse vnto you the articles for which I am condemned.

They examined me but of two articles which are these.

The first article. FIrste whether I thought, there were no Purgatory to purge the soule after this present lyfe. And I sayd, that I thought there was none. For man is made but of two partes, the body and the soule. And the body is purged by ỹ crosse of Christ, which he layeth vpon euery child that he receaueth: as affliction, worldly oppression, persecution, imprisonment &c. and death finisheth sinne. And ỹ soule is purged by the word of God, which we receaue thorough fayth, vnto the health & saluatiõ both of body & soule.

Now and if I did know any third part wherof we are made, I would also gladly graunt the third Purgatory: but seyng, I know none such, I must deny the Popes Purgatory. Nevertheles, I count neither part a necessary article of our faith, necessarely to be beléeued vnder payne of damnation, whether there be such a purgatory or not.

The second article. The second article was this, whether that I thought, that the Sacrament of the aulter was the body of Christ. And I sayd yea, ỹ I thought that it was both Christes body, and also our bodye, as S. Paule sayth. 1. Cor. 10. chapter.

In that it is made one bread of many graynes it is our body signifying that we though we be many, are yet one body: and likewise of the wyne in that it is made one wyne of many grapes.

And agayne in that it is broken, it is Christes body, signifying that his body should be broken, that is to say suffer death, to redeme vs from our iniquities.

In that it was distributed, it was Christes body, signifying that as verely, as that Sacrament is distributed vnto vs, so verely is Christes body, & the frute of his passiõ distributed vnto all faithfull men.

In that it is receaued, it is Christes body signifying that as verely, as outward man receaueth the Sacrament with his teth, and mouth, so verely doth the inward man, through fayth, receaue Christes body & frute of his passion, and is as sure of it, as of the bread that he eateth.

In other question. Well sayd they, do you not thinke, that his very naturall body, both flesh and bloud is really contained vnder the Sacramẽt, and there actually present, beside all similitudes. To said I, I do not so thinke. Notwithstandyng I would not that any should counte that I make my saying (whiche is the negatiue) any article of the fayth For euen as I saye that you ought not to make any necessary article of ỹ fayth of your part (which is ỹ affirmatiue.) So I say agayne, that we make none necessarye article of the fayth of our parte, but leaue it indifferent for all men to iudge therein, as God shall open his hart, and no side to condemne or despise the other, but to nourish in all thynges brotherly loue, & to beare others infirmities.

In aunswere.

S. Augustines text. The text of S. Augustine which they there alleged agaynst mee, was this: that in ỹ Sacramẽt Christ was borne in his owne handes. Whereunto I sayd, ỹ S. Augustine doth full well expoũd him selfe. For in an other place he sayeth Ferebatur tanq̃ in manibus suis. That is, hee was borne after a certeine maner, in his owne handes. And by that he sayth after a certeine maner maner, ye may sone perceaue what hée meaneth. Howbeit if S. Augustin had not thus expounded himselfe, yet hée sayth ad Bonifacium, that ỹ Sacrament of a thyng, hath a similitude or propertie of the thyng whiche it signifieth. And for that cause it hath many tymes, ỹ name of ỹ very thyng which it signifieth. And so hée sayth ỹ he bare himselfe, because hée bare ỹ Sacramẽt of his body & bloud which did so earnestly expresse him selfe, that nothyng might more doe it. If you read ỹ place of S. Augustine ad Bonifacium, which I alleage in my last booke, ye shall sone sée them aunswered.

Chrisostomum. An other place they alleaged out of Chrisostome, which at the first blush séemeth to make well for them. But if it bée well wayed, it maketh much lesse for them then they wéene. The wordes are these.

Chrisostomes wordes. Doest thou see bread and wine? doe they depart from thee into the draught as other meates doe? God forbid for as in waxe when it commeth to the fier, nothing of the substaunce remayneth nor aboũdeth: so lykewise thinke that the mysteries are cõsumed by the substaunce of the body.

These wordes I expounded, by the wordes of the same Doctour S. Chrisostome, whiche in an other Homilie sayth on this maner. The inwarde eyes as sone as they see the bread, they flye ouer all creatures and thinke not of the bread that is baken of the baker, but of the bread of euerlastyng life, whiche is signified by the mysticall bread.

Now conferre these places together and you shall perceaue, that the last expoũdeth the first clearely. First hée sayth, wilt thou sée bread & wyne, I aunswere by the second, nay. For the inward eyes as sone as they sée ỹ bread, thinke not of it, but of ỹ thyng it self ỹ is signified therby. And so hée séeth it & séeth it not. He séeth it with his outward and carnall eyen, but his inward eyen séeth it not. That is to say, regarde not the bread or thinke not on it. Euen as we commonly say, when we play a game negligẽtly (by my truth I sée not what I doe) meanyng that our myndes, is not vppon that thing which we sée with our outward eyen. And lykewise we may aũswere the next part, where he sayth.

Doe they depart from thée into the draught (as other meates doe? Nay forsoth sayd I, for other meates doe onely come to nourish ỹ body, & to depart into the draught. But this meate ỹ I here receaue, is spirituall meate receaued with fayth & norisheth vs euerlastyngly, both body & soule, & neuer entreth into the draught. And eũ as before the outwarde eyen doe sée the bread & yet the outward eyen doe not regarde that or thinke vpõ it. So likewise the outward man digesteth the bread, & casteth it into the draught. And yet the inward man doth not regarde that nor thinke vppon it. But thinketh on the thyng it selfe that is signified, by that bread.

The expositiõ of S. Chrisostomes text.

And therfore sayd Chrisostome euen a litle before the wordes whiche they here alleaged, lift vp your minde & hartes (sayd hée) whereby hée monisheth vs, to loke vppon and consider those heauenly thinges, which are represented and signified by the bread and wyne, & not to marke the bread and wyne in it selfe.

The true meaning of Chrisostomes wordes.

Here they will say vnto me, that it is not Chrisostomes mynde (for by his example hée playnly shewith that there remaneth no bread nor wyne) that I deny. For the example in this place, proueth no more but ỹ ye shall not think on ỹ bread & wine, no more then if they were not there, but onely on that thyng whiche is signified by them. And that ye may euidently perceiue by the wordes folowyng where hée saith, thinke that the misteries are cõsumed by the substance of the body.

Solution. Nowe whether Chrisostome thought that there remained bread or no, both wayes shall our purpose bée proued. First if hée thought there remained still bread and wyne, then we haue our purpose. Now if he thought that the bread & wyne remayned not, but were chaũged, then are the bread and wyne neither mysteries nor Sacramentes of the body and bloud of Christ. For that that is not, can neither bee mystery nor Sacrament.

Conclusion. Finally if hee speake of ỹ outward appearaunce of bread: then we know that that remaineth still & is not consumed by the substaunce of the body. And therfore hee must needes bee understanded as I take him.

I thinke many men wonder how I can dye in this article, seyng that it is no necessary article of our fayth, for I graunt that neyther parte is an article necessary to bee beleeued vnder payne of damnation, but leaue it as a thyng indifferent, to thynke therein as God shall instill in euery mans mynde, and that neyther parte condemne other for this matter, but receiue eche other in brotherly loue, reseruing eche others infirmitie to god.

Beholde the cause of mi deathe. The cause of my death is thys, because I can not in conscience, abiure and sweare, that our Prelates opinion of the sacrament, (that is, that the substaunce of bread and wine is verely chaunged into the flesshe and bloud of our sauiour Iesus Christ) is an vndoubted article of the fayth, necessary to bee beleeued vnder payne of damnation.

Now though this opinion were in deede true (which thing they can neither proue true by scripture nor doctours) yet coulde I not in conscience graunt that it shoulde bee an article of the fayth necessary to bee beleeued. &c. For there are many verities, which yet may bee no such articles of our fayth. It is true that I lay in yrons when I wrote this: howbeit I would not haue you to receaue thys truth for an article of our fayth. For you may thinke the contrary without all ieopardy of damnation.

¶ The cause why I can not beleeue their opinion of transmutation is this.

Three causes. 1 First, because I thinke verely that it is false, and can neither bee proued by scripture, nor faythfull doctours, if they bee well pondered.

2 The second cause is thys, because I will not bynde the congregation of Christ (by mine example) to admitte any necessarye Article beside oure Creede, and specially none such as can not bee proued true by Scripture. And I say that the Church, as they caule it, can not compell vs to receaue any such articles to bee of necessitie vnder payne of damnation.

3 The thirde cause is, because I dare not bee so presumptuous in entering into Gods iudgement, as to make the prelates in this pointe a necessary article of our fayth. For then I should damnably condemne all the Germanes & Almaines with, infinite moe, which in deede doe not beleeue nor thinke that the substaunce of bread and wine is chaunged into the substaunce of Christes naturall body. And surely I can not bee so foolishe hardy, as to condemne such an infinite number for our prelates pleasures.

Thus all the Germaynes, and Almaynes, both of Luthers side and also of Oecolampadius, doe wholy approue my matter. And surely I thinke there is no man that hath a pure conscience, but hee will thinke that I dye righteously. For that this transubstantiation should bee a necessary article of the faith, I thinke no man can say it with a good conscience, although it were true in deede.

ARISE, FOR IT IS DAY.

The death and burning of the most constant Martyrs in Christ, D. Rob. Barnes, Tho. Garret, and W. Hierome, in Smithfielde. an. 1541.

¶ A briefe discourse of the lyfe and doinges of Robert Barnes Doctour in Diuinitie, a blessed seruaunt and Martyr of Christ, summarely extracted out of the booke of Monumentes.

THe first bringing vp of the sayd Rob. Barnes from a childe, was in the vniuersitie of Cambridge, and was made a Nouice in ỳ house of ỳ Fryer Augustines there. And beyng very apt vnto learning, did so profite, that by the helpe of his frendes, he was remoued from thẽce to the vniuersitie of Louayne in Brabant, where he remained certayne yeares, and greatly profited in the study of the tongues, and there proceeded Doctour of Diuinitie. And then from thence returned agayne into England, and so to the vniuersitie of Cãbridge, where he was made Prior and Maister of the house of Augustines, wherein he was first brought vp. And at that tyme the knowledge of good letters was scarcely entred into the vniuersitie, all thynges being full of rudenes & barbarietie, sauing in very fewe, which were priuye and secrete: whereupon Barnes hauing some fæling of better learning, and had red better actours, begã in his house to reade Terence, Cicero, and Plautus, so that what with his industry, paynes and labours, and with the helpe of Thomas Parnell his scholer, whom he brought from Louaine nayne with him, reading Copia verborum et rerum, he caused the house shortly to florishe with good letters, & made a great parte of ỳ house learned, which before were drowned in barbarous rudenes, as M. Cambridge. M. Felde, M. Colman, M. Burley, M. Couerdale, with diuers other of the vniuersitie, that soiourned there for learnings sake.

Doct. Barnes an a bolisher of barbarisme, a founder of learning, and a light of the trueth.

After these foundations layde, then did he read openly Paules Epistles, and put by Duns and Dorbell, and yet he was a questionary himself: and onely because he would haue Christ there taught and his holy word, he turned their vnsauery problemes, and fruitles disputations, to other better matter of the holy Scripture, and thereby in short space he made diuers good deuynes. The same order of disputation which he kept in his house, he obserued likewise in the vniuersitie abroad, when he should dispute with any man in the common scholes. And the first man that aunswered M. Barnes in the Scriptures was M. Stafford for his forme to be Bacheler of Diuinitie, which disputation was merueilous in the sight of the great blynde Doctours, and very ioyfull to the godly spirited.

Thus Barnes, what with his reading, disputation, and preachyng, became famous and mightie in the Scriptures, preaching euer agaynst Byshops and hipocrites, and yet did not see his inward and outwarde Idolatry, which he both taught and maintayned, vntill that good Maister Bilney with other conuerted him vnto Christ.

The first Sermō that euer he preached of this trueth, was ỳ Sonday before Christmas day at S. Edwardes Church longyng to Trinitie halle in Cambridge by ỳ Pease market: whose theame was the Epistle of the same Sonday, Gaudete in domino semper. &c. And so postilled the whole Epistle, folowing the Scripture and Luthers postill. And for that Sermō, he was immediately accused of heresie by ỳ. Felowes of ỳ Kinges hall. Then the godly learned in Christ, both of Pembroke hall, S. Johns, Peter house, Quenes colledge, ỳ kings colledge, Gunwell hall, & Benet colledge, shewed thēselues, and flocked togither in open sight, both in ỳ Scholes, & at open Sermōs, at S. Maries, at S. Austens, and at other disputations: and then they conferred continually togither.

The house that they resorted most commonly vnto, was the white Horse, which for despite of them, to bring Gods worde into cōtempt, was named Germany. This house specially was chosen, because of them of S. Johns. The Kings colledge, and ỳ Quenes colledge, came in on the backside. At this tyme much trouble began to ensue.

And first the aduersaries of D. Barnes accused him in the Regents house before the Vicechauncelour, where as his Articles were presented with hym and receaued, he promising to make aunswere at the next conuocation, and so it was done. Then Doctour Natores, a rayke enemy to Christ, moued D. Barnes to recant, but he refused so to doe, as appeareth in his booke made to K. Henry the viij. And this tragedy continued in Cambridge, in preaching one agaynst an other in trying out of Gods trueth, vntill within vj. dayes of Shroftyde. Then was sent downe a Sergeaunt at Armes called Gibson, who sodainely arested Doctour Barnes openly in the conuocation house, to make all other afrayde: and priuely they had determined to make search for Luthers bookes, and all the Germaynes workes sodainely. But good Doctour Forman of the Quenes colledge, sent worde incontinently therof to the chambers of those that were suspected, which were in number xx. persons. But God be praysed, they were conueyed by that tyme that the Sergeaunt of Armes, the Vichchauncelour and the proctours were at euery mans chamber, going directly to the place where ỳ bookes lay, whereby it was perceaued that there were some priuy spyes amōg that small company. The next day in the morning the Sergeaunt of Armes caried Barnes with him, and brought him to London before Cardinall Wolsey, where after long waiting, he by the reason of Doctour Gardiner Secretary to ỳ Cardinal (of whose familiar acquaintaunce, Doctour Barnes had bene before) and M. Foxe maister of the wardes, at the last he spake with the Cardinall in his chamber of estate, and there before him knæled on his knees. Then sayd the Cardinall vnto them, is this Doct. Barnes your man that is accused of heresie? They aunswered, yea and it please your grace, and we trust you shall finde him reformable, for he is both wise and well learned.

Then sayd the Cardinall, what maister Doctour, had you not a sufficient scope in the Scriptures to teach the people, but that my golden shoes, my pillers, my Pollaxes, my golden cushions, and my crosses did so sore offende you, that you must make vs Ridiculum Caput amongest the people? We were that day iolily laughed to scorne. Verely it was a Sermon more fitter to be preached on a stage, then in a pulpit: For at the last you sayd I did weare a payre of red gloues (I shoulde say bloudy gloues quoth you) that I should not be colde in the middest of my Ceremonies. Then Barnes answered, I spake nothing but the trueth out of the scriptures, according to my cõscience, and according to the olde Doctours: and then he deliuered him vj. sheetes of paper written, to confirme and corroborate his sayinges.

The Cardinall receaued them, smilyng on him, and saying: we perceaue that you intend to stand to your Articles, and to shew your learning: yea sayd Barnes that I doe intende by Gods grace and your Lordships fauour. Then sayde the Cardinall vnto Barnes, such as you are beare vs little fauour and the Catholique Church. I will aske you a question: whether doe you thinke it more necessary that I shoulde haue all thys royaltie, because I represent the kynges maiesties person in all the high courtes of this Realme, to the terrour and képing downe of all rebellions, treasons, traytours, and all the wicked and corrupt members of the common wealth, or to be as simple as you woulde haue vs, and to sell all these aforesayde thinges, and to géue it to the poore, which shortly would pisse it against the walles, & to pull away this maiestie of a princely dignitie, which is a terrour to all the wicked, and to follow your counsaile in this behalfe? Barnes answered, I thinke it necessary to be solde and géuen to the poore, for this is not comely for your caulyng, nor the kinges maiestie is not maintained by your pompe and pollaxes, but by God, who sayth, per me Reges regnant. Kynges and theyr maiesties raigne and stand by mée.

Then sayd the Cardinall, loe maister Doctours, here is the learned and wise man that you tolde mée of. Then they knéeled downe and sayd: we desire your grace to bée good vnto hym, for hée will be reformable. Then sayd he, stand you vp, for your sakes and the vniuersitie, we will be good vnto hym. And then sayd the Cardinall to Barnes, how say you M. Doctour, doe you not know that I am Legatus de latere, and that I am hable to dispẽce in all matters concerning religion within this Realme, as much as the Pope may? He sayd, I know it to be so. Will you then be ruled by vs, and we will doe all thinges for your honestie, and for the honestie of the vniuersitie. He answered. I thãke your grace for your good wil, I will sticke to ỹ holy Scripture, & to Gods booke according to the simple talent that God hath lent me. Then sayd the Cardinall, answere well I woulde aduise thée, for thou shalt haue thy learning tried to the vttermost, and thou shalt haue the lawe.

Then D. Barnes requyred hym that he might haue iustice with equitie, but forthwyth he should haue gone to the towre, but that Gardiner and Foxe became his suerties for that night. And in the morning he came agayne to Yorke place to Gardiner & Foxe, and forthwith he was cõmitted to ỹ Sergeaunt at Armes, to bryng him into the Chapter house at Westminster, before the Bysshoppes and the Abbot of Westminster called Islip.

So sone as the Sergeaunt had presented Barnes, the sayd Bysshoppes and Abbot, did first sweare him, and layd Articles vnto hym, who answered in like maner as before he had answered to the Cardinall, and he offred vnto them his booke of probations: who asked him, whether he had an other for him selfe, and he sayd yea, & shewed it vnto them, and they toke them both from him, saying that they should haue no laysure at that present to dispute with hym: But demaunded of him, whether he woulde subscribe to his Articles or not? And he subscribed willingly. Then was he committed to the Fléete, and the Warden of the Fléete commaunded that no man shoulde speake with hym.

On the Saterday folowing, he was agayne brought before them into the Chapter house at Westminster, where he remayned almost the whole day, and late in the euening they called him before them, and demaunded of him, whether he woulde abiure or burne? He was then in a great agonye, and thought rather to burne then abiure.

But

But then was he sent agayne to haue the counsaile of Gardiner and Foxe, and they perswaded him rather to abiure then to burne, because they sayde he should doe more good in tyme to come, & with diuers other perswasions that were mightie in the sight of reason and flesshe. Upon that knéelyng vpon his knées, he consented to abiure, and the abiuration put into his hand, he abiured as it was there written, and then he subscribed it with his owne hand, and yet they would scarcely receiue him into the bosome of the Church, as they termed it. Then they put him to an othe, and charged him to execute doe and fulfill all that they commaunded him, and he promised so to doe.

Then they commaunded the warden of the fléete to carye him with v. other of the stiliard that then were in like trouble with him vnto the fléete from whence they came, and to kéepe them close prisoners, and in the morning to prouide v. Faggots for Doctour Barnes and iiij. stilliard men, the which was readely done the next day by vij. of the clocke in the morning. At which tyme the knight Marshall with all his Billes, and gleues, & all the Tipstaues he could make was cõmaunded to bring them frõ the Fléete vnto Paules Church, and in like maner to bring them from thence to the fléete againe. And in the morning they were all ready by their houre appointed in Paules Church aforesayd, the which Church was then so full that no man might get in. The Cardinall had a skaffolde made for him in the toppe of the steyers before the Quyer doze, where he him selfe with xxvj. Abbottes, mitred Priors and Bishoppes, and he in his whole Pompe mitred (which Barnes had spoken against) sat there inthronized, his Chapleynes and spirituall Doctours in gownes of Dammaske and Satten, and he himselfe in Purple, euen like a bloudy Antechrist. And on the top of the stayers also, there was erected a new pulpit for the Bishop of Rochester, whose name was fisher to preach against Luther and Barnes, and great basketes full of Bookes standing before thẽ with in the rayles, which after the ende of the Sermon, a great fyer being first made before the Rode of Northen, were commaunded to be there brent, and the aforesayd heretikes after the sermon to goe thrise about the fyer, and to cast in their fagottes.

Now while the Sermond was a doing, Doctour Barnes and the Stilliard men were commaunded to kneele downe, and to aske God forgeuenes, ỹ Catholike Church and the Cardinalles grace. And after that he was commaunded at the ende of the Sermon to declare, that he was more charitably handled then he deserued, or was worthy (his hereties were so horrible and so detestable) and once againe knéeled downe on his knees, desiring the people of forgeuenes, and to pray for him. And the Cardinall departed vnder a canapye with all his mitred men with him vntill he came to the West doze of Paules, and there he tooke his Mule, and the mitred men came backe againe.

Then Barnes and the other sayd poore men, being commaunded to come downe frõ the stage (whereon the swépers vse to stand whẽ they swépe the Church) the Bishops sat them downe againe, and commaunded the knight Marshall and the warden of the Fleete with their cõpany to cary them about the fyer, and so were they brought to the Bishops, and there for absolution knéeled downe. At which tyme Rochester declared to the people, how many dayes of pardon and forgeuenes of synnes they had for being at that Sermond, and there did assoyle Doctour Barnes with the other, and shewed ỹ people that they were receaued into the Church againe.

These thinges being done, the warden of the Fleete, and the knight Marshall were commaunded to cary them againe vnto the Fleete, and charged ỹ they should haue the libertie of the fleete as other prisoners had, and that their frendes might resort vnto them, and there to remayne vntill the Lord Cardinalles pleasure were knowen.

After that Barnes had contynued in ỹ Fleete by the space of halfe a yeare, at lẽgth being deliuered he was committed to be free prisoner at the Augustine friers in London. Whẽ those Caterpillers and bloudy beastes had vndermined him, they complayned agayne to their Lord Cardinall. Whereupõ he was remoued to the Austen fryers of Northampton, there to be burned. Yet he him selfe vnderstanding nothing thereof, but supposing still that he should there remayne and contynue in free prison. At the last one M. Horne who had brought him vp, and was his speciall frende, hauing intelligence of the writt that should shortly be sent downe to burne him, gaue him coũsell to fayne him selfe desperate, and that he should write a letter to the Cardinall, & leaue it on his table where he lay, and a paper by, to declare whether he was gone to drowne him selfe, and to leaue his clothes in the same place: & there another letter to be left to the Maior of the towne to search for him in the water, because he had a letter written in parchment about his necke closed in ware for the Cardinall, which would teach all men to beware by him. Upon this they were by. dayes in searching for him, but he was conueied to London in a poore mans apparell, and taried not there, but toke shipping and went to Antwarp, and so into Germany to Luther, and there fell to study vntill he had made aunswere to all the Byshops of the Realme, and had made a booke intituled Acta Romanorum Pontificum, and an other booke with a supplication to King Henry the viij.

Immediately it was tolde the Cardinall that he was drowned, and he sayd, Periit memoria eius cum sonitu. But this did light vpon him selfe shortly after, which wretchedly dyed at Leceſter.

In the meane tyme D. Barnes was made strong in Christ, and got fauour both of the learned in Christ, and of forreine Princes in Germany, and was great with Luther, Melancton, Pomeran, Iustus Ionas, Hegendorphinus and Æpimus, and with the Duke of Saxon, and king of Denmarke: which king of Denmarke in ỹ time of More and Stokesley sent him with the Lubeckes, as an Embassadour to King Hẽry the eight. And during the time he remayned here, he lay with the Lubeckes Chauncelour at the Stiliard.

Syr Thomas More being then Chauncelour would fayne haue entrapped him, but the king would not let him, for Cromwell was his great and deare frende. And ere he went the Lubeckes and he disputed with the Bishops of this Realme in defence of the trueth. And so he departed agayne without restreynt with the Lubeckes.

After this he went agayne to Whittembergh to the Duke of Saxon and to Luther and there remayned to set forth his workes in Print that he had begonne. And from thence shortly after he returned agayne into England in the tyme of Quæne Anne Boleyn and continued a faythfull preacher in this Citie of London all the time that shee remained Quæne. And was well enterteyned and promoted.

Stephen Gardyner the author of mischiefe and decay of religion in England.

After this by the meane of the Lord Cromwell he was sent Ambassadour from K. Hẽry the viij. to the Duke of Cleue, for the mariage of ỹ Lady Anne of Cleue betwæne the king and her, and was well excepted in that Ambassade, and in all his doinges, vntill the tyme that Stephen Gardiner came out of Fraunce: But after he came, neither Religion prospered, nor the Quænes maiestie, nor Cromwell, nor the preachers, who after the mariage of the Lady. Anne of Cleue, neuer ceased vntill he had grafted the mariage in an other stocke, by the occasion whereof he began his bloudy broyle.

For not long after the dissolution of ỹ sayd mariage betwæne king Hẽry ỹ viij. and ỹ Lady Anne of Cleue, ỹ sayd Doctour Barnes with two of his brethrẽ felow preachers, named Iherome and Garret, were apprehended and caried before the kynges maiestie to Hampton court, and there were examined: where the kynges maiestie seking the meanes of Barnes safetie to bring Winchester and him agreed, at Winchesters requeſt graunted him leaue to goe home with the Byshop to conferre with hym, and so he did. But as it happened, they not agreeing, Gardiner & his comparteners sought by all subtile meanes how to entangle and intrappe them into farther daunger, which not long after was brought to passe. For by certayne complayntes made to the king of them, they were enioyned to preach iij. Sermõs the next Easter folowing at the Spittle beside London. At the which Sermons besides other reporters which were thither sent. Stephen Gardiner Byshop of Winchester was there present, sitting wyth the Maior, either to beare recorde of their recantation, or els as the Phariseys came to Christ, to trippe them in their talke, if they had spoken any thing awry.

When the aforesayd three had preached their Sermons, among whom Barnes preaching the first Sermõ, and he seing Stephen Gardiner there present, humbly desired him in the face of all the audience to forgeue him, and that if he forgaue hym to holde vp his hand, and the sayd Gardiner thereupõ helde vp his finger. Yet notwithstãding, by the meanes of ỹ ſaid reporters, they all iij. immediatly after they had preached, were ſent for to Hampton court, and from thence caryed to the Tower by Syr Iohn Goſtwyke, and there they remayned vntill the xxx. day of July next folowing. Thẽ enſued proceſſe againſt them by the kynges counſaile in the Parliament, to the which Gardiner confeſſed himſelfe to be priuy among the reſt. Whereupon all the aforeſayd three Saintes and true Martyrs, the xxx. day of July (not comming to any aũſwere, nor yet knowing any cauſe of their cõdemnation, without any publique hearing) were drawen on herdelles from the Tower to Smithfield, where they preparing them ſelues to the fier, had there at the ſtake diuerſe & ſondry exhortations, amongeſt whome Doctour Barnes firſt begaune with this proteſtation folowing.

I am come hither to be burned as an heretike, and you ſhall heare my beliefe wherby you ſhall perceaue what erronious opinions I holde. God I take to record I neuer (to my knowledge) taught any erronious doctrine, but onely thoſe thinges which the Scripture leade me vnto, and that in my ſermons I neuer mainteyned any errour, neither moued, nor gaue occaſiõ of any inſurrection. Although I haue bẽne ſlaundered to preache that our lady was but a Saffron bagge, which I vtterly proteſt before God that I neuer ment it nor preached it: But all my ſtudy and diligence hath beene vtterly to confound and confute all men of that doctrine: as are the Anabaptiſtes, which denie that our Sauiour Chriſt tooke any fleſhe of the bleſſed virgine Mary, which ſectes I deteſt and abhorre. And in deede in this place there hath beene burned ſome of them, whom I neuer fauoured nor mainteyned, but with all diligence I did ſtudie euermore to ſet forth the glory of God, the obedience to our ſoueraigne Lord the King, and the true and ſincere religion of Chriſt. And now harken to my fayth.

I beleeue in the holy and bleſſed Trinitie, three perſons and one God, that created and made all the world. And that this bleſſed Trinitie ſent downe the ſecond perſon Jeſu Chriſt into the wombe of the moſt bleſſed & pureſt virgin Mary. And heare beare me record that I doe vtterlye condemne that abhominable and deteſtable opinion of ỹ Anabaptiſtes, which ſay that Chriſt toke no fleſhe of the bleſſed virgine. For I beleeue that without the conſent of mans will or power, he was conceaued by the holy ghoſt, and toke fleſhe of her, and that he ſuffered hunger, thirſt, colde, and other paſſions of our body (ſinne except) according to the ſaying of S. Peter, he was made in all things like to his brethren (except ſinne)

And I doe beleeue that he liued here among vs: and after he had preached and taught his fathers will, he ſuffered the moſt cruell and bitter death for me and all mankinde.

And I dayly beleeue that this his death, and paſſion was the ſufficient price and ranſõe for the ſinne of all the world. And I beleeue that through his death he ouercame the deuill, ſinne, death, and hell, and that there is none other ſatisfaction vnto the father, but this his death and paſſion onely: and that no worke of man did deſerue any thing of God, but onely his paſſion as touching our iuſtification. For I knowledge the beſt worke that euer I did is vnpure and vnperfect. And here withall he caſt abroad his handes and deſired God to forgeue him his treſpaſces. For although perchaũce (ſaid he) you know nothing by me, yet I doe confeſſe that my thoughtes and cogitations be innumerable. Wherefore (ſaid he) I beſeech the o Lorde, not to enter into iudgmẽt with me. According to the ſaying of the Prophet Dauid. Non intres in iuditium cum ſeruo tuo domine. And in an other place. Si iniquitates obſeruaueris domine quis ſuſtinebit. Lord if thou ſtraightly marke our iniquitie who is able to abide thy iudgment. Wherefore I truſt in no good worke that euer I did, but onely in ỹ death of Chriſt, & I doe not doubt but through him to inherite ỹ kingdome of heauen. Take me not here that I ſpeake againſt good workes, for they are to bẽ done, and verely they that doe them not, ſhall neuer come to the kingdome of God. We muſt doe them becauſe they are commaũded vs of God to ſhewe and ſet forth our profeſſion, not to deſerue or merite, for that is onely the death of Chriſt.

I beleeue that there is a holy Church & a cõpany of all them that doe profeſſe Chriſt: & that all that haue ſuffered and confeſſed his name, be Sayntes, and that all they doe laude and prayſe God in heauen, more then I or any mannes tongue can expreſſe, and that alwayes I haue spoken reuerently of Saintes, and prayed them asmuch as scripture willed me to doe: And that our Lady (I say) shee was a vergyn immaculate and vndefiled: and that shee is the most pureste virgin that euer God created, and a vessell of God elected, of whome Jesus Christ should be borne. Then the shrieke somwhat staying him and hastening him to make an ende, he turned him to the people and desired all men to forgeue him: and if he had said any euell at any tyme vnaduisedly, wherby he had offended any man, or geuen any occasion of euell that they would forgeue it him, and amende that euell they toke of him: and to beare witnes that he detested and abhorred all euill opinions and doctrines against the word of God: and that he dyed in the fayth of Jesus Christ, by whom he doubted not but to be saued. And with those wordes he desired them all to pray for him, and then turned him about, and put of his clothes, and made him ready to the fyre, where patientlye he suffered the bitter and cruell Martirdome and death. And the lyke dyd the other his companiõs that suffered with him. Which was in the yeare of our Lorde. 1541.

¶ Grace and peace from God the father of our Sauiour Ieſus Chriſt be with your moſt noble and excellent grace for euer. Amen.

The complaynt of Doctour Barnes made to K. Henry the viij. agaynſt the Lordly Byſhops & Prelates of Englād.

IN moſt hūble wiſe cōplaineth vnto your grace your continuall oratour Robert Barnes, of the intollerable iniuries, wronges, and oppreſſions wherwith certaine Byſhops of your realme vexe and haue vexed, contrary vnto the worde of God, and their owne lawes, and doctors, not onely me, but alſo all true preachers & profeſſors of the ſame, in condemning them for hereticks, as they did me: whiche thing they were not able to proue by the Scripture of God, nor yet ſhall, if it would pleaſe your grace indifferently (according to the office wherein God hath ſet you) to heare the ſmall as well as the great, and to ſuſtaine your powre Dictor agaynſt their violence and ſtrength.

God I take to recorde that I am right ſory to make thys complaint vnto your grace againſt them, if I could coniecture any other meane to cauſe them to redreſſe their intollerable oppreſſions, wherewith they dayly oppreſſe your powre and true ſubiectes, ſo ſore and ſo violently, that without doubt (if your grace ſée not ſhortly a remedy) God muſt nédes puniſhe. For I doe not beléeue that euer hée will ſuffer long ſo great tyranny agaynſt his worde, and ſo violent oppreſſion of true Chriſten mē, as they doe now vſe, and that in the name of Chriſt and hys holy Church. For verely wée doe not read in any memoryes, that our fathers haue left vs, that euer the people were vnder ſo great tyranny, as now your powre ſubiectes hée vnto thē. Now it is ſo farre come, that what ſoeuer hée hée, hye or lowe, powre or riche, wiſe or fooliſhe, that ſpeaketh agaynſt them and their vicious liuing, hée is either made a traytor vnto your grace, or an hereticke agaynſt holy Church, as though they were kings, or Gods. This may your moſt excellent grace, perfectlye know, if you call to remembraunce thoſe good men that they haue had to doe with. Is it not a marueilous court that they haue? wherein there was neuer man accuſed of hereſie, were hée learned or not learned, but they found him gilty? Is not that a marueilous court ỹ neuer hath innocentes? What court within your realme may ſay thys againe? And if any mā ſpeak of Gods law and right conſcience, agaynſt thys damnable tyranny, little will they ſtick to make him an hereticke. And if that will not helpe (to colour and maintaine their oppreſſion) then adde they treaſon againſt your grace, though hée hée neuer ſo true a ſubiect, and all vnlikly to make any reſiſtaunce, or to thinke any euill vnto your grace.

The tyrannous gouernment of the Byſhops of England.

In the Byſhops court no man can be founde Innocent.

Now if it pleaſe your grace, let vs conſider to whyt ende this vncharitable and vnrighteous accuſation of the Byſhops, yea rather of ỹ diuell is inuented.

First, if there hée any men ỹ preach diſpute, or put forth in writing any thing not towching thē, though it hée neuer ſo blaſphemous againſt God, ỹ bloud of Chriſt, and his holy worde, they will not once be moued therew, the examples thereof are ſo playne ỹ it nédeth no proufe. Your grace may ſée what blaſphemous rubrikes they allow againſt ỹ bloud of Chriſt, what ſhamefull & abhominable pardōs they they tollerate & admyt, what diſputations they doe mayntaine to proue ỹ Pope a God & no man, hauing theſe wordes, That the Pope is neyther

What ſoeuer is not agaynſt the Clergye, thoughe the ſame be neuer ſo wicked, yet finde they no fault therewith.

In Vi. Cap. Quo. in Verbo Papa. Diſt. xl. Ca. Si Papa.

God nor man. And whether ỹ Pope can ſinne or not? & that no man can condemne the Pope though hee bring innumerable ſoules to hell by his occaſion. Agayne let vs conſider, that if any mã but once ſpeake agaynſt their cloked ipocriſie, or againſt neuer ſo litle a thing ỹ longeth to them by the which their abhominations ſhoulde be diſcloſed. And we ſhall euydently perceaue that their can no ſcripture, no place, no maiſterſhip, nor excuſe in the worlde ſaue, but hee muſt eyther to open ſham^, or cruell death. So that is playne that their cruelnes ſerueth to no other ende, but as they ſhould ſaye, yf that any man wyll take in hãd to preache the verety, and the true Goſpel of their Maiſter Chriſt purely wherby thoſe winnings ſhould be deminyſhed, wherwith we mayntayne our honour, our dignity, our worldly promotion, our delicious lyuing, our gorgious apparel, our ſũptuous palaces, our lordſhips, breifly all things that we vſe to our paſtime & pleaſure ſhould bee manifeſt to all mẽ, ỹ we not only get theſe thinges by falſe fayned holynes in deceyuing and robbing the people of their goodes, but alſo ỹ dyſpendyng of them to bee abhomynable, and contrary to the ordynance and worde of God. Now rather, then this ſhould come to paſſe, we had leuer gather our ſtrẽgth togither & oppreſſe by vyolẽce as many as wil hold wt this learning, bee^, ee King, Duke, Lorde, Baron, knight, man, womã, or childe. So that by there practiſe it is euident to all that will ſee: that it is they that goe about to make inſurrection to ỹ mayntayning of their worldly pompe, and pride, and not the true preacher, for hee entendeth to mayntayne nothing, but to bring to light the moſt glorious & heauenly worde of God, which by them hath beene darkened and kept vnder, and that with ſuffering perſecution, as the nature of the worde is) and not with perſecuting, for he maketh no ſtryuyng (yf hee bee the true preacher of God) nor fighting for this worlde, but ſuffereth the children of the worlde to enioye theſe worldly thinges. Not withſtanding they are not aſhamed thus falſly to laye it to the preachers charge, and all becauſe they would make your grace to mayntayne their malicioufnes. So that vnder the pretence of treaſon, they myght execute the tyranny of their harts. For who is hee that would bee a traytour, or mayntaine a traytour, agaynſt your moſt excellent and noble grace? I thinke no mã yea & I know ſurely that no man can doe it, without the great diſpleaſure of the eternall God. For S. Paule cõmaundeth ſtraightly vnto all chriſtians, to bee obedient in all thinges, on this manner: Let euery man ſubmyt himſelfe to the auctorite of the higher power. For whoſoeuer reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth ỹ ordinaunce of God, And they that reſiſt, ſhall receiue to them ſelues damnation. Alſo S. Peter confirmeth this ſaying: Submit your ſelues vnto all manner of ordinaunce of mã for ỹ Lords ſake, whether it be vnto the king, as vnto their chiefe head, eyther vnto Dukes as vnto them that are ſent of hym for the punyſhment of euell doers, but to the prayſe of them ỹ doe well. wherfore if euery man had the ſcriptures, (as I would to god they had) to iudge euery mans doctrine, then were it out of queſtion, that the preachers therof, eyther would or could make, or cauſe to bee made any inſurrection againſt there Prince: ſeeyng the ſelfe ſame ſcriptures ſtraytely commaundeth all ſubiectes to bee obedient vnto their Princes, as Paule witneſſeth, ſaying: warne them (ſayth hee) that they ſubmit them ſelues to Princes and to powers, & to obey the officers.

Whoſoeuer ſpeake agaynſt or preache agaynſt any of their abuſes and abhominations, her muſt nedes bee caught and moſte ſhamefully and cruelly hãdled and tormented.

Roma. 13.

1. Pet. 2.

No power nor potentate maye hinder the gayne and profites of the Clergy

The ſcriptures in the common toung teach all obedience to the rulers, and is not the mouer of ſedition.

Now how cã they that preach and exhort all men to thys doctrine cauſe any inſurrection, or diſobedience againſt their prince. But let vs goe further, and conſider the preachers, which onely haue preached the worde of God, and marke if euer they were occaſion of diſobedience or rebellion agaynſt princes.

The Goſpell of Chriſt is not ỹ cauſe of inſurrection.

As ỹ falſe preacher is a perſecuter, ſo the true preacher is a ſufferer.

Firſt call to mind ỹ old Prophets, and with a ſingle eye iudge if any of thẽ eyther priuely or apertly ſturred vp by the people agaynſt their Princes.

No Prophet that euer ſtyrred vp the people agaynſt the Prince.

Lokꝭ

Loke on Christ, if he submitted not hym self to ỹ hye powers: Payde he not tribute for all he was free, and caused Peter likewyse to pay? Suffered not he with all pacience the punishmentes of the princes? yea death most cruell, although they did hym open wrong, and could finde him gilty in no cause.

Christ submitted him selfe to the higher powers.

Loke also of the Apostles (which both taught and wrote the doctrine of Christ, and in their liuing followed hys steppes) and if euer they sturred by any occasion the people agaynst their princes, yea if they them selues obeyed not to all princes, although the most part of them were tyrauntes and infidels.

The Apostles obeyed the Princes.

Consider likewyse those Doctors, which purely and sincerely hath handled the worde of God, either in preaching, or writing, if euer by theyr meanes any insurrection or disobedience rise among the people agaynst their princes: But you shall rather finde, that they haue been ready to lay downe their owne heades, to suffer with all pacience, whatsoeuer tyranny any power would minister vnto them, geuing all people example to doe the same.

All true preachers teach obedience to the Prince.

Now to conclude, if neither the Scriptures, neither the practise of the preachers thereof teacheth, or affyrmeth that ỹ people may disobey their princes, or their ordinaũces, but contrarywyse teacheth all obedience to be done vnto them, it is playne that those Bysshops or rather Papistes, doe falsely accuse those true preachers and subiectes: which thyng woulde appeare in euery mans sight, if by their violence, the word of God were not kept vnder.

Now is this ỹ doctrine that I doe preach and teach, and none other as concerning hys matter, God I take to recorde, and all my bookes & writinges that euer I wrote or made. And onely I allow and fauour them, whiche furthereth thys doctrine of Christ, and of thys I am sure myne aduersaries, or rather aduersaryes to Christes doctrine, must beare me witnesse.

But now as we haue breefly touched the doctrine that the true preachers preach to the people, both by worde, writing, and practise of them: So let vs somewhat touch ỹ doctrine and practise of the Pope, and the Papisticall Bishops, and then let euery man seeke out ỹ heretickes, and traytors to their princes.

First, where the preachers onely of the worde of God, preacheth and teacheth all men to obey their princes and their ordinaunces, according to the wordes of S. Peter. There the Pope and the Papisticall Bishops, contrary vnto the minde and facte of Saint Peter, expoundeth S. Peters wordes saying: that S. Peter meaned not hym selfe, nor his successors, but hys subiectes. And by this false interpretatiõ excludeth him selfe with hys, frõ all obedience to princes. And yet not so content, but craftely drawing all other subiectes from the obedience of their princes, sayth to them also, that ỹ wordes of S. Peter were not spoken as a cõmaundement, but as a counsell.

In 6. Lib. 1. titulo. 33. de maiori obedientia cap. Solite.

The Pope falsifyeth the Scriptures.

And by this crafte, if any prince espye hys falsehode, and of conscience goe about to reproue him, then by his false preachers, and maintainers of hym, he lightly withdraweth ỹ hartes of the commons from their prince, affirming the cõmaundement of God to be but a counsell, and at the least wyse his authoritie to be sufficient to dispence with all ỹ cõmaundementes of God. And thus (the people being ignoraunt, because they lacke ỹ word of God to iudge euery doctrine by) they delude their wittes.

The Papistes teach disobedience to Princes.

And if any man that perceaueth their crafte, of very loue that he hath to God and hys commaundementes, exhorteth the people to iudge the doctrine of those Papistes by the worde of God: Anone they lay heresie vnto hys charge, laying for thẽ there Gods lawe, saying: No man may iudge the Pope, no mã also may geue sentence aboue hys iudgement, but he shall iudge all men vpon earth.

26. q. capit. Quotiens. Item, that the Pope hath power to interprete, declare, and to lay forth the holy scripture after hys own will, and to suffer no man to expound it contrary to hys pleasure.

In 6. de cõc. preb. ca. Ad Apostolatus in Verb. continetur dist. 40. cap. Si Papa. Item, that the Pope is a God vpon earth, ouer all, heauenly, earthly, ghostly, and worldly, and hee is all hys owne, and no man may say to hym, what dost thou?

Item, though the Pope were so euill, that hee lead innumerable mẽ by great heapes to hell, yet shall no man reproue him therefore.

The shamelesse doings of the Papistes.

¶ Now after that they had sytten in the consciences of men, with these & such like abhominable doctrines, and had excluded mẽ frõ ỹ scriptures, as an vnlawfull thing to haue in their mother tonge, lest they should espye their discreatfulnes: Then as mẽ past shame, being both without feare of God and man, spared not to put in executiõ these abhominable doctrines insomuch that they deposed openly Princes, and Emperours, yea and assoyled all their subiectes from the obedience of them, the commaundement of God not regarded. But that my wordes should the better appeare to all men, I shall recite some of their practises, both out of Autẽticke cronycles, and out af their owne lawe.

15. quest. 6. Alius item. ¶ Zacharias did depose the king of Fraunce, not all onely for his iniquitie, but also because he was vnprofitable for so greate a power, and set in his stede Pipinum the Emperours father, and did assoyle all Fraunce of their othe and alleagyaunce that they had made vnto the olde king. The which thing, the holy church of Rome doth oftimes, by hir auctorite. &c.

¶ Now would to God your grace earnestly would loke on this lawe, or at the least, to suffer and gẽue the worde of God into ỹ handes of your subiectes to compare the obedience, that these men both preache and practice, to it. But sayne would I know of them all, who hath deposed any king syth Christes passion, sauig they onelye? who will bee kinges felowes, yea and cõtroulers, sauing they only? Is not this a subtile crafte of Antychrist, to warne other men of heretykes, and of traytours, and in the meane season, while men stand loking for traytours, commeth hee in and playeth the parte of an open traytour sauing onely hee coloureth his name, and calleth himselfe a true Bysshop, & is ready to accuse other mẽ of treasõ, that he might escape hymselfe, but hee is sure, that hee wil neuer accuse none of them that speake against the auctorite of Princes. But if a man doe beginne but to open his mouth, for to declare that hee hath no temporall power, then rageth hee, and cryeth out, treason, treason. But let vs returne to their lawe, & see how they can proue it by Gods word, and how it standeth with true subiection. Is this resonable, that the Pope, and they (being by Gods lawe, but subiectes) shall depose a king? what example haue they of our master Christ or if any of his Apostles? what scripture haue they to helpe them? How dare they bee so bolde, as to depose a king, which is ordayned of God, yea and by his holy worde, hauing no example, nor scripture for them? Be they aboue God & his blessed worde? But they will say, that the king was a wicked man, I aunswere the cronicles geue contrary witnesse, how ỹ he was a very good man, and rycht simple. And because hee was simple, Therefore Pipinus, which had all ỹ rule vnder him, thought him self better worthy to rule then the king, so wrote by a Bysshop, and by his chaplayne vnto the Pope, & desireth hym to gene sentẽce, whether he was better worthy to bee king, that had all the paynes and labours, or hee that had no labour & could doe nothing? Now the Pope to make Pipinum his frend and trusting by that meanes to haue helpe of hym agaynſt the Emperour, with whō hē had then bēne at variance, gaue ſētēce with him, & depoſed the other, and made hym a Yonke: & that this falſhod ſhould not bē perceiued they fained that ỹ king had bēne a Mōke afore, called Samuell. This can I proue by good cronicles. Now let your noble grace conſider, if it were right, not onely to depoſe ſuche a king, but alſo to make him a Mōke. Thus haue they done wᵗ other noble kinges, And no doubt, but that ſame or worſe, will they attempt to doe vnto your grace, if you diſpleaſe them, and at the leaſt they will doe their vttermoſte. Let all the hole rable of thē tell your graces, when a true preacher of Chriſtes Goſpell dyd ſuch a dēde: There is no officer that hath nēde to bē afrayde of Chriſtes Goſpell, nor yet of the preachers thereof. But of theſe pretye traytours, can no man bē to wary. But let vs graunt them, that ỹ kyng was a wicked man. The Scripture commaundeth vs, to obey to wicked Princes, and geueth vs none auctoritye to depoſe them, as their owne gloſe teſtifyeth vpon this text: Subdeti eſtote. Who was more wicked then Herode? & yet S. John ſuffered death vnder hym, who was wyckedder thē Pilate? And yet Chriſt dīd not put hym downe, But was crucified vnder hym. Bycauſe, which of all ỹ Princes were good in the Apoſtles dayes? & yet they depoſed none. So that Gods worde and their owne learnynge, and the practiſe of our Maiſter Chriſte, and his holy Apoſtels, are openly agaynſt them. Moreouer their owne gloſe ſayth, that he was not depoſed, because he was vnſufficient, but becauſe hē was wanton and lecherous with wemen. O my Lordes, if you bee not afrayde of the vengeaūce of God, at the leaſt take a litle ſhame of the worlde vnto you, that haue ſo long tyme with ſo great tyranny defended theſe lawes, that bē ſo openly agaynſt Gods ordinaunce, agaynſt Gods worde, and agaynſt the common ordinaunce and cōſent of all the world. And this haue you done, to the great iniury of noble

Princes, to the intollerable ſubduyng of all noble bloud, to the oppreſſion of their true ſubiectes, to the deſtruction of all common wealthes, and finally to the euerlaſtyng damnation of many a Chriſtened ſoule. Tell me by your fayth, doe you beleue that there is a liuyng God, that is mighty to puniſh his enemies? if you beleue it, ſay vnto me, can you deuiſe for to auoyde hys vengeaunce, which bē ſo openly contrary to hys worde? What aunſwere thinke you to make to hym? Thinke you that hē will ſuffer your worde to be heard, and let his godly word bē deſpiſed? Thinke you, that it will bē ſufficient for you to ſay, that they bē the lawes of holy Churche? Thinke you that hee will bee thus taught of you? Then were it tyme to plucke hym downe, and ſet you vp. Nay my Lordes hē is no childe, nor you ſhall finde it no childes game, thus to trifle and playe with hys holy word, and hys bleſſed ordinaūce, yea and that to the deſpiſing of the maker both of heauen and earth. Say what ye will, ye are not able by no learnyng, to defende this matter, neither afore God, nor yet afore our noble Prince, nor afore any man of learnyng, that will bee true to his prince. For whiche way ſoeuer you turne you, our maſter Chriſt, & all his bleſſed Apoſtles bee agaynſt you, & will openly accuſe you, that you bē cōtrary to their worde, and to theyr dēde. Aunſwere you to them, aunſwere not to me. If I hold my peace, they will ſpeake. Nor it will helpe you but litle, to crye after your old maner, hereſie, hereſie, a traytour, a traytour: for now you crye agaynſt your ſelues, & of thoſe thynges. Chriſt and his Apoſtles doe accuſe you. Doe you thinke it with the ordinaunce of God, that you ſhal depoſe a kyng, bycauſe hē lyeth in aduoultry, or is a lecherous man? If you thinke it a lawfull cauſe, why doe you not preach it openly? why doe you not lay it to kynges charge? Why ſuffer you them to bē kynges, that lyue in aduoultry? Why doe you not put your lawes in executiō? You ſay they bē the lawes of holy church, and therby may you depoſe Princes. But if you wil put them in execution, then were it much better, to bée a Biſhop, or a Prieſt, thẽ to be a kyng, or a Duke. For you may lyue in whoredome, or in any other vngracious lyuyng, yea and that to the deſtruction of many mens ſoules, and yet no mã ſo hardy to reproue you, as your own law doth openly commaunde in theſe wordes. If the Pope doe draw with hym innumerable people on a heape to the deuill of hell, there to be puniſhed for euer, yet ſhal no mortall man preſume to reproue hys ſinnes, for hée muſt iudge all men, and may bée iudged of no man. &c. Lykewiſe haue you an other law in your Decretals, that no lay mã may reproue a Prieſt. &c. How thinke you by theſe lawes, if they bée not of the deuill, tell me what is of the deuil? You wil both reproue, yea and alſo depoſe Princes, but you will neither bée depoſed, nor yet reproued of any mortall man. What thinke you your ſelues? Gods? But and ye will depoſe kynges for fornication, how would you handle kyng Dauid? and kyng Salomon? would you depoſe them becauſe of aduoutry? So doe you more then the Prophet Nathan durſt doe. Briefly will ye bée content that the kyng ſhall depoſe you for fornication, then ſhall we ſhortly bee ryddе of the moſt part of you.

Chriſt and his Apoſtles are the ouerthrowers of the Popes. doctrine.

What authoritie had ỹ Pope & you to ſet Pipinum in that rowme, and not rather to let the kyngdome chooſe thẽ a king? Our maiſter Chriſt ſayd, hys kyngdome was not of this world. But you will bée aboue kinges in this world, & not all onely depoſe them, but alſo ſet in new at your pleaſure. Moreouer by what authoritie did the Pope diſpence with the Realme of their othe? Your law ſayth, that the holy church of Rome is wont ſo to doe. I pray you of whom hath ſhe learned this ſame wont? who hath geuen her this authoritie? Can thée diſcharge vs of our obedience that we owe to our Princes? Is not this of the law of God? Standeth it not alſo with ỹ law of nature? Yea doe not Turkes & infidels faythfully obey to their princes? Is not the Princes power of God? & will you depoſe this power? or can you diſpẽce with this lawe? S. Peter learneth you, ỹ you are more bound to obeye God and his lawe, then man. but you litle regarde S. The Pope will diſpẽce with ỹ othe of obedieace that ſubiectes make to their prince.

23. q. 5. Reg̃ officium.

Our Chronicles make mention, An. 1366. that in the time of Edward the iij. Pope Urban dyd depoſe Perſe King of Spaine, becauſe hée was a vicious liuer, and ſet in hys ſtede one Henry a baſtarde. How thinke you, fareth thys facte with Chriſtes doctrine? which of vs all that preach the Goſpell, hath gone about to doe princes ſuch a villanye? you doe the déede, and laye the blame to vs. Doe you not remember, how that in the dayes of Henry the iiij, a captayne of your Church, called Richard Scroupe, Archbiſhop of Yorke, dyd gather an hoſte of men, & waged battell againſt hys kyng? but God the defender of hys ruler, gaue the king the victorye, which cauſed ỹ traytor to bée behéaded. And then your forefathers with their deuiliſhe craffte, made the people beléeue by their falſe Chronicle, that at euery ſtroke that was gœuẽ at the Biſhops necke, the kyng receaued an other other of God in his neck. And where as the king was afterward stricken with a sickness, you made him and all hys subiectes beleeue ỳ it was Gods punishmẽt, because hee had killed the Bysshop. And not thus content, but you fayned after hys death, that hée dyd miracles. Is not thys toe much, both to bée traytors to your king: and also to faine God to bée displeased with your king, for punishing of treason: finally to make hym a saint, and also that God had done miracles to the defending of hys treason: How is it possible to inuent a more pestilent doctrine then thys is: Here is Gods ruler despised, and hereby is open treason maintained: Thinke you that God will shewe miracles to fortifie these thynges: But no doubt the prouerbe is true, such lippes such lectuse, such saintes such miracles.

Kynge John was cruelly handled of the Clergy.

Here were many thinges to bée sayd, but I will passe it ouer. I am sure you doe remember how obediently you droue King John out of his kingdome: And the very originall of the strife was, because there were iiij. Bishops of England at variaunce with the kinges grace, and because hée required a dymie of the pyed Mõkes of England, for to maintaine hys warre agaynst the Irishe men, but they would géue hym none. Wherfore after ỳ king had sped well in Ireland, hée reuenged him of ỳ Monkes, and toke of euery place a certayne. For ỳ which thing your forefathers, maintainers of your deuilishe doctrine, wrote vnto their God ỳ Pope, and caused him first to excommunicate the kyng, and afterward to interdicte the land, & gaue it to the French kinges sonne, which was maintayned through your fathers, and your naturall king compelled to flée into Wales, and there to tarye till ỳ time that hée was content to make agrément with your holy Idoll the Pope. The cõditions of ỳ agrément were, that hée should first géue xl. M. marke to the iiij. Bysshops, and make restitution to the pyed Monkes agayne, and also should géue to Pandolphus the Popes Legate, a great summe of money. Finally, hée should bée bound to géue yearely to the Pope of Rome a certayne great summe of money, and hée and all hys successors shoulde receaue the land of the Pope, and holde it in fée ferme, and vnto thys your fathers set their hãdes & seales, binding them selues to compell the king to kéepe thys contracte. But yet you were not so content, but afterward you found the meanes that this good kyng was poysoned by a traytorous Monke of Swinested, because he should say, that hée would make a halfepeny loafe worth xx. shillinges if hée liued a yeare. For the whiche word your holy Monke was moued, and went and confessed hym selfe to the Abbot, how that he would poyson the king for thys, and the one deuill, as good as the other, the holy traytor absolued the holy murtherer before the déede was done, and for thys holy murtherer is there founded v. masses for euer.

Kynge John poysoned.

Abhominable hypocrisie.

This is the blessed obedience of your holy Church. How would you cry: how would you paulpe, if wée had handled a gentlemans dogge on this fashion: but you can call vs poore men traytors, and in the meane season, you bring both king & kingdome into seruitude and bondage: What is treason: if this bée no treason: to bring so honourable a kinge, and hys lande into such bondage, and compell hym to receiue his naturall and frée kingdome, of such a byllayne, and lymme of ỳ deuell. What can bée said or thought to defend this matter: you haue not all onely done wrong to the kinge, but vnto the yongest childe ỳ lyeth in the cradell, ỳ which by your meanes is bonde. And thinke it not sufficient, to say that it is not your déede: for first you are the children of these fathers, and you haue alwayes alowed this acte. This hath béene blased, blowen, preached, and cryed out, and all your bookes full of this matter, and many a true mans bloud hath béene shed for speaking agaynst thys. And yet was there neuer none of you, ỳ did euer preach against this damnable facte: but with full consent with full agreement, both in worde, deede, and in writyng, you haue alowed this treaſon. Therfore I take you for the auctors, as well as your forefathers. I would not ſpeake how dampnable it is, to inſtitute maſſes, for a willing traytor, and murtherer: there was neuer no learninge that could allow this. But there is no remedy, he that dyes agaynſt his king, and for the maintayning of your treaſon muſt needes be a ſaynt, if maſſes, bleſſinges, and myracles wil helpe, for all theſe be at your commaundement to geue where you liſt. So that we fore men muſt be accuſed of inſurrection and treaſon, and we muſt bere al the blame, we muſt be driuen out of ỹ realme, we muſt be burned for it, and as God knoweth, there is no people vnder heauen, that more abhorreth, and with earneſter hart reſiſteth, & more diligently doth preach agaynſt diſobedience, then we doe. Yea I dare ſay boldely, let all your bookes be ſerched, that were written this. 500. years, & all they ſhall not declare the auctorite of a prince, and the true obedience towarde hym, as one of our litle bookes ſhall doe, that be condemned by you for hereſy, and all this will not helpe vs. But as for you, you may preach, you may write you may doe, you maye ſweare, againſt your Princes, and alſo aſoyle all other men of their obedience towardes their princes. You may compell princes to be ſubiect to you, and yet are you children of obedience, and good chriſten men. And if ye dye for this doctrine, then is there no remedy but you muſt be ſaintes, and rather then faile, ye ſhall doe myracles. To proue this, I will tell you of a holy ſaynt of yours, of whom your legend and cronicles maketh mencyon, hys name, as ye call him is S. Germayne. So it chaunced ỹ in the tyme of king Wortiger he came into England, into a place where the king lay, & deſired for hym & his company lodging. The king becauſe he kept no cõmõ Inne, would not receiue hym. So he departed very angerly, and went to the kinges Meteherdes houſe, and there deſired lodginge, and meate, and drinke for hym and his companye. The Meteherde was contẽt to lodge him, but he ſayd he had no meate for hym, ſauyng a yong calfe, that ſtode ſuckyng of the damme by the cribbe. The byſhop commaunded the calfe to be ſlayne, and to be dreſſt, & brought afore hym, and he and his company eate it vp, and after commaunded the bones of the calfe to be gathered togither and put in the calues ſkinne agayne, and to be layde in the cribbe by the damme, and by and by ỹ calfe ſtarte vp aliue agayne. The next day the byſhop went to king Wortiger, & reproued him meruellous ſtraightly, becauſe he would not lodge hym, and ſayde that he was vnworthey to be kyng, and therefore depoſed hym, & made his Meteherde kyng in hys ſtede. Of the which Meteherde as ỹ cronicles maketh mencõn came afterward many kings. This is written by one called Petrus de natalibus, the which writeth the liues of all ſaintes I thinke no man will binde me to proue this thing a lye, but yet it muſt be preached, & taught in your church it muſt be writtẽ in holy ſaints liues, & he muſt be a ſaynt that did it, and why? becauſe he depoſed a king, and ſet in a Meteherde. Theſe ſhamefull and abhominable thinges doe you prayſe, and alowe: and in the meane ſeaſon, condemne vs for heretickes, and for traytours. And if we thaynce (moued by the abhominableneſs of your doctrine) to geue you but one euyll worde, then all the world reketh vs vncharitable. But as for my parte, I take God to recorde, afore whome I ſhall be ſaued or damned, that though you haue done me ſhamefull wronge, and intollerable violẽce, yet with your owne perſons am I neuer diſpleaſed nor angry: but agaynſt that horrible deuyll ỹ dwelleth in you, that is the cauſer, & auctor and mayntayner of ſuch abhominable doctrine, that is againſt God and his bleſſed worde, agaynſt hym (I ſay) is my quarell, and agaynſt hym doe I ſtriue, this is the truth, let men take my wordes as they will. Is it not abhominable, hominable, thinke you, so shamfully to depose princes? so to rebuke them so to handle them? to compell them to bee sworne to you? and to holde their lands of you? & to bee your ministers? to the greate dishonour of the liuyng God, and blaspheming of his blessed worde, and to the great dispight of all noble potentates? Ye remember the facte that is declared in your lawe of the noble Emperour Friderike, and that wretch Innocent the fourth: the thing was this. The Pope by ỳ reasõ of certayne complaintes, made by the Emperours enemyes, cited the Emperour to appeare at Rome, and because the Emperour would not appeare, he cursed hym with booke, bell, and candell, and afterwarde deposed hym, and commaunded the electours to chose an other. This is the cause of your lawe briefely. But your text declareth certayne artycles agaynst the Emperour, which bee these. The first that hee had sworne to kepe peace with ỳ church of Rome, which oth hee brake, sayth ỳ Pope. The second that hee had done sacrilege, in takyng 22. Gallyes laden with holy spiritual prelates the which would haue gone to ỳ councell, gathered agaynst the Emperour in Lugdune. The third, because ỳ Empẽrour was accusõd of certaine articles of heresye, the which hee not set out. The fourth, because that hee hath not payed the annuall penepon for the kingdome of Sicill (Sicill the which the Pope calleth the spirituall patrimony of S. Peter) in the space of ix. yeares. For these same thinges dyd hee depose ỳ Emperour and priuate hym of all hys dignity, and alloyleth all hys subiectes of their othe and obedience, and commaundeth euery man not to obey hym, but all men ỳ eyther gaue hym councell, helpe, or fauour, to bee excommunicate & cursed. This is your facte, this is your deede, this is your doctrine, in this learning you bee promoted doctours, & vnto this learnyng you are sworne, these bookes bee read openly in your vnyuersities. Marke now, which of vs twayne bee traytours. Eyther you that doe depose Emperours, & kings for such trifles, yea and also make a lawe thereof, and swere vnto it, and compell all other to swere vnto it: or els we, that speake agaynst it, & say ỳ you doe wronge both to God, to his blessed ordynaunce, and to all noble potentates. For Fyrste, ye ought to bee vnder them, and not they vnder you, & more can you not doe but repreue by Gods worde their vnlawfull factes, but to depose them though they bee infydelles, and heretickes, haue you none authoritye. Ye see howe our master Christ, and all hys blessed Apostles did vse them selues towarde vnbeleeuyng Princes, they neither deposed them, nor yet caused them to bee sworne vnto them. What a matter is it to depose an Emperour, bicause hee layeth handes of a carnall Cardinall? Is not Paule and Peter, as holy as All the College of you? And yet for layeng handes of them was no mã deposed. What and if hee kepe no peace? is that a sufficiẽt cause to depose hym? your owne lawe testifieth otherwise. The holy church of God hath no sworde, but the spirituall sword, with the whiche she doth not kill, but quicken. Lykewise in an other place, blessed S. Ambrose sayth, willyngly will I neuer forsake you, but if I bee cõpelled I may not resist, I may sorow, I may weepe, I may waple. Agaynst weapons, agaynst souldiers, agaynst the Gothans, my teares are my weapons. For such thynges bee the defence of a Priest, otherwise ought I not, nor may not resist. &c. Blessed S. Ambrose durst not depose the Emperour, neither for layeng hand of him, nor yet for heresie, neither for defendyng the liberties of holy Church. But S. Ambrose was a simple sole, & knew not what the liberties of the Church ment, nor yet what the holy spirituall flesshe of Cardinals is worth, and therfore hee could do nothing, but weepe & waple. But & if hee had beene halfe so wise, as I read of a certaine Bishop of Salisbury was, hee had done more in this matter.

There is no such enemy to a true man as is a theefe.

A worthy miracle for the Popes Saintes.

In the tyme of kyng Richard the second, it chaũced a baker of London to to beare horsebread in a basket, and there came a seruaunt of the Bysshop of Salisbury, and toke by violence a loafe frō hym. The baker asked why hē dyd so, & hē made hym none answere, but brake his head, & the poze felow cryed for helpe against this violence, whereby the people were moued in the strete to come out, & kepe the kinges peace, so that the Bysshops seruaunt was compelled to flye into a house: Neuertheles the people moued at this great violence, caused the Constable to come for to take hym, & to bryng him to prison, but anone the Maior and the Shriues came and pacified the multitude, and so departed, & did the Bysshops seruaunt no more hurt. Notwithstandyng the Bysshop of Salisbury, and the Archbysshop of Poze were so moued with the Citie, for makyng an assaute to the Bishops house, that they made such a cōplaynt to the kynges grace, that hē put the Maior, and both the Shriues out, and set in a Knight called Syr Edward, to rule ỹ Citie, and all this was done for a horseloafe. What shall a mā say to the patience of these spiritual men? They doe open violence, they breake the kynges peace, they robbe men of their godes, yea & that in the kynges chamber, and also in the kynges hygh strete, to the great disdayne of iustice, to the rebuke of the kyng, and to the great displeasure of his subiectes, and yet they can packe the matter so, that they bē white sonnes, and other men must suffer for it. I can beleue none otherwise, but that they haue witched the worlde, that men could neither heare nor see. For if this bē not a shamefull fact, I can not tell what is shamefull. It had becommed them a great deale better, to haue punished their seruaūt in example of all other. But that was neuer the wont of the spirituall Churche, and yet they will accuse all other men of insurrection, but I dare say there was no rebellion in this Realme this .C. yeares, if the kyng had displeased them, but they were at the begynnyng of it. We doe read in the time of kyng Henry the second, that hē required of his spirituall Bysshops, that none of them should departe out of ỹ land, but they should finde hym sureties, that they should purchase nothyng, to the hert of the kyngs person, & his Realme. But the spirite of the spirituall fathers would not agree to it, but rather founde the meanes, that Pope Alexander the thyrd (the whiche was an vsurper of the sea of Rome) condemned this article for heresie, and afterward one of the Bishops (but agaynst his will) dyed for this, and such lyke articles mo, and you declared him a flynkyng martyr, but of this holy martyr, I wil speake more an other time. If this bē obedience to Princes, to intende and purpose to betray them, and their Realmes, then are ye the best obedient children that euer were. But if makyng of dissention, debate, and strife, & settyng men togither by the eares, assoylyng men of their othe towarde their Princes, may be cause of insurrection, and treason: then are ye the maister of all maisters, and the best conueyers of all iugglers. What true Englishe hart would thinke, but that the kynges requeste was both godly & lawfull? what learnyng is able to defende the contrary? Standeth it not with our fidelity that we owe toward our Prince? yea with the truth that we owe to our father and mother? to our brethren and sisterne? and to all our coūtrey men? Doth not our othe made to our Prince, bynde vs to it? yet you will not agree to it: but all your bookes must rather bee fulfilled with contrary doctrine, and all men must bē cōdēned for heretickes, that speaketh agaynst thē. Beleeue me, if I were your mortall enemy (as you reken me to bee, and as you haue wel deserued, that I should bē) I could so set out this matter, that all mē should spytte at you: but I will vse my selfe charitable toward you, and if the matter had not bēne so haynously, and so violently hādled of you, I would not haue geuen you one ill worde. But now let no man require of me, that I should (vnto such an abhominable & detestable deuill, as hath brought in this wicked and shamefull learnyng

I am glad of your welfare, and proſperity, your Lordſhip doth rule very graciouſly, and all men prayſeth you. I doubte not but God ſhall proſper you. I ſay, let no man require this of me: for I am, and will be ſo taken, for his mortall enemy, wherſoeuer I doe finde hym, whether he be Lord, or Byſhop, ſauing peraduenture, if I ſpye hym dwelling in a Byſhoppe, I will not handle him with ſo rough wordes, for the weaknes of certayne men, as I would, if I founde him in an other place. It were not vncharitable, if I recited here by name the innocent bloud, that you haue ſhed in my time, for the ſpeaking againſt your vnlawfull doctrine. Alas what fault coulde ye finde in good maiſter Bylney, whō ye haue caſt away ſo violently? I dare ſay, there is not one among you (that knew hym, but muſt commende and prayſe his vertuous lyuinge. And though you had founde him with a litle faulte (the which I thinke, and he were now alyue, ſhould be no faulte) alas would you caſt away ſo cruelly, ſo good a man, and ſo true a man both to God, and to his kyng? But I will returne agayne to my purpoſe, and ſhewe an other example, how you haue learned, and taught to ſet kings and kingdomes togither by ỹ eares, for the maintenance of your dignities and doctrines.

Pope Urban the vj. which was choſe in the yeare of our Lord 1378. by ſedition, & violence of Romaines, which would haue no Cardinall of Fraunce, becauſe they woulde the Pope ſhoulde bee reſident in Rome. This Urban (I ſay) deuiſing how to maintaine his ſecte and part agaynſt his aduerſary, which was called Clement, of whoſe ſide ỹ kyng of Fraũce helde, ſent to the kyng of England, Ed. the 3. (the which as than was not well content with the Frenche kyng) certayne Bulles contaynyng cleane remiſſion a pœna & a culpa, for all them that would wage battayle againſt the kyng of Fraunce, & againſt them that were of Clementes ſide. And becauſe the kyng and his Lords ſhoulde bee the willinger to take battayle on them, hee ſent a commaundement to the Byſhops, to rayſe of the ſpiritualtie a tare, for to pay the ſouldiours wyth. Moreouer becauſe the Duke of Lancaſter had a tytle to the kyngdome of Caſtell, the which helde of Clementes ſide: therefore ỹ Pope graunted, that part of this money ſhould alſo bee deliuered to hym, if hee would wage battayle agaynſt ỹ kyng of Caſtell, promyſing hym alſo, that hee would ſtyre the kyng of Portyngale (which than had alſo bargaunce with the ſayde kyng of Caſtell) to warre agaynſt the ſayd kyng, and to the mayntaynyng of his warre, hee would graũt ỹ kyng of Portyngale a demy of his ſpiritualty thorow all his Realme. How much was gathered in Portyngale, our ſtories maketh no menſion: but in London, and in the dioceſe was gathered a tũne of golde, and in the whole realme of England was gathered xvb.C.M. frankes, whiche makes in Engliſhe money. CC.lxxbj.M. bj.C.lxxbj.l. And becauſe this money was gathered of ỹ ſpiritualitie, and by their diligence therefore the Pope ordayned Henry Spenſer the Byſhop of Norwych to bee the chiefe captayne of this warre: but or euer the Pope coulde bringe this matter to paſſe, he ſent to ỹ king, to his Lordes, and to his Byſhoppes xxx. Bulles: So that at the laſt, thys foreſayd Byſhop of Norwyche was ſent forth with a greate number of men, in the wages of the Church, And the Duke of Lankeſter likewiſe agaynſt the kyng of Caſtell. Their oth was geuen them, to fight agaynſt no man, nor countrey that helde with Pope Urban. And our chronicle ſaith, that Pope Urban would haue made peace betwene the Frẽch king, and ours at the laſt. How thinke you: is not this a prety practiſe, to ſet men together by the eares? and than to make them beleeue, that he woulde make a peace? Fyrſt we muſt haue cleane remiſſion to fight, and thã wee

Is not this a goodly packyng of ſpirituall men? Is not here goodly obedience taught toward Princes? Bée not mens ſoules well fed wyth thys doctrine? Bée not theſe good fathers, that thus watcheth nyght and daye, for ỹ cure and charge, that they haue of mens ſoules? Marke how charitable, and liberall that the holy Fathers bée, in diſtributing of Chriſtes merites? Euery man that fighteth in his cauſe, ſhall haue cleane remiſſion a pena, & a culpa, and muſt nœdes bée the childe of ſaluation. Let Chriſt ſay and doe what hée can, for the holye Church hath ſo determined. And that no man ſhoulde doubt of it, there bée iiii. Bulles graunted, and that vnder leade. And the Church of Rome can not erre, for the ſpirituall lawe ſayth: what the ſea of Rome doth approue, that muſt nœdes bée allowed: and that, that ſhe reproueth muſt bée of no ſtrength. Likewiſe in an other place: So muſt the decrees of the ſea of Rome bée accepted, as though they were ſpoken by the godly bodye of Peter hymſelfe.

Diſt. xix. Si. Ro. & enim Gero & nul li ſuſ. & ca. Sic omnes.

Agaynſt theſe thinges dare I not ſpeake, for I would fayne bee taken for a Chriſten man: but yet I muſte bée ſo bolde to ſpeake one worde, the truth is, the deuill himſelfe hath blowen out theſe preſemptuous bodyes. And yet mẽ muſt ſet both life, & ſoule on theſe wordes. For there bée iiii. Bulles of leade, to confirme the matter. And that is a weightye thynge. But when kyng John, our naturall prince, ſhoulde haue had of the ỹed Põkes, for the defẽce of this realme, but a ſmall ſumme of money. Than was there neuer a Bull to gette, nor yet one Byſhop in Englãd, to preach on his ſide: But now CC. M. pound gathered in one Lent, and a greate deale more, & for the maintainaũce of ỹ pope his holy fleſh. Was not this a marueilous ſubiectiõ? that we ſhould ſuffer our ſelues ſo lightly to bée moued, to geue, not onely ſo greate a ſũme of money? but alſo to ſend forth, in the defence of ſuch a wicked perſon, our naturall brethren, kinſemen, and countreymen? I dare ſay of my conſcience, that in fiue hũdred yeares, there was not ſuch a ſumme of money ſo lightly graunted, (were the cauſe neuer ſo great) vnto our right naturall, and lege Lord. Be I doe beleeue, that if the kynges grace at this ſame day, ſhould deſire of ỹ ſpiritualitye, but halfe of this ſumme, I dare ſay they wold neuer graũt him with their good will, nor there ſhoulde not bée found one Diuine in England, of the holy Popes Churche, that could and would proue by good Diuinitie, that the kyng might take it, and the ſpiritualitie were bounde to geue it.

How ready by the ſpiritualtie is is to helpe the Pope.

Alas, what ſhall I ſay? beleeue me, I doe want wordes, to ỹ ſettyng out of this matter: where is naturall affectiõ? where is naturall loue? where is fidelitie? where is truth of hart, that men ought to haue, and to beare toward their naturall Prince? toward their native countrey? toward their fathers and mothers? toward their wiues and childrẽ? yea toward their liues? God of his infinite goodneſſe hath geuen vs a noble Prince, to the maintaynyng and defence of all theſe thynges, and toward hym we haue litle or none affection. But vnto this idole of Rome, are we ready to geue both body, and goodes, and the more we gene, the better we are content. Was not this a merueilous pouery, ſhyng to this Realme? to ſende out ſo many thouſandes? and to receiue nothyng agayne? but deceitfull Bulles? and ſheepes ſkynnes? and a litle peece of leade? yea and worſt of all, to make men beleeue, that their ſaluation dyd hange on it? I dare ſay boldly, that if we poore men (which bée now condẽned for heretickes, and alſo for traytours againſt our kyng) had not bẽn, the Realme of England had not ſtãd in ſo good a condition as it is, for men had bẽne bounde ſtill in their conſcience, for to obey this wretched idole. ſtructed their conſcience? Let all the Liberaries bē ſought in Englād, and there ſhall not be one booke writtē in. iiij. C. yeares, and (admitted by the Church of Rome, and by our ſpiritualtie) founde, that doth teach this obedience, and fidelitie toward Princes, and deliuereth our Realme, from the bondage of this wicked Sathan the pope, or els that is able to ſatiſfie, and to quiete any mans conſcience within this Realme: and yet I dare ſay, hē is not in Englād, that cā reproue our learnyng, by the doctrine of our maſter Chriſt, or els of his holy Apoſtles. Yea mē haue ſtudyed, and deuiſed how they might bryng our mighty Prince, and his noble Realme, vnder ỹ fēte of this deuill. There could bē nothyng handled ſo ſecretly within this Realme, but if it were, either pleaſaunt, or profitable to the Pope to know, then were all the Byſhops in England ſworne, to reueiate that matter to him. This may bē wel proued, by their ſhamefull, & trayterous oth, that they (contrary to Gods law, mans law, and order of nature) haue made to this falſe man, the Pope. The wordes of their othe, written in their owne law, be theſe.

In. Si. lib. ij. tit. de iure iurando c. Ego Epiſcopus.

The othe of the Byſhops made to the pope.

I Byſhop. N. frō this houre forth, ſhalbe faithfull to S. Peter, to the holy Church of Rome, and to my Lord the Pope, to his ſucceſſours, lawfully entryng into the Popedome. I ſhall not conſent in counſell, nor in dēde, that hē ſhoulde loſe either lyfe, or lymme, or that hē ſhould bē taken in any euill trap. His councell, that ſhall bē ſhewed vnto me, either by hym ſelfe, or els by his letters, or by his Legates, I ſhall open to no man, to hys hurt, or damage. I ſhall helpe to defend & maintaine the Papacie of the Church of Rome, the rules of the holy fathers (ſauyng myne order) agaynſt all men liuyng. I ſhall come to the Councell, when ſoeuer I bē called, onles I bē lawfully let. The Popes Legate I ſhall honorablye entreate, both goyng, and commyng, & in his neceſſities, I ſhall helpe him. I ſhall viſite yearely, either by myne owne proper perſon, or els by ſome ſure meſſenger, the ſea of Rome, onles I bē diſpenſed with. So helpe me God, and this holy Euangeliſt.

There hath bēne wonderous packing vſed, and hath coſt many a thouſand mens liues, ere that the ſpiritualitie brought it to paſſe, that all they ſhould bē ſworne to the Pope, & owe none obedience to any man, but to him onely. This matter hath bēne wonderous craftely conueyed, for at the beginnyng the Biſhops were not ſworne ſo ſtraitely vnto the Pope, as now. For I doe read in the tyme of Gregory the thyrd, which was in the yeare of our Lord. vij. C. lix. how their othe was no more, but to ſweare for to kēpe the fayth of holy Church, and to abide in the vnity of the ſame, and not to conſent for any mans pleaſure to the contrary, to promiſe alſo to ſēke the profites of the Church of Rome. And if any Byſhops did lyue agaynſt the olde ſtatutes of holy fathers, with him they ſhould haue no conuerſation, but rather forbidde it, if they coulde, or els trewly to ſhewe the Pope of it. This othe cōtinued a great many of yeares, tyll that a mortall hatred ſprang betwene the Emperour, and the Pope, for confirming of Byſhops, than as many Byſhops as were confirmed of the Pope, did ſweare the othe, that I haue firſt written. For this othe, that Gregory maketh mention of, was not ſufficient: becauſe that by it the Byſhops were not bounde to betray their Princes, nor to reueiate their counſelles to the Pope. The which thing ỹ pope muſt nēdes know, or els hee coulde not bring to paſſe his purpoſe, that is to ſay, he coulde not bē Lord ouer the worlde, and cauſe Emperours, and kynges, to fetch their confirmation of him, and to knēle downe, and kiſſe his fēte. The which when hē had brought to paſſe, hē proceēded farther, adding more thinges in the Byſhops othe, to the maintayning of his worldly honour and dignitie, as it ſhall afterward appeare. But firſt wē wyll examine this othe, how it ſtandeth with Gods worde, and with the true obedience to our prince. I pray you tell me out of what Scripture, or els out of what example of our mayſter Chriſt & his holy Apoſtles, you haue take this doctrine, to learne to ſwere to Saint Peter: or els to the Church of Rome: or els to the Pope? What nede you to ſweare to Saint Peter? ye ca neither doe hym good by your fidelitie, nor yet hurt by your falſhode. Othes be taken, that he that the othe is made vnto, might be ſure of the true helpe, and ſuccour of hym that ſweareth, agaynſt all men that could hurte hym.

Iſidorus in Decretis Gregorij minorisc. In nomine.

The Pope chaungeth the biſhops oth, as oftē as it maketh for his profite.

Firſte kynges hee brought ỹ violence vnder the Popes foote, & then Byſhops hee ſworne to maintaine it.

Now Saint Peter hath none enymies, and though he had, yet is not he afeарde of them, neyther can you helpe hym, nor deliuer hym, if he had nede. But the verytie is, that good S. Peter muſt here ſtand in the fore frunt, to make men afrayde with, and to make men beleue that you are his frendes: but God knoweth, that you neyther fauour his perſon, learnyng nor lyuyng. For if S. Peters perſon were here with his nette on his necke, I thinke you would bid hym walke beggar, if you called him not heretik. Why doe you not ſweare to folowe hys lyuing? and to preach and teach his doctrine? but that maketh nothing for your purpoſe. Therefore you ſwerre all onely to S. Peters name. But wherein wyll you be faythfull to S. Peter? to mayntane his worldly honours? dignities? or riches? you know well, he ſayth, that he hath forſaken all theſe thinges for Chriſtes ſake: & And for theſe thinges, I thinke he will require none othe of you. Wherfore if you will nedes be faythfull, & ſworne vnto S. Peter, it muſte be in mayntayning, and in defending ſpirituall thynges, as preaching of Chriſtes Goſpell purely, and ſincerely, mynyſtring truelye after the inſtitution of our maſter Chriſt, ỹ bleſſed ſacramentes of holy church, and in vertuous lyuyng, geuing example to the holy church of Chriſte. But now if this be your othe, truely you are periured, & worthy to weare papers, for you doe reken your ſelues to hye, and to honorable, to goe aboute ſuch ſimple thinges, as theſe be. And therfore you haue applyed your ſelues, to other greater matters, as to chriſtening of belles, to halowing of churches, to bleſſing of candels, to conſecrating of holy oyle, to halowing of chaleſtes, veſtementes, and aulters, and to geuing 40. dayes of pardon, to them that receiueth your bleſſings in the ſtreate, and to ſome that diſpyte holy ſaintes, & ſuch like greate matters, which partayneth nothing to your othe. wherefore I doe reken, ỹ after the true forme of your othe, we haue but few byſhops, but ỹ he periured or abiured (call it as you will) both againſt God, agaynſt S. Peter, and againſt their prince. It folowеth And to the holy church of Rome. what nedeth this? what good can you doe to ỹ holy church of Rome. Or what profyte is it to her, that you ſweare? where is any requeſt of her in holy ſcripture that you ſhoulde ſweare? Thinke you that ſhe will compell you by your othe to be true to her? then muſt ſhee nedes ſue you of periurie if you breake your othe. But marke how ỹ church of Rome is ſet in your othe. as the better perſon, before the Pope. wherefore it muſt nedes folowe, that ỹ Pope is vnder ỹ church, and leſſe then the church, and no hed of the church, except you will make hym a third perſon, that neither pertayneth to S. Peter nor yet to holy Churche: but is a thyng of him ſelfe, and as your law ſayth: neither God, nor man, but middle betweene them both, that is as much to ſay, after my learnyng, as the deuill hym ſelfe.

The holy workes of Byſhops.

But what meaneth it, that you ſweare onely to the holy Churche of Rome? will you be traytours to the holy Church of Conſtãtinople? or els to the holy Churche of England? Or doe you thinke other Churches not holy? tell vs what you meane? for it ſeemeth a marueilous thyng, and alſo a ſpeciall thyng, that you make ſuch an othe all onely to the holy Church of Rome, naming none other church. Why are you not rather ſworne to kepe? and to feede? to norith? and to be true to your owne Church? of the

which you haue taken cure & charge? 1.Pe..5.
As S. Peter commaundeth you: See that you fede Christes flocke, which is among you. For of these you haue taken your name, lyuyng, and dignitie. You are called Bysshop of Winchester, of London, and of Lyncolne,
And of these you are fed, but these be forgotten in your othe, and these you litle regarde, but to mayntayne the holy Churche of Rome, that geueth you neuer a peny, but robbeth all other Churches, you must be straitly sworne. And why? Antichrist must haue a cloke for his treason. For now if he be a traytour, he is to be excused, why? for he is sworne to it. But shall I tell you what I doe take out of it? The truth is, that you sweare, to betray, to kil, and slay all members of all other Churches, sauyng those, that liueth after the whoredome, and mischief, that is vsed in Rome. For if you should bee bounde to seke out in Rome, Christened men, and those that doth liue after the lawyng of holy church, I think you should finde but few. Yea and vnto those, you would thinke scorne to be sworne, Ergo, it must folow, that you are sworne to the worst sort of Rome, and that your holy Churche of Rome is taken for such a sorte, as liueth agaynst God, a-gaynst his blessed worde, agaynst the lawyng of holy Apostles, agaynst the cōditiōs of our holy mother ỹ church.
I could say, in all whoredome, in all oppression, in all Sodomytrie, in all murther, in all pōpe, & pride, summa summarum, in all maner of mischief, what toung cā tell, or hart can thinke.
But I will not say so, for men would reken me vncharitable, and to behe-ment. Neuertheles all the worlde knoweth, that you doe recken your selfe, by the vertue of your oth, boūde to no men: but vnto such, as in very deede, liueth after this vngracious ma ner: and yet will you be faithfull, and true vnto them agaynst all men. Yea
I dare say, if that their conscience had not cōdemned them of such mischief, they would neuer haue desired this assistence of you, or els haue thought it necessary to haue required an othe of you. But the veritie is, they be naught, and haue neede of mayntai-ners in their mischief. And also suspect you, not to be true, except you made an othe to them, yea and scarsly then, onles that you in very deede, at tyme and place conuenient, doe betray your Princes, for that is ỹ cause of your othe, and other profite hath not the kyng by it. I will be reported by all practise that euer came out of your othe.

Bysshop Fisher otherwise called B. of Rochester answered that hee was sworn to ỹ Pope, and therefore hee would not sweare to ỹ kinges supremacye.

A true description of the leudnes of the Bysshops of Rome.

It foloweth, And to my Lord the Pope. I would gladly learne, where the Pope hath got the dignitie of a Lord. This thyng is litle regarded of my Lordes the Bysshops, to byyng in such a worldly dignitie, yea they will say, it is but a trifle, and mocke men for speaking agaynst it. But the truth is, if they durst as much now, as in times past, they would burne for this litle trifle, the best Lord in England. For I dare say, it hath cost many a mans lyfe, or euer they brought the Pope to Lordshyp. Blessed S. Peter (whose successour the Pope boasteth him selfe to be) knew nothing of this Lordshyp, for he sayth vnto hys fe-lowes, they shall not exercise no Lord-shyp ouer the congregation. And like-wise S. Paule durst not take vppon him to commaunde, as a Lord, collec-tions to be made for powre men, but mekely desires thē without any Lord-shyp. Also in an other place: Let no man iudge vs, but as the Ministers of Christ. Blessed S. Paule reketh him selfe but a minister, & a seruaunt: And yet ỹ day hath bene, that he was so good, as my Lord the Pope. Our maister Christ, that came to teach both Peter, and Paule, learned his Disci-ples not to vse thē selues as Lordes, but as seruauntes. And marke the oc casion that he had.

Math.20.

There be two newe Disciples brought vnto him, and the old (beyng not yet perfite) thought scorne, that these two should sit aboue all other, ỹ one of the right hand, and the other of the left hād: But our maister Christ reproueth this proude stomacke of theirs, very straitely, saying: How ỹ Princes & rulers of the infidels hath power ouer their ſubiectes, but ſo ſhal not ye. For hée that will bée greateſt amõg you, ſhal bée leaſt. Here our maſter Chriſt learneth none hypocriſie, that they ſhold bée called leſt in name, and bée greateſt in very déede: but hée will that this doctrine ſhalbée expreſſed in their déedes. My Lord the pope, calleth him ſelfe in wordes, the ſeruaunt of all ſeruauntes: but in very déede hée wil bée Lord ouer all Lords. Yea and my Lordes Byſhops, will bée ſworne to hym, as vnto a Lord, & they wil reken them ſelues periured, if they burne not all them, that will take the Pope but for a ſeruaunt. Is not this a marueilous hypocriſie? to bée called ſeruaunt of all ſeruauntes? and yet deſire for to bée taken as Lord and Kyng ouer all Kynges? Yea and vnto this bée our Byſhops ſworne, becauſe they wil bée obedient to their Princes. But and their conſciences were rypped, you ſhould finde no mã ſit there as a Kyng, but my loſell the Pope. And we poore men muſt bée cõdemned, for repꝛouyng of this. And why? Verely becauſe my Lords haue ſworne to hym, agaynſt their Prince, and all his true ſubiectes.

Seruus ſeruorum.

The Pope is a monſtrous hypocrite.

But howe ſtandeth it with your othe toward your Prince, for to bée ſworne to the Pope? which is not all onely an other Lorde: but alſo contrary, yea and as the worlde now is the greateſt mortall ennemy, that our Prince hath. For I dare ſay, that if this wretched Clemẽt could drowne our noble Prince with one worde, it ſhoulde not bée longe vndone, ſine Clementia. The common ſayinge went in Hamburgh, that this captyfe hath not al onely excõmunicated our noble prince, but alſo geuen away the kingdome to an other. And this facte muſt you defende, for you are ſworne to ẏ Pope. Yea I dare ſay, if you had conuenient occaſion, you would declare your fidelitie. I doe Iudge after your factes, that you haue done to kinges in tymes paſt, whenſoeuer that you had power & might to bring to paſſe ẏ which you haue conceiued agaynſt your Prince. If you thinke I iudge a myſſe, or els doe you wrong, let me bée put to my proofe, and you ſhall ſée, what an heape of holy factes ẏ I will bring you out of your own chronicles and bookes, for the which you will bée lauded, and prayſed hyely, that you haue ſo faythfully ſtucke vnto this dãnable Idole of Rome. Yea I dare ſay it had bëne hereſie within this two yeares, to haue written, or ſayd thus much agaynſt the lymme of the deuyll on our princes ſide. This all ẏ worlde can teſtefye, wherefore I thinke you will put me to no tryall. But to your othe. Howe doth it ſtand with your allegyance toward your prince, to bee ſworne to the Pope? your owne lawe ſayth, that a lege man can make none othe of fydelytye, to none other man, but to his owne kinge.

What good minde Clement the Pope bare vnto kyng Henry the viij.

In. 6. lib. 2. de ſententer reiudicata. ca. paſtoralis in verbo homagij.

Moreouer you doe remẽber your othe made vnto your prince, wherein you doe renounce all clauſes, wordes and ſentences, made vnto the Pope, which may bée hurtfull or preiudiciall to his highnes. Now agreeth theſe ẏ othes? you may ſet them togither as well as you cã: but I know no waies to auoyde your periury. For the very truth is, that the kinges grace, and his councell, conſidering your othe made to the Pope, to bée preiudiciall to his regall power, cauſeth you, in your othe afterwarde made vnto him to reuoke thoſe thinges that you haue afore ſworne to ẏ Pope, & to declare that his grace & his counſell did reckon your othe made to ẏ pope to bée a gainſt him, therfore he maketh you to reuoke it by name, naming the ſame othe, & alſo the ſame Pope. So that you may clearely perceiue, how that our prince doth ſuſpect you, for your othe making. And in very déede, the popes meaning & yours was none other: but for to betray ẏ king and his realme. And therfore as ſone as there was any variance, betweene ẏ king & ẏ pope, thẽ were you firſt of all, aſſoyled of your allegyance dew vnto our king, and that abſolucion, was blaſen and blowen, preached, and taught, throughout all the worlde, & all dores and poſtes muſt bée decked with papers and bulles, for your diſcharge. But for to helpe your Prince, you could neuer bée diſcharged of your he-retical, & trayterous othe made vnto the Pope agaynst your Prince. Here neither Peter nor Paule can helpe, nor there is no key ỳ can open that locke.

O Lord God how haue we beene blynded thus trayterously to handle our naturall Prince? But how this Caterpiller is come to bee a Lorde, and hath brought kinges vnder hys feete, I will speake (God willyng) after this in a peculiar treatyse. It followeth, and to his successours, lawfully and regularly entryng in. After what lawe? I reade in your owne bookes of law, after which me thinketh there bee very few bishops made wherein I finde among all other good thinges, that hee shoulde bee chaste of lyuyng, meeke, gentle to speake to, mercyful, wel learned in ỳ new & olde testamẽt, and ỳ we shoulde not forbyd maryage, nor should blame the eating of flesshe, and should also beleeue, that all maner of synnes, as well actuall, as original, bee clerely forgeuẽ in baptysme. How many of these thinges the Popes holines is indewed with all, and how many hee alloweth, his owne bookes, and deedes wil testifie. Wherfore I recken that your othe doth not meane this lawe, nor yet ỳ lawe that blessed S. Paule writeth of. For then I recken, that by the vertue of your othe, you haue not beene bound to one Pope this 400. yeares, so that it must folowe, that you haue other lawes, then blessed S. Paule speaketh of, or the councell of Charthaginence to chose your Pope by: the which as farre as men can recken, by common experience, and practice, bee these, Di. 23. Qui episcopus ex consilio. 4. Carthā.

1. Timo. 3. Tit. 1.

Who is lawfull to be Pope.

In primis, Hee that shall bee able to bee Pope, must bee a bẽgeable tyraũt, neuer keepeing peace, but all wayes warryng for the defence (as yee call it) of S. Peters patrimonye. To suffer no Prince to dwell in rest by hym but to snatch his possessions, to the vnholy Church of Rome. To set princes together by the eares, tyll they bee both weary, and then to take ỳ matter in his hande, and neuer to make an ende, tyll both partyes hath geuen some possessiõs to his holy fatherhed: to assoyle the soules, that hath bene slayne through his packyng. And hee that dare melke boldelye, and with least shame, depose Princes, without a cause, hee is best able to bee pope. Ye that can by any trayne, craft, or subtyltye, bring vnder hym any bysshop, or any spirituall person, or inuent any newe clausein their othe, hee is to bee alowed afore other. Moreouer, hee ỳ keepeth fewest women, and hath most of them, that you wote of, hee is holyest, & apte to bee head of your church. And hee ỳ can most tyrannously burne mẽ for preaching of ỳ Gospel, and hee hym selfe to take no labours therein. Item to burne priestes ỳ mary wiues and hee hym selfe, to liue in all myscheefe, & whoredome: yea in such abhominablenes, as no man may with honestye speake (you knowe what I meane) this man I say, hath a good testimony, afore his spiritualty, that hee is a lawfull man to that office.

The popes wickednes described at large.

Furthermore, hee that is a whores sonne, as our holy father is now, and can finde the meanes, that .12. men will forswere them selfe, that hee is lawfully borne, as this holy Clement dyd. This is a fitte father, for such children. Finally, hee ỳ can geue most mony, and bye ỳ greatest part of cardinales of hys syde, hee is best worthy to bee called Pope, & to sit on Peters stole. For it can not bee vnknowen to you, how ỳ Thomas Woulcy, an holy piller of your Church, woulde haue beene Pope, whẽ this Clement was chosen, and did offer for it a resonable peny: But Clement dasshed hym out of consayte with .20000. li. more then hee offered, and so hee was iudged best worthy, and entered in lawfully, and regularly, and vnto him our bishops bee sworne, and obedient. And why because they will haue such a head, as they bee members: for how coulde els their kingdome stand? For if one should bee chosen, after the rule of blessed S. Paule, or els after the lyuynge of these newe heretykes, which bee simple and poore, and care not for no dignitye, nor will neuer sweare, nor fyght, and would rather mary a wyfe of their owne, then take other mens, and alwayes ſtudying, & preaching Gods worde, ſeking onely the honour of God, and the profyt of his neighbour, and will bee ſubiect and obedient in all thinges (deſiring none exception) to his prince. This man I ſay, ſhoulde bee vnlawfull, & not eligible, for hee were able to deſtroy ỹ whole kingdome of ỹ papiſtes and not worthy to receiue an othe of my Lordes ỹ byſhops, which will not gladly be periured for ſuch a más ſake. For he were able to deſtroy ỹ whole church of Rome, vnto the which our Byſhops haue bene before ſworne. It folowеth in your othe, I ſhall not conſent in counſell or in deede, that they ſhoulde loſe eyther lyfe or membеr, or that they ſhoulde bee taken or trapped, by any euill meane. What nede you to ſweare thus vnto the Pope? doth not the order of charitie binde you thus to vſe your ſelfe towarde all men? that is to ſay, neither to hurt them, nor to harme them, neither to intrappe them, nor betraye them. But all men muſt bee betrayde and with crafte and ſubtiltie vndone, for the mayntenaunce of thys one wretched perſon. The truth is, that neuer man ſpake againſt this popet, but you deſtroyde him, and betrayde him. But this popet hath blaſpheмed and betrayde all poteſtates, and yet you were neuer againſt hym. And why? becauſe you be ſworne to hym. And you will kepe your othe, bee it right or wrong.

Charitie byndeth all men to thinke well one of another.

But in your laſt othe, which hath bene newly made, is added thys clauſe. That no man ſhould lay violent handes vpon them in any wyſe, or any wrong ſhoulde bee done vnto them by any maner of colour. This part is newly brought in, ſince the fleſhe of the Pope hath bene ſo holy, that no man might touch it but harlottes. Chriſten men muſt patiently ſuffer iniuries and wrõges, but your head will forſweare that point, and mayntaine himſelfe through your power againſt all men. How neare that this is the Apoſtles liuing, all Chriſten men can well iudge. It folowеth in your othe. Their counſell that ſhal bee ſhewed vnto mee, either by theyr letters, or by their meſſengers, I ſhal open to no man to their hurte, or damage. Let Princes beware, whan the pope ſendeth coũſelles vnto you, for the meaning is to betraye them. For all the worlde knoweth that the pope and you doth litle regarde, what the beggars of the worlde doth handle: But what Emperours, kyngs, and Dukes doth handle, that muſt you let, and deſtroye. For that is the Popes counſell. And you may ſhewe it to no man, No not to your kyng. And why? becauſe you are ſworne to the pope.

The fleſhe of the pope is now much more holy, then in tyme paſt it hath beene.

But what ſay you to your othe made vnto your prince? wherein you ſweare, that you ſhall be faithfull and true, and beare vnto him aboue all creatures, loue, and fauour, to lyue and to dye with hym, and to open vnto him all maner of counſelles, that may bee hurtful vnto his grace. Now is it well knowne, that the pope hath done and daily doth handle ſuch coũſelles, as bee againſt our princes honour, and conſeruation. And yet you may neyther tell it to your prince, nor let it. And why? becauſe you be ſworn to the pope, and forſworne to your prince. Tell me whon any thyng was opened vnto our prince, by you, that the pope had handeled in counſell agaynſt our prince. Of this thing I will take recorde of his nobly grace, whether I ſay true or falſe. Alſo yet muſt I bee accuſed of treaſon. And why? becauſe you are ſworne to the pope, And I am true to the kyng. It folowеth. I ſhall helpe to defend and mayntaine the papiſtry of Rome, againſt all men, ſauing myne order. And in your new othe, now in oure dayes made, is added. The regalles of Saint Peter. What and in all mé bee contained your prince? you muſt nedes defend him. And why? becauſe ye bee ſworne to the pope, & forſworn to your prince. For your othe to your prince, is to defend him with all your wit & reaſon againſt all men. Now muſt you forſake one of them, And your practiſe hath bene alwayes to forſake your prince, and ſticke to the pope.

The Pope doth practiſe counſailes againſt the honourable ſtate of Princes.

pope. For of your othe made to your prince, you haue bene oftentimes assoiled. And as your lawe sayth, the Church of Rome is wont so do doe. But of your othe made vnto ỹ pope, there is no absolution, neither in heauen nor earth. Neither was it euer redde, heard, nor sene, that there could bee any dispensation for it.

xv. quest. vi. c. Alius.

Here is specially to bee noted the practise of Prelates. For such are the doynges of the holy father of Rome that for the rebellion agaynste princes, hee woulde geue absolution but for matter agaynst his popedome, there was neuer absolutiō might bee obteyned.

Let mée bee reported by all ỹ bookes that euer were written, and by all the bulles that euer were graunted, and by all the experience that euer was vsed. And if I bée found false, let mée bee blamed. And yet I am sure many mē will recken, that I speake vncharitably. But I would faine learne of all ỹ charitable mē in England, with what other English wordes I coulde declare this intollerable or subtile treason, thus long & shamefully vsed against my prince, which is necessary to bee knowne. And I am compelled by violēce to declare both my confession and learning in this cause. For mē hath not bene ashamed to report, that I would (which am but a wretch and poore simple worme, and not hable to kill a Catte, though I woulde doe my vttermost) to make insurrection against my noble and mighty prince, whom (as God knoweth) I doe both honour, worship, loue, and fauour, to the vttermost power of my hart, and am not satisfied, because it is no more. This I speake afore God. Let him bee mercifull vnto mée as it is true. And if I were not so true in mine hart, it were not possible for mée so earnestly to write agaynst thē, whome I doe recken to handle vnfaythfully, and vntruely wyth theyr prince, yea against both Gods lawe, and mans lawe. The very truth is, I can suffer, (through Gods grace) all maner of wronges, iniuries, and sclaunders: but to bee called an hereticke agaynst God, or a traytour against my prince, he lieth not, but I will say, hee lieth. And wil bee able so to proue him, if I may bee reported by my workes or deedes, by my conuersation or liuing, or by any thinge that euer I did.

But vnto my purpose: the Byshoppes doth sweare one othe to the pope, and an other contrary to their prince. And yet they will bee take for good and faithfull children. And I poore man must bee condemned, and all my workes for heresy, and no mā to reade them vnder the payne of treason. And why? because I write against their periurie towarde their prince. But how commeth S. Peter by these regalles, that you are sworne to defende? seing that he was neuer no kyng, but a fisher? All the worlde knoweth, that regalia belongeth to kinges, and to like power of kynges. Why are you not rather sworne to defend Peters net, and his fisherie? the which thinges hee both had and vsed, & neuer regalles. But these thinges will not maintayne the holy Church of Rome, and therefore ye sweare not to maintayne them. But what meane you by that sentence: Sauing mine order? why say you not, sauing my kinges pleasure? Your glose sayth, you may not defend these thinges with weapons. But oh Lord God, what vnshamefulnesse is this? thus to delude with wordes all the whole worlde? Men knoweth, that when the Pope hath nede of your helpe, there is no men sonerin armes then you are, if you call armes harneys, bylles, & glaues, swordes, and gunnes, and such other thyngs. Doe you not remember how sone the Byshop of Norwiche, Henry Spenser, was in armes to defende pope Vrbane? It were but foly to recite examples.

In the yeare of our Lord. 1164. was there a controuersie betwéen the kynges grace, & the Byshops of England, for certaine prerogatiues belōgyng to the kyng. Wherfore the king required an othe, and a confirmation of the Byshops, as concernyng those Articles and prerogatiues. But answere was made of the Bishops, that those prerogatiues, cum omnibus praeuitatibus in regio scripto contentis, were of none effect, nor strength, because they did forbyd to appele to the Court of Rome, onles the king gaue licence. And because that no Byshop might

And bicauſe the kyng would heare matters, as cõcernyng tythes & other ſpirituall cauſes. And bicauſe that it was agaynſt the ſea of Rome, and the dignitie of the ſame, that a Byſhop ſhould bée conuẽted afore ỹ kyng. Briefly, they would not bée vnder the kyng, but this addition ſhould bée ſet vnto it, Saluo honore Dei, & Eccleſie Romane, & ordine noſtro, that is, we will bée vnder your grace, ſauyng the honour of God, of the Churche of Rome, and of our order. The cauſe why they dyd except theſe thynges, was this, as they them ſelues graunt: For kynges receiued their authorities, and power of the church, but the Church receiueth her authoritie of Chriſt onely, wherefore they conclude, that the kyng can not commaunde ouer the Byſhops, nor abſolue any of them, nor to iudge of tythes, nor of Churches, neither yet to forbyd Byſhoppes, the handlyng of any ſpirituall cauſe.

The Prelates can not abyde to vſe obedience to their prince.

We haue beene leade by blynde guydes.

Is not here a marueilous blyndneſſe and obſtinacie agaynſte theyr Prince? They will make it agaynſt Gods honour, to obey their kyng, and are not aſhamed to ſay in the kynges face, that his power is of them. But I pray you whether was kynges before Byſhops? or Byſhops before kynges? You ſhal finde, that God had long admitted kynges, or any Biſhop (as you take hym) was thought of. Doth not the holy ghoſt commaũde, that we ſhould honour kynges? Alſo in an other place. Let all men bée vnder the high powers, for the power is of God, and hée that reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth Gods ordinaunce. Here bleſſed S. Paule ſayth, that kynges power is of God, & not of Byſhops. Furthermore, what reaſon is it to defende the Popes prerogatiue agaynſt your Princes? Is not your Prince nearer, and more naturall vnto you, then this wretch the Pope? But here is a thyng, ỹ maketh me to marueile. When you ſweare to the Pope (Sauyng your order.) Is as much to ſay, as you ſhall not vſe no weapons: but els you ſhall bée ready and obedient in all thynges. But when you ſhall ſweare to your kyng, then (Sauyng your order) is as much to ſay, as you haue authoritie to confirme kynges, and to bée their felowes, and neither to bée obedient vnto them, nor yet to aunſwere to any Juſtice before them, but clearely to bée exempted, and they not to medle with you, excepte they will geue you ſome worldly promotion. If I would vſe my ſelfe as vnchatarıblye agaynſt you, as you haue handled me, doubtles I could make ſome thyng of this, that ſhold diſpleaſe you. How would you cry? and how would you handle me poore wretch, if you had halfe ſo much agaynſt me, as this is? But I will let you paſſe, God hath preſerued mée hitherto of his infinite mercy agaynſt your inſaciable malice, and no doubt but hée ſhall doe the ſame ſtill. I will returne to your othe.

Sauyng of order hath two ſignifications.

The kings power is immediatly of God.

He that defendeth the Pope agaynſt hys ſoueraigne Lorde or Lady is a vnnaturall ſubiect.

It folowyth. I ſhall come to the Synode when I am called, vnles I ſhall bée lawfully let. But why doe you not ſweare to compell the Pope to call a Councell? ſeyng that it hath béene ſo often, and ſo inſtantly required of him, by many and noble Princes of Chriſtendome, yea, ſeyng that all Chriſtendome doth require with great ſightes, an order to bée taken, & ſet in the higheſt articles of our faith? But vnto this you are not ſworne. And why? bicauſe it is agaynſt your holy popet of Rome. For if there were a generall Councell, both hée, & you do know, that there muſt nédes folow, both ouer him & you a ſtreight reformation. Therfore after my cõſell ſay, that you can not come, for you bée lawfully let. It folowyth I ſhal honourably entreate the popes Legate, both going and comming, and in his neceſſitie I ſhal helpe him. I pray you ſée, and prouide well, that hée goe not a begging, as Peter did. And ſée alſo that he neither preach nor teach, but pyll and poull, with all miſchiefe, and vnſhamefaſtnes. And why? becauſe you are ſworne this to maintayne.

The Pope will hold a Councell where and whẽ it pleaſeth hym.

If foloweth. I shall visite yearely my selfe, or by some other messenger, the pope of Rome, vnles I bee dispenced with of them. I pray you what pertaineth this to the office of a Bysshop, yearely to visite Rome? Christ and the most of his Apostles, were neuer at Rome, and yet they were meetely good Christen men. But I reade in the traditions of the Turke, that certayne of them must yearly visite their Mahomet. From whom I thinke, you haue taken this custome. Your owne law saith, that vnto this clause must these bishops all only bee bounde, that bee immediatly vnderneth the Pope. Now are not you such, for you sweare in your othe to the kyng, that you will immediatly take your Bysshoppryck of him, and holde it all onely of his grace. Wherefore then doe you here sweare against your owne lawe? And also against your othe made to your prince?

In. vi. lib. i. de maioritate & obedientia Dilecti filij, De iure iurando. ca. Ego in Verbo singulis Moreouer, you know that there was an olde custome, in the dayes of kyng Henry the second, that no Bysshop shoulde goe out of the Realme, without the kinges licence. Are you not bound to keepe this custome: but answere, that the Pope hath dispensed with you, and that you are not bounde to keepe any obedience towarde the actes that your prince maketh. Moreouer, I meruaile sore, that you be all so straitly sworne of so long tyme, and neuer one of you that euer went in my dayes to Rome to discharge his othe. And why? because you are dispensed with. But were it not as good to leaue it out of your othe at the first, seeing you entende not to keepe it, as afterwarde to dispence with you for it? No forsothe, for than the Pope coulde not bynde you to come to Rome at hys pleasure, and betraye your kyng, & all his counselles. But in your othe that is newly made, & that you haue sworne lacke, is added. That if the pope bee on this side ỹ mountaines, you shall visite him euery yeare. But if hee bee beyond the mountaines, then euery three yeares. One that knew not your practise and the circumstances of your actes ỹ hath bene done, would litle suspect this additiõ. But the very truth is, there is a mischieuous and abhominable treason in it agaynst Princes. For if it chaunced the Emperour, or els any temporall Prince neare vnto Rome, to fall at variaunce with the Pope, then dyd ỹ Pope straight runne into Fraunce, that is to say, on this side the mountaines, where you must visite hym yearely. And why? Because your god is in distresse, and hath conceiued a deadly hatered agaynst a Prince, and can not bring it to passe without your helpe and counsell. Wherefore you must come yearely. And also hee must know, through your betraying, how your Prince is mynded, and whether hee bee addicted to his contrary parte or not. If hee bee, then must you betraye his counsell, and that yearely. And why? bicause the pope is on this side the mountaines. But and if hee bee in Rome, and hath all Princes neckes vnder hys gyrdell, then is it sufficient that you come euery thyrd yeare. For you cã at ones commyng, deuise as much treason, as Princes shall auoyde in fiue yeares.

A deuilish practise of Prelates.

The Prelates will obeye the Pope, but not the Prince.

But what belongeth this vnto a Bishop? that the Pope is on this side the mountaines, or beyonde. If ye bee bounde by Gods law, yearely to visite the Pope, then must you visite him, where soeuer hee bee, though hee were either with God, or the deuill, And if you bee not bounde by Gods law, what a presumption is it of him to bynde you? Yea what an ouersight is it of you, to let your selfe thus to bee bounde? And what a wickednes is it of you so straitely to keepe this othe? to the which you are not bounde by Scripture, against your obedience made to your Prince, whiche is commaunded by Gods word? But I pray you what example hath either hee or you of blessed S. Peter, to bynde by the vertue of an othe, the other Apostles yearely to visite him at Rome. All the world may perceiue, that this othe is inuented of insaciable couetousnes, that the Pope and you haue toward honours and dignities. And that is well declared by these wordes, that folowth in your othe. The possessions of my Church, I shal not sell, geue, lay to morgage, or make any feoffement, or by any other meanes alienate the same, without the counsell of ỹ pope. But I pray you tell me one thing, why doe you not sweare, that you shall neither bye, nor yet receiue any possessions to your church, nor you shall neither pill, nor poull, nor shaue, to encrease the possessions of your Church. But the truth is, all is fish that commeth to the nette with you. And if it come ones within your cloukes, it neuer cõmeth out agayne, thoughe the kyng and his Realme should stand in neuer so great nede. But to receiue all his lande, you are alwayes ready, and it is not agaynst your othe. &c.

I do not say thus, bicause I would ye should sell, or alienate the possessions of the Churche, but bicause I see that there is nothyng maintained by them, but all onely your mischeuous pompe and your pride. Your owne law commaundeth, that the fourth part of the spiritual goodes, should bee distributed among poore men. And for that cause they bee called, Bona pauperum, but how litle their part is, all the world can testifie. Wherfore, doe you sweare, not to alienate your goodes, without the popes licence? The pope gaue them not to you, but the kyng & his subiectes. How commeth hee now to bee so neare of your counsell in alienating them? and the king is thrust out, the whiche hath deserued best to bee of your counsell. But doe you not remember your own law? the which doth forbid that the pope in any wise, or for any necessitie, should alienate the goodes of the Church, except it bee old houses, whiche can not bee kept without great charges. This is your owne law, and agaynst this will you sweare? Then must you needes bee periured, for if you alienate your goodes with the Popes licence, then is this Decree agaynst you and curseth you. Wherfore then put you this in your othe, seyng you can not alienate your goodes with his consent, nor yet without it?

It foloweth in your new othe, decrees, ordinaunces, sentences, disposions, reseruations, prouisions, and commaundementes apostolike, with all my power I will obserue, & shall and cause other men to obserue them. These things were added, when this Idole was brought so highe, that no man durste wynche agaynst hym. and when hee might saye, and doe what he would. And as your lawe commaundeth, no man so hardye to aske hym why hee doth so. Then began decrees, ordinances, decoctions, disposycyons, reseruations, prouysions with like shamefulnes for to spring. and there is no remedy, but they must contynue? And why? Because you are sworne to keepe them your selfe, and to compel other men also to keepe them. And out of the keepinge of this part of your othe, springeth out an other sentence that foloweth, which is this. All heretykes, sysmatikes, and rebelles, towardes our sayd Lorde ỹ Pope, to my power I shall persecute and withstand.

In Ci. tit. iij. ca. ad Apost. in Verbo continetur.

This is the cause that hath made vs poore men so great heretykes. For it can neuer bee proued, that euer we spake agaynst God, or our king, and yet bee we heretikes. And why? Forsoth because the Bishops are sworne to the Popes decrees, the which condemneth all them for heretikes, that speaketh againſt his holynes, though hee bee as holy as my horse. For hee sayth hym selfe in his lawe, that hee nedeth not to bee holy hym selfe, but it is sufficient, that hee sytteth in an holy seat. These be his wordes: who doubteth but hee is holy, ỹ which is exalted to so great a dignitie? In whõ though good workes of his owne merites be wantinge yet are those good workes sufficyent, the which were done by his predecessours. Upon the which texte their glose sayth, that if it bee openly knowen, that the Pope bee an aduoulterer, or a murderer, yet ought hee not to bee accused. &c.

This is the clause that maintey-neth the Popes pompe and glory. And this is that ỹ geueth him libertie say and doe what hee list.

cause my lordes ỹ bysshops are swoorne to persecute vs. But neuertheles, I truste to Goddes grace, and the kinges, that my Lordes the Bysshops, wyll not bee so hard, in this poynt of their othe, as they haue beene. And why? Because mẽ may nowe come to their aunswere. Surely, there bee many clauses in his last othe added, that bee cleare iniury vnto princes, & against Gods lawe, and mans lawe. And yet our Bysshops will swere them, yea & that, which is worst of all, they will accuse other men of treason & rebellió, And there is no mã swoorne to trea' son, nor rebellion, but they onely.

The preachers of the doctrine of Christe must nedes bee heretickes for the said doctrine is agaynst the Pope, and so they preach agaynst the Pope, and therfore are heretickes.

¶ Wherfore most gracious prince with all meekenes and lowlynes that is due to soe noble a prince, and also that doth become a true subiecte to doe, I lowly and meekely require and desire your grace, to Iudge betweene the Bysshops and me, whiche of vs is trewest and faythfullest to God and to your grace. I speake all onelye of those that hath and also would nowe (if they durste) defende the Pope, and his lawes. Agaynst them I make this

And as for my factes, & dedes, what I haue done agaynst God and your grace, I require them to say their vttermost, that they can proue, or elles by your gracious fauour, I am here presente and offer my selfe to proue thẽ lyars, And that vnder any maner of payne, that your grace shal assigne. And agaynst them I haue declared the learnyng and doctrine of theyr Churche, and also brought exam- ples of their factes and dedes, with the whiche they haue put theyr doctrine in exercise. Nowe if they bee greeued, or thinke thẽ selues wrongfully handled of mee, then I require no more of your grace, but indifferẽtly and graciously, to here both them and me, the which thing, no doubt as your grace doth knowe our heauẽly father doth require of you. The cause of my condemnation.

Anno. 1525. die. 14. Decembris.

MOste gracious Prince, ỹ your grace shoulde knowe what cause of heresye the Bysshops had agaynst me, for ỹ which, they so vncha ritablye, and so cruelly hath cast me away. Therefore haue I set out ỹ articles ỹ were layde agaynst me. And as they were layd agaynst me, as I will bee reported by their owne actes and bookes. The which articles doubtles were vncharitably, & falsly gathered agaynst me, in a sermon ỹ I made in Cãbridge, in S. Edwardes Churrh. Wherfore I will beseech your grace, with all meekenes, & lowlynes, to bee my gracious Lord, & Prince. And not to suffer me thus shamefully, & cruelly, agaynst all law, & conscience, vtterly to bee vndone, & cast away. But of your most highe goodnes to suffer me to come to mine aunswere, and then, if I can not iustifie my cause I will be at your gracious commaundement, to bee punished after right, and conscience.

IF thou beleeue? that thou art more boũd to serue God to morow which is Christmas day, or of easter day, or of whitsonday, for an holynes that is in one day more then in an other, then art thou no faythfull christean man, but superstitious, And S. Paule is againſt thee, saying: You doe obserue dayes, yeares, monthes, and tydes. For vnto a faythfull christean man, euery day ought to bee Christmas day Easter day, and whitsonday. The which thinge the fathers considering that thou diddest not obserue, yea, & that thou wouldest neuer obserue, if it were lefte to thy iudgmẽt, because thou art geuen so much to worldly bu sinesses, For that cause they haue as signed thee certaine dayes to come to the certayn dayes to come to ỹ church to pray togither, to heare the worde of God togither, and to receaue the blessed sacramēt togither. What faulte fynde you in this article? because I say, that one daye is not holyer then an other? I pray you what is ỹ cause or what nature is in one day, that is not in an other, wherby that it should bee holyer then the other? Because (you will say) that we halowe the remembraunce of Christes birthe and of Christes resurrection in one day, and not in an other. This thing I say must you doe euery daye, for Christe is euery day borne, euery day ryſen, euery day ascended vp. And this must you beleeue euery day stedfastly. This must you sanctifie in your hartes dayly, and not one day.

There is not one day of it selfe higher or better then an other.

¶ Now vary we but in this thing. You say that we are bound to sanctifie but one Christmas day in the yeare, and that is superstitiousnes, & heresy say I, not that I condemne your one day, but that you set it to one daye all onely, that we are bound to do euery daye. Briefely, my Lord of Rochester alowed this article, saying: he would not condemne it for heresy, for an C. li. (this was a great sūme of money) but it was foolishely sayde (quod hee) to preach this afore the butchers of Cambryge, As who say, they were all butchers, that were at the sermon And not ỹ most parte of ỹ vniuersity. But the bysshop of Bathe asked me, whether we mighte labour on the holy dayes or not, seeing it is written, Thou shalt obserue thy holy day. I aunswered that Christen men were not bounde to abstayne from bodely labour by that commaundement, for it was so geuen to the Iewes. And if we were bound to abstayne from bodely labour by that commaundement then was the kinges grace, and all his councell, my Lorde Cardinall, and all his counsell, in the waye of damnation, For they cause men to carye their stuffe on the holy day, what daye so euer it bee, whan they will remoue. At this reason all my Lordes were astonied, and wist not what to say: they were loth to cōdemne my Lord Cardinals grace, seing he was so holy a prelate of Christes church, and that facte they coulde not denye. Wherfore at ỹ last, my Lorde of Rochester remembred hym selfe, and obiected in this maner, A good reason, I will make you a like reason, The bysshop of Winchester suffered ỹ stues, Ergo the stues bee lawfull. At this reason I meruayled much. For I perceyued, that it was as lawfull for our noble Prince to carye stuffe on the holy day (which is not agaynst ỹ word of god) as it is for an harlot of ỹ stues to liue in open whordome, which is against the worde of God. And yet my Lords the bysshops of their greate charitie, & and of their innumerable spirituall treasure suffereth agaynst their conscience both to bee done.

Let vs not playe the Iewes.

That wold they not doe, if it were against gods cōmaundement.

Briefely it were to longe to recite all the vncharitable maner that they dyd vse with me. And yet earnestly I must bee condemned poore man for an heretyke. But I will recyte the saying of doctours for me, ỹ men may see how shamefully I haue erred. Saynt Hierome sayth, Therfore bee certine dayes assigned, that we should come togither, not that, that daye, in the whiche we come togither is holyer then an other, but all dayes bee like, and equall. And Christ is not alonely crucified in Parasceden, and risen onlye on the sonday, but the day of resurrection is alwayes, and alwayes may we eate of our Lordes flesshe. &c. Here S. Hierome sayth ỹ selfe wordes ỹ I spake, And of these wordes was I moued to speake, as God doth knowe. Also S. Augustine sayth, we must obserue the sabboth day, not ỹ we should recken our selfe not to labour, but that all thinge that we doe worke well, muste haue an intention to the euerlasting rest. Wherfore we must obserue the holy day, not by corporall idlenes, and vnto the letter, but spiritually must we rest from vyces, and concupisences, wherfore among all the ten commaundementes, that of the sabboth daye is alonely commaunded to bee figuratiuely obserued &c. ſed at his time. So likewiſe the obſeruation of the ſabboth day is declared to bee for a tyme, for we muſt keepe ỹ ſabboth day, not alonely the ſeuenth day, but at all tymes, as Eſay ſayth &c. But here my Lorde of Rochester ſayde, fye vpon, that I vnderſtode not Tertulian, ſecõdarily, that hee was an heretike. But I paſſe ouer myne aũſwere, for this is but a Lordly worde, and hee could none otherwiſe ſaue his honour, but yet ſtãdeth my ſcripture faſt. And S. Hierome, and S. Auguſtine, & alſo their owne law, whoſe wordes be theſe: It is come vnto me, that certaine men, which bee of an euill ſpirite, haue ſowen certaine euill thinges among you, and contrary to the holy faith, ſo that they doe forbid, that men ſhould worke on the Sabboth day. The whiche men, what other thyng ſhall we call them, but the preachers of Antichriſt, the which Antichriſt ſhall make the Sabboth day, and the Sonday bee kept from all maner of worke, &c. This law clearely declareth you to bee Antichriſtes, this is more then I ſayd. I haue great marueile, that the Byſhop of Bathe, beyng ſo mighty a Lord in condemning of heretickes, was not learned in this law, ſeyng it is his owne facultie.

The ſecond article.

NOw dare no mã preach ỹ truth, and the very Goſpell of God, & in eſpeciall they that bee feeble, and fearfull. But I truſt, yea and I pray to God, that it may ſhortly come, that falſe and manifeſt errours may bee plainely ſhewed. There bee certaine men like conditioned to dogges, if there bee any man, that is not their countryman, or that they loue not, or know not, ſay any thing agaynſt them, then cry they, an hereticke, an hereticke, ad ignem, ad ignem. Theſe bee the dogges that feare true preachers. What hereſie finde you in this article? I doe thinke that you doe feele my prayer to bee heard. For doubtles there bee many ſhamefull errours now manifeſtly opened, that at thoſe dayes had beene hereſie to haue touched them.

The thyrd article.

WEe make nowe a dayes many Martyrs, I truſt wee ſhall haue many moe ſhortly. For the viritie coulde neuer bee preached playnely, but perſecution did follow. Here did my Lord of Bathe inquire of mee, if I reckoned them for martyrs, that were burnte at Bruſelles, I anſwered, that I knewe not their cauſe, wherefore they died, but I reckoned as many men to bee martyrs, as were perſecuted, and dyed for the worde of God, but hee ſaide, hee woulde make mee to frye for this. How thinke you by this holy prelate? was not this a charitable argument to refell myne aunſwere with? But this was the ſtrongeſt argument, that euer they vſed. And paraduenture I may ſee the day, that this argument may bee made againſt them.

THeſe lawes, theſe lawyers, theſe Iuſticiares, that ſay, that a man may lawfully aſke his owne good afore a Iudge, and contende in iudgement, haue deſtroyed all patience, deuotion, and faith in Chriſten people. On this article hangeth alſo ỹ nexte.

The fifth article.

Myne aduerſaries moſt vncharitably layde theſe two articles againſt mee, as though I had condempned the lawemaker, lawe, and execution thereof, whan I onely ſpake agaynſt the vncharitablenes of ſome mẽ, which rather ſeke vengeaunce of their brethren, than any right or helpe of the lawe. For I ſpeake not againſt all lawyers, or againſt any for pleading iuſtly, after the forme of the lawe: but onely againſt thoſe which taught men, that they were bounde to proſecute the vttermoſt of the lawe, vnder the paine of deadly ſinne, were the man neuer ſo poore, and vnlike to pay the debte. Againſt theſe two perſons ſpake I, and againſt none other. For it is not, nor neuer was mine intent, to forbid ſuing at the lawe, for I doe know very well, that maieſtratus is of God. Ergo, it muſt needes followe that all lawes, hauing probable reaſons of nature, made to conſerue a common wealth, muſt alſo bée allowed of God, for lawes bée a parte of the power that is inſtituted of God.

Moreouer, S. Paule doth appeale to the Emperour, which is alſo pars litis. And that hée coulde not doe, if ſuing were ſimpliciter, forbidden. Alſo good lawes bée Gods gifts. Wherfore it muſt nédes followe, that wée may lawfully vſe them. But as men may miſuſe cunning, and beautie, ſo may mẽ alſo miſuſe the excellent gift of the lawes, not that lawes bée euill, but becauſe wée vſe them not to the intent that they were ordayned for. No man doubteth, but in vſing of all Gods creatures, there muſt bée an epykya, that is, a meane, a meaſure, and an order, ſo that no man may therby deſtroy his neighbour againſt the order of charitie, which is a guide and a ruler in vſing of all creatures. As for men to make a rumour in a whole countrey, for a trifle, or els for a mã to ſue his neighbour, which is not able by no meanes to paye hys debte, and ſo vtterly to vndoe hym, and to take none ende with him, but after the extremitie of the lawe: I ſay that this maner of ſutes doe not become Chriſten men. Vbi tranſgreditur equitatis, et charitatis limites. And that all men may clearely perceiue, that theſe onely were both my wordes and intent. I ſhall rehearſe the occaſion, that moued mée to ſpeake of the lawyers, and ſuters. The cauſe was thys.

There was a poore man dead, and had made an other poore man his executour, and bequethed in his will to a Churche in Cambridge a kettell, worth.iij.s.iiij.d. the which kettel was afterwarde required by the Churche Warden. But this executour beyng a poore man, and not able to geue this bequeſt at that tyme, therefore hée deſired the Church Warden of longer reſpite, but hée could not be heard, for the Church Warden would haue the vttermoſt of the law, and ſued him before the Commiſſary, and at the laſt, condemned him vnto priſon, where hée lay, and neither was able to pay his dette, nor to helpe his wife, & children. Now, bicauſe I might doe ſomthing with ỹ Church Warden, therefore the poore mans wife came weeping, and waylyng to me, deſiring me in the way of charitie to ſpeake to the Church Wardẽ, for to bée good to her poore huſband, wherby I was moued to ſend for this my frend, his name is called Jhon Drake, a mã well knowẽ in Cambridge, vnto whom I ſpake in this maner.

Countreyman, I am very ſory to heare of your vncharitable demeanour. Here hath béene wõ mee a poore woman weepyng, and waylyng, and crying out, howe you haue vndone her, her poore huſband, and her miſerable children, for all they haue not one bitte of bread, towardes their foode, neither is ſhée able to labour. Wherefore I marueile ſore at you, that you wil bée ſo extreme vnto poore men, whom God viſited with pouertie, to proue your charity. What mercy will you haue at Chriſtes hand? the whiche is ſo extreme vnto your poore neighbour? whom hée hath bought with his precious bloud. Vnto this hée made me aunſwere on this maner, how that thyng pertained not to hym, but vnto the Church, wherfore hée ſayd, that all Doctours of law did ſay, that they muſt ſue therefore, vnder the payne of deadly ſinne. And if it were wrong, why did they learne ſo? Now, I had many wordes with hym betwéene him, and me, as concernyng this maner.

The euill counſell of the Doctours of law.

But the nert day, when I preached, by the reaſon that the ſelfe ſame mã ſtode afore me in ỹ Church, was I brought to remembraunce of the caſe, that hée, and I had commoned of. And bicauſe I had not clearely cõuered hym, therfore I recited the caſe in a parable, that no man knew what I meant, but hée, & I. And of this thyng was I moued (as God knoweth) to ſpeake of ſuters, the whiche I thinke in this caſe, no Chriſten man can allow. And therefore I ſay in myne Article, theſe lawyers. Now is there vtterly ſinne among you (ſayth Paule) bicauſe you goe to law one with an other, why rather ſuffer you not wrõg? 1.Cor.6.

Extreme law is extreme iuſtice.

why rather ſuffer ye not your ſelues to bee robbed? Alſo our maſter ſayth, If any man will ſue at the lawe, and take thy coate from thee, let him haue thy cloke alſo. May not I ſay theſe wordes? wherefore were they written by the holy ghoſt? but that they ſhould bee learned? Here our maſter Chriſt, and S. Paule ſpeaketh againſt ſuters, no man can denye it, the text is ſo cleare. Now, what ſuyng can bee vnlawfull? if this bee not vnlawfull, againſt the which I did ſpeake? Here is a poore man, wife, and children deſtroyed, and no charitable wayes taken with the poore man, whereby hee might make reſtitution. And my learning ſaith: That Summum ius ſumma iniuria eſt. Wherefore I will bee iudged by all Chriſten men, if I ought not in this caſe to geeue my frende counſell not for to ſue. Or whether I bee worthy to bee condemned for an hereticke, becauſe I counſell my frende and brother, rather to ſuffer wrong, than for to vndoe a whole houſholde for a naughtie leude kettel. But let vs ſee, how the holy doctours that hath written ouer theſe places of ſcripture, doth erpounde them.

Math.5.

I doe not condemne ſuing, but in a caſe.

The ſpiritualtie forbiddeth Prieſtes to ſue, in cauſa ſanguinis et ſumen non dãpnãt leges Athanaſius.

First, Athanaſius, on this text of Saint Paule, that I bring: There is vtterly ſinne amoug you, that is to ſay, It is to your condemnation, and to your ignompnie, that you doe exerciſe iudicials among you. Wherefore doe you not rather ſuffer wrong? Alſo ſaint Hierome, It is ſinne vnto you that you doe againſt the cõmaũdemẽt of Chriſt, that you haue iudgementes among you, the which ought alwayes to keepe peace, yea, though it were with the loſſe of your temporall goods. Wherefore doe you not rather ſuffer wronge? Where as ye ought by the commaundement of the Goſpell, and by the example of the Lorde, patiently to ſuffer, there doe you the contrary, not all onely not ſuffer, but you doe wrong vnto them, that doe no wronge. &c. Marke how S. Hierome calleth it a precepte, and a commaundement, and no counſell, and alſo calleth it ſinne to doe againſt this cõmaundement. Likewiſe Haymo ſaith: It is offence and ſinne in you, that yon haue iudicials. For accuſation engendreth ſtrife, ſtrife engendreth diſcorde, diſcorde engendreth hatred. And leaſt paraduenture they woulde ſay, this is no ſinne, to require mine owne: Therefore ſayth the Apoſtle: Truely it is ſinne vnto you, for you doe againſt the cõmaundement of the Lord, the which ſayth: He that taketh away thy good, aſke it not againe. Wherefore doe you not rather ſuffer loſſe? that ye might fulfill the commaundement of the Lord. &c. Marke how hee calleth it the commaundement of God? and it is ſinne to aſke our owne with contention? Now, what haue I ſayde in mine article, that holy ſcripture, and alſo holy Doctours do not ſay?

S. Hiere. ad Cor.6.

Haymo ad Cor.6.

Luke.6.

These doctours wyll not, nor can not deſtroy all iudicialles, but onely vnchariteble ſutes.

If it bee a counſell, than can ye not condemne it for hereſie.

But after this came a Doctour of lawe (whom I knew not) and ſayde, that their lawe had condemned thys opiniõ, and declared thoſe ſcriptures to bee but counſels. But I denyed that, and ſayd, I knew no ſuch lawe. And ſodainely Doctour Steuen, now Byſhop of Wincheſter, ſhewed mee their lawe, whoſe wordes bee theſe: Illud euangelij, ſi quis abſtulerit. &c. non eſt precipientis ſed exhortantis. Hiſita. Now let euery Chriſten man iudge, whether that theſe wordes of their lawe bee of ſufficient auctoritie, to refell the holy wordes of Scripture or no? But than came doctour Wolmã, and hee brought this texte. If thy brother doe offende thee, than tell the Church. What is that (ſayd hee) tell the Church? to whom I aunſwered, that this place made not for his purpoſe, aleaging Saint Auguſtine for mee. For it ſpeaketh of the crymes, that ſhould bee reproued by the congregation, and not of the correction of the temporall ſworde. It alſo followeth, If hee heare not ỹ church, coũte hym as an heathẽ, and as a publican. This is the vttermoſt payne, that our M. Chriſt aſſigneth there, ỹ which is no payne of the temporall lawe. But at this aunſwere, was hee ſore moued and ſayd: if I did abide by it, I ſhould be burnt. This was a ſharp ſentence, of ſo greate a man as hee is. Apppel-les was a holy wyſe felowe, that ſayd once to a ſhomaker, Ne ſutor vltra crepidam. But neuertheles let hym, and them burne as many as they can, yet it is playne, that I haue ſpoken neuer a worde, but the holy ſcripture, and holy doctours ſay the ſame, both in ſentence, and in wordes. Wherefore I can not ſee how they can condemne this article, for hereſye, yea, and I dare ſaye for them, that they recken it none hereſy, nor they did not condēne mee for this article.

They vnderſtoode myne anſwere ſo well that they were than contēt with mee.

The ſixte article.

I Wyll neuer beleeue, nor yet I can neuer beleeue, that one man may be by the lawe of God a byſhop of 2. or 3. cyties, yea of an whole coūtrey, for it is contrarye to S. Paule, which ſayth, I haue left thee behynde, to ſet in euery citye a byſhop. And if you finde in one place of ſcripture, ỹ they bee called Epiſcopi, you ſhal finde in diuers other places, that they bee called Preſbiteri.

Tit. 1.

The Cardinall and Doctour Barnes reaſoned togither.

I I was brought afore my Lorde Cardmall into his galary, and there hee reade all myne articles, tyll hee came to this, and there hee ſtopped, & ſayde, that this touched hym, and therefore hee aſked me, if I thought it wronge, that one byſhop ſhoulde haue ſo many cityes vnderneath hym, vnto whom I anſwered, that I could no farther goe, then to S. Paules texte, which ſet in euery citye a byſhop. Then aſked hee mee, if I thought it now vnright (ſeeing the ordinaunce of the church) that one byſhop ſhould haue ſo many cities? I aunſwered, ỹ I knew none ordinaunce of ỹ church (as concerning this thinge) but S. Paules ſayinge onelye. Neuertheles I did ſee a contrary cuſtome and practiſe in the world, but I know not the originall thereof. Then ſayde hee, ỹ in the Apoſtles tyme, there were dyuers cities, ſome 7. myle, ſome vj. myle long, and ouer them was there ſet but one byſhop, & of their ſubbards alſo. So likewiſe now, a byſhop hath but one citye to his cathedrall churche and the country about, is as ſubbards vnto it. Me thought this was farre fetched, but I durſt not denye it, be-

But therefore was I an heretick.

cauſe it was ſo greate auctorite, and of ſo holy a father, and of ſo greate a deuine. But this dare I ſay, that his holynes could neuer proue it by ſcripture, nor yet by any auctorite of doctours, nor yet by any practiſe of the Apoſtles, and yet it muſt bee true, becauſe a piller of the church hath ſpoken it. But let vs ſee what ỹ doctours ſay to myne article. Athanaſius doth declare this text of the Apoſtle, I haue left thee behinde. &c. Hee woulde not commit vnto one byſhop a whole ylde but hee did inioyne, that euery cytye ſhoulde haue his proper paſtor, ſuppoſing, ỹ by this meanes they ſhoulde more diligently ouer ſee the people, & and alſo that ỹ labour ſhould bee more eaſye to beare. &c. Alſo Chriſoſtome on that ſame texte. Hee would not ỹ a whole countrey ſhoulde bee permitted vnto one man, but hee enioyned vnto euery mā his cure, by ỹ meanes hee knew, that the labour ſhoulde bee more eaſye, and the ſubiectes ſhould bee with more diligēce gouerned, if the teachers were not diſtract with ỹ gouerning of many churches, but had cure, and charge of one church onely. &c. Me thinketh theſe bee plaine wordes, and able to moue a man to ſpeak aſmuche as I did. But graunte, that you may haue all theſe cities, yet can you make it none hereſy. For my lord Cardinall graunted, that it was but agaynſt hym, and againſt you, which bee no Gods. But I poore man muſt bee an heretike, there is no remedy, you will haue it ſo. And who is able to ſay nay? Not all ſcripture, nor yet God hymſelfe.

If I ſayned ſuch a thynge I ſhould bee an heretick.

Athanaſius.

Chriſoſtome.

I T can not bee proued by ſcripture, that a man of the churche ſhoulde haue ſo greate temporall poſſeſſions. But they will ſay, if they had not ſo great poſſeſſions, they could not kepe ſo many ſeruantes, ſo many dogges, ſo many horſes, as 40. or 50. & maintayne ſo great pompe, and pride, and liue ſo deliciouſly, what hereſye fynde you in this? Is it hereſye to ſpeake againſt your horſes, and your houndes and your abhominable lyuing? And doubtles, I did not ſay, but that you myght haue poſſeſſions, all onely I ſpake againſt the ſuperfluouſnes, and the abuſe of them, for the which all ỹ world wondereth on you. What miſchiefe is there in the worlde vſed, ỹ is more clerely, and openly knowen, then that you doe abuſe the goodes of the Church? And yet muſt I bee cõdemned for an heretyke, for ſpeaking againſt it. Alas, doe you thinke, that God will ſuffer this violence, that you doe vſe agaynſt poore men? I will ſtãd in ỹ daunger, & proue how his Godly maieſty ſhall iudge this matter betweene you and mee I dare truſt hym with it.

The viij. article. SUre I am, that they can not by the law of God, haue any iuriſdiction ſeculer, and yet they chalẽge both powers, which if they haue, why doe they not put them both in vſe? For they muſt ſay, as the Iewes ſayde, we may kill no man. This is the article, that dyd byte you, for you can not bee content with the office of a byſhop, but you will bee alſo kynges. Howe that ſtandeth with Gods lawe, and with your othe, I haue declared it to our noble prince. I doubt not, but hee will put you to the tryall of it. Haue not you this many yeres condemned many a poore man, & then deliuered hym to the temporall power to be put to death, which knew nothing of his cauſe? And if hee would, ỹ yee ſhoulde put hym to death your ſelfe, then anſwere yee, how you might kyll no man. So ỹ they were alwayes your hangmen.

Officicers bee but byſhops hangmen, God amende it.

The ix. article. THey ſay they bee the ſucceſſours of Chriſt and of his Apoſtles, but I can ſee them folow none, but Iudas. For they beare the purſe, and haue all the money. And if they had not ſo great poſſeſſions, I am ſure an. C. would ſpeake agaynſt them, where now dare not one, for loſſe of promotion. As for this article I will ouercome you with the witnes of all the world, you may well condemne it for hereſie, but it is as true as your Pater noſter. Iudas ſolde our maiſter but once, and you ſell him as often as hee commeth in your handes. But I would it were that yee coulde proue mee a lyer, and that you folowed any of the Apoſtles ſauing Iudas onely. Yea, I woulde that yee were in certayne pointes as good as Iudas was. It had beene better for you that you had not medled againſt mee in theſe matters. For now I am compelled to ſpeake many thinges, which I would for ſhame of the worlde neuer haue ſpoken. But now that you will haue it ſo, take it to you, and make the beſt you can of it.

The x. article. THere is not the greateſt Phariſie in this Church, but I am ſure I pricke him with theſe wordes, and hee knoweth that they bee true, though hee ſay the contrary, and that doe I well know. This article did I ſpeake becauſe of Doctour Rydle, which on a tyme graunted in maiſter Doctour Buttes houſe, that the Byſhoppes were cleane out of order. And therefore I ſay, that I know it.

The xj. article. THeſe ordynary Byſhops and prelates doe followe that falſe Prophet Balaam. For they wouldoe curſe the people, but by the prouiſion of God, they were compelled to bleſſe them, that is to ſay, to teach them to liue well, though they thẽſelues liue moſt miſchieuouſly. And ſo the Aſſes which they ride vpõ, that is, the common people, haue their liues in abhominaiton. This is the haynous hereſie. For it ſpeaketh againſt the holy fathers, which bee almoſt as holy as Balaams Aſſe, that did once ſpeake the worde of God to a good purpoſe: And ſo doe they neuer. But I graunt that I did offende in cauilling you ordinary Byſhops, for I ſhoulde haue called you inordinate butchers. And as for that, that I compared you to Balaam, it is your owne lawe. 2. queſt. 7. Secuti ſunt. And cap. Noſſi. And as for your liuing all the worlde knoweth it. I coulde tell here many holy pointes of Byſhops liuinge, as keeping of mens wiues, and daughters, but I will not, for I ſhoulde bee reckened vncharitable. But you may doe them, breaking not your holy charitie.

2. q 7. Secuti ſunt. & cap. Noſſi.

The xij. article. THey ſet vp an Idoll to deceaue ỹ people withall, whiche is called Baall Peor, or Baall Phegor, that is interpretated gaſping, as their lawes and conſtitutions, the which gaſpe and gape to maintayne theyr worldly honour. They cauſe vs to do ſacrifice by fayre women, that is by their carnall affections, and ſweete wordes, ſo that God of Iſraell is forgotten. And thus by their ſweete wordes, and benediction they deceiue the ſimple. Theſe bee ỹ falſe maiſters that Saint Peter ſpeaketh of. Theſe bee the fountaines without water, for they geue no good doctrine to the people. Where is the hereſie in this? becauſe I cõpare your lawes to Baall? But loke whether the interpretation of the worde doe agree with the nature of your lawes or not? What doe all your lawes, but miniſh the auctoritie of Princes? and of all other Lordes, and exalte yours onely? Call you not that a gaſping Idoll? Let this article ſtand till you be able to proue it hereſie.

2. Pet. 2.

The xiij. article.

NOw they ſell vs, they ſell the people, they ſell holy orders, they ſell church halowing, there is no better marchandiſe in Chepeſide. Wilte thou knowe what is the price of a Church halowing? no leſſe than xl. ſhillinges. They ſell pardons, and remiſſiõs of ſinnes as opẽly as a Cow, and an Oxe is ſolde, for they neuer graunt them without money. The Suffragan of Ely did aſke of maiſter Iohn Purgolde xl. ſ. and the offring, for halowing of S. Edwardes in Cãbrige: yea and hee woulde not doe it ſo good chepe (quoth hee) but becauſe he had a Goddaughter buryed in the churchyarde. But this may bee proued by examples ynough. For bryng yee forth one church in all Englande, that you haue halowed without money, or without hope of money, and I will graunt my concluſion falſe. And as for your pardons, all the worlde knoweth your handlyng. I dare ſay it is the beſt marchaundiſe in the worlde, as you handle it.

The popes pardons hath beene the beſt marchaundiſe in England.

But was it not a marualous blindnes, and a great preſumption, ſo cruelly to handle mee for theſe articles? was there no middell to haue punished mee for ſpeaking againſte you, but that I muſt neeres be an hereticke? I dare ſay, there is not one among you ſo shameles, ỹ dare come forth now at this day, and proue theſe articles hereſie againſt mee. But doubtles as long as I liue, and am not reſtored to my name and fame againe, which you haue violently taken away from mee, will I bee vnto you a deuill, and a peſtilence. I require nothing of you, but my good name and fame, to the which I haue right, and to the which you ought of your charitie reſtore mee, though I neuer required you. I thinke you haue punished mee inough, for ſpeaking of a foliſhe worde or twayne againſt you.

The xiiij. article.

WIlte thou know what their benedictions is worth? They had rather geeue thee ten benedictions, then one halfepeny. Is not this a fore hereſie? You ryde thorowe ſtreetes, and townes, bleſſing man and ſtone, but you neuer geeue halfepenye to man, nor childe.

The xv. article.

NOwe is come a pardon, wherby they ſay that they haue power to ſende an hundreth ſoules to heauen. And if they may ſo doe without any further reſpect, then may they likewiſe ſende an other 100. to hell. For it followeth in the text, Quodcunque ligaueris, that is, what ſo euer thou byndeſt. Is not this a fore hereſye, to ſay that you may not rule this matter at your iudgment. But this is a marueylous texte, Quodcunque ligaueris, for it bindeth in hell, and loſeth in heauen, and openeth mens purſes, & cofers in earth, it depoſeth Princes, it interditeth landes, it loſeth a man out of his cote: yea and often tymes it loſeth a man from his wife, yea and the horſe out of the garte. And all is done by this texte Quodcunque ligaueris. Is not this a merueilous text, that hath ſo greate a power? I know not ſuch an other in all the Bible.

The xvj. article.

can, and loke of your owne ſcholaſticall doctours. The which learneth boldlye that the keyes of the church hath none auctorite ouer ſinne, nor yet ouer eternall payne. But all onely hath auctorite to chaunge euerlaſting payne vnto a temporall payne: & that the pope may chaũge, & take away at his pleaſure. And amõg all temporall paynes, you reken purgatory ỹ greateſt. Ouer the which ỹ pope hath full power. This is your owne doctrine.

The xvij. article.

WHat is the cauſe that they forbid vs that we ſhoulde not diſcuſſe how greate their power is? but becauſe that they would make all mẽ fooles, and holde vs in ignorauncе? Your owne ſcholemen ſay, the popes power is ſo greate, that no man can, nor may diſcuſſe it. Alſo your lawe cõmaundeth. That no mã bée ſo hardy, as to aſke ỹ pope, Lord why doe you ſo? But put the caſe that this were a lye, yet is it farre from hereſie. Yet my Lordes ſay, that I ſhall bée an heretyke. And why ſay I? Becauſe we will haue it ſo, ſay they. Yea and thou béeſt not ſo content, ỹ ſhalt bée burnt. Mary I thank you hartely my Lords.

THey haue a lawe moſte abhominable, & contrarye to Gods lawe and charitie, to excommunicate the people. 4. tymes in a yeare, that is to ſay, thoſe men that raiſe the rent of an houſe: that muſt you vnderſtand, if it bélong not to the church. For if it bélong vnto ỹ church, thou maiſt raiſe it in euery moneth ons, and no man ſhall curſe thée. Alſo they curſe them that bée not buried in their pariſhe church, ỹ muſt bée vnderſtãded, if that they bée rich men, for if they bée poore, they may bée buried amõg the friers. The Byſhop of Bath ſayd, ther was no ſuch maner to curſe men. And all ỹ world knoweth the contrary. More ouer I red theſe articles in the booke of the generall curſe, that belongeth to ſaynt Benets church in Cambrige and there did I marke it with myne owne hand, and yet the byſhop was not aſhamed to denye it. And why? Becauſe I muſte bée an heretyke, there is no remedye, the holy fathers hath ſo determined it.

The xix. article.

THey haue myters with glyſtering precious ſtones, they haue gloues for catching colde in ỹ middeſt of their ceremonies. They haue rynges, and ouches, & other ceremonies, ſo many ỹ there is in a manner now nothing els in the church, but all ieiſyche maners. Will you make this hereſy? becauſe I ſpeake againſt your dãnable and pompous myters? I thinke ſuch ornamentes were to bée condemned euen among heathen men, I will not ſay among chriſtean men. But this dare I ſay, that there was neuer no God among heathen men, that euer delighted in ſuch ornamentes: And yet you will ſerue the God of heauen by thẽ. And your poore brother, whom Chriſt hath redéemed with his precious bloud dyeth in priſon, and openly in the ſtreate & hangeth him ſelfe for neceſſitie, & yet wil you not beſtow on hym ſo much as one of your precious ſtones. Tell me of one byſhop that euer brake his myter to the helping of a poore man? was there neuer man in neceſſitye in England? but all ỹ world may ſée what you bée. Theſe thinges bée ſenſible inough.

No man may ſpeake agaynſt the pompe of Prelates.

The xx. article.

THeſe myters I can not tell from whence they do come, except they take them from the iewes byſhops. & if they take them from ỹ Jewes, then let them alſo take theyr ſacrifices, and their oblations from them, and offer calues, and lambes, as they dyd, and then haue we nothing to doe with them, for wee bée chriſten men, and no Jewes. I pray you tell mée where yée finde but one pricke in holy ſcripture of your myters? Our mayſter did inſtitute byſhops, And S. Paule ſeteth out what is their office, and alſo what is their ornamẽt. & yet ſpeaketh neuer a worde of your myters. But I dare boldelye ſay, ỹ if you bée put to ỹ tryall, you ſhall bée fayne to rũne to the olde lawe. But can I bée an hereſyke, if I condemned clearely your myters, and ſayde they were of the deuyll: when you proue them to bee of Chriſtes inſtitution, then will I be an hereſyke. Is not that inough? I praye you let mee ſo long bee taken for a chriſtean man. And if you bee not cõtent with this, truely then doe yee me wronge.

The xxi. article.

THeſe myters with 2. hornes I cãnot tell what they ſhould ſignifye, except it be the hornes of the falſe prophet, of whome It is ſpoken, with theſe horkes ſhalt ỹ blowe afore thee all Syria. And ſo dyd hee mocke their ringes, and all their ornamentes, and eccleſiaſticall ceremonyes. It wil com to my ſaying, that you bee byſhops of the olde lawe, for you haue nothing to defende your rynges, your ornamentes, and your ceremonies, but very tyranny. Wherefore to maynteine theſe, depoſe you kynges, and princes interdite landes & burne man, wyfe, and chylde. And when you haue all done, you haue defended but a deueliſh tokẽ of pride. The doctours, that wolde fauour your proude tokens, & expound them to the beſt, haue declared that the two hornes of your myters dyd ſygnify the new and the olde teſtament, that is, how you ſhould be learned in them both.

3. King.

Byſhops vse vayne & foolish ceremonies.

Now I ſaw, that this expoſition did not agree with that thyng (for no man can bee leſſe learned in them thẽ you bee, I ſpeake of a great many.) Wherefore me thought it was but a vaine expoſition, and therfore I compared them to the two hornes of the falſe Prophet, becauſe (as you know) this falſe Prophet ſayde vnto the kyng, that hee ſhoulde with theſe two hornes blow afore him all Syria. And yet hee lyed, for the kyng was the firſt mã that was ſlayne. So likewiſe you ſay vnto kynges, if they folowe your coũſell, and maynteine your authoritie, and bee ruled after you, Thẽ ſhal they ouercome all their enemies: As ſinne, death, and hell, and yet (Saluo ordine veſtro) you lye, for you haue no word of God for you. Wherefore you muſt be falſe Prophetes.

What the two hornes of the myter meaneth.

Here haue I cõpared with a ſimilitude your myters to the two hornes, and you to falſe Prophetes, what if this bee falſe? what if I can not proue it? yet can you make me none hereticke. For then muſt you make thoſe men hereticks, that haue compared the forkes of your myters to the new, and to the old Teſtamentes, and you to the true Apoſtles, for they haue made a greater lye then I haue done, and they are neuer able to proue it. And as for me, I will proue my ſaying true (if ye will ſtãd to Scripture) or els wil I be taken for an hereticke.

THey haue baculum paſtoralem to take ſheepe with, but it is not like a ſhepheardes hooke, for it is intricate and manifold crooked, and turneth alwayes in, ſo that it may bee called a maſe, for it hath neither begynnyng nor endyng, and it is more like to knocke ſwine and wolues in the head with, then to take ſheepe. They haue alſo pyllers, and pollares, and other ceremonies, whiche no doubt, bee but tryfles, and thynges of naught.

The xxii. article.

I pray you what is the cauſe that you call your ſtaffe a ſhepheardes ſtaffe? you helpe no man with it? you comfort no man? you lift vp no man with it? but you haue ſtriken downe kynges, and kyngdomes with it, and knocked in the head Dukes & Earles with it. Call you this a ſhepheardes ſtaffe? There is a ſpace in the ſhepheardes ſtaffe, for the foote to come out agayne, but your ſtaffe turneth, and wyndeth alwayes inward, and neuer outward, ſignifying that what ſoeuer hee bee that cõmeth within your daũger, that hee ſhall neuer come out agayne. This expoſition your dedes doe declare, let thẽ bee examined, that you haue had to doe with. And let vs ſee how they haue eſcaped your ſhepheardes hooke. But theſe bee the articles, for the whiche I muſt needes bee an hereticke. Neuertheles all the world may ſee how ſhamefully, that I haue erred agaynſt your holynelles in ſaying the truth.

The meanyng of the Byſhops crooſier ſtaffe.

My Lord Cardinal reaſoned with me in this article, all the other hee paſſed ouer, ſaupng this, and the firte article. Here did hee aſke, if I thought

it

if god and reaſonable, that hée ſhould lay downe his pyllers and pollares, & coyne them? Here is the hereſie that is ſo abhominable. I made him aunſwere, that I thought it well done. Then ſayd hée, how thinke you, were it better for me? (being in the honour and dignitie that I am) to coyne my pyllers, and pollares, and to geue the money to. v. or vj. beggers? then for to mayntaine the common wealth by them as I doe? Doe you not recken (quoth hée) the common wealth better then fiue or ſixe beggers? To this I did aunſwere, that I reckened it more to the honour of God, and to the ſalnation of his ſoule, and alſo to the comfort of his powre brethren, that they were coyned, and giuē in almes. And as for the common wealth dyd not hange of them, for as his grace knew, the common wealth was afore his grace, and muſt bée whē his grace is gone, and the pyllers and pollares came with him, and ſhould alſo goe away with him. Notwithſtandyng if the common wealth were in ſuch a condition, that it had néede of them, then might his grace ſo lōg vſe them, or any other thyng in their ſtede, ſo longe as the common wealth néeded them. Notwithſtandyng I ſayd, thus much did I not ſay, in my Sermon agaynſt them, but all onely I damned in my Sermon the gorgious pompe and pride of all exteriour ornaments. Then he ſayd, well, you ſay very well. But as well as it was ſayd, I am ſure that theſe wordes made me an hereticke, for if theſe wordes had not béene therein, myne aduerſaryes durſt neuer haue ſhewed their faces againſt me. But now they knew wel that I could neuer bée indifferently heard. For if I had got the victory, thē muſt all the Byſhops, and my Lord Cardinall, haue layd downe all their gorgious ornamentes. For the which they had rather burne xx. ſuch hereticks, as I am, as all ỹ world knoweth. But God is mighty, and of me hath hée ſhewed his power, for I dare ſay, they neuer intented thing more in their liues, thē they did to deſtroy me, and yet God of his mercy hath ſaued me, agaynſt all their violence, vnto his godly wiſedome is the cauſe all onely knowen.

Cardinall wolſey lyked well hys pyllers & pollaxes.

The Byſhop of London that was then called Tunſtall, after my departyng out of priſon, ſayd vnto a ſubſtāciall man, that I was not dead (for I dare ſay his conſcience did not recken me ſuch an hereticke, that I would haue killed my ſelfe, as the voice wēt, but yet would hée haue done it gladly of his charitie) but I was (ſayd hée) in Amſterdame, where I had neuer béene in my life (as God knoweth, nor yet in the countrey this v. yeares) & certaine men did there ſpeake with me (ſayd hée) and hée fained certaine wordes, that they ſhould ſay to me, & I to them, and added thereunto, that my Lorde Cardinall would haue me agayne, or it ſhould coſt him a great ſumme of money, howe much I doe not clearely remember. I haue marueile that my Lorde is not aſhamed, thus ſhamefully, and thus Lordly to lye, all though hée might doe it by authoritie.

Tunſtall Byſhop of London had intelligence where D. Barnes was become.

And where my Lord Cardinall, & hée would ſpende ſo much money to haue mée againe, I haue great maruaile of it. What can they make of mée? I am a ſimple powre wreatch, and worth no mans money in the worlde (ſauing theirs) not the tenth peny, that they will geue for mée. And to burne mée, or to deſtroy mée, can not ſo greatly profite them. For whē I am dead, the Sunne, & the Mone, the ſtarres, and the element, water and fire, yea and alſo ſtones, ſhall defende this cauſe agaynſt them, rather than the veritie ſhould periſhe. But if they bée ſo charitable to doe good workes, and to ſpende their money ſo well, they haue priſoners & powre men inough in the land, let them beſtowe their money of them. And as for mée, I doe promiſe them here by this preſent writing, and by the faith that I owe to Chriſt Jeſus, and by that fidelitie that I owe to my prince, that if they will bée bounde to our noble Prince, after the maner of hys lawe, and after good conſcience, and right, that they ſhall doe mée no violence

I am now here what ſaye to you me.

Good counſayle geuen to the Byſhops.

lence, nor wronge, but diſcuſſe and diſpute theſe articles, and all other that I haue written, after the holy worde of God, and by Chriſtes holy ſcripture with mée. Then will I (as ſone as I may know it) preſent my ſelf vnto our moſt noble prince, there offring my ſelfe to his grace, that I will either proue theſe thinges by Gods worde againſt you all, or els I will ſuffer at his graces pleaſure. Whom the father of heauē preſerue in honour. Amen. And if you refuſe this condition, then ſay that you are neyther good, nor charitable. For I dare ſay you can deſire no more of a Chriſten man.

The xxiij. article. PRieſtes doe mumble, and rore out their Dyriges, and Maſſes in the Church and churchyardes, for theyr founders, curious to ſpeake theyr wordes diſtinctly. But I enſure them that their prayers ſhall doe them no good, but onely acceptatio diuina. As for this article, the Byſhops did not make much of, for they perceiued that it was gathered without any ſētence. For my ſaying was, that men ſhould make their prayers in ſuch a fayth, and with ſuch a deuotion, that God might accept them, and not ſo idely, and without all deuotion bable, and ſay their dyriges, alonely of bondage and of cuſtome, and not of deuotion. I brought the ſaying of the Apoſtle for mée, which ſayth: Let your peti-
Phil.4. cions, and prayers appeare before
Iaco.1. God. And alſo hée that aſketh, let him aſke in faith, nothing doubting.

The xxiiij. article. THere is no prayer acceptable to God, except it bée fetched from the fyre of the aulter. This article was alſo gathered without any ſentence, for my aduerſaries did not greatly care what they made of ſuch articles, as pertayned to learning, and edifi-ing. And therefore they neuer erred ſo much as they did in them. For in thoſe articles that were againſt the Byſhops, they did great diligence, & in a part of them gathered theyr very true ſentences, and myne owne wordes. though in thoſe thinges they left out vncharitably, thoſe wordes that made for my declaration, and alſo for the probation of my ſaying, the which I haue alſo here left out, all onely adding the articles as thye laid them againſt mée, that all men may ſée ỹ worſt that they had againſt mée. For all men may thynke that they wil neither lay the beſt, nor yet the truth againſt mée. But this article dyd I thus preach: that men ſhould not in their petitiō and prayers, put to their good workes, nor their good déedes, and their merites: As O Lord I doe faſte, I doe pray, I am no theife, I am in charitie with all the world, and for them deſire God to bée mercifull vnto them. But they ſhoulde deſire the father of heauen to bée mercifull vnto them, alonely for Chriſtes merites. For they were ỹ things wherby both wée, and our prayers are accepted in the ſight of the father. And Iohn.14. to proue this I brought certayne Scriptures. As this: whatſoeuer yée ſhall aſke the father in my name, hée ſhall geue it you. And alſo the figure of ỹ old law, where there was no ſacrifice done, but with ỹ fire that was taken from the aulter. Now did I ſay, that Chriſt is our aulter. But thys myne aduerſaries vnderſtode not. But I maruayle what this article doth amonge the other hereticall articles? I thinke they doe not recken it hereſie.

The xxv. article. HEe did not praye for the three eſtates of holy Churche, neyther made hée his prayers in ỹ beginning of his ſermon, according to the olde cuſtome, but at the laſt ende, and for the true knowledge of all Chriſten men, making no prayer to our Lady, nor for the ſoules in purgatory, nor for grace expedient. If the Byſhops had had any indifferency in them, or any charitie, they woulde haue bēne aſhamed that ſuch articles ſhoulde haue bēne brought afore thē. What is this to the purpoſe of hereſie, that I did not pray for the three eſtates of holy Church? And yet they graunt, that I prayde for all true Chriſtē mē, and that men might come to the true knowledge. Is not all the church contayned in this? But they bē vncharitable men, without all cōſideration, they bée so blinded in their worldly honour. That I did not pray to our Ladye, nor for the soules in purgatory, what is that to heresy? for then were the Apostles heretykes, for they did not pray in their sermons to our Lady, nor yet to ỹ soules in purgatorye. And as for praying for grace expedient, that is not the preacher bound to doe openly. But mée thinketh by these articles, that God gaue mée a greate grace, that I durst so boldely reproue their abhominable liuing not fearing the daunger that should come thereof, but this I leue to other mens iudgement. And I dare boldelye say, ỹ if I had spoken tentymes asmuche against ỹ auctorite of our noble prince and agaynst all his noble dukes, and Lordes, & had taken all power, both spirituall and temporall from them, and geuen it to our idle byshops, then had I bëne a faythfull christen man, for I had defended ỹ liberties of holy church. But god send them his grace, and space for to conuert. Amen.

Liberties of holye Churche may in wise bee impugned.

The whole disputation betweene the Byshops and Doctour Barnes.

NOw most honorable, & gracious Prince, here haue I shewed your grace the articles, that myne aduersaries vncharitablie, hath layd agaynst me. In the whiche though a greate many of my wordes, and sayinges were. Yet neuertheleſſe there was left out all those things, that did make for my declaration, and for probations of my wordes, and also for mollifying, and temperatyng of those thinges, that seemed to bée somewhat hardily spokẽ, agaynst the Byshops. The whiche thinges were to longe to recite vnto your noble grace. But as God is my iudge, and also my conscience, and all my wordes, and dëedes, and all maner of my liuyng, and conuersation, I did neuer intende, to speake agaynst the Byshops, or els any other man, further then their liuing, and conuersation were agaynst the blessed word of God, and the holy doctrine of Christes Churche. For the truth is, there was no great clerke in the Church of God this. CCCC. yeares, that wrote any thyng, but hee complained behemently agaynst the liuing of the spiritualtie. Let their bookes bée brought forth, to proue whether my saying be truth or not. Alas is it not a pituous case, yea and also agaynst all law and conscience, that I poore man shalbée thus violently cast away, for speaking agaynst these vices, that bëne damned by almightie God: and by all hys holy creatures: yea and the Byshops them selues, and all the worlde must graunt that they doe liue as euill, yea and rather worse, then I did speake: Oh Lord God, where is loue to vertue: where is the shamefaltnes that Christen men ought to haue: where is Iustice: That I shalbée thus shamefully cast awaye, for speakyng of that thynge, that euery Christen man is bounde to speake: They doe so lyue, and I beyng a preacher of the verity, must bée condemned, for speakyng agaynst it.

All the auncient & learned fathers cry out vpõ the pryde & lewdelyuyng of the Byshops.

But most gracious and mightie Prince, God hath set your grace in the same honour, and dignitie, that you by Gods ordinaunce, ought to defende those men, that are oppressed wrongfully. Wherefore humbly, and mékely, and with all lowlynes, & reuerence, I beseech your grace to minister vnto me gracious iustice, & let me bée heard indifferently, whether that I can iustifie my cause, with learnyng or not. If I can not iustifie it, your grace is a minister of iustice, I will refuse no maner of payne that shal bée due for my trãsgressiõ. Wherfore ones agayne, with all mékenes, and lowlynes, in the way of charitie, and in Christes name, and for his swéete bloud sake, that hée hath shed for your grace, yea and also by ỹ ver-sue of your auctoritie, that the heauẽly God hath deliuered you, I doe require, and desire of your grace audience, and iustice. I and all my parẽtes bee your naturall subiectes borne, and a great many of vs hath dyed in your graces quarell and yet is there none of vs, but are ready to doe your grace that seruice, with our bodyes, & blond that shall become trewe subiectes to doe, to their noble prince. Wherfore thyrdely, in my name, and in all our names (for al they are rebuked in me) with all meekenes & reuerence, I beseche your grace of gracious audience and of fauorable iustice. This thing I trust your grace will not denye me Nor yet take any displeasure with me your powre subiect, for thus requiring. For I haue none other prince, nor Lorde to seke vnto here on earth, but vnto your grace onelye. Nor can I come to any charitable ende with myne aduersaries. Wherefore I am compelled by extreme violence, thus to complayne vnto your grace, for my name, and fame, and estemacion, & all thinges that belong to an honest powre man in this world, is take wrõgfully from mee hereby, and haue bene by ỹ space of .9. or 10. yeres (which is no smale tyme) compelled to liue in misery, and obloquy. Wherfore most gracious prince, lamentably I cry, & call vnto your grace, for gracious audience, & indifferent iustice. It were to long a processe to trouble your grace with, to tell all the vncharitable handlyng, that the Cardynall, and the byshops apoynted by hym, dyd vse with mee. But I wil make vnto your grace a short somme of it, as neare as I can call now to remembraunce.

1525. In the yeare of our Lorde. 1525. ỹ. 24. day of December, dyd I make a sermon, at the request of the parish in S. Edwardes church in Cambrige out of the which sermon dyd myne aduersaries gather these articles: which when I knew, I offered my selfe to preach agayne the sonday folowing. And to declare my selfe, and my meanyng clearely. But Doctour Rydley, and Doctour Preston, chaplens, and kynsmen to ỹ byshop of London fond the meanes, ỹ the Vicechaũcelour did inhibet me to preach. But I could neuer know any reasonable cause why, but that alonely hee sayde, it shoulde bee for my profyt to holde my peace. And with this I was so content. Tyll at the last, that these foresayd doctours with one master Tyrell gathered in in writyng certayne articles, and presented them to the vicechauncelour, which sent for mee, and asked mee, what I sayd to those articles. I aunswered, that they were none of myne, But certayne wordes, and sentences there were in them, that I had spokẽ, but that was left out, ỹ should make for my declaratiõ. Wherefore I sayd they were none of myne, And that I would bee reported by the audience. To this hee sayde, that I should take hede what I denied, for if they brought wytnes agaynst me, thẽ must I nedes dye. I aunswered, that the witnes shoulde bee false, for I neuer spake them. Then sayde hee, I could not proue a negatiue. I aunswered, that I would proue ỹ witnes false, what so euer hee were. Hee sayd, whether they were true or false, I must suffer for it, if witnes come in agaynst mee, for that was the lawe, I sayd, how ỹ was a piteous case. And by that lawe they might condemne our S. Christ. Hee sayd, how ỹ I shoulde remember mee what I did, for the matter was so daungerous, and so haynous in the lawe, that I might haue no counsell. Then I aunswered, & sayd, well, let god helpe, which knoweth all things. This was in the vniuersite scholes, the dores shut fast, no man being w in on my parte, but I alone. But of my aduersaries parte, was there doctour Rydly, doctour watson, doctour Preston, and a doctour of law, whose name I haue forgotten, their was also one master Foke, & mayster Tyrel which was appoynted amonge them, to bee the presenter of these articles.

Doct. Barnes inhibited of preachyng.

The Popish law is tyrannous.

Nowe the Vicechauncelour when hee coulde haue no more of mee, in cõmunication betwene vs, hee asked mee, what I would doe, I answered, hee should goe his way, and set hym downe, and heare their complaint,

and

And I would make such an aunswere as God should put in my mynde. Hée required me instantly, not to cast my selfe away. So hée went and set hym downe, and I was called before him. As soone as I came, then stode forth M. Tyrell, & presented a roule, in the which were certayne articles (as hée sayd) gathered out of my sermon, of ỳ which some of them, sayde hée, were contentious, some were seditious, some were sklaunderous, and some were hereticall. When hée had thus spoken, Then sayd I to hym, God M. Tyrell, wyll you present any of these articles as heresye? At this word spake ỳ vicechauncelour to mée, good mayster doctour, let that passe. Wyll you hée content to submyt your selfe? Then sayd I where so euer I haue spoken against Gods word, or against the exposition of holy doctours, I will hée content to bee reformed, and to submyt my selfe. But with this was not doctour Rydlye, nor doctour watson content, except I should adde vnto it, If I had offended the lawes of the church. But at that I stopped, and sayde, it was to large, for I knewe not, what they ment by the lawes of the church, nor I was no doctour of lawe. Wherefore I iudged it sufficient for mée, to bée reported by Gods worde, & by the exposicion of holy doctours. For that was my facultie. Thẽ the Vicechauncellour reken ed, that it was sufficiẽt for mée. But we could not agree in a great space, in this thing. Wherefore I sayd I would agrée to all maner of lawes, ỳ were not gaynst Gods worde, nor S. Agustine nor S. Hierome, nor yet against none of the foure doctours. So did it rest ỳ day, at this poynt, and no more was handeled. For in this tyme was the whole body of ỳ vniuersitie gathered togither, and knocked at the schole dores, and said, they would heare the examination, seeing the matter was manifest. And these few persõs should not take auctorite on them onely to here, and to determine such causes. Than the Vicechauncelour sent the bedell to the dore, requiring them to hée content, but they were the more moued, and knocked forer. So rose the Vicechauncelour, and went hym selfe to the dore, & gaue them as good and as faire words as hée could. But the conclusion was, they would not departe, except they might heare this matter iudged, and as they sayd, it apertained to learning. And they were the body of the vniuersitie. So ỳ Vicechauncelour came backe agayne vnto vs all, and sayde, wée must geue ouer this matter for the vniuersitie is in a rumour, & so departed wée a sunder.

Doctour Barnes is accused of contention, sedition and heresie.

The bodye of the Vniuersitie stirred vp.

Thẽ within two or three dayes after, was I cauled into Clare hall, to ỳ Vicechauncelours chamber, where were also the foresayde doctours, gathered agaynst mée. There did they entreate mée with good wordes for to hée cõtent to bee ordered after mayster Vicechauncelours councell, I did require, that mayster Vicechauncelour would indifferently heare mée, and myne aduersaries togither, And then if I had sayde any thing agaynst learning, I would hée ordered at mayster Vicechaũcelours cõmaũdement. Thẽ sayd they, that it was done for my prayer, that mayster Vicechaũcelour did not sit in iudgmẽt. For (as they sayd) they were all my frends, and would hée lothe that my matter should hée heard in iudgemẽt. For if there came any witnes against mée (as they were sure there would) thẽ were I but lost. I aunswered, what witnes soeuer should come to proue those articles as they were layde against mée, I would proue them false. For I had preached openly, and many learned men were at my sermon, and I doubted not, but they would testify the truth for both partyes. But then aunswere was made mée, that if thre witnesses came agaynst mée, then would thrée and twenty not helpe mée, for that was ỳ course of the lawe. Then sayde I: This is a pitious case, ỳ a man shall not hée reported indifferently by his audience, seing it was in the Vniuersite. But by 2. or 3. false witnesses. Wherefore I would abide the daũger & let myne aduersaries doe their vttermost. If I shall thus dye, I must hée content (sayd I) I am no better then our master Christ. Then was there many wordes vsed, and many daungerous wayes shewed mée, to haue withdrawen mé from this purpose, but I did stād fast in it. So they required mé to goe backe into a chāber, & they communed togither secretly alone. And at ỳ last they sent vnto mé the Vicechauncelour, which intreated mé very sore, to bée content with their ordinaunce. For by his cōscience hée could not perceiue, but they were all my frendes, and intended to saue both my name and fame, which they could not doe (the lawe was so daungerous) onles I would followe their counsell. Then asked I M. Vicechaūcelour, what they would that I should doe. For truely (said I) these articles were falsely, and vncharitably layde vnto mé. Hée aunswered, that there should bée no ieoperdy in ỳ matter, and therfore I should bée contēted to graunt thē. But vnto ỳ I would not agrée in any wise. Wherfore I desired hym to depart agayne vnto thē, and I would come, & make them a resonable aunswer, So came I in, making this protestation first.

Here yee may note the course of ỳ Popes lawe.

A subtile, craftie, and popishe Chaunce-lour.

A protestation.

Right worshipful maisters, I trust you bée all my frendes, and haue so much charity in you, that you will not cast mé away, onles you perceiue a great faute, and obstinacy in mé, the which I trust you shall not fynde, for I did neuer intende, to speake, nor yet to doe, agaynst Christs holy doctrine. Notwithstanding, seing that ỳ lawe is so daungerous, as M. Vicechauncelour, and you haue tolde mé: Therfore I had rather put my selfe vnto your charitie, then to stande to ỳ daunger of the lawe. And for this purpose two of these articles that be layd vnto mé thus I aunswer.

D. Barnes answere to the articles alleaged against him.

These articles as they doe here stande, were neuer mine nor I neuer intended to speake them, as they bee here written. But neuertheles I doe graunt, ỳ here bé many of my wordes and also a great many of my sētēces ỳ I did speake. Wherfore I doe submit my self vnto you, desiring you charitably to deale wt mé, & not to take my wordes to ỳ worst sence. Then made they mé to bée sworne, to stande to ỳ Vicechauncelours determination. At that I stopped a great while, but at ỳ last I graunted to abide his determinatiō, if it were not agaynst learning and charitie. And vpon this the Vicechauncelour alloyled mé, as they said Ab excōmunicacione iuris. Now had they there standing vnknowen vnto mé, a notary, which did make an instrument of all my agrēmentes. For I did not know, but ỳ they dealt with mé as frendes, and as priuate persons. And this instrument made by the notary, was afterward presēted vnto the court, for witnes against mé, when I was brought bēfore the byshops. And as we were thus talking in ỳ Vicechauncelours chamber, The Vniuersitie gathered togither, so that ỳ bodye of ỳ Vniuersitie was there. And then sent they by certayne maysters, and bachelours of diuinity to ỳ Vicechauncelour, requiring him that they myght bée admytted to here the examination of mé, in as much as they had hearde mé preach. Aunswere was made agayne, that there was no suche matter in hand, but that they did deale with mé frendlye, to deuise an ende moste to my profite. By the reason of the which congregation, we were compelled to departe a sonder, as for that tyme. And so rested ỳ matter still, the space of a moneth. In the which tyme, doctour Watson, and doctour Preston, at the agrēment of the Vicechauncelour, wente & wrote a reuocation, and made it of euery article by it selfe, making me in the reuocation to graunt ỳ articles, as they were layde against mé. Addyng also to euery article, that bēcause some men had so vnderstode mé, therefore I should reuoke the article, as in the fyrst article, where I had sayde, after the mynde of S. Hierome, ỳ all dayes were of lyke vertue. They added, ỳ certaine men did take mé, ỳ I would haue no holy dayes. And therefore I must reuoke that article as herefye.

Note here the craftie and wily Foxes.

Note here the most false and deuilishe practise of the popishe clergie.

Item where I had spoken in myne articles agaynst the gorgious pompe, and pride of spirituall ornamentes. They did adde, ỳ certayne men dyd take out of my sayinge, that I would haue no halowed chalices, nor vestimentes, nor yet any ornamentes in ỹ church, And therefore I must reuoke that article, as heresy. And so in euery one of my articles where they coulde expounde a word to an euell sentence or els of malice, make any mischeuous, or sedicious saying, that layd they to mée, & would haue me reuoke it, as though it had béene my saying, and meaning. So there was neuer an article, but that was either heretical, sedicious, contentious, blasphemous or els, pijs auribus offensius.

Moreouer, I had in ỹ same place a good frende, the which wrote the same reuocation priuely, as fast for mée as hée did wright it for doctour Preston. The which man is yet aliue. Nowe when I had this thing in wryting, I called into my chambre, an eyght, or tenne, of ỹ best learned men, ỹ were in Cambrydge, the which hée yet aliue, as farre as I know, sauing maister George Stafforde, and maister Bylney. Of all these I asked their counsell, what they thought best to doe, seing this reuocation was so vncharitably made, and thinges falsly layde vnto my charge, which were not in myne articles, nor yet could hée charitably take out of them. They also concluded, that it was neither right nor conscience, that I should agrée to this reuocation. Wherefore afterward when the Vicechauncelour called me agayne afore doctour Rydley, doctour Watson, doctour Preston and maister Tyrell, and deliuered mée this reuocation in his chambre, which I should rede openly ỹ sonday following in S. Edwardes church, and should saye neyther more nor lesse, then was therin written. Yea and should also promyse, that if I were afterward called forth by any hygher power spirituall, to bée content, and suffer all payne, & punyshment, that hée or they shoulde lay vnto mée, Then would I not agrée in no wise to this determination, nor consent to these condicions. For they were neyther agréeable to learning nor yet standing with charitie.

There were certayne articles condemned for heresie, that were as true as S. Johns Gospell. And charity would not, that I should bée blamed for that thing, that I neuer spake, nor thought, but alonely malicious persons dyd take out of my sayinges false meaninges. Wherefore here was a greate tragedy among thē. For some sayde, that I was periured, by ỹ reason I was sworne to abide the determination of ỹ Vicechauncelour. And the other parte rekened, that my oth bound mée not, by the reason that it was so vncharitably made, the which was not their promyse to doe: Yea ỹ Vicechauncelour hym selfe, thought it to extreme. So ỹ after many words ỹ the cōgregation of them was dissolued, and I should make an aunswere within eyght dayes, what I would do Now in the meane season, did maister Tyrell ride to London, and founde ỹ meanes (by the reason that hée could not obtayne his mynd in the Vniuersitie, for I sayd I would appaele from the vicechauncelour, to ỹ whole body of the Vniuersitie) that the Cardinal sent downe doctour Capon, and a sergeant of armes, called Gybs̄, which did arest mée in the Vniuersitie, for to appere before your graces counsell. So was I brought vp to London, ỹ Tuesday afore shroue Sondaye, and on the Wedensday at night after was I brought afore the Cardinall in hys gallery at Westmynster, which toke & red all my articles quietly, tyl he came to the 6. There hée stopped and asked mée, if a byshop might haue any more Cities thē one. I aunswered, ỹ a Byshop was instituted to instruct, and teach the Cytie, & therfore hée might haue as much vnderneth him, as hée were able to preach and teach to. And to that mée thought S. Paule did agrée commaūdyng Timothe to set in euery Cytie a Byshop. Wherefore I knew none other order but this.

Then sayde hée: That in Paules dayes, a Citie was 6. or 7. myles long, beside the subburbes and of that whole Cytye, was there but one Byshop. So likewise now, a byshop had but one Cathedrall sée, and all the residue of the countrey, were as subburbes vnto it. To this I sayde nothyng, for hée woulde heare mée no more, but returned and read forth ẏ articles, till that he came to the xxij. articles, where hée founde his ppliers, and his pollaxes. And there hée stopped, and had a great disputation with mée of them, as I haue written afore in my articles. So at ẏ last wée came so farre, that I sayde, how these articles were uncharitably gathered out of my Sermonde. Than hée sayd, you are defamed of heresie. I answered, and sayde: I trust there is no good mã that knoweth me, which will suspect mée. Hée sayde, doe not you knowe that there is a rumour, how that you bée brought afore us for heresie? I aunswered, that rumour is scattered by mine aduersaries of malice, and not of any occasion that I haue geuẽ. Ye sayd, I beléeue that to bée true, but how will you purge your selfe: I answered, I wyll bée bounde to bryng unto your grace xx. honest men, and well learned, of good name and fame, that shall depose for mée, how that I am not worthy of this infamy. Then hée sayde, can you bring mée vi. or x. doctours of diuinitie, that will sweare for you, that you are neyther giltie, nor yet worthy to bée suspected? I aunswered, that it was not possible to bryng so many Doctours for mée, séeing there were no more but two at my Sermonde, and they belonged both to Byshops. Wherefore I supposed they would not testifie wyth mée: But I woulde bryng as many honest men, as shoulde bée required, and they shoulde bée as well learned, and better then I, for to testifie wyth mée. But he sayde, that woulde not helpe, for they must bée my péeres, after ẏ forme of the law. I sayd, ẏ was impossible. Then sayd hée, you must bée burned. I answered, that I trusted to haue more grace, and fauour at hys hand. Hée sayde, hée was sworne to mayntayne the lawes of ẏ church, and therfore hée must follow ẏ forme of the lawe. Wherefore I shoulde take deliberation with my selfe, whether I woulde stande to the course of the lawe, or els submit my selfe to his grace.

Cardinall greatly delighted and esteemed his crosses and pollaxes.

Nothyng els.

Now because I had once submitted my selfe to the Vicechauncelour, and I was thereby excuuented: Therefore, I thought I would now not bée so hasty in submitting my self: And therefore I aunswered, that I woulde submit my sélfe to his grace, in any thing that coulde be proued agaynst mée, that I had spoken, contrary to learning. Ye sayd, that this was no submission. And I woulde graunt no more. So after much communication, hée concluded wyth mée, & sayd, how that I was but a fole, & coulde not perceiue, how good hée was unto mée. Wherefore séeing that I woulde bée reported by my déedes, therefore hée had signed xb. or xb. Doctoures (sayde hée) the which shoulde ẏ nexte day heare mée. And so the nexte day, which was on the Thursday before Festigam Sonday, was I brought into the Chapterhouse of Westminster, where sate ẏ Byshop of Bathe, as principall iudge, and the Byshop of saint Asse, the Abbot of Westminster, the Abbot of Burye, Doctour Quarton, Doctour Allen, Doctour Stephen then secretary, with many moe, which I knew not. Then sayd the Byshop of Bathe: Syr you are defamed of heresie: but I denyed the same. Hée sayde, yée doe sée what a multitude of people here is gathered to heare your examination, whiche must rise of some fame? I sayde, that I knewe no cause of that gathering, for I knewe neuer a man there, nor brought any man wyth mée, sauing a childe of xij. yeares.

The maner of the examinatiõ at Westminster.

Than sayde hée, Dyd you neuer heare of any man, that you were accused of heresie? Than sayde I, Men may say their pleasures, I can not let them, but it is no matter to mée as long as I am faultles.

Then sayde hée, wée doe beléeue that you are faultles, but yet you must purge your selfe, and declare your innocency. I answered, to that I was content, and woulde bée reported by all men that euer knew mée, or heard mée. Well sayde hée, that is wel said. Now sayde hée, bée there certayne articles deliuered unto us, agaynst you, what

what say you to them? My desire was to know myne accusers. Nay sayde hée, wée proceede after an other forme of the lawe, wherefore, what say you to these articles? I aunswered, that they were vncharitably gathered agaynst mée, wherefore I did deliuer certayne articles into the court, subscribed with mine owne hande. As sone as they had them, than had they what they woulde, for I was nowe come in further daunger, then I wist of, for now must I nédes purge my selfe after their request, or els reuoke all thinges that they had alde against mée, as though they had béene myne, or els I must nédes dye, after their lawe. The which thyng I than neyther knew, nor suspected, And thys hath béene the cause, that all maner of men, whatsoeuer they were that came afore them, were they neuer so good, nor innocent, must nédes bée heretykes, if they were not good vnto them, the which they were seldome, as their déedes hath declared.

The more innocēt the sooner trapped and condemned among the Papistes.

But to come to our purpose, they enquired diuers questions of mée, nothing perteyning vnto mine articles: As whether a man might sweare or not? And whether my Lord Cardinall were myne ordinarye iudge or not, wyth other lyke captious interogations, at the last they came to my first article, and inquyred of mée, if all dayes were alyke. I sayde, after the mynde of S. Hierome, that all dayes were equall. Then asked they mée, if wée shoulde kéepe any holy dayes? I sayde, yes. And in this matter wée had a great disputation, till at the last my Lord of Rochester came. And hée asked mée if this commaundement, Sabatum sanctifices, were a ceremoniall, or a morall precepte? I answered, that it was a ceremoniall, alleaging for mée S. Augustine. Thā sayd hée, that I was not learned. But allwayes when they had asked of mée a question, and I had assoyled it, so that they neyther woulde, nor coulde abiecte any thyng agaynst mée, than was I commaūded allwayes to stand a parte. And they layde their heades togither, till they had inuented an other captious question. Than was I called agayne, and myne answere geuen, I was cōmaunded backe agayn. Thus they continued with me thrée dayes, in the which space their Notary wrote a reuocation of all my articles, before the tyme that myne aunswere was heard. And on the thyrde day after none, about iij. of ỹ clocke, was there a greate long rolle offered vnto me for to read word by word as it there stode, and commaundement was geuen me by ỹ Bysshop of Bath, that I should not speake one word afore the people, more or lesse, thē was written in the rolle, for if I did, hée would handle me well inough. So I required first to sée what was writtē in the rolle, or I would graūt vnto it. Aunswere was made, that if I would read it as it was written, well & good, if not, I should stand to the ieoperdy. So I desired them to know, if they had condemned any of my articles for heresie.

Epist. xix

They sayd, yea. I asked thē which it was. They sayd they would not tell me more, then was writtē. I aunswered, Alas my Lordes, ỹ truth is, that to my iudgement I haue spoken nothyng, but that standeth with S. Augustine, with S. Hierome, and with other Doctours of holye Churche. Wherfore if it shall chaunce me thus to bée cōdēned, and not to bée taught: wherein, I can not tell what I should preach in tyme to come. The Bysshop of Bathe aunswered, that I shoulde take no care for that, for as for preachyng hée would prouide for me. But I should alonly aunswere, if I would read this rolle, or not. I desired that they would first pointe with their finger (if they wold not speake it) which article they had condemned for heresie, and I would bée bounde to proue it true by S. Augustine, or els by S. Hierome, or I would bée takē for an hereticke. To this said the Bysshop of Bathe, that if S. Augustine, and S. Hierome were here, they should stād to the determination of the Church. Vnto whom I sayd, that the Church had so determined of S. Augustine, & S. Hierome, that if any other church determined agaynst them, I would suspect it. Well sayth hée. If you will stand vnto them, doe. We are contẽt, alonely tell vs whether you will read this rolle or not.

Then sayd I. My Lordes, I beséech you in the way of charitie, and for Christes sake, deale charitably with me, & doe me no wrong. For S. Paule sayeth, that you haue power geuen, to edifyng, and not to destruction. Very well, sayd the Bysshop of Bath, ye nede not to feare. Here bée to many witnesses, that we should oppresse you wrongfully. But sayd hée, tell vs whether you will read this rolle or not? This is the thyrd tyme, & the last. Then sayd I. I will not graũt to it, except I may first sée it. Doe as it shall please you. At this they sat all still, wonc loking on the other. Then the Bishop of Bath commaunded me to departe aside. So toke they their counsell togithers. And at the last I was called agayne, and this was sayd to me. Syr ye shall haue a man, that shall read it vnto you afore. Well said I. I am content. And so one of their Notaries, a lay mã, was assigned vnto me, and we departed a litle aside, & there bée began to read. The yeare of our Lord, such a day of the moneth, was one Doct. Barnes conuented before the bysshops in Westminster, for certeine articles, which were gathered out of a Sermonde, that hée preached in Cambridge, of the whiche, some of them bée sclaunderous, some bée erronious, some bée contentious, some bée seditious, some bée foolishe, and some bée hereticall. When that hée came to this worde hereticall. I asked hym, which of them were hereticall? Hée answered mée agayne, yée haue heard what my Lordes sayth. I can make you no answere.

Note here the tyranny of the Papistes.

Alas sayd I, shall I bée thus condẽned for an hereticke, and can not tell what is myne heresie? Then sayd hée, it belongeth not to me, speake vnto them. Well said I. Read no more. So went I agayne before the Bysshops. And fell downe on my knées, and desired them for the better passion of Christ, that they would shewe vnto me, whiche article they condemned for heresie, and then if I would not bée taught, they should handle me after the forme of law. But to this the Bysshop of Bath aũswered, & sayd, I should chose whether I would read ỳ rolle, or els bée burned: ỳ one of both I should doe. Thẽ sayd I, Jesus haue mercy on me, I will surely not read it. And so I deliuered it to them againe.

That was the lest.

Then the other Doctours cryed vppon me, the one here, the other there, that I shoulde remember my selfe, and not to cast my selfe awaye after this manner. For to read the rolle, said they, was but a small thing, and I was neuer the worse mã. And I should sée that my Lord Cardinall should bée good, & gracious vnto me, and they would all speake for me, so that I supposed in very deede, that they would haue required no more of me, but for to haue read the rolle afore ỳ face of the world, that I should not seeme to haue the victory agaynst them all, which thing I did not greatly regarde. But in very deede, and if I had knowen, that there had bene so much Poyson, tyranny, and cruelnes, in them, as I founde afterward, I would neuer haue read it, to haue dyed for it. But God bryngeth all thinges to passe at his pleasure.

Grace without deseruyng.

Now vpon this opinion that I had in them, and by the reason of theyr good wordes and pitnous, that they spake vnto mée. I graunted to reade the rolle. But than when I would haue read it, the Bysshoppe of Bathe sayd, it was to late. So was there a great disputation betwéne them, vpon the matter: Till that Doctour Quarton sayd, my Lorde it is not to late, for it is all in one session, and in the tyme of one iudgement. But the Bysshop of Bathe (our Lord forgeue him) sought all ỳ meanes ỳ hée could, & vsed all maner of crueltnes to haue destroyed mée. Neuertheles, at ỳ last hée deliuered mée ỳ rolle for to reade. Thẽ was all ỳ people ỳ stode there, called to heare me. For in ỳ other iij. dayes, was there no man suffered to heare one worde that I spake. So after their commaundement that was geuen mée, I red it, adding nothing to it, nor saying one word, that might make for myne excuse, supposing that I should haue founde the Bysshoppes the better.

to

Note here what crossing & tossing ỹ Papistes vse.

After this, I was commaunded to subscribe to it, & to make a crosse on it. Then was I commaunded to goe kneele downe before the Bysshop of Bathe, and to require absolution of hym, but hee woulde not assoyle mee, except I woulde first sweare, that I woulde fulfill the penaunce, that hee shoulde enioyne to mee. So did I sweare, not yet suspectinge, but these men had had some cromme of charitie within them. But when I had sworne, then enioyned hee mee, that I should returne that nyght agayne to pryson. And the nexte day, which was Fastingam Sonday, I should doe open penaunce at Paules. And that the worlde shoulde thynke that I was a marueylous haynous heretyke, the Cardinall came the next day with all ỹ pompe and pride, that hee could make to Paules church, and all to bring mee owte of consayte, And moreouer were there commaunded to come all ỹ byshops, that were at London, and all the abbots dwelling in London, that dyd weare miters. in so much that the prior of S. Mary spittell, and an other moncke, which I thinke was of Tower hill, were there also in their myters.

And to set the matter more forth, & that the worlde should perfectly know & perceiue, that the spirituall fathers had determined my matter substancially, The byshop of Rochester must preach there the same day, and all his sermon was agaynst Lutherians as though they had conicted me for one: The which of truth, and afore God, was as farre from those thinges as any man could bee, sauing that I was no tyrãt, nor no persecutour of Gods worde. And all this gorgyous fasing with myters and crossaues, abbotts, and priors were done, but to blinde the people, and to outface mee. God amend all thinges that is amysse. I had beene well content to haue suffered all these thinges, so I might haue come to a charitable end. But I must returne agayne after this to prison, & there remayne, tyll my Lord Cardinals farther pleasure. The which pleasure, I did abide fyrst and last, 2. yeares, and three quarters & yet could neuer bee at any poynt with thẽ. For I sent vnto ỹ byshop of London that was then, certayne worshipfull men of the Cyty of Lõdon, whose names bee these. Mayster Lambert, which hath beene Maior, M. Raynold, which hath beene shreue, M. Palmer, M. Petyt, M. Jones, and M. Pernell. And desyred these men in the way of charitie, to goe to the Bysshop of London, and to desire him to bee good and gracious vnto mee. And if I had offended, I would bee glad to make amends, almuch as hee should reasonably require of mee. Desiring hym to shew thẽ, what hee would of his charitie require me to doe, They for to bee bound vnto hym, ỹ I would keepe it.

The Cardinall had put the matter to hym.

This they dyd. But what aunswer ỹ they had of hym, they bee men aliue for the most part, they can tell. And amongst all other, maister Petit sayd vnto the byshop: Alas my Lorde it is a petuous case. If a man come in the daunger of your lawe, there is no remedy to helpe hym out. Yes sayde the byshop. What is that sayd maister Petyt? This is a yong man, & hath good frendes, which would bee right lothe to haue him cast away. wherefore if there bee any remedy, deuise you it, and we will bee bound for him. At this the byshop was astonyed, and sayde at the last, that hee would speake to my Lorde Cardinal for mee. Then these mẽ offered him to goe with him and to bee bounde for mee. Hee sayde it should not neede: But neuertheles hee spake so vnto them, or they departed, that whẽ they came home, there was not one of them, that durst geue mee so much bread & meat as hee durst geue his dog, nor yet speake one word to mee. Immediatelye after this, the byshop founde ỹ meanes, that I was sent to Northãpton, there to remayne as in a perpetuall prison.

The glorious assembly of the papistes.

God saue me from such speaking.

Thus most gracious prince haue they handled me your poore Oratour. I beseche your highnes, to bee good and gracious vnto mée, & iudge, if this bée charitable dealyng, thus to cõdemne mée for an heretyke & not to shew mæ the poynt wherefore. But euen with a violent tyrannye, to compell mæ to doe, & confesse what they will, or els to bæ put to death. And if there bée any of them yet, ỳ will come forth, and proue any of these articles herefye, I will not refuse to suffer any payne, that your grace shall iudge me worthy. Thus our Lord Iesus Christe preserue your noble grace euermore Amen.

Onely fayth iustifieth before God.

NOw, if your grace doe not take vppon you, to heare the disputation, & the probation of this article out of the groũd of the holy Scripture, my Lordes the Bishops will condẽne it, afore they read it, as their maner is to doe with all thynges, that pleaseth them not, and which they vnderstand not: and then crye they, heresy, heresie, an heretick, an heretick, hæ ought not to bæ heard, for his matters bée condemned by the Church, & by his holy fathers, and by all long customes, and by all maner of lawes.

Vnto whom, with your graces fauour, I make this aũswere. I would know of them, if all these things, that they haue reckened, can ouercome Christ, and his holy worde, or set the holy ghost to schole: And if they can not, why should not I then bée heard: that doe require it in the name of Christ: and also bryng for me his holy worde, & the holy fathers, which haue vnderstand Gods worde as I doe: Therfore though they will not heare me, yet must they nédes heare them. In holy Scripture, Christ is nothing els, but a Sauiour, a redéemer, a iustifier, & a perfect peace maker, betwene God, and man. This testimony dyd ỳ aungell geue of him in these wordes. Hæ shall saue his people from theyr sinnes. And also S. Paule, Christ is made our righteousnes, our satisfaction, and our redemption. Moreouer the Prophet witnesseth the same, saying: For the wretchednes of my people, haue I striken him. So that here haue we Christ with his properties.

Math. 1.

Esay. 53.

Now, if we wil truly cõfesse Christ, then must we graũt with our hartes, that Christ is all our iustice, all our redemption, all our wisedome, all our holynes, all alonely the purchaser of grace, alonly ỳ peace maker betwæne God and man. Briefely all goodnes that we haue, ỳ it is of hym, by him, and for his sake onely. And that we haue nède of nothyng towardes our saluation, but of hym onely, and wé desire no other saluatiõ, nor no other satisfactiõ, nor any helpe of any other creature, either heauenly or earthly, but of him onely, for as Saint Peter sayth, there is no other name geuen vnto men, wherein they must bæ saued. And also S. Paule sayth, by hym are all that beléeue iustified from all thynges. Moreouer S. John witnesseth the same, in these wordes. Hé it is, that hath obtained grace for our sinnes. And in an other place. He sent his sonne to make agreement, for our sinnes.

Christ is all in all.
Actes. 4.
Actes. 13.
1. Iohn. 2.
1. Iohn. 4.

Now my Lordes, here haue you Christ, and his very nature full, and whole. And hé ỳ denyeth any thyng, or any part of these thyngs, or taketh any part of them, & applyeth them, or geueth ỳ glory of thẽ to any other person, then to Christ onely, the same mã robbeth Christ of his honour, and denyeth Christ, and is very Antichrist. Wherfore my Lordes, first what say you to this: and vnto the propertyes of Christ: If you graunt them, thẽ are we at a poynte. For they proue that fayth in Iesus Christ, onely iustifieth afore God. Secondarily, if you denye it (as I am sure you will, for you had leuer deny your Crede, thẽ graũt it.)

Now

How can you thē auoyde, but that you bée the very Antichriſtes of whō S. Iohn ſpeaketh? For now haue we tryed your ſpirites, that they bée not of God, for you deny Chriſt. That is, you deny the very nature, & the properties of Chriſt. You graunt ỳ name, but you deny the vertue. You graunt that hée deſcended from heauen, but you deny the profite thereof. For hée deſcended for our health, this denye you, and yet it is your Créde. You graunt, that hée was borne, but you denye the purpoſe. You graunt, that he is riſen frō death but you deny the profit therof for hée roſe to iuſtifie vs. You graūt that hée is a Sauiour, but you deny that he is alonely ỳ sauiour. I pray you wherfore was hée borne? to iuſtifie vs in part? to redéme vs in part? to doe ſatiſfaction for part of our ſinnes? ſo ỳ we muſt ſet a payr of old ſhoes, a lompe of bread, & chéeſe, or a louſie gray coate to make ſatiſfactiō, for ỳ other part? Say what you will, if you geue not all, and fully, & alonely to one Chriſt, thē deny you Chriſt, and the holy ghoſt. And S. Iohn doth declare you to bé contrary to Chriſt. This may alſo bé proued by a playne Scripture of the holy ghoſt, which is this. No man in heauen, nor in earth, neither vnder the earth, was able to open the booke, or to loke on ỳ booke, till the lambe came, vnto whom the ſeniours ſpake, on this maner. Thou art worthy to take ỳ booke, & to open the ſeales therof, for thou waſt killed, and haſt redéemed vs by thy bloud.

1. Iohn. 4.

The Papiſtes denying onely faith to iuſtifie denye the nature of Chriſt.

Apoc. 5.

How ſay you to this my Lordes? In heauen was there none founde, neither by the aungels, nor yet by the ſeniours worthy to open the booke, but Chriſt onely. And will you finde, that they could not finde? will you ſet an helper to Chriſt, whō they ſet alone? But I pray you tel vs what hée ſhall bée. All the world knoweth, that they bée good workes. But now, from whēce come your good workes? whether from heauen? or out of the earth? or frō vnder the earth? If they were in any of theſe places, where were they when the aungels, and the ſeniours ſought them? Haue you founde them? whom they could not finde? but let this paſſe. I praye you, what will you lay for your good workes? or by what title will you bring them in, to ioyne them with the lābe in openyng of the booke? The ſeniours haue layd for them, that the lābe alonely was worthy to opē the booke, becauſe hée was ſlayne, and redéemed them with his precious bloud. Now what cauſe laye you for your good workes? The lābe hath alonely dyed for vs? The lambe hath alonely ſhed his bloud for vs? The lambe hath alonely redéemed vs? Theſe things hath hée done alone? Now if theſe bée ſufficient? then hath hée alone made ſatiſfaction, and is alonely worthy to be our redéemer, and iuſtifier.

Chriſt is our onely redeemer & iuſtifier.

Chriſt onely hath wrought our redēption.

Moreouer, they that bée in heauen confeſſe, that this lambe is alonely worthy to redéme them. Bée your workes better then theirs? or cā your workes helpe them? If they can? then is not the lambe alonely worthy to redéme them. Moreouer, the ſeniours fall downe before the lambe, geuyng him alonely prayſe. And ſhall your good workes ſtande vp by the lambe? Then bée they better then the ſeniours. But let vs proue this thyng by open Scriptures. S. Paule toke ſo great labours to proue this article, as hée neuer toke in any other, & all becauſe hée would make it playne, and ſtoppe the mouthes of the agaynſayers. But all this will not helpe them, that haue not the ſpirite of God. Neuertheles, we will by Gods fauour, doe the beſt we can to confounde the croked enemyes of Chriſtes bloud, & thoughe we can not make them his frendes, yet at the leſt we will ſo handle them, that they ſhall bée aſhamed openly ſo to ſpeake agaynſt him, as they haue done longe tyme, and ſo will we handle them (by Gods helpe) that all the world ſhal know, that they glory in Chriſtes name, and by hym bée they alſo ſo high promoted in this worlde, that they can not bée higher, And yet deſerue they of Chriſt, worſt of all men.

But let vs goe to our purpoſe. S. Paule ſayth: All men bée ſinners, and want

Roma.3. wante the glory of God, but they are iustified frely by his grace, thorough the redemption that is in Christ Iesu. What is this that all men haue sinned, yea and are iustified frely? How shall a sinner doe good workes? How can he deserue to be iustified? what call you frely? if there be any deseruing lesse or more, then is it not frely. What call you by his grace? if it be any part of workes, then it is not of grace. For as Saint Paule sayth:

Roma.11. Then grace were not grace. Here can be no euasion, the wordes be so playne. If you bring in any helpe of workes, then for so much is not our redēption frely, nor yet is it of grace, as concerning the part that commeth of workes, but partly of workes, and then doe you destroy all Saint Paule and his whole disputation. For he contendeth agaynst workes, & clearely excludeth workes in iustification, and bryngeth in grace onely. Nowe, that that is excluded in the whole by contention, can not be brought in, in parte to the cause. This is open in his wordes, where he sayth: Where is now thy reioyсing? It is excluded. By what lawe? by the lawe of workes? Nay, but by the lawe of fayth. We doe iudge therfore, that a man is iustified by fayth, without ỹ workes

Roma.3. of the lawe. Heare you not, that the glorіation of workes is excluded? and yet will you boaste your workes? Heare you not playnely S. Paules sentence, that iudgeth clearely wyth fayth, and agaynst all workes? How can this be auoyded?

Faith with out workes iustifieth.

Is it not cleare? What can be answere to it? Is not thys Paules proposition, that he toke to proue, faith onely iustifieth? It were but lost labour for Paule to proue that workes did helpe to iustification, For that the Iewes did graunt, and required no more, but that workes might not be clearely excluded. They were Christened, and content to receiue Christ for their sauiour, but not onely, and alonely. This was the contentation. In so much that they gloryed agaynst the Gentiles, which had no maner of workes, and for that dispised them, as people vnworthy to be iustified.

A crafty & subtile euasion.

But paraduenture here wyll be sayde, that Paule condemneth the workes of the olde lawe, but not the workes of the newe lawe. Are you nowe satisfied in your conscience? Thinke you, that you haue well assoyled S. Paules argumēt? Thinke you, that this is sufficient to auoyde Saint Paule, that hath take so great labour to proue this cause? Thinke you, that you shall be thus discharged afore God? If you doe, then goe boldly into the straite iudgement of God with this euasion, and doubt you not but there shall you finde S. Paule as stifly and as strongly against you, and your newe workes, as euer he was agaynst the Iewes, and their olde workes: And if he did condemne the workes of the law, that were instituted by the mouth of God, and the best workes that euer were? Thinke you that those workes that you haue inuented, shalbe there alowed?

All good workes are conteyned in the law of God

Briefely, what workes can you doe, or excogitate (that be good) which be not in the olde lawe? and of the olde lawe? Ergo, he speaketh of all maner of workes, for the lawe includeth all workes that euer God instituted. The highest, and the best, and most of perfection of all workes be, Opera decalogi, the workes of the ten Commaundementes. And these be the workes of the olde lawe, and can not iustifie, after your owne saying. Nowe what workes haue you of the newe lawe, other then these? or better then these? Our maister Christ sheweth, that in fulfilling ỹ. of these Commaundementes, be all workes included. What workes then be of the newe lawe, that were not commaunded in the olde? Paraduenture you will say: All those workes that Christ speaketh of in the v. of Math. be of the newe lawe, and not of the olde. For Christ sayth, I say vnto you: He that calleth his brother fole, or that loketh on a woman to desire her, and such like, doth offend. These seme to be workes of Christ, and not of Moyses. Ergo, there be workes of the newe lawe, that were not cō-maunded in the olde, and againſt thē diſputeth not S. Paule, ſay yē.

To this I anſwere that our maiſter Chriſt doth there repꝛoue ỹ falſe interpꝛetation, that the Scribes and Pharyſies did ſet to the lawe, but hē teacheth no newe workes, noꝛ is no geuer of any newe lawe. Foꝛ Saint Iohn.i. Iohn ſayth: The lawe is geuen thorough Moyſes, but grace and veritie came by Jeſus Chriſt. Hē is the gēuer of grace and mercy, as all the pꝛophetes teſtifieth, and not an other Chriſt ſuffered foꝛ our ſinnes. Moyſes. And therfoꝛe to purchace vs fauour, hē dyed on the croſſe, and ſo did not Moyſes: But hē commaundeth vs to doe this, and doe that. But Chriſt ſayth, hange thou on my doing, & beleeue thou, that I haue done foꝛ thē, foꝛ thē, and not foꝛ mē.

Now to our purpoſe, Chriſt I ſay doth interpꝛete, and declare the olde lawe agaynſt the Scribes and Pharyſes, which learned, that the lawe was fulfilled and content wyth outwarde woꝛkes, and that was their iuſtification. This falſe doctrine doth our maiſter Chriſt repꝛoue: And ſayth, that the lawe doth require a pure and a cleane hart, and will haue hys woꝛkes fulfilled out of the hart, and not alonely wyth hand, and fēte, and tothe, and nayle, as the Pharyſes ſayth, and teacheth. So that our maiſter Chriſt teacheth no new woꝛkes, but alonely exꝛecuteth the vertue of the olde lawe. And thus doth holy Doctours declare this v. chapiter of Math. and ſpecially S. Auguſtine. Auguſt. in ſer. Domini de monte. Exod. xx. & Leuit. xix. Wherfoꝛe out of that place cā not hē pꝛoued, that there hē certayne woꝛkes of the new law, that were neuer commaunded in the olde.

Moꝛeouer, loke in the olde lawe whether theſe thinges hē fōꝛbidden, oꝛ commaunded, and you ſhall finde that the woꝛdes of the law, and Chriſtes expoſition doth agrēe. So that our maiſter teacheth no newe thyng, noꝛ yet any newe woꝛkes. But now graunt, that there hē certayne woꝛkes of the new lawe, which hē not of the olde: yet haue you not, noꝛ cā not pꝛoue that thoſe ſhall iuſtifie? Foꝛ there can hē no moꝛe godneſſe in woꝛkes, then were in woꝛkes of the olde lawe, foꝛ they were to Gods honour, and to the pꝛofite of our neighbour. What godnes can woꝛks haue moꝛe? And yet you graunt, that they can not iuſtifie. How then ſhall your newe woꝛkes iuſtifie? Bleſſed Saint Paule diſputeth agaynſt them that were Chriſtened, and had both woꝛkes of the olde lawe, and alſo of the newe. And yet concludeth hē, that Chriſt alonely was their iuſtifier. Marke his argument, if righteouſnes cōmeth of the law, then is Chriſt dead in vayne: As hē woulde ſay: if the lawe helpe to iuſtifie (foꝛ that was the opinion of the Jewes) then is not Chriſt alonely your iuſtifier. If hē be not your iuſtifier alonely, then is hē dead in vayne. How will S. Paule pꝛoue this conſequent? On this maner: Eyther Chriſt doth thys thyng alone, oꝛ els hē is dead in vayne, foꝛ hē will haue no helper. Thys muſt nēdes hē the meaning of hys argument there.

What good nes is in good woꝛkes.

Now will I take this argument of S. Paule, and likewiſe diſpute agaynſt your newe woꝛkes. If newe woꝛkes doe helpe to iuſtifie, then is Chriſt deade in vayne. But Chriſt is not dead in vayne. Ergo new woꝛkes doe not helpe to iuſtify. The firſt part is Paules, The ſecond you graunt. Therfoꝛe the third muſt nēdes folow But let vs ſē how S. Paule pꝛoueth this pꝛepoſition by an example, not of the olde lawe as though hē diſputed alonely agaynſt the woꝛks of the ould lawe, But by that holy and excellent Patriarch Abꝛaham, whō no maner of woꝛkes coulde iuſtifye, but fayth onely. Thynke you ỹ S. Paule doth ſpeake here of the woꝛkes of the ould Rom.4. lawe? nay doubtles. Foꝛ how could Abꝛahā doe ỹ woꝛks of lawe, & there was no lawe geuē. 400. & 30. yeares after? wherefoꝛe S. Paule conſtrayneth you to conclude, that no maner of good woꝛkes, (though they hē ſoe good as Abꝛahams woꝛkes) can helpe to iuſtificacion. Galat.3.

Note alſo S. Paules argument. Abꝛahā was iuſtified ſo many yeares befoꝛe ỹ lawe was geuen. Ergo (ſaith hée) the lawe doth not iuſtifie. So like wiſe diſpute I agaynſt your newe woꝛkes. Men were ſufficiently, and perfectly iuſtifyed alonely by fayth, afoꝛe any new woꝛkes were geuen, oꝛ pꝛeached. Ergo, the woꝛkes of ẏ new lawe doth not iuſtifie of neceſſitie. The antecedent I pꝛoue thus. Abꝛaham, Iſaac, Iacob, and Iohn Baptiſt, and all the holy pꝛophetes were perfectly iuſtified, afoꝛe any new woꝛkes (as you take new woꝛkes) were ſpoken of. Ergo, men were ſufficiently iuſtified, alonely by fayth. If Saint Paules argument conclude, ſo muſt mine alſo. Wherefoꝛe ſay what you can, Here ſtandeth holy S. Paule ſtiffy, and ſtrongly foꝛ mée, and againſt you and fayth: That we bée fréely, and alonely iuſtified by fayth, without all maner of woꝛkes. But let vs ſée what S. Ambroſe ſayth to this text. They are iuſtified fréely, foꝛ they doing nothing, noꝛ nothing deſeruing, alonely by fayth are iuſtified by the gift of God. &c. Here you not, ẏ men woꝛking nothing at all, noꝛ nothing deſeruyng, are iuſtified by fayth onely: yea and fréely: you were wonte to cry foꝛ Sola, ſola, ſola, onely, onely, onely. Here haue you him, and to helpe him you haue alſo gratis, that is to ſaye, fréely, and alſo dono Dei, that is to ſay the gyft of God, and Nihill operantes, that is as much as woꝛking nothing at all. If theſe woꝛds, doe not exclude woꝛkes, and alowe fayth onely, I can not tell what woꝛds will doe it: graũt theſe woꝛdes, and I will bée content.

Ambro. ad Rom. 3.

I will alſo bꝛing you Oꝛigyne on this ſame text, whoſe woꝛds bée theſe. Paule ſayth, that the iuſtification of fayth is alonely ſufficient. So that if a man doe beléeue onely, hée is iuſtified, though there bée no woꝛkes done of hym at all. By fayth was the thefe iuſtified, without the woꝛkes of the lawe. Foꝛ our Lorde did not aſke him what hée had done: noꝛ did looke foꝛ any woꝛkes of him: but did accepte him all onely, foꝛ cõfeſſing of Chꝛiſt. It folowyth. Wherfoꝛe a man is iuſtified by fayth, Unto whom, as concerning iuſtification the woꝛkes of ẏ law helpe nothing. &c. What ſay you to Oꝛigine: that ſayth how men hée iuſtified, though they doe no good woꝛkes at all, foꝛ woꝛkes doe helpe nothing to iuſtification, but fayth onelye: Bée not theſe plaine woꝛds: Graũt theſe woꝛdes, and we will aſke no moꝛe of you. Here haue you alſo, Sola, ſola, ſola. So ẏ you néede not cry no moꝛe foꝛ Sola. Alſo Oꝛigine bꝛingeth an opẽ example of the théefe, that no man can deny. Who can haue leſſe good woꝛks then a théefe: which is neither good beꝛe God noꝛ man. So ẏ all ẏ woꝛlde may ſée, that this is no new opinion, ſéeing that the ſcripture, and alſo holy doctours doth teach it. Alſo S. Paule in the 9. chapter bꝛingeth in the Gentyle, which knoweth nothing of God, noꝛ hath done any good woꝛks, but cõtrary blaſphemed God & his name, & hath alwayes lyued in Idolatrye, and bẽne an bitter enemy vnto al goodnes.

Orig. ad Ro. lib. iij. cap. iij.

Fayth onely and alone iuſtifieth.

Roma. 9.

Roma. 10.

Hée bꝛingeth in alſo the Iewe full of good woꝛkes of the law which hath alſo great zeale vnto God, and to his woꝛkes, yea & of that Paule beareth hym witnes. Bꝛiefelye, hée bꝛingeth in foꝛ him ſuch a Woꝛke, that no man can complaine of, but is full of good woꝛkes. Yea take all the beſt of the Iewes togither, (foꝛ it were madnes of Paule to ſpeake of the damnable Iewes, that were open wꝛetches & damned by the iudgment of the lawe) with all their good woꝛkes, and yet S. Paule doth exclude thém, & repelleth them clearely from iuſtifycation, with all their good zeale, and with all their good woꝛkes, and concludeth with playne woꝛdes, that the gentyl, which is full of damnable woꝛdes, and had neither zeale, noꝛ loue vnto goodnes, is iuſtified by fayth onely.

Roma. 9.

Theſe bée S. Paules woꝛdes: we ſay, that the Gentils, which folowed not righteouſnes, haue obtayned righteouſnes. I meaꝛe ẏ righteouſnes, which cõmeth of faith. But Iſraell, which foloweth the lawe of righteouſnes, could not attayne vnto righteouſnes. Wherefoꝛe? Becauſe hée ſought it not by fayth, but as it were by the woꝛkes of the lawe. Bée not theſe playne woꝛdes? That the Gentiles, which folowed no righteouſnes noꝛ had any minde therunto, are iuſtified fied frely by fayth? Is not here Sola fides, only fayth? Moreouer, the Iew is reproued with all zeale, with all his loue, with all his ſtudye, and with all his good workes. Is not this a merueylous thing? yes verely, And ſo merueilous, that you ſhall neuer vnderſtand it, without you beleue. But peraduenture here ſhall be ſayd, that the good workes of the Iewes dyd not profite thē, becauſe they had no fayth: But if they had had faith, then would they haue holpen to their iuſtificatiō.

We can neuer attayne to ſaluation but by fayth in Chriſt.

To this I make anſwere, Trouth it is, good workes did not profite the Iewes, for lacke of fayth. But this is falſe, That workes ſhould haue holpen to iuſtification, if they had had fayth. For S. Paule proueth clerely that good workes helpe nothynge to iuſtification, nor euell workes let not the iuſtification, ỹ commeth by fayth. And this he proued by the example of the Gentyll, which had no good workes, but all damnable workes, & yet is iuſtified by fayth. Moreouer, the Iewe had ỹ zeale of God, and all manner of good workes to all things that the world cā deuiſe, yea & alſo S. Paule ſpeaketh of the Iewes ỹ were Chriſtened, & all this could not helpe. Wherfore no maner of workes, whether they be in fayth, or out of faith, can helpe to iuſtifye. Neuertheleſſe workes hath their glory, and reward. But the glory, and prayſe of iuſtification, belongeth to Chriſt onely. Alſo S. Paule proueth playnely in theſe wordes, that workes haue no place in iuſtification: To him that worketh is the rewarde not geuen of fauour, but of duetye: To hym that worketh not, but beleueth on hym, that iuſtifieth the wicked man, is fayth coūted for righteouſnes.

Roma. 4.

Fayth is accompted for righteouſues.

How thinke you by theſe wordes? be they not expreſſy agaynſt all workes? Sayth he not, ỹ iuſtification is imputed vnto him ỹ worketh not but alonly beleueth in hym, ỹ iuſtifieth ỹ wicked mā? I pray you what good workes doth the wicked mā? Marke alſo how he ſayth, that righteouſnes is imputed vnto him. Ergo, it is not deſerued. For that that is deſerued, is not imputed of fauour, but it muſt be geuen of duety. How thinke you? Is not this Sola fides, onely fayth? You know that there be but workes, and fayth that doe iuſtifie? And S. Paule excludeth workes clearely. Ergo, fayth alone remaineth. But peraduenture you will ſay, ỹ workes with fayth doe iuſtifie. Neuertheleſſe of mekenes, and lowlynes, & auoyding of all boaſt of goodnes, you wil geue all ỹ glory to fayth, as vnto ỹ principal thyng, & without the which no workes can helpe.

Notwithſtāding workes be good, and helpe to iuſtification, thoughe of mekenes you will not know it. Is not this damnable hipocriſie? yea and that with God? which were intollerable, if it were with men. But how cā you proue by Scripture, that workes are worthy of any glorye of iuſtification? Is not this open lyeng on fayth to geue all to him, & yet (as you ſay) he is not worthy of all? for workes be worthy of parte. If fayth be not worthy alone, confeſſe it openly, and geue workes his prayſe, and faith her prayſe, & ſay not one thyng with your mouth, and thinke an other in your hart. For God ſearcheth the priuities of hartes. Who hath required of you ſuch a mekenes? But I praye you how can workes helpe to iuſtification leſſe or more? when they be neyther done, nor yet thought of? Who is iuſtified, but a wicked mā? which thinketh nothing of good workes. But theſe meke lyes, deſerue none aunſwere. Wherefore let vs heare what holy Doctours ſay, on this texte. To hym that worketh not. &c.

Saint Ambroſe ſayth on this maner: It was ſo decreed of God, that after ỹ lawe, the grace of God ſhould require vnto ſaluation, alonely fayth. Which thyng he proueth by the example of the prophet, ſaying: Bleſſed is that man to whom God doth impute iuſtification, without workes. He ſayth, that they be bleſſed, of whom God hath determined without labour, without all maner of obſeruation, alonely by faith, that they ſhal be iuſtified before God. Bleſſed are they whoſe ſinnes be forgeuē. Clearly ly they are bleſſed, vnto whom without labour, or without any worke, their iniquities be remitted, and their ſinnes bee couered, and no maner of workes required of them, but alonely that they ſhould beleeue. &c.

Bee not theſe wordes playne? God hath decreed, that hee ſhall require nothyng to iuſtification, but fayth: And hee is bleſſed, to whom God imputeth iuſtification, without all manner of workes, without all maner of obſeruations. Alſo their ſinnes bee couered, & no maner of workes of penaunce required of them, but alonely to beleeue. Here haue you Sola fides, and Tantum fides, and here can you not ſay, that S. Ambroſe ſpeaketh alonely of workes of the law, but of all maner of workes, of all maner of obſeruations, yea and alſo of penaunce. Peraduẽture it will bee ſayd, as a great doctour ſayd once to me, that S. Ambroſe dyd vnderſtãd it of young children, that were newly baptiſed: them their fayth ſhould ſaue alonely without workes. How thinke you? is not this a likely aunſwere for a great Doctour of Diuinitie? for a great Duns man? for ſo great a preacher? Are not S. Paule, and S. Ambroſe wel auoyded? and clerkely? But I made him this aunſwere, that this Epiſtle was written of S. Paule to the Romanes, which were men, and not children, and alſo the wordes of Scripture, ſpeake of the man, and not of the childe. And S. Ambroſe ſayth, bleſſed is that man.

Sola fides iuſtificat.

D. Wethe-rall.

But at this aunſwere, hee was not a litle moued, and ſware, by the bleſſed God, let Ambroſe, & Auguſtine, ſay what they will, hee would neuer beleeue, but that workes dyd helpe to iuſtificatiõ. This was a Lordly word of a Prelate, & of a pyller of Chriſtes Churche. But what medlyng is with ſuch mad men. But yet peraduenture you will ſay, how that I take a peece of the Doctour, as much as maketh for my purpoſe. Notwithſtandyng hee ſayth otherwiſe in an other place, which I doe not bryng. What is that to me? yet is not my Doctour thus auoyded. For you cãnot deny, but this is his ſaying, and vppon this place of Scripture, and this doth agree with Scripture, or els hee doth expounde Scripture euill. Wherfore you muſt aunſwere to the ſaying of the Doctour in this place, for this is the place that is layd agaynſt you, and this is ỹ place, whereby other places muſt bee expounded. And if you dare deny him in this place, then will I deny him in all other places, by that ſame authoritie: then bee the holy doctours clearely gone. Neuertheles, holy Scripture ſtandeth openly agaynſt you, which if you deny, then haue I a cauſe to ſuſpect you. Wherefore take heede what you doe. But yet peraduenture will ye ſay, that I vnderſtand not S. Ambroſe, nor holy Doctours, as my Lord of Rocheſter ſayd howe I vnderſtode not Tertullian, hee had none other euaſion to ſaue his honour with. But this is not inough, ſo to ſay, but you muſt proue it, & other mẽ muſt iudge it, betweene you and me.

Here haue I tranſlated a great many of their ſayinges into Engliſh, let other men iudge, whether I vnderſtand them or not. Go ye to the Latin, and let vs ſee what other ſenſe you cã take out. But my Lordes, remember that our God is alyue, whoſe cauſe we defende, afore whom I dare well ſay, you are already confounded in your conſcience, wherfore doubt you not, but that terrible vengeaunce hangeth ouer you, if you repẽt not, which whẽ it cõmeth, cõmeth ſharpely. How are ye able to defend a thing, that you cãnot proue openly by holy ſcripture? Say what you will, your conſcience will murmour, and grudge, and will neuer bee ſatiſfied with mẽs dreames, nor yet with tyranny. Thinke you that your lawes, and your inuentiõs can bee a ſufficient rule for Chriſten men to liue by? and to ſaue their conſcience therby? Thinke you, that your cauſe is ſufficiently proued, when you haue compelled poore men by violẽce to graũt it? Then may we deſtroy all Scriptures, and receiue alonely your tyranny.

But my Lordes this matter is not righted by your iudgemẽt, but by our maſter Chriſt, and his bleſſed worde:

afore whoſe ſtraite iudgement you ſhall bée iudged, and that ſtraitly. For when all your grace, all your honour, all your dignitie, all your pompe, and pride, briefly all that your hartes doe nowe reioyſe in, ſhall lye in the duſt, then ſhall you bée called to a ſtraite rekening: It is no light game, nor no childes playe. Marke it well, for it lieth on your necke. But what needeth me to loſe many wordes, for if you be halfe ſo full of grace, as you ſay you bée of good workes, then will you recken it better then I can moue you. But againe to our purpoſe. S. Paule proueth the iuſtification of faith one-Gallat.2. ly, in theſe wordes. No man is iuſtified by the workes of the law, but by the faith of Jeſus Chriſt, and we doe beléeue in Jeſus Chriſt, that we may bée iuſtified, by the fayth of Chriſt, & not by the workes of the law.

Marke how hée ſayth, that no man is iuſtified by the workes of the law, no not S. Peter. Howe thinke you? doth not S. Paule exclude workes? & bringeth in alonely faith. yea and that the workes of the law, whiche were the beſt workes in the world, and hée beléeueth to bée iuſtified onely by the fayth of Jeſus Chriſt and not by wor-
Abacuc.2. kes, and that proueth hée in theſe wordes of the Prophet: A righteous man lyueth by fayth. Here you not how a righteous man liueth by faith? What call you liuing by fayth? If hée liue any part by workes, then lyueth hée not by fayth, but partly by wor-Athana- ſius. kes. Thē is S. Paules probation vnperfite. But let vs ſée how your Doc-Galat.3. tours doe expounde this texte.

The righ- teous man lyueth by fayth & not by workes

Now doth hée plainly ſhewe, that fayth alonely hath the vertue in him to iuſtifie, and bringeth Abacuk ſaying: Of faith (and not of the law) ſhal a righteous mā liue. Hée addeth, well afore God, for afore man peraduenture they ſhalbe reckened righteous, that ſticke to the lawe, but not afore God. &c. Here haue you Sola, onely. And alſo that this holy iuſtification is afore God, and after his iudgemēt, & not after mens iudgementes. Wherfore glory as much as you cā of your good workes. They can not alonely iuſtifie you, but alſo they bée of no value, but damnable and very ſinne, if there bée no fayth. So farre are they from helping to iuſtification. Thys doth S. Auguſtine witneſſe in theſe wordes. Thoſe ſame workes that bée done afore fayth, though they ſéeme vnto men laudable, yet are they but vayne, and I doe iudge them, as great ſtrength, and as ſwift running out of the way. Wherfore let no man coūt his good workes before fayth, where as faith is not, there is no good worke, the intention maketh a good worke, but fayth doth guide thee intētion. &c. Here S. Auguſtine condemneth all your good workes afore fayth, & ſayth that they bée nothing worth, but vain and thinges out of the way. How can ſuch thynges helpe to iuſtification?

Aug. in pro- lo. Pſal. 31.

Good workes without fayth are but ſinne.

Marke alſo how that your good intention (wherupon you boaſt, that you doe ſo many good workes by) can not helpe you, for hée is blynde, and knoweth not what to doe (though he ſtand well in his owne conceite) with out fayth, which is his guide. So that all thinges afore fayth, are but very blindnes. But as ſone as fayth commeth, hée doth both iuſtifie, and alſo maketh the workes good, which were afore ſinne But let vs ſée what Saint Barnarde ſayth of good workes. I doe abhorre (ſayth hée) whatſoeuer thyng is of mée. Except paraduēture that that be myne which God hath made me hys. My grace hath hée iuſtified mée freely, and by that hath hée deliuered mée from the bondage of ſinne. Thou haſt not choſē me, (ſayth Chriſt) but I haue choſen thée, nor I found any merites in thée, that might moue me to choſe thée, but I preuented all thy merites. Wherefore thus by faith haue I maryed thée vnto me, and not by the workes of the law.

Barnar. ſuper. Can. ſer. 1. & 9.

I haue maryed the alſo in iuſtice, but not in the iuſtice of the lawe, but in the iuſtice which is of fayth. Now this remayneth, that thou doeſt iudge a ryght iudgment betweene thée and mée, Geue thou iudgment, wherein that I haue maried thée, where it is open, that thy merites dyd not come betweene, but my pleaſure, and will,

&c. S. Barnarde doth despise all hys good workes and taketh hym onely to grace, but you sticke partly to your good workes, and not onelye to grace. Had S. Barnarde no good workes to sticke to? Marke that. S. Barnarde is Gods child freely by grace, which can not bee, if workes doe helpe lesse or more. Was hee not a christened man? Had hee no workes of the new law, as you call them? I thinke yes. And yet hee sayth, ỹ there was no merites, nor any goodnes, but that we were freely chosen. Wherfore hee prouoked you, & all such as you be to iudge rightuously betweene God and you, the which hath preuented all your goodnes and that of his owne will, and of hys owne pleasure. How can hee finde any goodnes, that preuenteth all goodnes? So that here haue you clearely, that good workes of ỹ law, or morall good workes (as you sayne) doe nothing helpe to iustificatiõ afore God, for they bee preuented of iustification.

Workes of the newe law.

This is also well proued by Saint. Augustines sayinge. Wherfore these thinges considered, and declared after the strength, that it hath pleased God to geue vs, we doe gather, that a man can not bee iustified, by the preceptes of good liuing, that is, not by the lawe of workes, but by ỹ law of fayth, not by the letter, but by the spirite, not by merites of workes, but by free grace. &c. Here you this? not by merites of workes, but by free grace? what call you free grace? but without al things, sauyng grace? what call you not of workes, but ỹ workes helpe nothing. For if workes did helpe, then would hee not say, not of workes, but not of workes onelye, but part of workes, & part of faith, but hee excludeth workes fully & onely. Agayne the same thing, that purchaseth vs remission of our sinnes, doth also purchase iustificatiõ. For iustificatiõ is nothing but remission of sins. Now fayth purchaseth vs remissiõ, Ergo, by faith we ar iustified.

Aug. de spi. & lit. ca. xij.

No man can bee iustified by ỹ lawe of workes, but by the law of faith in Christes bloud.

Now that fayth doth purchase remission of sinnes, it is well proued by this article of our fayth, Credo remissionem peccatorum, I beleeue remission of sinnes. Now if I haue not this remission for fayth, then fayth deceiueth mee, for I doe beleeue onely, because I woulde haue remission of sinnes. What needeth me to beleeue remission of sinnes, if I may deserue it by workes? Also our maister Christ declareth openly, ỹ no manner of workes what so euer they bee, can iustifye afore God. These bee his wordes: whẽ you haue done all thinges, that bee commaunded you, yet saye, that wee are vnprofitable seruauntes, If you bee vnprofitable, then bee you not iustified. And if you can not bee iustified, when you haue done all thinges, how will you bee iustified. When you doe in a maner nothing? and specially of those thinges, that bee commaunded you wherefore this is playne, ỹ our workes can not helpe vs to iustification. For whẽ we haue done all things yet we are vnprofitable. But let vs proue this by an open example. I put this case my Lordes (vnto you I speake) that our noble prince would call you all before him, and say. My Lordes, for as much as it hath pleased vs to cal you vnto the spiritual dignitie of Byshops, & to make you of our counsell, and Lordes of our Realme? and also of our parlamẽt. Now wold we know of you which of you all hath deserued it, or reckeneth hym selfe worthy by his deseruing, les or more of this dignity? What will you say to this? What will you aunswere to the kynges grace? Is there one amonge you all, that dare be so bolde as to say to the kinges grace, that he hath not geuen it vnto hym freely, but that hee hath done the king so faythfull seruice that he was bound to geue it vnto him? Yea, and that of his deseruinge? If there were one that were so proude, as to say this, thinke you that ỹ kings grace woulde not laye to his charge, how that hee had not done halfe his duetie, but were rather bound, to doe ten tymes as much more, and yet the kinges grace were not bound to geue hym a byshoprycke, for hee had done but his duetye, and not all that.

Luke. 17.

Now if your good workes, and all your faythfull seruice, bee not able to deserue a byshoprycke, of the kinges

grace

grace, How will you bée able by your wo⁊kes, to deſerue heauen, and iuſtification before the king of all kynges? When you haue aunſwered to this, before the kinges grace, then come and diſpute with God, the iuſtification of your wo⁊kes, and yet ſhall they bée farre vnlike. Wherfo⁊e I conclud of theſe ſcriptures, and of theſe doctours, that the fayth, that we haue in Chriſt Ieſus, and his bleſſed bloude, doth onely, and ſufficiently iuſtifie vs bée-fo⁊e God without the helpe of any wo⁊kes.

And though ỳ all ſcripture bée no thing els but a holle p⁊obacion of this article (that is, alonely a perfect commẽdation, and a p⁊ayſe of Chriſt, and of his bleſſed merites, that hée hath deſerued fo⁊ vs) yet will I paſſe ouer to b⁊yng in any moe places. Fo⁊ they ỳ are not cõtẽt with theſe ſcriptures, wyll not bée ſatiſfied, no⁊ yet content to geue al onely glo⁊y to God, though I b⁊ought in all the newe teſtament. Yea Chriſt hym ſelfe could not ſatiſfie them, if hee were here, no no⁊ yet though heauen, and earth and all creatures therin, were nothyng els, but p⁊obations of this article, it would not helpe. Wherefo⁊e I let ſuch infidels paſſe, and leue them to the iudgement of God, alonely certifieng them of this one thyng, that is infallible, how the day ſhall come, that it ſhall repent them, yea, and that ſo⁊er then I can either wr⁊ite, o⁊ thinke, that they did not beléeue the leſt p⁊icke of this holy article. But vnto our purpoſe.

The maner of iuſtifica-tion.

The very true way of iuſtification is this. Firſt commeth God, fo⁊ the loue of Chriſte Ieſus, alonely of his mere mercy, and geueth vs freely the gift of fayth, wherby we doe beléeue God, & his holy wo⁊d, and ſticke faſt vnto the p⁊omiſes of God, and beléeue, that though heauen, and earth, and all that is in them ſhould periſh, and come to nought, yet God ſhall bée founde true in his p⁊omiſes, fo⁊ this faythes ſake: bée we the elect childzen of God.

Fides hiſtorica.

This is not ſuch a fayth, as men dzeame, when they beléeue that there is one God, and beléeue that hée is eternall, beléeue alſo that hée made the wo⁊lde of naught, yea, and beléeue that the Goſpell is true, and all thing that God ſp⁊aketh muſt bée true, and fulfilled, with other ſuch thynges. This I ſay, is not the fayth that wée bée iuſtified by, fo⁊ deuils and infidels haue this fayth, and alſo wée may attayne to theſe thynges by ſtrength of reaſon: But the fayth that ſhall iuſtifie vs, muſt bée of an other maner of ſtrength, fo⁊ it muſt come from heauen, and not from the ſtrength of reaſon. It muſt alſo make mée beléeue, that God the maker of heauen and earth, is not alonely a father, but alſo my father: yea, and that thoꝛow the fauour that Chriſt hath purchaſed mée, from the whiche fauour, neither heauen, no⁊ earth, tribulation, no⁊ perſecution, death, no⁊ hell, can deuide mée. But to this ſticke I faſt, that hée is not alonely my father, but alſo a mercifull father, yea, and that vnto mée mercifull, and ſo mercifull, that hée will not impute my ſinnes vnto mée, though they bée neuer ſo great, ſo long as I hang on the bleſſed bloud of Chriſt Ieſus, and ſinne not of malice, but of frailtie, and of no pleaſure.

Fides iuſtificans.

Roma. 8.

Hée is alſo a lyberall father, yea, and that vnto mée liberall, which will not alonely p⁊omiſe mée all thynges, but alſo géeue them me, whether they bée neceſſary to the body o⁊ to ỳ ſoule. Hée is alſo not alonely lyberall, but myghty to perfo⁊me all thynges, that hée p⁊ompſeth vnto mée. Briefely, this fayth maketh mée to hang cleerely of God, and of his bleſſed p⁊ompſes made in Chriſt, and in his ſwéete and p⁊ecious bloud, and not to feare death, no⁊ any affliction, no⁊ perſecution: no⁊ tribulation: but to deſpiſe all theſe thynges: and not alonely theſe, but to deſpiſe alſo myne own lyfe fo⁊ Chriſtes ſake.

The frutes of fayth.

Finally, of a fleſhely beaſt, it maketh mée a ſpirituall man: of a damnable child, it maketh mée a heauenly ſonne: of a ſeruaunt of the deuill, it maketh mée a fréemã of Gods, both deliuered from the lawe, from ſinne, from death, from the deuill, and from all myſerie that might hurt mée. My Lordes, this is the fayth that doth iustifie, and that we do preach. And because it is geuen from heauen into our hartes by the spirite of God, therfore, it can bee no idle thing: But it must needes do all maner of thinges, ỹ bee to the honour of God, and also to the profite of our neighbour: In so much, that at all tymes necessary, it must needes worke well, & also bryng forth all good workes that may bee to the profite and helping of any man. But these workes bee not done, to iustifie the man, but a iust man must needes doe them. Not vnto his profite, but alonely to other mens profites, euen as our maister Christ, suffered hunger, and thyrste, and persecution, and toke great labours in preaching of his worde, yea, and also suffered death. All these thinges, I say, did hee not to further or to profite himselfe, but for our merites, and for our profite. So likewise doth a iust man his workes. And as a good tree in tyme of the yeare, bryngeth forth good Apples, not to make hym good, for hee is good afore, nor yet this apple is not to his profite, but vnto other mens, notwithstanding, ỹ good nature that is in hym, muste needes bring it forth. So likewise, the iust man must needes doe good workes, not by them to bee iustified, but alonely in them to serue his brother: for hee hath no neede of them, as concerning his iustification.

In exãple how fayth bryngeth forth good workes.

Wherfore now here haue you the very true cause of iustification, that is, fayth alonely: And also the very true way and maner of doynge good workes: And how that no man can doe good workes, but a iustified man, as our maister Christ sayth: Eyther make the tree good, and then his fruite good, or els the tree euill, and his fruit euill: for a good tree must needes bring forth good fruite, and a badde, euyll fruite. But now let mee aunswere to the Scriptures, and to the reasons that they bring to proue that workes doe iustifie. First commeth the fleshly and dampnable reason, and thee sayth: If wee bee iustified alonely by fayth, what neede wee to doe any good workes? what neede wee to crucifie, or mortifie our flesshe? for all these will not profite vs, and wee shall bee saued though wee doe none of thē all. Thus did blinde reason dispute with Saint Paule, when that hee had proued that God of his mercy, had deliuered vs freely from the damnable bondage of the law.

Math. 7.

Solutions and argumentes to the Scriptures.

Roma. 6.

Anone hee iudged that he might do what hee would, for hee was no lõger vnder the law. To this S. Paule aũswereth, ỹ if wee obey vnto ỹ workes of sinne, then are we the seruauntes of sinne, & if we obey to the workes of iustice, then are we the seruauntes of iustice. So that if we truely haue that same fayth, that iustifieth vs, we shall desire to doe none other workes but those, that belong to iustification, not that the workes doe iustifie, but that we must needes do these workes, as the very true frutes of iustificatiõ, and not as the cause of iustification. And therfore those men, that will doe no good workes, because they be iustified onely by fayth, bee not the childrē of God, nor the children of iustification. For the liuyng spirite of God, is none authour of ilnes, nor of sinne, but hee crieth in our hartes, Abbapater. And of that, is this a sure, and an euident token, for if they were the very true children of God, they would bee the gladder to doe good workes, because that they are iustified freely. Therfore should they also bee moued freely to workes, if it were for no other purpose, nor profite, but alonely to doe ỹ wil of their mercyfull God, ỹ hath so freely iustified thē, and also to profite their neighbour, whō they are bound to serue of very true charitie.

Good workes are the frutes of true fayth.

Take an example, here is a theefe, that is condemned by right, & the law to bee hanged, whom the kings grace of his mercy, doth freely deliuer from the gallowes, and geueth him his pardon. Now this theefe, thus deliuered, will not keepe hym selfe a true man, nor doe those workes, that belong to a true man to doe, but falleth agayne to stelyng, because the kyng pardoned hym so freely, and reckeneth that the kyng is so mercyfull, that hee will hãg no theues, but deliuer them all of his mercy, without their deſeruing. Now how thinke you: wil ỹ king bee merciſull vnto this theefe, when hee cõmeth againe to ỹ gallowes? Nay truely, for hee was not deliuered for that cauſe, but for to keepe hym ſelfe a true man.

Then commeth my Lord of Rocheſter, and hee ſayth, that fayth doth begyn a iuſtification in vs, but workes doe perfourme it, and make it perfite.

Artic. 2. I will recite his owne wordes. Per fidem initiari dicitur iuſticia ſolum, non autem conſummari, nam conſummata iuſticia non aliter quam ex operibus natis & in lucem editis acquiri poteſt, opera conſummatè iuſtificant. Fides primum in choat. &c. What Chriſtened man would thinke, that a Byſhop would thus trifle, and play with Gods holy word? Gods worde is ſo playne, that no man can auoyde it, how that fayth iuſtifieth alonely, and now commeth my Lord of Rocheſter, with a litle, ỹ a vayne diſtinction, inuented of his owne brayne, without authoritie of Scripture, and will clearely, auoyde all Scriptures, and all the whole diſputation of S. Paule. But my Lord, ſay to me of your conſcience, how doe you recken to auoyde the vengeaũce of God, ſith you thus trifle, ỹ deſpiſe Gods holy word? Thinke you, that this vayne diſtinctiõ, will bee alowed afore Jeſus Chriſt? for whoſe glorye wee doe cõtende ỹ ſtriue afore whom, we dye handle this matter?

The Byſhop of Rocheſters vayne diſtinction.

I doe thinke verely, that your owne conſcience doth ſore accuſe you, for thus blaſphemyng the holy worde of God. Wherefore my Lord, for Chriſtes ſake remember, that you bee aged, and ſhall not long tary here, and theſe vayne diſtinctiõs that you haue inuented to the pleaſure of men, and to the great perpertyng of Gods holy word, ſhall bee to your euerlaſtyng damnation. And at the leſt wayes, if you feare not ỹ terrible vengeaũce of God, remẽber the ſhame of ỹ world, ỹ thinke not, that all men bee ſo mad, and ſo vnlearned, as for to bee deceiued by this triflyng diſtinction, ſeyng that the worde of God is ſo playne agaynſt it. Doth not S. Paule ſay, that our iuſtification is alonely of fayth: ỹ not of workes? How can you auoyde this ſame? Non ex operibus? Not of workes? if that workes doe make iuſtification perfite, then are not Saint Paules wordes true? Alſo S. Paule ſayth, that we bee the childrẽ of God, by fayth. And if we bee the childrẽ, we are alſo the heyres.

Now what imperfection finde you in childrẽ? and in heyres? Chriſtẽ mẽ deſire no more but this, and all this haue they by fayth onely. And will you ſay, that fayth doth but begyn a iuſtification: Beſide that, you know well, that S. Paule doth proue in all the whole Epiſtles to the Romanes, and alſo to the Galathians, that fayth doth iuſtifie, yea, and that by contention agaynſt workes. Now how can you bryng in workes to make iuſtification perfect? And S. Paule hath excluded them?

Moreouer, why did not the Jewes, againſt whoſe works S. Paule diſputeth? bryng in this diſtinction for thẽ? Briefely, what will you ſay to all the Doctours, that I haue here recited? which ſay, that Sola fides, onely fayth, doth iuſtifie. But doubtles, if it were not to ſatiſfie other men, this diſtinction were not worthy an aunſwere. An other damnable reaſon is made, that is an open, ỹ a playne lye, which is this. Thou ſayſt that workes doe not iuſtifie, nor yet helpe to iuſtification, but fayth onely. Ergo, thou deſtroyeſt all good workes, and wilt that no man ſhall worke well, but alonely beleeue.

Good workes are to bee done although they iuſtifie not.

I aũſwere, if there were any ſhame in men, they might well bee aſhamed of theſe open lyes.

Tell me one, that is learned, that euer did ſay, or teach, that men ſhould doe no good workes? Many there bee, that ſay, workes do not iuſtifie, as S. Paule, and all his ſcholers, but no mã denyeth good workes. But I marueile not at them, for they doe but the workes of their father, whiche was a lyer, ỹ a murtherer from the begynnyng. I pray you, what cõſequent is this, after your owne Logike: workes doe not iuſtifie, Ergo, wee nede not to doe them, but deſpiſe them, for they bée of no valure. Take a like conſequent. You ſay, that the kinges grace doth not iuſtifie, Ergo, you deſpiſe him: Ergo, hée is no longer kyng: Alſo the Sunne, and Mone doe not iuſtifie, Ergo, you deſtroy them? But ſuch a damnable lye, muſt S. Paul nédes ſuffer, whē hée had proued, that fayth onely did iuſtifie. Then came your ouerthwarte fathers, and ſayd, Ergo, thou deſtroyeſt the law, for thou teacheſt, that it iuſtifieth not. God forbid, ſayth S. Paule, for we doe learne the very waye to fulfill the law, that is, faith, whereby the law alonely is fulfilled, and without the whiche, all the workes of the law, bée but ſinne. So doe we likewiſe teach the very true way, wherby all good workes muſt be done. As firſt, a man by faith to bée iuſtified, & then a iuſt man, muſt nédes doe good workes, whiche afore were but ſinne, & now bée all good, yea, his eatyng, drinkyng, & ſléeping, are good.

Roma. 3.

But beſide all theſe, haue they certayne ſcriptures. Firſt of S. James, whoſe wordes bée theſe. Wilt thou vnderſtand, O thou vayne man, that fayth without déedes, is dead? Was not Abraham our father iuſtified of his dedes? When hée offered his ſōne Iſaac on the aulter? Lykewiſe was not Rahab the harlot iuſtified, when ſhe receiued the meſſengers? and ſent them out an other way. S. Auguſtine doth declare in diuers places, ý bleſſed S. Paule, and S. James, ſemed for to bée contrary in this matter, And therefore S. Auguſtine willing to ſaue the eſtimacion of this epiſtle, doth declare, how that S. Paule doth ſpeake of workes, that goe before fayth, and S. James ſpeaketh of workes, that folow fayth, And yet S. Auguſtine will not bée compelled by the wordes of this epiſtle, to graunt, ý any workes doe iuſtifie, by the reaſon, that Saint Paules wordes bée ſo appartly, and behemently to the contrary. Wherefore ſéing that there ſheweth a controuerſy here in two places of ý ſcripture, it ſtandeth with all reaſon, and learning, that the ſame place, which ſéemeth for to bée déebleſt, & alſo darkeſt, ſhould bée expounded, and declared, by that part of ſcripture, that is cleereſt, and moſt of auctorite. Now is this of truth, that the auctoritie of S. Paule hath allwayes in the church of God, béene more of eſtimacion, and ſtrength, then euer was this epiſtle, (though that this epiſtle hath bene receyued) and eſpecially in this cauſe, ý we now here ſpeake of. For in all the ſcripture is not this article of iuſtifycation ſo playnely, and plenteouſlye handled, as it is by bleſſed S. Paule, this muſt euery learned man graunt.

Iam. 2.

Aug. 83. queſt. c. 76.

Wherefore it ſtandeth with reaſon and lerning, that this ſaying of Saint James muſt nédes bée reduced, and brought vnto bleſſed S. Paules meaning, & not S. Paule vnto S. Iames ſaying.

Now therefore in as much, that both bleſſed S. Paule, and alſo Saint James meaning is, that good workes ſhould bée done, and they ý bée chriſtē men, ſhould not bée idle, and doe no good, becauſe that they are the childrē of grace, but that they ſhould rather in their lyuyng expreſſe outwardlye their goodnes, receiued of grace: and as bleſſed S. Paule ſayth, To geue their membres to bée ſeruantes vnto righteouſnes, as they were afore ſeruauntes vnto vncleanes. For this cauſe (I ſay) S. James ſaying muſt nédes bée vnderſtanded, for to bée wrytten agaynſt thoſe men, that boſted them ſelues, of an idle, and vayne opinion, that they thought thē ſelues to haue, which they reckened to bée a good fayth. Now S. James to proue that this fayth was but an idle thing, & of none effect, doth declare it clerely, by ý, that it brought forth in time and place conuenient, no good workes. And therefore hée cauleth it a deade fayth.

Roma. 6.

Hée bryngeth in alſo a naked brother, the wich hath néede of clothing, vnto theſe men, ý boaſted their fayth, which hath no compaſſion of his neceſſitie. Wherefore hée concludeth, ý that they haue no true fayth. And therefore hée ſayth vnto them, ſhew vnto mée thy fayth without workes, and I ſhall ſhew vnto thée of workes, my Fayth that bryngeth forth fruite is the fayth that iuſtifieth, and yet the fruite doth not iuſtifie.

my fayth.

Heare is it playne, that S. James would no more, but that that fayth is a dead fayth, and of no valure ẏ hath no workes. For workes ſhoulde declare and ſhew the outwarde fayth, & workes ſhould bee an outward declaration, and a teſtimonie of ẏ inwarde iuſtification, receiued of fayth, not ẏ workes can or may take away our ſynne, or els bee any ſatiſfaction, for any part of ſynne, for that belongeth
1.Iohn.2. all onely to Chriſt. As bleſſed S. Iohn ſayth, and alſo S. Paule, hee hath anſwered once for al, to put ſinne to flight Hebr. 9. by the offering vp of hym ſelfe. And that this is S. James meaning, it is declared by that that foloweth. Thou ſeeſt (ſayth hee) that fayth wrought in Abrahams deedes & through ẏ deedes was his fayth made perfect.

Marke how fayth wrought in hys deedes: That is, his fayth, becauſe it was a lyuyng fayth, brought forth & wrought out, ẏ high worke of oblation. Alſo his fayth was perfect through his deedes. Thus is his fayth was declared, and had a great teſtimonye afore all the worlde, ẏ it was a lyuyng, and a perfect, and a right ſhapen fayth Fayth iuſtifieth before God, and good workes declare our iuſtification to ẏ worlde. that Abraham had. So ẏ his inward fayth declared him afore God, & his outward workes afore the worlde to bee good, and iuſtified. And thus was his faith made perfect afore God and man. Now vnto this, doe we all agree that ẏ fayth alonely iuſtifieth before God, whiche in tyme and place doth worke well, yea it is a liuyng thing of God, which can not bee dead, nor idle in man. But yet for all that, we doe geue to fayth, and to Chriſtes bloud, that glorye, that belongeth to them onely, that is to ſay, iuſtificatiõ, remiſſiõ of ſinnes, ſatiſfieng of Gods wrath, taking away ẏ euerlaſtyng vengeaunce, purchaſing of mercy, fulfillyng of the law, with all other like things. The glorye of theſe, I ſay, belongeth to Chriſt onely, & we are partakers of them by fayth, in Chriſtes bloud onely. For it is no worke, that receyueth the promiſe made in Chriſtes bloud, but fayth onely.

Take an example. God ſayth to Abraham, In thy ſeede ſhall I bleſſe all people. Now can Abrahams workes doe nothyng to receiuyng of this bleſſing, nor yet can they make him hang on that ſeede, but hee beleeueth God, and ſticketh faſt by fayth to that promiſe, and thinketh, that God ſhall bee true, though hee bee a lyer, and ſo is hee partaker of the bleſſing made in ẏ ſeede. Note alſo, that this bleſſing is promiſed in Abrahams ſeede, and not to Abrahams workes. Ergo, Abraham is bleſſed, becauſe hee hangeth on the ſeede, & not on his workes. Alſo bleſſed S. Paule doth driue a fore argu- Gala.3.
ment agaynſt workes, in as much as Scripture ſayth, in ſemine, non in ſeminibus quaſi in multis, ſed in uno.

Now if workes doe helpe leſſe or more to iuſtificatiõ, then muſt needes the promiſe bee made, and pertaine to many, and not to one onely, ẏ which were fore agaynſte bleſſed S. Paule. Wherefore I conclude, that the glorye and prayſe of iuſtification belongeth onely to fayth in Chriſtes bloud, and not to workes in any wiſe. Notwithſtãdyng we doe alſo laude, and prayſe good workes, and doe teach diligently to doe good workes, in as much as God their maker hath commaunded them: yea, & alſo to profite their neighbours by their good workes: and furthermore, that other men, which blaſphemeth the veritie, might bee moued through their vertuous liuyng, & converſatiõ, to the holy religiõ of Chriſt.

For theſe cauſes, and other moe, I ſay, doe I teach good mẽ to liue wel, and vertuouſly: yea, & alſo wee teach
The reward of good workes is not remiſſion of ſinnes. that good workes ſhall haue a reward of God as ſcripture teſtifieth, but not remiſſion of ſinnes, nor yet iuſtification for their reward. Wherfore this ſaying of S. James muſt needes bee verified againſt thẽ, that boaſted them ſelues of vayne fayth, that was indeede but an idle opinion, and no true fayth, for it did worke thorough charitie. And therfore S. James diſputeth well agaynſt them, that this fayth was but a dead fayth, and could not helpe them no more then it helpeth the deuill. So that this thing of S. James maketh nothing agaynſt mee,

but

but rather wyth mée.

Also you haue an other Scripture
Roma.2. for you, which is this. Before God, they are not iustified which heare the lawe, but they which doe the law shalbée iustified. Of this texte you glory & cry opera, opera, workes workes. But if yée would consider the mynde of S. Paule, you should well perceaue that hée meaneth not, how workes might deserue iustification, for then coulde hée not haue concluded thys agaynste the Iewes, for they did the workes of the lawe to the vttermost, and yet were they not iustified. Wherefore S. Paule meaneth by the hearers of the lawe, all them that doe the outwarde workes of the lawe, for feare, or for rewarde, or of hypocrisie, or els by them to bée iustified. The doers caulleth hée them that doe the workes of the lawe, after the intent of ỳ lawe, and as the lawe commaundeth them, that is, in the true fayth of Christ Iesus, which is the very ende of ỳ lawe, and the fulfilling of the law (as Saint Paule sayth) to all them that beléeue. Wherefore all men bée but hearers onely of the lawe, till the tyme that that they haue the fayth of Christ Iesus, which is imputed vnto them for iustice. And the workes of the lawe bée no cause of iustification, but alonely an outward testimonie and witnes that the lawe is fulfilled inwardly in their conscience afore God, and fulfilled that it hath no accusation against them, for Christ hath made satisfactiõ for them, of the which they bée partakers by their fayth. And so the lawe must bée content to admitte all these men, to bée fulfillers & doers of ỳ law.

And now, that you shall not say, that this is my dreame, here bée S. Augustines wordes. The doers of the August. de spiri. & lit. lawe shall bée iustified. So must it bée vnderstãded, that wée may know that they cã none otherwise bée the doers of the lawe, excepte they bée first iustified, not that iustification belongeth vnto doers, but that iustification doth precéde all maner of doinges. &c. Heare you not that iustificatiõ is first geuen, that men might bée able to doe the workes of the lawe? This is also the exposition of your glose. I haue merualye you studie it no better.

Also you haue an other Scripture, Glosa. and that is this. Cornelius a Gẽtile, did great almes, and prayd vnto God alwayes: Vnto whome the Aungell spake on this maner: Thy prayer, & thy almes are come vp into remembraunce in the presence of God. Of Actes.10. this texte you gather, that hys good workes, did helpe to iustifie hym. I aunswere: The holy ghost hath opẽly declared hymselfe there. For hée sayth, that this Cornelius was a deuoute man, and one that feared God. How coulde this bée, without ỳ God had taught hym inwardely by fayth? Yea, how coulde hée know God, and that deuoutly, but by fayth? Ergo, hée was iustified afore God by his fayth, but ỳ world knew not his iustificatiõ. And therfore ỳ holy ghost doth declare hys inward iustificatiõ, whẽ hée saith, that hée was deuoute, & feared God: And also doth shew openly the fruits of his iustification, when hée sayth, that hée did almes. Moreouer, you haue there that the holy Ghost fell on them afore they were baptised in water, the which declareth openly, that they were iustified afore God.

The man that is iustified before God can not bee idle but must doe good.

This is well declared also in your owne lawe, whose wordes bée these: Cornelius Centurio, being yet a heathẽ mã, was made cleane by ỳ gifte of the holy ghost. Here haue you playnely ỳ hée was iustified by ỳ gifte of ỳ holy ghost, afore all good workes. For hée was an heathẽ mã. An other scripture yée haue, which is this. If I haue all faith, so ỳ I may trãspose moũtaines, and haue no charitie, I am nothyng. Of this gather you, that fayth without charitie can not iustifie. I aunswere. This can you not gather of S. Paule, for it is open that hée speaketh not of this thyng, whereby that men may bée iustified, but alonely hée teacheth how they that bée iustified, must worke with charitie. It is also plaine, that hée speaketh not of fayth, that doth iustifie inwardly, but of that faith that doth worke outwardely. The which is caulled a gifte of the holy Ghost: As ỳ gifte of tounges, the gift of prophesies, the gifte of healing, the gifte of interpretation, as it is opē in the chapitey afore. Now is this fayth not geuen to iuſtifie, but alonely to doe myracles, wonders, and ſignes by. And therefore ſayth Paule: If I had all fayth, ſo that I coulde moue mountaynes,

Also it is open, that certayne men
Math.7. ſhall ſay vnto Chriſt: Beholde, wē haue done myracles, and caſt out deuils in thy name: And yet hē ſhall ſay to them, truely, I know you not. So that this fayth is a gifte of God, that iuſtifieth not, no more then the gifte of ſcience, or prophelies. And ſometyme is it in the Church, and ſometyme not, and it is neuer of neceſſitie there to bē. But the faith that wē ſpeake of, which doth bēlæue the promiſes of God, and ſticketh faſt to the bloud of Chriſt, hath none other vertue but to iuſtifie, and muſt nēdes iuſtifie, whereſoeuer hē is, and hē ſticketh ſo faſt to Gods worde, that hē loketh for no myracles. Thys fayth is neuer out of the Church, for Iohn.17. it is the lyfe of the Church, and it is that fayth that our mayſter Chriſte prayde for, that it myght neuer fayle. And therefore S. Paule, when he deſcribeth this fayth, hē caulleth it a fayth that worketh by charitie, not that it iuſtifieth by charitie. For as he Gala.5. ſayth there playnely, it is neyther circumciſion, nor yet vncircumciſion, that is of any valure in Chriſt Jeſu, but fayth. Here doth hē playnely exclude from iuſtification, the hyghelt worke of the lawe, circumciſion, and ſetteth fayth alone: not the gyfte of fayth, that doth myracles, but the gift of fayth, that worketh by charitie. And that yē ſhall not thinke thys to bē a dreame, here hyng I you Athanaſius ſayinge, whoſe wordes bē theſe.

There arē two maner of faythes,
Atha. ad Rom. one is iuſtifieng, as that, of the which is ſpoken, Thy fayth hath ſaued thē. An other is cauled the gyft of God, whereby myracles bē done. Of the which it is written: if you haue fayth, as a grayne of muſtard ſēde. &c. So that here haue you playne, that fayth doth iuſtifie onelye, and perfectly, before all maner of works, that is, fayth is geuē of God freely into our ſoules vnto the which fayth, iuſtification is all onely promiſed, and is all onely imputed, and rekened of God. Neuertheles, this fayth in tyme, and place conuenient, is of that ſtrength, that hē muſt nēdes worke by charitye, not for to bē iuſtified thereby, for if he were not afore iuſtified, it were not poſſible that hē coulde haue charitie. For after your owne ſchole men, an Infidell cā not haue charitie: but ỹ iuſtified mā, hē is a frē ſeruaunt vnto God, for the loue ỹ hē hath vnto him. The which loue ſēketh not in God, his owne profit, nor hys owne aduaū tage, for then were hē wicked, but ſēketh alonely the wyll of God, and the profite of other men, and worketh neyther for loue of heauen, nor yet for feare of hell. For hē knoweth well, that heauen wyth all the ioyes thereof, is prepared from the begynnyng of the world, not by hym, but by hys father. And it muſt nēdes folow, as contrariwyſe the Infidell, and the wicked man, doth not worke hys wicked dēdes becauſe hē woulde haue hell or euerlaſting dampnation to hys rewarde, but hē woulde rather the contrary. Notwithſtandyng, hell and euerlaſting dampnation, muſt nēdes follow his wicked dēdes. Finally, a righteous man, is a frē ſeruaunt of Gods, and worketh not as an hyerelyng. For if it were poſſible that there were no heauen, yet woulde hē doe no leſſe good, for his reſpecte is to the maker of the worlde, and the Lord of all rewardes.

Fayth that iuſtifieth vs is geuē vs freely of God.

There is alſo an other argument, and that is thys. Fayth is a worke: but workes doth not iuſtifie, Ergo, fayth doth not iuſtifie. Aunſwere: Truth it is, that we doe not meane, how that fayth for his owne dignitie, and for hys owne perfection, doth iuſtifie vs. But the Scripture doth ſay, that fayth alonely iuſtifieth, becauſe that it is that thyng alonely, whereby I doe hange of Chriſte. And by my faith alonely, am I partaker of ỹ merites and mercy purchaſed by Chriſtes bloude, and fayth it is alonely, that receaue the promyses made in Christ. Wherefore wee say with blessed S. Paule, that fayth onely iustifieth imputatiue: that is, all ỳ merites and goodnes, grace, and fauour, and all that is in Christ, to our saluation, is imputed and reckoned vnto vs, because wee hange and beleeue of hym, and hee can deceaue no man that doth beleeue in hym. And our iustice is not (as the schoole men teacheth) a formal iustice, which is by fulfillyng of the lawe, deserued of vs, for then our iustificatiõ were not of grace, and of mercy, but of deseruing, and of duty. But it is a iustice that is reckened & imputed vnto vs, for ỳ fayth in Christ Iesus, and is not of our deseruyng, but clearely, and fully of mercy imputed vnto vs.

Fayth onely iustifieth because by fayth we attaine the benefite of Christes death which onely iustifieth vs.

Now most honorable, & gracious Prince, I haue declared vnto your highnes, what faith it is, that doth iustifie vs before God, and also brought for my sentẽce, not alonely the blessed word of God, the which were sufficient in this cause, but the exposition of holy Doctours, that your grace might see, that I am not moued to this opinion of a light cause, nor that this doctrine of myne is so new, as men hath noted it. Moreouer, I haue declared vnto your grace, how that I woulde haue good workes done, & would not haue a Christen mans life to bee an idle thyng, or els a life of vncleannes: but I would haue them to bee chaunged into all vertue, and goodnes, and to liue in good workes, after the commaundement & will of God. So that your grace may well perceiue, that myne aduersaries hath not reported truely on me, when they haue sayd, how that I would, that men should neither fast, nor pray, nor geue almes, nor yet bee penitent for their sinnes. I haue neuer sayd it, nor yet taught no lyke sentence, I take God to recorde, my workes, and my dedes, and all my writynges, that euer I wrote, or made. Wherefore I doubt not, if it please your grace, graciously to here me, but that I wil proue them vntrue in this cause, & many other mo. This doth almighty God know to bee true.

It is no new doctrine that is nowe taught.

Who euer preserue your moste royall maieute, in honour, and goodnes. Amen.

What the Church is: and who bee therof: and whereby men may know her.

The Pope and hys Churche agreeth no more with the maners of holy Churche, then darknes & light.

THe name of the holy church, haue those mẽ of long tyme vsurped presumptuously and wout all shame, they were the greatest enemyes that holy church could haue in earth. For they did no more agree wt the maners of holy church, then darknes and light, then God and ỳ deuyll. For where holy church hard no man but Christ onely: They would heare all manner of men sauing Christ, and neuer heare him, except it weare to to their profit or glory.

Where as holy church was ruled in this world, they would rule all the world, & where as holy church would bee holy by Christ onely, they would bee holy by their owne helpe.

And where as holy church was allwayes despised, and persecuted of the world, They would bee honored of ỳ world and persecuters of all men.

The Pope is a persecutor of holy Church.

And where as holy church was inwardly decked with spiritual vertues, they would bee outwardly shinyng in spirituall araye. And where as holy church would bee chaste in spyte they would with their mouthes vow chastite, and spend all their liues in whore dome.

And where as holy church dyd allwayes shew meekenes in the worlde, they would bee so proude, ỳ hart could deuise no more.

Breifely whatsoeuer thing ỳ was agreable with the church, of that had they neuer a crumme, but allonely by violence vsurped the name of holy church, So that if a man had had a crowne or a long goune and a white

How farre the Pope doth differ with his Churche from the true holy Church.

smock ouer his gowne, thē was there no remedy, but hée muſt nedes bée of the church, yea and holy church her ſelf. So yf a Barber had made a Bul a crowne, & a Taylor Jack napes a lōg gowne, & brought an Aſſe forth in a white rochet, thē no mā might dout but ý there were holy church, & euerye man muſt fall downe to receyue clene remiſſion a pœna and a culpa, toties quoties, for there came the ſucceſſours of Peter & Paule: and they that haue the deſpenſatiō of Chriſtes bloud, and the merites of holy ſaints, and ý ſuffrages of holy church to diſtribute, and the key bearers of heauē and hell. Who can denye but this is truth?

The foule and greate abuſe of the Pope in takyng vpō hym, that hée and his were ý holy Church.

It is to opē to nēde an probation, for wee ſée it dayly before our eyes. So that if a man will compare our M Chriſt ý is ý very head of holy church vnto theſe Prelates (that call them ſelues his vicars) hée ſhall finde but ſmale agrément, betwéne the perſon and the vicar: and hée that will conſider S. Peter and S. Paule, withall other Apoſtels than rome, that eyther they were none of holy Church, or els our prelats: for they agrée in nothing. Yea & hée may reckē that S. Peter & S. Paule were ſtarke foles & ryght mad men that liued ſo deſpectuous a lyfe. What nēde me to make many wordes, or to tell their names that I ſpeake of, There is no doubt but that galde horſe will bée wray hym ſelfe. But thirdly, if the deuyll would come in his owne perſon diſguiſed, tell me how it were impoſſible that hée could bée more contrary to Chriſt and hys apoſtels, then thoſe men that call thē ſelues ý holy church: yea take away the name of the church, and ſet in her ſtéde the name of the deuyll, & how will you then know a byſhop frō the deuyll? By their workes? nay trewly for they bée all one: And yet will you bée the heades of Chriſtes church, yea the holy church her ſelfe: not ſo yée wicked, not ſo.

What difference is betweene a Byſhop & the deuill.

Wherefore that this bleſſed ſpouſe of Chriſt may bée knowen from thée open and abhominable whores and harlotes, therefore will I (by gods grace) ſet out what holy Church is and where by men ſhall know her,

This worde Eccleſia both in ý new teſtament and the olde, is taken oftētymes for the whole congregatiō and and the whole multitude of ý people both good and bad, as it is in the boke of Numeri: Why haue you brought the congregation or Church of God into wildernes. Nume. 20.

Alſo in an other place, The king turned his face and bleſſed the whole congregation or Church of Iſraell, and all the Church of Iſraell ſtode. 3. King. 8.

Likewiſe in the new teſtamēt Saint Paule to the Corinthians, I haue ſēt vnto you Tymothy the which ſhall learne you my wayes, whē in Chriſt Jeſu, as I doe learne euery where in all congregations. 1. Cor. 4.

Alſo in an other place: doe you deſpiſe the congregation of God? and ſhame thē that haue not? In all theſe places & in many moe, is it open that this greke worde Eccleſia is taken for the whole congregation both of good & bad. Wherfore this is not ý church that we will greatly ſpeake of: for in this church are Jewes and Saraſens Murtherers, and Thœues, Baudes, and Harlots, though we know them not. 1. Cor. 11.

But there is an other holy Church of the which S. Paule ſpeaketh: you men loue your your wiues, as Chriſt hath loued the Church, and hath geuē him ſelfe for her, that hée might ſanctifie her, and clenſe her in the fountaine of water through the worde of life, to make her to him ſelfe a glorious Church without ſpot or wrincle, or any ſuch thyng, but that ſhe might bée holy & without blame. Here haue you the very true Churche of Chriſt, that is ſo pure and ſo cleane without ſpotte. Ephe. 5.

The holy Churche truely deſined.

But wherby is thée pure & cleane: not by her owne merites nor by her owne might, not by exteriour araye, not by gold nor ſiluer, nor yet by precious ſtones, neither by myters nor croſetaues, nor by pillers nor pollares. But wherby then: by Chriſt onely which hath geuen him ſelfe for that intēt that hée would make her cleane and therefore sayth S. Paule: He gaue him selfe that he might sanctifie her, that he might clense her, and make her to him selfe a glorious Church.

The true holy church is that which is sanctified & made holy by Christ.

Also in an other place: you are washed, you are sanctified, you are iustified in the name of Iesus Christ, and in the spirite of God. See my Lordes, how the Church is washed by Christ & by his holy spirite, and not by your blessynges, not by your spirituall ornamentes, nor by your spirituall holy water, for these thynges cannot helpe the holy Church: for she is holy in spirite and not in outwarde hypocrisie: she is also clensed by Christes blessed bloud, & not by outward disguisinges.

1. Cor. 1.

This doth S. Augustine wel proue, saying, Of Christ is the church made fayre: first was she filthie in sinnes, afterward by pardon and by grace was she made fayre &c. Here S. Augustine sayth ỳ Christ hath made his Church fayre, and that by his grace & his pardon, and not by your pardons, nor by your grace. For this Church stãdeth by Christes election, & not by yours. And if Christ haue not washed you & chosen you then bee you none of this Church, though you ride with a thousand spirituall horses, and haue all the spirituall tokẽs on earth. For and if ỳ sonne of God haue deliuered you, thẽ are you truely deliuered. Ye can not make by all your power and holynes that we shall alwayes finde good ale or wyne where there hangeth out a greene signe: and will you with your spirituall signes and tokens make the Churche of God to folow you, or by them assigne out where the Churche shall bee? Nay, nay, my Lordes, it will not bee: but they that beleeue ỳ Christ hath washed them from their sinnes, and sticke fast vnto his merites, and to the promise made to them in hym onely, they bee the Church of God, & so pure and so cleane that it shall not bee lawfull, no not for Peter, to say that they bee vncleane: but whether they bee Iew or Greeke, kyng or subiect, carter or Cardinall, butcher or Bysshop, tancardbearer or cannelrater, free or bounde, Frier or fidler, Monke or miller: if they beleeue in Christes word, & sticke fast to his blessed promises, and trust onely in the merites of his blessed bloud, they bee the holy Church of God, yea and the very true church afore God. And you with all your spirituall tokens, & with all your exteriour cleannes, remaine in your filthynes of sinne: from the which all your blessings, all your pardons, all your spiritualitie, all your holynes, can not clense you, nor bring you into this Churche. Boast, crake, blast, blesse, curse till your holy eyes start out of your head, it wil not helpe you, for Christ chooseth his church, at his iudgement and not at yours. The holy ghost is free, & inspireth where he will, he will neither bee bound, to Pope nor Cardinall, Archbishop nor Bysshop, Abbot nor Prior, Deacon nor Archdeacon, Parson nor Vicare, Nunne nor Frier.

Augustinus de verbis domini ser. 50.

God is not to bee ruled by any state or degree of person.

Briefly come all the whole rabble of you togither that call your selues ỳ holy Churche, and exclude all other: yea and take sunne, mone, & starres to helpe you with all the frendes you haue in heaue̅ and earth: and yet shall you not bee of holy church, except that you haue ỳ spirite of Christ, & bee washed in his blessed bloud. For ỳ holy Churche of Christ is nothyng els but that congregation, that is sanctified in spirite, redeemed with Christes bloud, and sticketh fast and sure alonely to the promises that he made therein.

Iohn. 6.

The faithful beleuers in Christes merites, are ỳ ryght holy church of God.

So that the Church is a spirituall thyng, and no exterior thyng, but inuisible from carnall eyes (I say not that they bee inuisible that bee of the Church, but that holy Church in her selfe is inuisible) as sayth is, and her pureness and cleanes is before Christ onely, and not before the worlde. For the worlde hath no iudgement nor knowledge of her: but all her honour and cleanes is before Christ sure and fast. And if there appeare any of her goodnes vnto the worlde, of that she maketh no reckenyng, nor thinketh her selfe any thyng thyng the better, that the worlde iudgeth well of her: for all her trust is in Christ onely. She ſuffereth the worlde to rage and blaſpheme both agaynſt her and agaynſt Chriſt her maker. She ſtandeth faſt and beleeueth ſtedfaſtly, that, that ſhal haue a ſhamefull ende, and euerlaſting damnation to rewarde. Briefly, her meditations and her thoughtes are heauenly, and all that ſhe doth is ſpirituall. For ſhe can not erre, ſhe cleaueth ſo faſt to the worde of God that is the veritie.

The true holy church is the piller and ground of trueth.

And for this cauſe S. Paule calleth her the piller and grounde of truth, not that ſhe is ſo ſure of, and in her owne ſtrength, but that ſhe ſticketh ſo faſt to the lyuyng God, and to hys bleſſed worde, that is the very true Church, that is ſcattered thorow all the worlde, and is neyther bounde to perſon by the reaſon of dignitie, nor yet to any place by the reaſon of fayned holynes, but ſhe is a free thynge thorow all the worlde, as S. Auguſtine doth witneſſe in theſe wordes. The holy Church are we, but I doe not ſay, as one ſhould ſay, we that be here alonely, that heare me now, but as many as be here aſſembled Chriſtened mē in this Church, that is to ſay, in thys Citye, as many as be in thys region, as many as be beyonde the ſee, as many as be in all the worlde (for from the ryſing of the ſunne, till the goyng downe, is the name of God prayſed) ſo is the holy Church our mother. &c.

Auguſt. ſer. 99. de tempore.

The holy Church is the congregation of faythfull men where ſoeuer they bee in the worlde.

Here haue you playnely, that the holy Church is the congregation of faythfull men, whereſoeuer they be in the worlde. And neyther the Pope, nor yet hys Cardinalles be more this Church or of thys Church then the pooreſt man in earth. For this church ſtandeth alonely in the ſpirituall faith of Chriſt Jeſus, and not in dignities nor honours of the worlde, as Liranus doth declare in theſe wordes. The Church doth not ſtand in men by reaſon of ſpirituall power, or ſecular dignities: For many Princes and many Popes, and other inferiour perſons haue ſwerued frō the fayth. Wherfore that Church doth ſtand in thoſe perſons in whome is the true knowlege and confeſſion of fayth, and of veritie. &c.

Lyra in mat. ca. 19.

O my Lordes, what will you ſay to Lyra? I haue great maruayle that you burne hym not. It is hye tyme to condemne hym for an heretike, for he ſpeaketh agaynſt your lawe writ. q. 1. Quodcunq;. Where as your gloſe declareth that God ſuffereth not, the church of Rome for to erre. And Lyra ſayth playnely that many popes haue erred, and alſo that the Church ſtandeth not in dignitie, but in confeſſion of Chriſt and of hys bleſſed veritie.

But now here wyll be obiected that I fayne ſuch a Church, as our Logitions doe intentionem ſecundam, that is a thyng yͤ is no where. Where ſhall a man finde a Church that is ſo pure and ſo cleane that hath neyther ſpot nor wrinckle in her, and that is wythout all ſinne, ſeyng that all men muſt of trueth ſaye, forgeue vs our treſpaſſe? And if any man ſay (be he neuer ſo righteous) that he hath no ſinne, the is he a lyer, and there is no veritie in hym. To thys I aunſwere, that thys holy Church hath ſin in her yet is ſhe pure and cleane. Marke S. Paules wordes: Chriſte hath geuen hymſelfe for her, that he might make her glorious. So that the cleannes of this holy church is the mercy of God toward her thorow Chriſt: for whoſe ſake, he layeth nothing to her charge: yea and if any other perſon woulde, he is ready to geue her his cleanes, and to let her by fayth clayme of right hys purenes for her owne. For betweene them, all is common, as betweene man and wyfe. So that if the Church loke on her owne merites and of her owne workes, ſhe is full of ſinne, and muſt needes ſay, demitte mihi debita. The which ſhe needed not to ſay if ſhe had none.

Math. 6. 1. Iohn. 1.

Ephe. 5.

The holy Churche how it is made pure and cleane without ſpotte or wrinkle.

But if ſhe referre her ſelfe vnto the merites of her bleſſed huſbande Chriſt Jeſus, and to the cleanes that ſhe hath in hys bloud, the is ſhe without ſpotte. For by the reaſon that ſhe ſticketh by fayth ſo faſt vnto her huſband Chriſt, and doth abyde in confeſſion of her ſinne, & requireth mercy for them, therfore is there nothing layde to her charge, but all thyng is forgeuen her. And therefore sayth S. Paule, there is no damnation vnto them that bee in Christ Iesu. And that this may bee the playner, I wyll bryng you S. Augustines wordes, the which was vered of the Donatistes wyth thys same reason that is layd agaynst mee, hys wordes bee these. The whole Church sayth, forgeue vs our sinnes, wherefore shee hath spottes and wrinckles, but by knowledging of them, her wrinckles bee extended and stretched out, by knowledging her spottes are washed away.

Augustinus de Verbis Apostoli. s. 29.

The church abydeth in prayer that shee myght bee cleased by knowledging of her sinnes. As long as we liue here so standeth it. And when we shall departe out of thys bodye, all such thynges bee forgeuen to euery man, wherfore by thys meane the church of God, is in the treasures of God, wythout spotte and wrinckles: and therefore here doe we not lyue wythout sinne, but we shall passe from hence wythout sinne. &c. Here haue you clearely that the church of God is cleansed and purified by Christ for knowledgyng of her sinnes, and not by her owne purenes. Wherefore such a church there must needes bee, though that the carnall eye can not see her, nor fleshly reason can iudge of her. Wherefore we beleeue thys article by fayth, that holy church is a communion or felowshyp of holy men, and know it not by seeyng or feelyng, as we doe the felowshyp of Drapers or mercers, for then were it none article of the faith.

The church of God is the treasures of God without spotte or wrinkle.

And it is playne, that all your exterior signes, wyth all your holy ornamentes, as your holy myters, your holy crossestaues, your holy pyllers, polaris, your holy red gloues, your holy ouches, and your holy rynges, your holy annoynted fingers, your holy bellmentes, your holy challices, and your holy golden showes, yea, & take also to helpe you S. Thomas of Canterburyes holy showe, wyth all the holy bootes of holy Monkes, and all these togither can not make one crumme of holynes in you, nor helpe you one pricke forward, that you may bee wythin thys church. For if these thynges coulde helpe, then were it no mastery to make an Asse to bee of the church of God.

That which is of fayth can neither bee seene nor felt.

But our holy mother the Church hath an other holynes, that commeth from God the father through the sweete bloud of his blessed sonne Iesus Christ, in whom is all her confidence and trust. Unto whom she sticketh onely by stedfast fayth, by whose purenes shee is also pure in that, that she doth confesse her vnclennes, for shee beleeueth stedfastly that she hath an aduocate for her sinne to the father of heauen, which is Christ Iesus, and hee is the satisfaction for her sinnes: & hee of his mercy & not of her merites hath chosen her for to bee his, and because she is his, therfore must she bee cleane so long as she abideth in him.

The true holynes that is of our right holye mother the Church.

1. Iohn. 2.

This is well declared in S. John where our master Christe is compared to the vyne and all the members of holy Churche to the braunches, that as the braunches, can bring forth no frute of them selues, so can holy church of her selfe bring forth no goodnes except she [illegible] Christ by perfite fayth.

Iohn. 15.

This is wel proued by your owne law whose wordes bee these, therfore is the Church holy, because she beleeueth righteously in God. &c. Here you not the cause wherfore the Church is holy: because she beleeueth righteously in God, that is she beleeueth in nothyng but in him, and she beleeueth nor heareth no worde but his, as our master Christe beareth witnesse, my sheepe heare my voyce, and an other mans voyce doe they not know. Also in an other place, hee that is of God heareth the wordes of God. How commeth this, that the Church of God hath so sure a iudgement, that she knoweth the voyce of Christ from other voyces, & can not erre in her iudgement. Because that Christ hath chosen her, and because she is learned of God as our master Christ sayth, and because she hath (as S. John sayth) the inwarde anoyntment of God, that teacheth his all maner of verity, so that she can not erre. But why can shee not erre? because she may doe what she will? Because

that that all thing that ſhe doth, is well done: becauſe ſhe may make new rules and newe lawes at her pleaſure: Becauſe ſhe may inuent a newe ſeruice of God that is not in Scripture at her will? Nay nay my Lordes. For ſhe is but a woman and muſt bee ruled by her huſbande, yea ſhe is but a ſheepe and muſt heare ỹ voyce of her ſhepheard, and ſo long as ſhe doth, ſo long cã ſhe not erre becauſe the voyce of her ſhepheard can not bee falſe.

De pœne. Diſ. 2. Si in gloſſa. 24. q. 1. A recta & in Gloſſa.

This may be proued by your own law whoſe wordes bee theſe, ỹ whole Church can not erre. Alſo in an other place, the congregation of faythfull men muſt needes bee, whiche alſo can not erre. &c. Theſe wordes bee playne what Church it is that can not erre: that is the congregation of faythfull men that bee gathered in Chriſtes name, whiche haue Chriſtes ſpirite, whiche haue the holy ointement of God, whiche abyde faſt by Chriſtes word, and heare no other mãs voyce but his. Now my Lordes gather you all togither with all the lawes that you cã make, and all the holynes, that you can deuiſe and cry, the Church, the Churche, and the Councels, the Councels that were lawfully gathered in the power of the holy ghoſt (all this may you ſay & yet lye) and if you haue not in deede the holy ghoſt with in you, and if you doe heare any other voyce then Chriſtes, then are you not of the Churche, but of the deuill, and theeues & murtherers as Chriſt ſaith. For you come into the fold of Chriſt without him, you bring not his voice. but you come with your owne voyce, with your owne ſtatutes, with your owne word, & your owne mandamus, mandamus, precipimus, precipimus, excommunicamus, excommunicamus.

The fayth-full congregation can not erre.

The voyce of murtherers and theeues.

These bee the voyces of murtherers and Theeues, and not of Chriſt, therfore you can not but erre, for you bee not taught of God, you haue not the holy ointment, you haue not the worde of God for you, you heare not the voyce of the true ſhepheard, therfore muſt you needes erre in all your counſells. This is an other maner of rule then my Lorde of Rochester doth aſſigne to examine your counſels by, for hee ſayth, where that the Pope and the counſell doth not agree all in one, there will hee ſuſpect the counſell not to bee right.

A rule that Rochester teacheth to know the difference betweene ỹ Pope and Councell.

Who did euer heare ſuch a rule of a Chriſtean man: yea and of a biſhop: yea and of a doctor of Diuinite, where hath hee learned this Diuinite: to recken a counſell to bee trew, becauſe ỹ the Pope and ſo many men doe agree in one, yea and that ſuch men as haue ſo often tymes erred in their coũcels, as hee doth declare hym ſelf reckening the counſell of Conſtantinople that had .330. Biſhops and yet did erre, and hee knew no other cauſe, but becauſe the Pope did not aſſent to them. Is not this a reſonable cauſe? cã not the Pope erre? let hym read his own lawe. Diſtinctio. 19. Anaſtaſius, & Diſtinctio. 40. Si Papa and alſo .24. q. 1. A recta in the gloſe, and there ſhall hee fynde that the Pope hath erred. Wherefore then ſhould the matter ſtande in his iudgment? Now how will hee by thys rule ſaue the counſels of conſtance, and of Baſell where in both counſels, the Popes were condemned for heretykes? As the ſame counſels make mencion, alſo that the councels haue erred, that graũted hee hymſelfe, but peraduenture hee will ſaye, that they were not full Councels.

The Councell erreth if the Pope agree not to their doynges.

Popes haue erred.

Popes condemned for heretickes.

Now is it well amended, what diſtinction is (as concernyng the veritie in a counſell that hath a thouſand biſhops and in an other that hath fyue thouſand, can the multitude helpe to thee veritie? Then had the Turke the veritie and we the falſed, then had the Prophet Micheas the worſſe part for hee was alone againſt .iiij. hundred ſo was ỹ verytie by ỹ Prophets of Baal, and not by Elyas, for they were foure hundred and fyftye & hee was but one man. Brieſely Chriſtes flocke is alwayes ỹ ſmalleſt nũber in this world but yet it is the beſt, not the ſmalleſt number maketh Chriſtes flocke, but that Chriſtes Church ſtãdeth neyther by the greateſt number nor yet by the ſmalleſt, nor by the iudgmẽt or numbring of man, but by the callyng and election of God. Wherefore let my Lorde bring forth what counsell that hee will, and if they haue not the word of God, I will not all onely say they may erre, but also that they doe erre in verye deede. And that will I proue by the greatest lawyer that they haue called Panormitanus whose wordes bee these, that Councels may erre as they haue erred, as concernyng that contract of matrimony, inter raptorem & raptam, and the saying of Saint Hierome was afterward preferred aboue the statute of the counsel as it is proued. 36.q.2. Tria, for in thinges concerning the fayth is the saying of a priuat person to bee preferred afore the saying of the pope, if hee haue better reasons and scriptures of the new, and of the olde testamēt for him then the Pope: nor it can not helpe, to say that the counsell can not erre, because that Christ did pray for his Church ỹ her fayth should not fayle. For I aūswere to this, that though ỹ generall coūcell doe represent ỹ whole vniuersall church: neuertheles in very deede there is not ỹ very vniuersall church, but representatiue. For the vniuersal church stādeth in ỹ election of all fayth full men: & all faithfull mē of ỹ world make that vniuersall Church, whose head and spouse is Christ Jesus, & the Pope is but the vicar of Christ and not the very head of the Church, this is the Church that can not erre. &c.

De electio. & significa.

The Councell of Nicei dyd erre.

A generall Councell is, not the vniuersall Churche.

Here it is open that the counsell may erre, and that a priuate person hauing scriptures for hym is to bee heard before the Pope and also ỹ coūsell, hauing no scriptures for them, you haue also what is the very trew Church which can not erre, which thing can not bee verifyed of your counsels for they bee neyther without errour, nor yet the holy Church, but that they doe represēt the Church as a legate representeth a kings person: but of that followeth not that hee is ỹ king, or hath as much power as the king, or is aboue. The king or that he may rule the king, this may also bee proued by. S. Augustine whose words bee these, those counselles that bee gathered in euery Prouince must without doubt geue place to the auctoritie of the ful counsels which bee gathered of all Christendom: and also those full counsels oft tymes must bee amended by the full counsels that come after: if any thyng bee opened by any experience that was afore shut, and if any thing bee knowen that was hydden. And this may bee done without any shadowe of superstitious pride, without any boasted Arrogancy, with out any contentiō of malicious enuy, but with holy meekenes, with holy peace and with Christen charitye. &c.

Augustinus de bap. li. 2. c. 3. contra Donatistas.

Councels haue erred and many erre.

Here it is playne that your full coūsels may bee amended and reformed: ỹ which thing needs not, if they could not erre: yea and if they did not erre in deede. Moreouer you must needes graunt that there is a rule where by your counsels must bee exammined, & where by sentence must bee geuen which of your councels be true and which false, by the which rule if your counsels bee not ordered, they must needes erre and bee false, and of the deuill. Wherfore gather all your coūsels together, and yet of them can you not make holy church.

But peraduenture there may bee many in your coūsels good and perfite men and of holy Churche: but they and you together make not the vniuersall holy church that can not erre: neither haue you any auctoritie ouer holy Church, further then the holy scripture of God: but as soone as you forsake Christ and his holy worde, so soone are you the congregation of the deuyll, and theeues and murtherers: and yet for all this, there must needes bee an holy church of Christ in earth, that is neyther bounde to Jerusalem nor to Constantinople, nor yet to Rome, as though thee were lyke vnto the Asse and the fole.

The holy scriptures are the iudges of the Counsels doings

But now wyll there bee obiected, that our Sayuer Christ commaundeth, if my brother offende mee, that I shoulde complayne to the church. Now is this church that I haue set out spirituall, and no man knoweth her but God onely, shee is also scattered thorow out the worlde, wherfore how can a man complayne to that church

church? I aunſwere, our M. Chriſt doth playnly ſpeake of a man that hath wronge, the which muſt nedes be a perticuler and a certayne man: and therfore likewyſe he biddeth hym complayne not to the vniuerſall church, but to the perticular church.

There are perticular Churches to whome wee may complayne.

Now this particular church, if he be of God, and a true member of the vniuerſal church, he will iudge righteouſly after Chriſtes worde, and after the probations brought afore her. Neuertheleſſe, oftetymes cometh it to paſſe, ỹ this particular church doth fully and wholy erre, and iudgeth vnryght, and excommunicateth him that is bleſſed of god, as it is open in your owne lawe, whoſe wordes be theſe: oftetymes he that is caſt out is within, and he that is within is kept without. &c.

24. q. 3. Si. quis et c. ſũ aliquis.

Here haue you playnely ỹ the particular church may erre. Wherefore that church that can not erre is all only the vniuerſall church which is cauled the communion and the felowſhip of Saintes, the which addition was made by holy fathers (for in Cipryans time was there no mention of it) by all likelyhode to declare the preſumption of certayne men, and of certayne congregations that reckened themſelues to be holy church. Wherfore my Lordes ſee well to it, leaſt the holy Ghoſt haue pricked you wyth thys addition, for you haue alwayes made your ſelfe holy church, yea and that wythout any holines. Now haue I declared vnto you, what is holy church, that is, the congregation of faithfull men thorowout all ỹ worlde: and whereby he is holy, that is, by Chriſtes holyneſſe and by Chriſtes bloud: and alſo what is the cauſe that he can not erre: becauſe that he keepeth herſelfe ſo faſt to the worde of God, whiche is a perfite & a true rule.

The communion & felowſhip of Saintes is the vniuerſall Church.

Now a mã may know the church.

Nowe muſt we declare by what ſignes and tokẽs, that we may know that in this place or in that place there be certeine members of this holye church. For though he be in her ſelf ſpirituall and can not be perfitely knowen, by our exteriour ſenſes, yet neuertheleſſe we may haue certeine tokens, of her ſpirituall preſence, whereby we may recken that in this place and in that place be certeine of her members. As by a naturall example, though the ſoule of man in her ſelfe be ſpirituall & inuiſible: yet may we haue ſure tokens of her preſence, as hearyng monyng, ſpeakyng, ſmelyng, with ſuch other. So likewiſe, where the word of God is truely and perfitely preached without the damnable dreames of men, and where it is well of the hearers receiued, & alſo where we ſee good workes that doe openly agree with the doctrine of the Goſpell, theſe be good and ſure tokẽs whereby we may iudge, that there be ſome men of holy Church.

A nexample teaching how ỹ true church may be knowne.

As to the firſt, whereas the Goſpell is truely preached it muſt nedes light in ſome mens hartes, as the prophete witneſſeth, my word, ſhall not returne agayne to me fruſtrate, but it ſhall doe all thyng that I will, and it ſhall proſper, in thoſe thynges, vnto the which I did ſend it. Eſay. 55.

Alſo S. Paule ſayth, fayth cõmeth by hearyng, and hearyng commeth by the word of God: and therfore it is open in holy Scripture that when Peter ſpake the wordes of God, the holy ghoſt fell downe on them all. Wherfore it is open that Gods worde can neuer be preached in vayne, but ſome men muſt nedes receiue it, and thereby be made of holy Churche, though that men doe not know them neither by their names nor yet by their faces, for this word is receiued into their hartes. Roma. 10. Actes. 10.

The ſecond token is, that the receiuers of this word doe worke well thereafter as S. Paule declareth of his hearers: when you receiued of vs the word wherewith God was preached, you receiued it not as the word of men, but euen (as it was in deede) the word of God, whiche worketh in you that beleeue. So that if men doe worke after the worde of God, it is a good token that there be men of the Churche, though that we (hypocriſie is ſo ſubtile and ſo ſecret) may be oftentymes deceiued by theſe outward workes, but neuertheles charitie iud- 1. Theſſ. 2.

Good workes are the fruite of good fayth. geth well of all thinges that haue a good outward shewe, and bée not opẽly agaynst the worde of God. But it is no ieoperdy though charitie bée deceiued, for it is opẽ to all ieoperdies: but fayth is neuer deceiued.

Charitie may be deceaued, but fayth can neuer bee deceaued.

Now to our purpose, that where the worde of God is preached truely, it is a good & a perfite token that there bée some mẽ of Christes church. This may bée proued by Chrisostomes wordes: they that bée in Iudea let thẽ flée vp into the mountaines, that is to say they that bée in Christendome, let them geue thẽ selues to Scriptures. Wherfore commaundeth hée that all Christened men in that tyme should flye vnto Scriptures, for in that tyme in the which heresies haue crept into the Church, there can bée no true probation of Christendome, nor no other refuge vnto Christen men, willyng to know the veritie of fayth, but ỹ Scriptures of God. Afore by many wayes was it shewed which was the Church of Christ, and which was the congregation of Gentiles: but now there is no other way to them that will know whiche is the very true Churche of Christ, but alonely by scriptures. By workes first was the church of Christ knowen when the conuersation of Christen men, either of all or of many were holy, the which holynes had not the wicked men, but nowe Christen men, bée as euill or worse then heretickes or Gentiles, yea & greater continencie is founde among them, then among Christen men.

A saying of Chrisostome.

Wherefore hée that will knowe which is ỹ very church of christ, how shall hée knowe it but by Scriptures onely. Wherfore our Lord cõsidering that so greate confusion of thynges should come in the latter dayes, therfore commaundeth hée that Christen men which bée in Christendome willing to reserue the stedfastnes of true fayth, should flye vnto no other thyng but vnto Scriptures, for if they haue respect vnto other thynges they shall bée sclaundered and shall perishe, not vnderstandyng whiche is the true Church. &c.

These wordes néede no exposition they bée plaine inough: they doe also exclude all maner of learning sauing holy scripture. Wherefore sée how you can with honestie saue your holy lawes, and defend the[m] against Chrisostome. Moreouer if Chrisostome complayne of the incontenency that was in his dayes, how would hée complaine if hée now liued & sawe the bawdry and fornication, that is in the Church? And also he sendeth men to scriptures that will know the holy Church, and not vnto ỹ holy Church for in the Church were heresyes, but not in scripture.

Chrisostome sendeth vs to scriptures to learne which is the holy Church, & not vnto them that call themselues ỹ holy church.

Also. S. Paule witneseth the same saying, you are built vpon the foundacion of the Apostles and Prophets, heare haue you playnely that the very trewe Church is grounded, yea and founded of holy scripture, and therefore wheresoeuer that the worde of God is preached, that is a good token that there bée some men of Christes Church. But now as to the fruites and workes of this Church, she doth all onely fetch out her maner of liuing and all her good workes out of ỹ holy word of God, and she fayneth not, nor dreameth any other new holines, or new inuented workes that be not in scripture, but she is content w Christes learning and beléeueth, that Christ hath sufficiently taught her all manner of good workes that bée to the honour of our heauenly father. Therfore inuenteth shée no other way to heauen but followeth Christ onely, in suffering oppressions, and persecutions, blasphemynges, & al other things that may bée layd vnto her, which as S. Austine sayth she learned of our M. Christ. Our holy mother ỹ church throughout all the world scattered far and long, in her trew head Christ Jesus taught, hath learned not to feare the contumelys of the Crosse nor yet of death: but more and more is shée strengthed not in resisting but in suffering. &c.

Ephe. 2.

The holy Church is builte and founded vpon the Apostles & Prophets.

Augustinus.

The true Church is a sufferer, and no persecutor.

Now my Lordes compare your selfe to this rule of S. Austine, and let vs sée how you can bring your self into the Church: or els to proue your self to bée holy: The Church suffereth perſecutions (for as S. Paule ſayth, they that will liue deuoutly in Chriſt muſt ſuffer perſecution) and you with ſtand all thinges and ſuffer nothing. You oppreſſe euery mã, and you will bée oppreſſed of no mã. You perſecute euery man, and no man may ſpeake a worde agaynſt you, no though it bée neuer ſo true. You caſt euery mã in priſon, & no mã may touch you, but he ſhal bée curſed. You compell euery mã to ſay as you ſay, & you will not once ſay as Chriſte ſayth. And as for your holynes all the worlde knoweth what it is: for it ſtandeth in clothing and in decking, in watching and ſléeping, in eating and drinking this meate or ý meate, this drynke or that drinke, in pattering and mumbling theſe Pſalmes or thoſe Pſalmes, without deuocion.

persecucions

2. Tim. 3.

The Popes church are perſecutors but no ſuffereres.

Bréefly all your holines is in bokes Bels, Cãdels, Chalices, oyle creme water, horſes, houndes, pallaces, & all that is mighty and glorious in the world, there on hange you, there in glory you, there on crake you, there on boaſt you, there vpon builde you. Is this ý natures of ý church? is this holines? Of whome haue you learned theſe maners? You can not deny but theſe bée true, and if you would denye it, all the world is witneſſe agaynſt you: yea and alſo your owne factes & déedes. Of whom haue you learned this holynes? not of Chriſt nor yet of his holy Church: but you haue learned it of the Arians, ý were the ſeruauntes of the deuyll. Hilarius wryteth in theſe wordes, the Church doth threaten, with banyſhmentes & pryſonmentes, and thée compelleth men to beléeue her, which was exciled and caſt in priſon, now hangeth thée on the dignitye of her fellowſhip, the which was conſecrated, by the threateninges of perſecutors: thée cauſeth prieſtes to flye that was encreaſed & by the chaſing away of prieſtes, thée glorieth that thée is loued of ý world, ý which could neuer bée Chriſtes except the worlde did hate her.

The glory of the Popes churche is in trath.

Howe thynke you my Lordes, doe not you all theſe thinges, that bée layd to the Arians charge? Your owne frendes, yea your owne conſciences muſt nédes accuſe you of all theſe thinges, and yet will you bée called Chriſtes children, I lay nothyng to you, but that holy Doctours lay vnto you.

But let vs ſée what S. Barnarde ſayth on you: they call themſelues the miniſters of Chriſt, but they ſerue Antichriſt: they goe gorgiouſly arayed of our Lordes goods, vnto whome they géeue none honour, and of theſe goods commeth the harlottes decking that thou ſéeſt dayly, the game players diſguiſing, and kynges apparell: of thys cõmeth golde in their bridles, in their ſaddles, and in their ſpurres, ſo that their ſpurres bée bryghter thẽ the aulters: of thys commeth theyr plenteous wine preſſes and their full ſellers, bolkyng from thys vnto that: of thys cõmeth their tunnes of ſwéete wynes: of thys bée their bagges ſo filled, for ſuch thinges as theſe bée, will they bée rulers of the church, as Deacons, Archdeacons, Byſhoppes, and Archbyſhops. &c.

Barnardus ſuper can. ſ. 33.

Note here the ſaying of Saint Barnard.

My Lordes I had thought to haue added Cardinalles and Legates, Abbottes and Pryors, to haue made the company more holy, but I durſt not. How thinke you, of whom doth hée ſpeake when hée ſayth Byſhops and Archbyſhops: what holynes doth hée repryue, when hée ſpeaketh of gorgious araye, of harlottes decking, of game players diſguiſing, of goulden ſpurres, ſaddelles & bridles? If there were an C. that did vſe it more then you, yet muſt you nédes graunt that hée ſpeaketh of you. Hée paſſeth mére more in condemning of your holy ornamentes, for hée cauſeth you the ſeruauntes of Antichriſt, and your holy ornamentes harlottes decking, and game players diſguiſing, and hée ſaith that you are neyther the church nor of the church, but the ſeruauntes of Antichriſt, how thinke you by S. Barnarde, it is tyme to condemne hym, for hée ſpeaketh agaynſt holy church and all her holy ornamentes, thys dare I well ſay, that if the beſt

S. Barnard greatly reproueth the inſaciable pride of the Popes Church.

Chriſten

Chriſten man within the Realme ſhould preach theſe wordes of Saint Barnarde, you would not ſticke to condemne hym for an heretike, but you were wonte to call hym ſweete Barnarde, but me thynketh that he is ſoure inough in thys thynge. Wherefore diſpute the matter wyth hym that you may come into the Church, and not wyth me.

FINIS.

An other declaration of the Church, wherein hee aunſwereth to Maiſter More.

IN my firſt booke I dyd declare how that certayne men dyd take vpon them to bee counted of holy Church, whoſe maners and lyuynges, dyd nothyng agree wyth holy church. But after that, commeth M. More, and he layeth to my charge, that I counted all the ſpiritualtie to bee naught, becauſe he would make my name ſomewhat odious vnto them. But verely he doth me great wrõge, for it was neuer my meanyng, nor yet my ſaying. But myne intent was to declare that neyther the Pope, nor his colledge of Cardinalles, nor yet all the Byſhoppes in the worlde, gathered togither, did make holy Churche, becauſe of theyr names, or elſe for theyr long gownes, or for theyr ſhauen crownes, or elſe annoynted fingers, nor yet for any other exterior thynges, that the worlde had in admiration. But yet neuertheleſſe I dyd graunt, and alſo doe now confeſſe many good men to haue ſhauen crownes, and alſo longe gownes. But yet for theſe thyngs, they were neuer the more of the church.

xiiij. queſt. i. c. Quodcũq; in Verbo Reconciliat.

All the popes learning hath bene, that he and his, hath bene ỹ church, the which can not erre, and all things that belong vnto them, were called ỹ goods of holy church. All lawes made by them, were the lawes of holy Church. They myght not bee conuẽted before any temporall Prince, becauſe they were men of holy church. They myght not be hanged for murther, becauſe they were annoynted, and of holy church.

Briefely, there be innumerable ſuch thynges inuented of them, to maynetayne and to defende theyr holyneſſe, and to proue that they be holy Church, the which thinges I thynke M. More can not denye. And if he would, yet there be a great many of bookes forth comming, to proue my ſentẽce againſt him. And alſo ỹ practiſe that hath beene vſed in ỹ worlde, will teſtifie the ſame.

I thinke M. More, nor yet any mã lyuyng, dyd euer know in hys tyme, that any man was iudged, or taken to be of the church, but ſuch men as I haue ſpoken of. And I thynke thys name church was neuer named, but it was taken ſpecially, and principally, for thoſe men that had ſhauen crownes, and other lyke tokens. Let me be reported to thoſe men that be alyue. Now, becauſe I ſaw that theſe thynges were nothyng the cauſe of holy church, nor yet belonged greatly to holy church, therefore I ſay, was I moued to declare what holy church was, and who were thereof, and by what ſignes and tokens men myght know her.

M. More would haue vs to thinke there is none other holy church but ỹ Pope and his Cardinals and Byſhops &c.

Now to declare this, I brought certaine places of ſcripture to proue, that this worde Eccleſia, was taken in ſcripture, for the whole congregatiõ, both of good, and bad. But I ſayd, I would not greatly ſpeake of that cõgregation, for that was not it, that could not erre, of the which was mine intent to ſpeake. And I brought for me, ỹ ſaying of S. Paule. Chriſt hath geuen hym ſelfe, for his Church, that he might ſanctifie her, and cleanſe her in the fountaine of water, through the worde of lyfe, to make her to hym ſelfe a glorious church, without ſpot, or wrincle, or any such thyng. But that she might be holy, and without blame. To proue, that the Churche was cleansed by Christ, I brought the saying of S. Augustine for mee. Of Christ is the church made fayre. First was she filthy in sinnes, afterwarde by pardon, and by grace, was she made fayre. &c.

or

Aug. de verbis Domini. serm. 1.

Moreouer, to proue, ỹ this church was made cleane by Christ, and not by names, or by clothyng, or by any other exteriour thyng, I brought for me ỹ saying of S. Iohn. If ỹ sonne of God haue deliuered you, then are you truely deliuered. Also S. Paule. You are washed, you are sãctified, you are iustified, in ỹ name of Iesus Christ, & in the spirite of God. But vnto these things, doth M. More answere, that I doe not well to exclude, out of this Church bad mẽ, for ỹ knowne church (sayth she) standeth in a gathering together of good mẽ and bad: & to proue that, she bringeth in certeine parables of our Sauiour Christ.

Iohn. 6.

1. Cor. 6.

To this I answere, that I neuer denyed, but that there was such a cõgregatiõ of good, and bad: but I sayd, that that was not ỹ very true church, afore God, though it beare the name of the Church, and in very deede, hys owne parables doth declare, that our maister Christe shall at length, geue sentence agaynst them, that call them selues falsely of the Churche. Iudas was called an Apostle, and taken so of all his company, but yet our maister Christ calleth him the deuil. Now if M. More will haue Iudas in hys Churche, I must be content, that she shall also betraye Christe. The very trueth is, that bad men be mixt here in the Churche, and after outwarde signes, be taken for members of the Church, specially if they be not excommunicate. But the Churche, whiche I dyd speake of, was not a felowshyp gathered togither in a cõsent of exteriour things, and ceremonies, as other politicke felowshyps be. But it is a felowshyp specially gathered in the vnitie of fayth, hauyng the holy ghost within them to sanctifie their spirites, whiche doth set their trust onely in the redemptiõ promised thẽ, in Christes blessed bloud.

How euill men be in the church.

What the very true church is.

This I say, is the very true church of God, let the worlde say what they will, and let men call them selues as it pleaseth thẽ. For as S. Paule saith, she that hath not the spirite of God, is none of his. Also M. Mores learnyng will graunt that euill men, be the dead members of the Churche: what they be worth, let other men iudge. But M. More reckoneth, that there is not such a Churche here in earth, that is without spot, and wrincle, as S. Paul sayth. For the Church, sayth she, is here gracious, and not glorious. Truely, I haue marueile, what she meaneth, thus to expound Saint Paules saying: for I thinke she can not proue, but that S. Paules saying is verified of the Church, that is here militant, and not of the church triumphaunt. But I will not at this tyme greatly dispute with M. More. But, and if she were as she hath bene, I would say some thyng more to hym, then I will doe at this tyme. She can neither mocke me, nor ieste me out of cõceite, and if I were disposed to couple with hym, nor it is not hys foule, & shameles workes, and vntrue sayinges, that she layeth to me, that could fear me. But now, that it hath pleased God (without any helpe, or knowledge of me) to bryng hym vnto this fall, I will praye to God for hym, to geue hym grace, that she may reuoke all such false doctrine, as she hath brought into the worlde. For doubtles, if she abyde in the meanyng, that she is now in, I doe not see, how she can dye Gods seruaunt. Yea, his owne knowen Church is agaynst hym, whõ (she sayth) men are bound to beleeue, vnder payne of damnation. But truely, as God shall iudge me, I am sory for hys trouble, if I could helpe hym with any lawfull meanes, I would doe my best, so euill will beare I him.

Ephes. 5.

Home mortuus non est homo.

M. More layeth many thynges to me wrõg fully.

But to procede farther in my matter, I will not greatly speake much of the Church, by the reason, that many other men, sence my first writinge, haue declared this article, much better then I can doe it. Wherefore I will all onelye reſite the places of holy doctours, that I haue brought for mé in my fyrſt boke, and the intent wherefore I aleaged them, to prowe that ỹ Church was afrée thing, throughout all the world, and not bounde eyther to place or to perſon. I brought for me ỹ ſaying of S. Auguſtine, ſaying theſe wordes. The holy Church are wée. But I doe not ſaye, are we, as one ſhould ſay, we that bée heare all onely that heare mé now, but as many as bée heare faythfull chriſtean men in this Church, ỹ is to ſay, in this Cytie, as many as bée in this region, as many as bée beyonde the ſea, as many as bée in all the whole world (for from ỹ ryſing of the ſunne, tyll the goinge downe, is the name of God prayſed.) So is ỹ holy Church our mother. &c.

Aug. Serm. 99. de tempore.

Alſo Lyra ſayth, The Church doth not ſtand in men, by the reaſon of ſpirituall power, or ſeculer dignitie. For many princes, and many Popes, and other inferiour perſõs, haue ſwerued from the fayth. Wherfore the church doth ſtand in thoſe perſons, in whom is the true knowledge, and confeſſion of fayth, and of veritye. &c.

Lyra in Mar. ca. xix

Here Lyra ſayth as much as I doe in cleare wordes. And M. More doth not, nor yet cã refell hym. Afterward I bring a ſaying of S. Auguſtine, to prowe, that the Church hath ſpottes, and wrynckles in her: And yet by confeſſing of them, and by flycking to Chriſtes bloud, they bée not imputed vnto her. This is his ſaying.

De Verbo Apoſt. ſer. xxix.

The whole Church prayeth, Lord forgeue vs our ſinnes. Wherfore ſhe hath ſpottes, and wrynckles. But by knowledging of them, her wrynckles bée ſtreatched out, and by knowledging, her ſpottes are waſhed away. The Church continueth in prayer, ỹ ſhée myght bée clenſed by knowledgeing of her ſynnes. And as long as we here liue, ſo ſtandeth it. And when euery mã departeth out of this body, all ſuch ſinnes are forgeuen hym, the which ought to bée forgeuẽ. For they bée forgeuen by dayly prayer, and bée goeth hence clenſed. And the Church of God, is layde vp in the treaſure of God, for puregolde, & by this meane the Church of God is in the treaſure of our Lord, without ſpotte or wrynkell.

A notable ſaying of S. Auguſtine.

It folowth: Let vs therefore pray that God may forgeue vs, and that we may forgeue our detters, ſéeing it is sayde: and it ſhall be forgeuen vnto you. We ſay this dayly, and dayly we doe this, and this thing is done dayly in vs. We are not here without ſinne. But we ſhall departe hence without ſynne. &c. Let euery man iudge, whether that this place of S. Auguſtine, maketh for my purpoſe, or not, that is to ſay, whether that ỹ Church hath any ſpottes or wrinckles in her, or not. And yet nyeuertheles, ſhée hath no ſpottes nor wrinckles. For S. Auguſtine ſayth, ỹ Church of God is in the treaſurie of God, without any ſpotte, ſo that through Gods mercy, nothing is imputed vnto her. Her cleannes is not, ỹ ſhe hath no ſpots: but bécauſe, that for Chriſtes ſake, there is nothing layd to her charge.

M. More maketh many wordes of venyall ſynnes, and deadly ſynnes. But to ſpeake after his owne ſchole men, it ſhould bée to harde for hym to defende that expoſition, that hée here maketh of S. Auguſtine. But to prowe that the Church is cleane, by the reaſon of Chriſt, I brought for mé their owne lawe, whoſe wordes bée theſe. Therefore is ỹ Church holy, becauſe ſhée beléeueth righteouſly in God. &c.

De conſe. D. iiij. c. Igi tur.

Furthermore, to prowe that this congregation of faythfull men, is the Church, that can not erre, I brought for mé their owne lawe. Whoſe wordes bée theſe. The holy Church can not erre. &c. Alſo in an other place The Congregation of faythfull men muſt néedes bée, which alſo can not erre. &c. So that it is cleare, firſt, that there muſt nedes bée a congregation of faythfull men, which bée neyther bounde to Rome, nor to Hieruſalem, nor yet to any certayne place, but it is ſpread abroade throughout the whole worlde, and ſtandeth in the vnitye of faythfull chriſten men. And that is the church, that God ſuffereth not to erre in thoſe thinges, that belong to ſalvation. Wherefore I dyd ſay in my other booke, that the Popes councels were not the church, that coulde not erre. For, for ỹ moste part, those coũsels did not order themselues after Gods worde. Wherfore I sayd, they myght well erre. And for that cause a priuate person, hauing scripture for hym, ought to bee preferred afore a whole counsell, if they had no scripture. For Gods worde ought to bee iudge ouer all counsels, and to prowe this, I brought for mee the saying of De electio. c Significasti. Panormitanus, which sayth. The counsell may erre, as it hath erred, concernyng ỹ contracte of matrimony, inter Raptorem & Raptam. And ỹ saying of S. Hierome, was afterward preferred aboue the statute of ỹ coũsell, as it is prowed 36. queſt. 2 Tria. For in these thynges concernyng the fayth, the saying of a priuate person, is to bee preferred before the saying of the Pope, if hee haue better reasõs and Scriptures of the newe and olde testament for hym, then the Pope hath. Neyther it can helpe to say, that the counsell can not erre, because ỹ Christ did pray that the fayth of the church should not fayle. For I answere to thys, that though the generall counsell doe represent the whole vniuersall church, yet neuertheleſſe, in very deede, there is not the vniuersall church, but representatiue. For the vniuersall church standeth in the election of all faythfull men, throughout the whole worlde, whose head & spouse is Christ Jesus. And the Pope is but the Vicar of Christ, and not ỹ very head of the church. Thys is the Church that can not erre. &c. Here sayth this Doctour, that same sẽtence of the church, that I sayd. I brought also for the same purpose, the saying of Augustine, whose wordes bee these. Aug. de Bapt. li. 2. cap. 3. Those counsels that be gathered in euery prouince, must without doubt geue place to the auctoritie of the full counsels, which bee gathered of all christendome. And also those full coũselles oftentymes must bee amended by the full counselles that come afterwarde, if any thing bee opened by experience, that was before shutte, and if any thing bee knowne that was before hydden. And this must bee done without any shadow of superstitious pride, without any boasted arrogãcy, without any contention of malicious enuy, but with holy meekenes, with holy peace, and with Christen charitie. &c. Here S. Augustine sayth plainly, that the full counselles may erre, and may bee reformed.

The counsell of Weldens did erre.

The full counsels may erre.

After this I did declare, how a mã should know this church, & by what signes and tokens, & sayd, that where as the worde of God was purely and sincerely preached, and the sacramẽts orderly ministred, after the blessed ordinaunce of Christ: and where as mẽ did patiently suffer for the veritie, & the hearers did apply their lyuing to Christes doctrine, and with meekenes receaued the holy sacraments: These I sayde, were good and perfect tokens to iudge vppon, that there were certayne members of Christes church. And to prowe this, I brought also S. Augustine, saying: Our holy mother the church, through all the world scattered farre and wyde, taught in her true head Christ, hath learned not to feare the contumelies of the Crosse, nor yet of death: But more, & more, is shee strengthened, not in resisting, but in suffering. Also Chrisostomes wordes bee these. They that bee in Judea, let them flye vp to the mountaines, that is to say, they that bee in Christendome, let them geeue themselues to scriptures. Wherfore commaunded hee that all christen men in that tyme, should flie vnto scriptures: For in that tyme, in the which, heresies haue crepte into the church, there can bee no true probation of christendome, nor no other refuge vnto christen men, willing to know the verity of fayth, but the scriptures of God.

How a man may knowe the church.

The church suffereth.

Chrisost. in ope re Imperfecto.

Before by many wayes was it shewed, which was ỹ church of God, and which was the congregation of ỹ Gentiles. But now, there is none other waye to them that will knowe, whiche is the very true Churche of Christ, but alonely by scriptures. By workes, first was ỹ church of Christe knowne, when the congregation of christen men, eyther of all, or of many were holy, the which holynes had not the wicked men. But now, chriſten men bē as euill, or worſe, then heretikes or Gentiles: yea, and greater continencie is founde amonge them, then chriſten men. Wherefore hē that will know which is the very church of Chriſt, how ſhall hē know it but by ſcriptures onely? And therfore our Lorde, conſidering that ſo great confuſion of thynges ſhoulde come in the latter dayes, for that cauſe commaundeth hē, that chriſten men, willing to reſerue ỹ ſtedfaſtnes of true fayth, ſhoulde flē vnto none other thyng, but vnto ſcriptures. For if they haue reſpect vnto other thynges, they ſhall bē ſclaundered, and ſhall perihe, not vnderſtandinge, which is the true church. &c.

By scriptures men may know the veritie.

Maiſter More hath no great thing in this pointe agaynſt mē, ſaynge, that hē ſayth, theſe ſayinges are none of Chriſoſtomes, but of an other mā written in Chriſoſtomes name. Neuertheleſſe, I let it paſſe: let other men iudge betwēne vs both. Afterwarde, becauſe that I ſawe ſo great perſecution vſed by the popes church agaynſt all maner of ſortes of good men, whome M. More cauſeth heretikes, more for his pleaſure then for theyr deſeruynge: For this cauſe, I ſay, I brought a ſaying of Hilarius, to proue that they that did exerciſe ſuch tyranny, were more to bē compared to the Arians, then to Chriſtes church: his ſaying is this. The church doth threaten with banyſhmentes, & impriſonmentes, and chē compelleth men to beleue her, which was exiled and caſt in priſon. Shē hangeth on ỹ dignitie of her felowſhyp, the which was conſecrated by the threatenings of perſecutours. Shē cauſeth Prieſtes to flee, that were encreaſed by the chaſing away of Prieſtes. Shē glorieth that chē is loued of ỹ worlde, the which coulde neuer bē Chriſtes except the worlde did hate her. &c.

Hila. contra Arrianos.

After this I brought a ſaying of S. Barnard, to proue, that the name of ſpirituall array, & gorgious apparell ỹ is vſed in ỹ Popes church, dyd not make ỹ Church. Hys ſaying is thus: They bē the miniſters of Chriſt, but they ſerue Antichriſt, they are gorgiouſly arayed, of our Lordes goodes vnto whom they gene no honor. And of theſe commeth the decking of harlots, that thou ſeēſt dayly, the game players diſguiſing, & kings apparell. Of this commeth golde in their bydells, in their ſaddelles, and in their ſpurres: ſo that their ſpures bē brighter then the aulters. Of this commeth their plenteous wyne preſſes, & their full ſellers, bolking from this vnto ỹ. Of this cōmeth their tūnes of ſweete wynes. Of this bē their bagges ſo fylled. For ſuch thinges, as theſe bē will they bē rulers of the Church. As Deacons, Archdeacons, Byſhops, & Archbyſhops. &c.

Barn. ſup. cā. ſerm. 33.

Men may make an expoſition of S. Barnarde, but it wil bē hard to frame hym to their purpoſe. But for a concluſion, M. More, and I doe vary, but in this poynt, that hē ſayth, the very Church of God ſtādeth by them, that bē good, and bad, and I ſay, that the trew church of Chriſt, ſtandeth in the onely, that bē good men. For the kingdome of Chriſt is diſtincted in bē ỹ dēde, from the kingdome of ỹ deuyll. For euell men bē doubtles the membres of the deuell, as Paule ſayth, Ephe. 2. Alſo our M. Chriſt ſayth, vnto the Phariſyes: You are of your father the deuell. Wherefore it can not ſtande with no learning, that wicked men, which bē the members of the deuyll, and bē gouerned by hym, can bē members of Chriſts body, though that in this preſent lyfe, they bē not yet ſo declared vnto ỹ worlde. God ſend vs all his grace, ỹ we may bē of his holy Church, and mēbres of his bleſſed Sonne Jeſus Amen.

The true church of Chriſt ſtandeth onely in them that are good men.

FINIS.

TO declare this matter our Scholemen haue wrapped them selues in suche doubtes that they were neuer able to come out of thē, nor yet to satisfie thē selues nor any good Christen mans conscience. For all ỳ they write is but dreames of theyr owne inuention, and as Paule calleth them the doctrines of ỳ deuill agaynst the holy word of God, and wrangyng & wrestyng the blessed worde of God to their purpose, alonely conslderyng how they might, by right or by wrong stablishe the authoritie of miserable men, not cōsideryng the intent of the holy ghost whiche intended nothyng els in all places of Scripture, but to opē vnto vs Christ, & the losing from our sinne by hym alonely. The which thyng our dreamers, and inuenters of all subtile lyes dyd neuer preserue, nor neuer sought for: but by despisyng the holy worde of God, and stickyng so fall to their owne corrupted reasons, dyd they fall into innumerable heresies, dissentions and contentions, and brawlynges of wordes, and scoldyng lyke harlots, so that none of thē could agree with an other. Wherfore that saying of the holy Prophete may well bee verified of them.

1. Tim. 4.

The keyes of ỳ church is the openyng of Christ, and the loosing of vs from sinne.

Psal. 80.

My people haue not heard my voice and Israel hath taken no heede vnto me, and therfore haue I let thē passe after the desires of their own harts: and therefore they shall folow their own inuentiōs. This is alwayes the sore vengeaunce of God, when we will not beleeue and receiue alonely hys worde, then doth hee let vs passe, so that we can doe nothyng but erre. Notwithstandyng we are so blynded that we thinke darkenes light, and errours veritie.

This is openly proued, by all our greate clarkly schoiemen: and that it may bee open to all men, I will recite what they learne of the keyes. Duns & all his scholers say that these keyes bee nothyng els, but an authoritie geuen to Prieſtes whereby they geue sentence, that heauen must bee opened to this man, and shyt vnto the other: so that heauen is opened & shyt at the sentence of ỳ prieſt. This is his learnyng. Who could haue inuented such a doctrine, but ỳ deuill him selfe? who can speake greater heresie then this is? who can speake more openly agaynst Christe and hys holy Scripture? If the authoritie of the Prieſt bee the keyes of heauen, and can open open and shyt heauen, then nede we no other thyng to our saluation, but the authoritie of the Prieſt: then can no man bee saued without the authoritie of the Prieſt: then are there no Prieſtes bee damned: For they haue the keyes of heauē: I thinke they will not bee so mad: as by their authoritie to shyt them selues with the deuill.

Scotus 4. sent. di. 18.

How Duns interpreteth the keyes.

Briefely what nede haue we of Christ and of hys holy word. For the authoritie of the Prieſt is the keye of heauen, but let me bryng their owne words ỳ the matter may bee playner.

The keye in this purpose is taken after the similitude of a materiall key whiche is the next instrument to shyt and to open a doore, whereby we enter into the house: So lykewise, the authoritie to geue sentence that heauen must bee opened vnto this man, is called the keye. &c. To vse many wordes in refellyng this damnable opinion it nedeth not. But agaynste them all, I will set the authoritie of S. Hierome whose wordes bee these. I shal geue thee ỳ keyes of heauē. This place, the Bysshops and the Prieſtes not vnderstandyng haue vsurped vnto them somewhat of the Phariseis pryde, so ỳ they thinke that they may condemne innocentes, and lose them that bee giltie: when afore God not ỳ sentence of the Prieſt but the lyfe of the giltie is regarded. &c. Here you haue playnly that the sentence of the Prieſt is not loked on, nor able to lose a sinner afore God. Marke also that S. Hierome sayth you vnderstād not this place.

Nicho. de orbel. di. 18 supra.

Hiero. in M. c. 16.

The sayng of S. Hierome vppon the keyes.

Moreouer I would know of you all, where you cā bryng me one example in Scripture, that the sentence of a Priest hath losed a sinner, or bound a righteous man, and if it can not doe this, then is there an other thyng aboue the sentence of a Priest.

Furthermore that your auctoritie should bee the keyes of heauen, it is a gaynst reason, & agaynst your owne learning. For Duns and also Lyra of the same text. Quodcunque ligaueris, doe playnely declare, that your key of auctoritie may erre. Now if it may erre, then is it not the right key to the locke of heauen, for the right key can neuer erre in his owne locke. Wherfore at the most you can make it but a picklocke which belongeth to robbers and theeues onely.

Scotus 4. sen. dist. 15. Quest. 1.

Moreouer if this were the key, thē should we neuer bee in suretye whether heauē were opened or not. First we haue no promise nor no worde of God, made vnto this key. And againe we can not know when it openeth heauen and whē not: for it may erre after your owne doctours. And if it chaūce for to erre, then are not heauē gates opened. So ỳ by this meanes we shall bee alwayes in doubt, whether we bee losed frō our sinne or not.

Wherefore we must seeke out an other key that is the very trew key to the locke the which can not erre, of the which we shall bee in surety and without all doubt. But ere wee declare what this key is, we will first shew the nature and the propertye of this key.

August. ser. 2. de sanc.

S. Augustine sayth, That must be called a key where by the hardnes of our harts are opened vnto fayth, and whereby the secretnes of mindes are made manyfest. A key it is (sayth hee) the which doth both open the conciēce to ỳ knowledge of synne, and also includeth grace, vnto the wholesomnes of euerlasting mittery. &c. This is the diffynition of this key that we speake of after, S. Augustine. Now compare your power vnto this diffinitiō, and see how they doe agree.

The nature & property of the keyes of heauen.

First what can your power doe (which you call your key) to remoue away the hardenes of the harte, and to bring in fayth?

Agayne what can your key Judge of the secreatnes of mans mynde?

Thirdly what can your power doe to mens consciences, to make thē to knowledge their sinne? & where by doe you know your awne synne? by your power? then haue all priestes a like knowledge. Fynally what grace doth your power include in hym, ỳ may bring vs to euerlasting Joye? Wherefore you see that this deffinitiō agreeth as well with your key, as Chalke and Cheese.

Therfore must we seeke an other key, ỳ hath all these properties. This is nothing els but the holy worde of God, whereby that we receaue fayth into our hartes as. S. Paule sayth: Fayth is by hearing and hearing is by the wordes of God. And for this cause the holy Prophet calleth it a lanterne, saying. Thy word is a lanterne vnto my feete, & it is a lyght vnto my pathes. By this word doe we receiue lyfe as the prophet sayth. Thy speach shall quicken mee. Also the secreates of our hartes be opened by this word.

Roma. 10. Psal. 118. Ibidem.

S. Paule declareth saying if there come one that doth not beleeue, hee is reproued by the word of all men, and the secreates of his harte are opened. By this worde also is declared vnto vs grace and euerlasting lyfe. as S. Paule sayth, Christ hath put away death, and hath brought lyfe and immortalitie vnto the light through the Gospell.

1. Cor. 14. 2. Tim. 1.

This is the thing onely where by that our conscience is losed and made free from synne. Therefore sayth the holy Prophet there is much peace vn to them that loue the lawe of God, & there is no sclaūder vnto them. Much peace is nothyng els but remission of sinnes: yea & that without any doubt for hee that is losed by the worde of God, that is, hee that hath the open word of God for hym, that his sinnes bee forgeuē him, hee can not bee sclaūdered: that is, there is nothyng can make him to doubt: but though heauen and hell, life and death, doe threaten him, hee is not offended, hee is not sclaundered, but bydeth fast, & knoweth surely that all these thynges must

All thynges shal perish, but ỹ worde of God endureth for euer.

perishe, but the worde of God bydeth for euer. Wherefore this is the very keye that iudgeth the thoughtes and the intentes of the hart, as S. Paule sayth: By this haue we also the very knowledge of our sinne, as S. Paule declareth to the Romaines: by this is also declared vnto vs grace, & also remission of our sinnes if we beleeue it.

Hebr. 4.

Roma. 3.

Wherefore this must nedes bee the very true keye, as you may see euidently throughout all Scripture, and not your boasted and craked power: for there is no such thynge, nor yet can bee in man, that can lose the soule of man from hys sinne.

Wherefore, it is damnable and deuillishe learning, and commeth of the presumptuous pride of mã to learne, that man hath a power in hym, by the which power, mans soule is bounde or losed from sinne. But this is all that man hath, hee is a minister, and a dispensator of the heauenly worde of God, for whose sake our sinnes bee remitted, when we beleeue it, and our sinnes bee retained when wee doe despise it. Therefore the blessed worde of God is the very keye, and in that is all the might and power to louse our sinnes, and man is but a minister and a seruaunt vnto this worde. This may bee proued by our Maister Christes wordes, where hee sayth: Goe your wayes into all the worlde, and preach the Gospell vnto all creatures, and hee that doth beleeue and is baptised shalbe saued, but hee that doth not beleeue shall bee damned. Here may you playnely see, that the Apostles bee but ministers and seruauntes, and haue no power, but alonely ministration. The keyes that they haue, whereby they must lose men and bynde, is the very worde of God. And therfore sayth our Maister Christ: hee that beleeueth shall bee saued, and hee that doth not beleeue shal bee damned. By this worde did the holy Apostles declare grace thorough Christ, and learned mẽ to set all their hope of saluation in Christ onely. By this worde did they learne men to knowledge their sinne, and to seeke for grace, & fully and wholly to hope for remission & forgeeuenes of their sinnes in Christ onely. Briefely, by these keyes is opened all goodnes, if they bee receaued: And all goodnes is shutte from vs, if wee receaue them not. Now, where this keye is receaued by faith, there is all thynges losed: that is, all sinnes bee forgeeuen, and the consciences bee made free. And where it commeth not in, nor is receaued by faith, there all thynges bee shutte and bounde.

What power it is that the Priest hath.

The worde of God is the true keye that openeth & loseth.

Math. 6.

Of this maner did the holy Apostles bynde and lose, when they preached this holy worde of God vnto ỹ people: As wee haue an open example of S. Peter that preached this holy worde, and at his preaching ỹ hearers were pricked in their hartes, and asked Peter what they myght doe, and hee aunswered them, repent and bee baptised euery one of you, in the name of Iesus for remission of your sinnes, and you shall receaue the gifte of the holy Ghost, wherfore as many as receaued his worde, were baptised.

Acte. 2.

Here you haue playnely, the very true maner of losing from sinnes, as ỹ holy Apostles vsed it, that is, when the people beleeued the worde that they preached, thẽ they declared how their sinnes were remitted for Christes sake, and not thorow any power that they had, for they were but ministers. But the very power was in the worde of God whereby they were deliuered from their sinnes. This is well proued by our maister Christes worde, where hee sayth vnto them, goe and preach, saying. That the kyngdome of heauen is at hande. What is this the kyngdome of heauen? not any power that is in man, but remission of sinnes shall bee geuen to them that receiue either your power or your persons: and therfore followeth it. In what house you enter, say first peace bee with you, and if the house bee worthy, your peace shall come vpon the same, that is to say if they receiue your worde and beleeue it, than shall your peace, that is the peace of the Gospel which you bring with you geue them quietnes of conscience, and lose them from all synne. But if the houſe bée not worthy, your peace ſhall returne to you agayn, and whoſoeuer ſhall not receiue you, nor will heare your preaching, when you depart out of that houſe, ſhake of the duſt from your féete. I ſay vnto you it ſhalbe eaſyer for Sodom and Gomorra in the day of Iudgment then for that Cytie.

What is this your peace ſhall returne againe? nothing els but that they ſhall not bée partakers thereof, but ſhall remaine bound in their ſinne And why? becauſe they receiue not your perſons or your power? nay trewlye: but becauſe they heare not your preaching.

The hearyng of the worde of God and beleuyng the ſame, loſeth vs from our ſinnes.

It is not to bée doubted, but that many men hearing the Apoſtles preaching the word of God, were loſed from their ſynnes and yet neuer ſpake with the Apoſtles. Wherefore the receauyng of the word, & not the Apoſtle, loſeth vs from our ſinnes: & for that cauſe the Apoſtle did declare by their departing frō thē that would not beleue the word ỳ they remained ſtill in their ſinnes, for as S. Marke ſayth, your departyng ſhal bée a teſtimonie againſt them, that is to ſay a token of their condemnation.

Mark. 6.

We haue alſo an open practiſe of S. Paule how hée dyd bynde thē that did not receiue his preaching, to whō hée ſayth theſe wordes: Your bloud vpon your heades. I will departe frō hence in clennes vnto the Gentiles.

Actes. 18.

Now haue you playnely how the holy Apoſtle dyd bynde and loſe, and with what keye they did it, that is by preachyng of the holy word of God. And becauſe this thyng ſhoulde bée done without any errour, and that no man ſhould doubt in it, hée gaue them the holye ghoſt, ſaying theſe wordes: Whoſe ſinnes you doe forgeue ſhall bée forgeuen, & whoſe ſinnes you doe retaine ſhall bée retained. To theſe wordes addeth S. Luke. Thē opened hée their wytte that they might vnderſtand the Scriptures, ſo that where S. John ſayth, hée gaue them the holy ghoſt. Luke ſayeth, hée opened their wytte to vnderſtand Scripture.

Iohn. 20.

Luke. 24.

It foloweth in Luke, thus, & thus, is it written that Chriſte muſt ſuffer death and riſe agayne the thyrd day & that repentaūce & remiſſion of ſinnes ſhoulde bée preached in his name among all nations. Now where Saint John ſayth, whoſe ſins you doe loſe ſhall bée loſed &c. That ſayth Luke in theſe wordes remiſſiō of ſinnes muſt bée preached in hys name. So that whoſe ſinnes you doe loſe ſhal bée loſed, is nothyng els but that you muſt preach remiſſion of ſins in my name, and as many as receiue this word, you ſhall loſe them by this word & as many as doe not receiue it you ſhall bynde them by that ſame word.

Luke. 24.

Preachyng of the word of God is loſing from ſinne.

That this is the ſentence of theſe two places, it is opē by that, that they ſpeake all of one ſtory & of that thyng that was done all in one day. This doth alſo S. Paule proue wel where hée reciteth the wordes of Luke ſaying, Chriſt muſt needes ſuffer & ryſe agayne from death, and this Jeſus is Chriſt. Here is it plaine that S. Paule loſed men from their ſinnes by preaching remiſſiō through Chriſt: ſo that you haue openly here the practiſe of the holy Apoſtles, how they did bynde & loſe by preaching the word of God. They did bynde with the word when it was not beléeued. They dyd loſe by the worde when it was beléeued. Thus dyd they by one word preache both ſaluation and damnatiō, but vnto diuers men. This vertue of the worde doth S. Paule declare in theſe wordes, we are vnto God the ſweete ſauour of Chriſte both among them that are ſaued, and alſo among them which periſh. To the one part are we the ſauour of death vnto death, vnto the other parte are we the ſauour of lyfe vnto lyfe. What is this ſauour nothyng els but the Goſpell, which is vnto one ſauour of lyfe, that is nothyng els but loſing and remiſſion of ſinnes: And vnto the other, it is the ſauour of death vnto death, that is occaſion of bynding and reteinyng in ſinne. This doth Paule alſo declare in an other place. The preachyng of the croſſe is to them that periſh fooliſhnes. But vnto vs whiche are ſaued it is the power of God. What is ỳ power of God? nothyng els but remiſſion and losing from our sinnes. What is folisheneꝛ: nothyng els but they deꝛspise the Goꝛspell & recken it of no value, and of no power. Wherfoꝛe they remayn bound in their sinne.

Thus is it declared that one woꝛd of God woꝛketh in diuers mẽ, diuers operatiõs. In ỹ one it woꝛketh lyfe, ỹ is, remission of sinnes: in the other woꝛketh it death, & is taken foꝛ folishnes, that is, it declareth them bounde and retained in their dãnable sinnes: and yet in him selfe, hẽ is of one goodnes and of our nature: but the diuerssitie commeth, of them that hẽ the receiuers. This may hẽ pꝛoued by a naturall example. The dew of heauẽ cõmeth downe indifferently vppon all grounde: but in the one it bꝛyngeth foꝛth good coꝛne & swẽte frutes: and in the other it bꝛyngeth foꝛth nettles & bꝛombilles, that hẽ nothyng woꝛth but to the fier. This exãple haue you in the epistle to the Hebꝛues, foꝛ this same purpose. Likewise by one woꝛd doe the holy Apostles & Chꝛistes ministers lose and bynde: but this doe they not by charmyng, coungeryng, tugglyng, and whysprng absolutions as you doe: But by pꝛeachyng the holy woꝛd of God which when it is beleeued doth quiet and lose our conscience from all sinne, and offereth it vs through Chꝛist onely. But when it is not beleeued then doth it bynde vs and retaine vs in sinne. So that this holy woꝛde is the very true keye of heauen, foꝛ by it heauen is opened and shut.

Hebr. 6.

By preaching of the worde of God, heauẽ is opened and shut.

Chrisо. in M. c. 15. De doctr. christi. li. 1. c. 15. et 18.

This doth Chrisostome wel pꝛoue in these woꝛdes. The key is the woꝛd and the knowledge of Scriptures, whereby the gate of veritie is opened vnto men &c. S. Augustine doth also witnes the same saying. These keyes hath hẽ geuen to the Churche, that what thẽ byndeth in earth shall hẽ bound in heauẽ, and what thẽ loseth in earth shall hẽ losed in heauen, that is to say, who soeuer doth not beleeue that his sinnes hẽ foꝛgeuẽ hym in the Churche, they hẽ not foꝛgeuen hym: But hẽ that doth beleeue, and auerte him selfe from his sinnes, beyng with in the Church by that same fayth and amendement is hẽ made whole &c.

Here haue you openly that by beleeuing the woꝛde of God our sinnes hẽ losed: & by vnbeleefe hẽ we boũde in our sins. But now must we search to whom these keyes hẽ geuen. They may not all onely hẽ geuen to Peter, foꝛ then Paule, and the two sonnes of thunder had them not. Noꝛ they may not hẽ geuen, to one moꝛe then to the other: Foꝛ Chꝛist was indifferent and they were all his Apostles & their confession was all one. Wherfoꝛe no doubt but these keyes weare geuen vnto all Chꝛistes Apostles vnto the whole Church, as S. Augustine doth declare openly vpon John.

Augustine in Ioan Trac. 124.

This may hẽ also pꝛoued by the woꝛdes of your owne lawe which hẽ these, if Peter haue power all onelye to binde and to lose, then doth it not the Church: But if this hẽ donne in the Church, then did Peter when hẽ receaued ỹ keyes, sygnifie holy church &c. Heare haue you openly that Peter had not onely the keyes, but hẽ receiued them in the name of the Church. Wherefoꝛe they belong to all Chꝛisten men. This doth Origene well pꝛoue in these woꝛdes. Tu es Petrus, &c.

24. q. 1. Quodcũq;

Origenes Super. M. Ho. 1.

These woꝛdes were spoken vnto Peter, vnto all Apostles, vnto all maner of perfect faythfull men (foꝛ all they are Petrus) & in all them is builded the church of Chꝛist, and agaynst none of them can the gates of hell pꝛeuayle. Dost thou recken that ỹ keyes of heauen were all onely geuen to Peter, and that no other Chꝛisten man did receaue them? &c.

The church is builded vpõ the confession of all the Apostles and of all faithfull people.

Here is it clearely that all Chꝛisten men hẽ Peter and all they haue receyued the keyes of heauen, and hell can not pꝛeuayle agaynst them. S. Augustine doth also testifie the same in these woꝛdes. Wherefoꝛe the church which is founded and grounded in Chꝛist, of hym hath receyued in Peter the keyes of heauen, that is, to say power to bynde and lose. &c.

Super Ioan Trac. 124. c. 21.

Thus is it playne that those keyes are geuẽ to ỹ whole church of Chꝛist foꝛ her fayth, and they hẽ the cõmon treasure of the Church and belonge no more to one man then to an other but because that all men can not vse these keyes all together (for ỹ would make a confusion) therefore doth the Church, that is the congregation of faythfull men commyt the ministration of these keyes, that is of preaching ỹ worde of God, vnto certayne men whome they thinke most able and best learned in the worde of God: the which mẽ thus chosen, bee but ministers of the commen treasure, and no Lordes ouer it. For the Churche may depose them, ỹ is thee may take away the open and the common mynistration that thee committed vnto them, if they vse it not well and then they bee but as other Christen men hauing no common office nor administration in the Church.

Preachers, if they abuse their preaching, maye bee depoſed.

Wherfore they may neither preach nor yet minister Sacramentes openlye but as other Christen men may doe privately, in their owne houses, or in other places where men bee gathered, which wil heare of Christ: there I saye both they and all other Christẽ men, may speake and learne Christes worde, and declare it after the gift ỹ is geuen vnto them of God. And they that doe beleeue this word thus preached by Christen men, bee by the power of ỹ keyes losed from their sinne and bound if they beleeue not. For all the Church and euery part of the Church haue power to execute these keyes, all onely that the open order bee not broken, This doth S. Paule declare saying, you may all interpretate scriptures but see that all thinges bee done after an order. 1.Cor.14.

Now to keepe an order and that nothing should bee done after a confuse manner, therefore the Church assigneth certayne men to be the open and the common mynisters of this treasure the which bee but all onely mynysters, and no Lordes. And of this cõmon treasure and not of their priuate treasure as S. Paule sayth let a man so reckẽ vs as the ministers of Christ and dispensators of the mynystery of God. Also in an other place, what is S. Paule? what is Appollo? but mynisters by whom you haue beleeued. 1.Cor.4. Item.3.

Also S. Peter your predecessor, commaundeth you, that you shoulde not exercise any dominion ouer the congregations, but geue example to the flocke. Bee not these playne scriptures, how you bee no Lordes but ministers of Christes treasure: and you leaue the ministration and vsurpe auctoritie. S. Peter, whose successors you boast your selues to bee, commaũdeth you that you shoulde bee alonely but ministers, & keybearers of these keyes. As Chrisostome prouueth in these wordes: The keye bearers are priestes, vnto whome is committed the worde to teach, and to interprete Scriptures. &c. 1.Pet.5. The ministers of the Churche ought to be no Lordes. In M.c. 23.

Heare you not, how you bee but keybearers, and teachers of ỹ worde of God. This doth S. Ambrose witnesse in these wordes: sinnes bee forgeuen by the worde of God, whose interpreter is the Deacon. &c. Marke that sinnes bee forgeuen by the word of God, of the which you bee but interpreters. li. de Cain et Abell.

Where is now I pray you your Lordly power? which you call the keyes of heauen, is not Scripture, and the practise of the Apostles, and the exposition of holy Doctours opẽly against you? Will you vsurpe a thing that is contrary to all these? I pray you where finde you in all holy Scripture, but one, that Peter or Paule did alloyle after the maner of your keyes. And yet no doubt, but they had the keyes, yea and also dyd vse them. Wherfore it is to mee great maruayle, of whome you haue learned your vsage, and where you haue gotten such keyes. It maketh no matter to mee though you cry as you are wonte. Fathers, Fathers, Counsels, Counsels, the Churche, the Church. For it wilnot helpe you, You see openly that I haue the holy worde of god, and our maister Christe, which is elder then our fathers. I haue also the practise of the holy Apostles, that vnderstand this thynge better then all your counsels. The Byshoys and clergie abuse Christes keyes.

But let vs graunt that you haue fathers and counselles for you, That is the next way to deceaue the church of God. By whom can Chriſten men bée deceaued, but by ſuch men as bée of auctoritie, and dignitie of ỹ worlde? This you know, that men can not bée deceaued by Horſes, nor by Calues, but it muſt bée by men, and not by fooliſhe mẽ (for who will regarde fooles) but by them that bée reckoned of wiſdome and of reputatiou in the worlde. And not by one wiſe man (for an other wyſe man may bée of as good reputation and wiſdome as hée) but it muſt bée by many, or els it can haue no ſhyne nor colour of excellencie, yea and by ſuch a multitude, that reaſon can not ſuſpect. So that there is neuer ſo great daunger vnto the church of God, as when all theſe thynges come togither. And therefore ſayth ỹ holy Prophete: Bleſſed is that man that folowеth not the counſels of wicked men. You know that counſelles cã bée no ſmale thing, nor no fooliſhe: nor the wicked men themſelues doe recken it for no ſmale thinge, but for the greateſt thynge, and the wyſeſt thyng, and the ſtrangeſt that they can thinke or deuiſe. And no doubte but it hath a fore reaſon, and a fore all the worlde a great apparence of no ſmale wiſdome, and is ſo ſtrong that euery mã is compelled to receaue it. Yea and alſo thoſe men haue auctoritie (for as the Prophet ſaith: they ſitte in the chayre, the which doth both ſignifie great learning, and and alſo great auctoritie): And yet ſaith ỹ Prophet, that bleſſed is hé that folowеth not their counſelles, nor ſitteth in theyr chayre.

The falſe allegyng of fathers and Councels is the next way to deceaue the Churche of God.

Pſal. 1.

Now, if theſe thynges coulde bée iudged by ſome reaſon, or els they ſéemed ſo euill, that all the worlde could iudge them. What néede the holy Ghoſt to make ſuch a doe, or to write ſo ſtrongly agaynſt them? yea and to ſay, that bleſſed is hé ỹ heareth them not? Wherfore hé muſt néedes ſpeke of ſuch miſchiefe, and of ſuch falſhod, and of ſuch errours as haue all thoſe thinges for them, that you bynge for you: That is, fatherhod, wyſdome, learning, auctoritie, multitude, and long cuſtome. The which thyngs bée able to peruerte any man, bée hé neuer ſo wiſe, or neuer ſo holy, if hé ſticke not faſt to the worde of God onely. And therefore ſayth the Prophet: Bleſſed is hé whoſe wyll and meditation is night and day (that is continually) in the law of God. Vnto the which, if all your coũſels, all your fathers, all your cuſtomes, briefly, all that you bring for you, bée compared, then ſhall wée ſée whether it bée true, and of God or not. For of themſelues they haue no truth, but bée inuentions of corrupted reaſon, and perſwaſions of the deuill, to peruert the holy church of God.

Bleſſed are they whoſe meditation is in the law of God.

But my Lordes, let vs goe to reaſon: Tell mée by your honour, is it reaſonable that the holy Churche of God, redéemed wyth Chriſtes precious bloud, and aſſoyled by hym from all her ſinnes, ſhould bée now bounde vnto you, and to your abſolution? and that ſhée ſhould not bée releaſed, but thorow your power? ſéeyng that you bée but miniſters and ſeruauntes ordayned of Chriſt vnto her profite, and not to your honour? Thys wyll I declare by an example.

I put this caſe, that there bée a priſoner bounde faſt in cheynes, ouer the which you haue the cuſtody and the kéepyng, after the kynges commaundement, now the kynges grace ſaith vnto you, loſe that fellow, & let hym goe frée out of priſon vnder this cõdition, that he ſhal promiſe to ſerue no Prince but mé onely. What, will you loſe him or not? Cã you, or dare you kéepe hym longer if you woulde? Or can you compell him to make any other compoſition with you, than alonely to ſerue ỹ king? If you woulde kéepe him longer in priſon, did you not runne in the kynges diſpleaſure? And if hé did promiſe you any other compoſition, were hé bounde thereto? May doubtles. Moreouer, in loſing of him, what thyng doe you by your auctoritie? yea what thyng doe you at all, but that you are mynyſters vnto the kynges commaundement, and a ſeruaunt to the poore fellowe. The miniſtration & ſeruice is yours, but the auctoritie is the kinges, of the which you haue neuer a cramme.

In exãple.

The miniſtration of the Church belongeth to the Byſhops & other miniſters but the authoritie of the ſame belongeth to Chriſt.

Take

Another example.

Take an other example. If it pleaſe the kynges grace to make any of you an Embaſſadour, and geeue you a commiſſion, and commaundement, to fetch home into his lande a baniſhed man, vnto whom the kinges grace writeth his pardon, with ſuch wordes and vnder ſuch condition as pleaſeth his grace. Now, this pardō deliuereth hée to you, for to beare and to declare vnto the baniſhed man. Here woulde I know of you, what you can doe for this baniſhed man more then is written in your cōmiſſion? Alſo what can you doe againſte hym, in theſe thinges that the kinges grace hath pardoned hym? You can neyther adde nor take away from the kinges pardon. You can no more doe but declare it vnto the partie. And if hée receaue it, then may hée as lawfully, and as freely come into the land as you may, and you can not ſay by right that you haue by your auctorite diſcharged hym, or geuen him any pardō of his baniſhmēt, but alonely you haue deliuered & declared vnto hym the kinges pardon, which when hée had receaued with the conſiderations therein, then is hée diſcharged of hys baniſhment. And if hée will not receaue the kinges pardon, then can you neyther helpe him into the land, nor yet diſcharge hym of his trāſgreſſion: but onely you leaue hym, and declare vnto him, yea and that by the kinges wordes that hée is a baniſhed man, and ſo ſhall remayne till hée receaue the kinges pardon.

So likewiſe ỹ word of God where in is pardon for all ſinners is committed vnto you to preach and to declare, which if they receiue by faith, they are free and loſed from their ſynnes, but if they doe not they are bound (not by your auctority, for you bée but miniſters and ſeruauntes, and can no further goe then your commyſſion) but by ỹ auctority of God onely. Wherefore ſée well to your conſcyence how you can diſcharge your ſelf afore God that doe ſo preſūptuouſly vſurpe his auctorite, of the which you haue neyther worde nor example in ſcripture.

The doctrine and true preaching of the worde of God is the pardon and remiſſion of our ſins.

Moreouer how can you proue this manner of abſolution. Ego abſaluo te auctoritate mihi comiſſa, for to bée lawfull. I pray you wiſére was there euer any auctoritie cōmitted vnto man to take away ſynne? There is no auctoritie committed vnto man, but all onely miniſtracio of the worde. Now your abſolucion maketh mencion of auctoritie, yea and that without the worde, and a great many of you vnderſtode not the worde. Duns ſayth, Quod abſolutio ſacerdotis, eſt diſpoſitio neceſſitatis ad remiſſionem culpæ. How thinke you, bée theſe fitte wordes for a Chriſten man?) if your abſolution bée neceſſary, then can not God take away ſinne without you, nor you without hym, but God and you togither take away ſinne. Whether will you now? Will you aſcend ſo hie, will you bée check mates with God? I thinke ſhortly you will alſo bée Gods. The Phareſies did recken much better of God then you doe, for they ſayd, that God onely did abſolue from ſinnes, & you ſay I doe alſoyle, yea and that by auctoritie, ſo that you farre paſſe the Phareſies. But let vs ſée what S. Auguſtine ſayth of ſuch mē, many ſinnes bée forgeuen thee, hée Prophecyed of men that bée to come. There weare many men to come, that would ſay, I forgeue ſinnes, I iuſtefie, I ſanctifie, I make whole ſo many as I baptiſe. Wherefore the Iewes did better vnderſtande the remiſſyon of ſynnes thē heretykes doe, for the Iewes ſayde, what mā is this, ỹ forgeueth ſynnes, & the heretyke ſaith, I forgeue, I make cleane, I ſanctifie. &c.

The auctoritie of the churche belongeth to Chriſt onely.

Luke. 7.

Aug. 4. lib. Quinquaginta homeliarum. ho. 23.

These wordes bée playne inough againſt you, for you ſay we haue auctoritie to remyt ſynnes. And. S. Auguſtine ſayth, you bée heretyckes for ſo ſaying. You can not denye, but S. Auguſtine reprœueth your owne abſolucion, where in you ſay that your abſolution is requiſite of neceſſitie to remyſſion of ſinnes, the which is nothing els, but clearly denying of chriſt, of his bleſſed blond, and alſo of his holy worde. But if wée had grace, wée might perceaue that neyther you, nor your abſolucion, nor yet any thing ỹ you doe weare of God. For all ỹ you doe is clearely done for mony and for no other cause. Recken one thing that you doe, as concerning your ministration, but that you will haue money for it: As not so much as washing of a heape of stones.

Whereby haue you gotten all your great possessions, but alonely vnder the collour, that you bee Christes holy bishops. For money you make whore dome as lawfull as matrimony. For money, stollen good shall bee better the heritage. For money, you make vsury lawfull marchaundise. For money, all sinnes bee vertue. Yea and also haue great pardon to them. For money, you sell man, wife, mayde & child king, and land. For money you make as good marchaundise, of womens pri nities, as a Goldsmith doth of gilted plate. You will recken that this is a shame for me to write, but it is more shame for you to doe it. And if you did not these shamefull dedes, I shoulde haue none occasion to make this shame full writyng. Take you away the cause and I will take away the writyng. Yea you are not so content, but you sell Christ, you sel the blessed Sacrament of his flesh and blood, you sell his holy worde, you sell all other Sacramentes. Briefely you sell, all maner of thyng that euer bee left in earth to the comfort of mans soule, and all for money. Yea and not so content, but you make also more lawes, and more statutes, & dispense with them for money, and all these thynges doe you, by the authoritie of the keyes, that both open heauen and hell, and a mans coffer and also his purse yea & some time they losse the coate frō his backe. Our maister Christe sayth vnto you, you haue receiued it free, geue it free agayne, and you geue nothyng free. But I know your aūswere. You will say that you sell not your Masse, nor Sacramentes, nor the word of God, but the labour that you haue about them. O thou deuill when wilt thou bee without an excuse, whē wilt thou graunt thy selfe guilty? Tell me ye that bee without shame, if you doe sell but your labour, is it not sore and an vnlawfull price to sell it so deare? what

Money is the Popes best marchaunt.

Shamefull doynges must bee shamefully rebuked.

The Pope selleth God and all his ordinances

The Pope will not folow nor obey to Christes commaūdemēt, for hee biddeth hym loose.

Bishop can deserue by his labour a thousand pound by yeare: & yet some of them haue a great deale more, and labour nothyng at all. How deare wil these men sell their labour, if they shoulde bee tankerdebearers. They would make water dearer thē wyne. Yea tel me what labour there is with in the Realme that is halfe so deare sold as their idlenes is?

The Pope selleth hys ware very deare.

But you belly gods, did not Christes Apostles take paynes & labours about the ministration of the worde? and in fulfillyng of their office, more in one day then you doe in all your lyues: and yet was it not lawfull for them more to receiue then a lyuyng. For our maister Christ sayd, ý worke man is worthy of his meate: so ý our maister wold that they should receiue no more but that was necessarie. Also S. Paule sayth our Lord dyd ordeine that they whiche preache the Gospell should lyue on ý Gospell. Marke how hee sayth, they that preach ý Gospell. Now which of you all doth preache ý Gospel: not one: and yet will you enioye these innumerable possessions. S. Hierome sayth on this same text, you must lyue on the Gospell, but not bee riche, also Chrisostome sayth, I say boldly that the byshops and Prelates of the Churche, may haue nothyng but meate and drinke and cloth. &c.

Yeare haue you playnely, that if you did labour faythfully and truely in the Gospell, you could haue but a lyuyng there on, and no Lordly possessions, but now doe you nothing in the worlde, but exercise tyranny on them that would preach the Gospell, and make lawes and statutes, to destroy them, and the holy Gospell of God, so that Chrisostome speaketh well of you. Beholde I see men that haue no trew sence of holy scripture: yea they vnderstand nothing at all thereof: & to passe ouer many things, for I am ashamed to call thē mad mē, triflers & wranglers) they bee such as know not what they say, nor of what thynge they speake, but all onely bee they mighty & bold to make lawes, & to curse & cōdemne those things, of ý which they know nothing at all. &c.

S. Chrisostome is very straight to byshops and the rest of the Clergye.

Bée not theſe your workes? who can ſay, but that theſe wordes be ſpoken of you? who maketh ſtatutes and lawes but you? who curſeth and condemneth but you? how can you lay theſe thinges from you? how can you auoyde thē? ſo long ſhall they bée layd agaynſt you tyll you can bring in one that is gylty of them, I think that will bée long. And yet will you haue theſe great poſſeſſions, and bée alſo greate Lordes, doing nothyng therefore at al but al onely play the part of a byſhop, as a Chriſtmas game player, doth of a king, and as a Popet which ſpringeth vp and downe and cryeth Pépe Pépe and goeth his way. So doe you make a coūtenaūce of great holines & of great perfectiō, but all ỹ world can teſtify what you doe in indéede. More ouer you are more bound to the Goſpell, then all other men bée in ỹ world for thereby haue you all your honour all your riches, all your Lordly poſſeſſions, and if the goſpell were not, men would no more regard you, then they doe Coblers, & yet deſerue you worſt of all men of the Goſped.

Byſhops compared to popets and ſtage players.

Wherefore I can no more ſay vnto you, but the wordes of our Maiſter Chriſt, Woe bée vnto you hypocrites the whiche ſhut heauen gates before other men, and as. S. Luke ſayth, you haue taken away ỹ key of ſcience and neyther enter in your ſelfe, nor yet ſuffer other that come to enter in. Now let mée ſée, how all your keyes, and al your power can abſoyle you frō this ſame woe ỹ our M. Chriſt doth beare laye vnto you? This worde of God byndeth you to euerlaſting damnation: let vs ſée if your pikelocke can open this locke then will I ſay that you haue the keyes of heauen or els not. I thinke you may ſéeke all your clogge with keyes and fynde not one that will open this locke.

FINIS.

¶ Free will of man, after thé fall of Adam of hys naturall ſtrength, can doe nothyng but ſinne beefore God.

AS this article will wée not diſpute, what man may doe by the cōmon influence geuen hym of God, ouer theſe inferior and worldelye thinges, as what power hée hath in eating and drinking, in ſléeping, and ſpeaking, in buying and ſellyng, and in all other ſuch naturall thinges, that bée géeuen of God indifferently to all men, both to good and bad. But here will wée ſearch, what ſtrength is in man, of his naturall power, without the ſpirit of God, for to will, or to doe thoſe thinges that bée acceptable before God, vnto the fulfilling of the will of God: as to beléeue in God, to loue God after his commaundemēts, to loue iuſtice for it ſelfe, to take God for his father, to recken him to bée mercifull vnto him, to feare God louingly, with all other thinges that mē doe call good workes: this is the thing that wée will ſearch to knowe Now, that hée can doe nothyng in theſe cauſes, by his frée wil, our maiſter Chriſt proueth it in theſe wordes: Hé that abideth in mée, and I in him, bringeth forth much fruite, for without mée cā ye doe nothing: if a man abide not in mée, hée is caſt out as a braunch, and ſhall burne.

In what thinges we haue free-will, and in what none.

John. 15.

Here it is open, that frée will without grace, can doe nothing. I doe not ſpeake of eating, & drinking (though that bée of grace) but nothing that is fruitfull, that is meritorious, that is worthy of thanke, that is acceptable before God. For hee that hath not Chriſt in hym, is caſt out, this is the firſt fruite of freewill: than wythereth hée, that is the ſecond fruite, this wythering helpeth hym nothing to godneſſe, hée muſt wither, let him doe the beſt: than is hée gathered, and caſt caſt in the fire, this is the thirde fruit. What can hée in the fire doe? nothing but burne. Hée can not lye there as a thing indifferent, but hée muſt néedes burne, hée cã not come out of ỹ fier by his owne ſtrẽgth: let hym intende as much as hée can, his intention can not helpe hym, nor yet further hym. So that all the might of frée wil, when hée is left alone, is nothyng els, but firſte to bée caſt out: and ſeconde to wyther, ſo decayeth hée: thyrdly, to be caſt into the fire. All this is worſe, and worſe. Finally, hée burneth, this is worſt of all, for here is hée paſt helpe, ſo that this is the ſtrength, that frée will hath, to bryng him ſelfe to vtter deſtruction?

The frutes of freewill. Freewill without gods grace can doe nothyng that is good.

Bona intentio.

Now, where will our Duns men, bryng in their Bonum conatum? they are ſo longe in bryngyng of it in, that frée will is brought to the fire, & there can hée neither ſaue him ſelfe frõ burning, nor yet helpe him ſelfe out. But to this my Lord of Rocheſter aunſwereth in a certaine place, that frée will can doe no good meritorious, ſed tamẽ non omnino facit nihil. What is this to ſay, but nihil? If hée doe no good, ỹ is meritorious, nor worthy of thãke beforе God, I pray you, what doth hée, but nihil? Our diſputation is, what goodnes that hée can doe, wout grace, and you graunt, that hée can doe no goodnes, and yet you ſay, that hée can doe ſomethyng. But let vs ſée how S. Auguſtine vnderſtandeth this tert of S. Iohn. Leſt any man ſhould ſuppoſe, that the braunche of hym ſelfe could bryng forth, at the leſt wayes, a litle frute, therfore ſayth hée, nor with out me, can you doe a litle, but without me can you doe nothyng, therfore whether it bée litle, or much, without him, can it not bée done, without whõ is nothyng done. One of two things, muſt the braunche néedes doe, either abyde in the vyne, or els burne in the fier, if it bée not in the vyne, then is it in the fire. &c.

Super Ioannem tract. lxxi.

My Lord, where will you bryng in here, your ſomethyng, that frée will doth? Saint Auguſtine ſayth, without grace, cã frée wil doe neither litle, nor much: for if hée bée not in Chriſt, hée burneth in the fire. Call you that ſomwhat? Where bée nowe M. Dunſis mẽ, with their bonum conatum, bonum ſtudium, & applicationem ad bonum. Here muſt they néedes lye in the fire, with all their good intẽtes, with their good preparations, and their holy diſpoſitions. Also S. Paule, we are not ſufficient, to thinke any thyng of our ſelues, but our ſufficiencie, is of God. What is this? that we are not able to thinke any thyng of our ſelues? what can bée a ſmaller thyng, thẽ to thinke? and yet this ſmall thynge can we not doe. It is alſo open, that Saint Paule meaneth not of the thinkyng, that cõmeth by naturall power, for ỹ God doth not let, but letteth procéede, after his firſt ordinaunce, as we haue open experience in infidels. But here hée ſpeaketh of ſuch a thinkyng, as is acceptable, and thankful before God, and therefore foloweth it, God hath made vs worthy miniſters of ỹ new Teſtament. Here is it open, that hée ſpeaketh of that thinking, that is a ſingular, and a ſpeciall gift of God, and not of the common gift of nature, for that were nothyng, to the miniſtratiõ of the Goſpell.

Dũces doctrine ouerthrowen.

2. Cor. 3.

We of our ſelues as of our ſelues can not doe ſo much as thinke a good thought.

But let vs ſée what S. Barnarde ſayth, of this tert. What ſhall we ſay? is this alonely all the merite of frée will, that hée doth alonely conſent? yea doubtles. Not that, the ſame conſent, in the whiche is all his merite, is not of God, whe that we can neither thinke (the whiche is leſſe, then to conſent) any thyng of our ſelues, as though we were ſufficient of our ſelues. Theſe wordes bée not myne, but the Apoſtles, the whiche geueth vnto God, and not to his frée wil, all maner of thinges, that can bée good, that is to ſay, to thinke, to will or to performe. &c. Here you not, that all thyngs, that can bée good S. Barnarde geueth to God? Now, what ſtrength hath frée will, hée can neither thinke good, nor wel, nor yet performe it? what remaineth? I know nothyng, but either it is included in thinking, in willyng, or in perforмyng, and all theſe bée geuẽ to God. Also our maiſter Chriſt ſaith, Shal men gather grapes of thornes, or figges of bromble bushes? An euill tree, can bryng forth no good frute. What meaneth our maister, whē he sayth, that grapes be not gathered of thornes? nothyng els, but that ỹ frute must be lyke the manner of the tree. And therefore sayth he, an euill tree, can not bryng forth good frute. Now, can you not denye, but that freewill without grace, is an euill tree, Ergo, his frute must nedes be euil, he may well bryng forth frute, but it shall not be good. Is not all freewils power declared in these wordes, he can not? I pray you, what meaneth our maister Christ in these wordes, he can not? Christ sayd, he can not, and will you say, he can? Whō our maister sayth. Math. 12. You adders brydes, howe can you speake good thynges, seyng that you be euill. Had not these men freewill? and yet sayth our maister, they could not speake good thynges. You recken it but a small power, to speake good, and yet as small as it is, freewill can not doe it, he may well speake, but it shall not be good. For how should he speake good, that is euill of him selfe? how should he doe good, that knoweth no good? but is the very enemy of goodnes, yea and asmuch as lyeth in him, he wold there were no goodnes.

Mans free will without Goos grace can doe nothing that is good.

You haue also a commō principle, there is nothyng loued, and desired, but that, that is knowne. Now how should freewill flee from sinne, and desire goodnes, and he knoweth not, whiche is very sinne, and which not? Roma. 3. As S. Paule sayth: by the law, is the knowledge of sinne, so blinde as free will, that he knoweth not sinne, to be sinne, nor vertue, to be vertue, but iudgeth that thyng to be good, that is euill, and that thyng, that is euill, to be good, for he is lost, & hath no true iudgement. In Enche. ca. 29. As S. Augustine sayth, what goodnes can he doe, that is lost, except that he be deliuered from his miserie? Can he doe good by his free will? God forbyd, for man euill vsing his freewill, did both lose him selfe, & also his freewill, and as man being a lyue, doth kill him self, & whē he hath killed him selfe, he cā not make him selfe aliue agayne. So likewise, whē we doe sinne by freewill, & sinne hath the victory, then is freewil cleane lost, for of whom a man is ouercome, vnto hym must he be seruaunt. Doubtles, this sentence is of Peter the Apostle, the whiche, seyng that it is true. I pray you what maner of fredome can a bonde seruaunt haue? except it be, when it pleaseth him to sinne. &c.

Man by vsing of hys freewill euill, did lose both hymselfe & his freewill.

What can be sayd to this? doth he not clearely say, that mā hath lost his freewil by sinne? and can no more doe vnto goodnes, then a dead man can doe, to make him selfe alyue agayne? yea, he can doe nothyng, but delight in sinne. Call you that a fredome? Call you that bonum conatū? Call you that a preparyng to grace? S. Augustine doth declare, what goodnes, that freewill deserueth, without grace saying. O cursed freewill, without God, we haue experience, what freewill cā doe without God, therfore are we miserable, because we haue experience, what freewill is able to doe, without God. Behold, man was made good, & by his freewil, was he made an euill mā. Whē shall an euill mā by his free will, forsakyng God make a mā good, he beyng good, could not keepe hym selfe good, and now, that he is euill, shall he make hym selfe good? when that he was good, he kepte not him selfe good, and now, that he is euill, shall he say, I make my selfe good? &c. De Verbis apost. ser. 11.

Here is the very strength of free will, by his strength, are we made miserable, and that doth experience learne. And yet we boaste free will? S. Augustine calleth it cursed freewil, and will we call it blessed freewill? Is not this a goodly fredome, and great power to bryng vs to this euerlasting miserie? This is our bonum conatum, and facere quod in ce est, and preparare se ad graciam, with other dampnable dreames, that we haue, whose conclusions are nothing els, but to bryng vs to dampnation. You se S. Augustines wordes be so plaine that no mā can auoide them Also S. Paule saith: Roma. 8. The wisdome of the flesh, is enemy to God, it is not subiecte vnto ỹ law, nor cā be, for they that serue ỹ flesh, can not please God. And he that hath not the ſpirite of Chriſt, the ſame mā is none of his: for the ſelfe ſpirit beareth witnes to our ſpirite, that wee be the chilozen of God. Here haue you plainely that the wiſdome of ỹ fleſhe, is the very enemy againſt God. It cā not bee ſaide, but by wiſedome he vnderſtandeth the beſt thyng that is in man, for better thē wiſdome, cā there nothing bee: and yet that is enemy to God, for it is but fleſhe, and all that is in man without the ſpirite of God. And that S. Paule declareth, when hee ſayth: hee that hath not the ſpirite of Chriſt, the ſame man is not Chriſtes. Here is playne, that will, reaſō, wiſdome, hart, or whatſoeuer thing ỹ is in man (without the ſpirit of God) is but fleſhe, and can not bee obedient. Hee ſayth not, he wyll not, but he can not, hee hath no might, hee hath no power, let hym intende his beſt, doe all ỹ lyeth in hym, with all his might, & all his power, & yet can it not pleaſe God, for it is but all fleſhe.

Mās fleſhly wiſdome is enemy to God.

Duns. But here M. Duns will make a diſtinction, and ſay, that fleſhe is take here for fleſhely deſires onely and voluptuouſnes, & not for the deſires of the ſoule, nor for the electiō of ỹ will. I woulde know, what part of man it is, that deſireth or that coueteth thys voluptuouſnes? It is not the bones, nor the ſinowes, nor the fleſhe that hangeth theregn, but it is the higheſt parte of man, the very ſoule of man, hee is the grounde and auctor of all conſcupiſence: take away hym, and there remayneth no voluptuouſnes. Therefore S. Paule declareth hym, and hys operation, when hee cauilleth it the wiſdome of the fleſhe. But I woulde gladly know what hee vnderſtandeth by vncleane deſires, and by voluptuouſnes? If hee vnderſtand, euill cogitations, as aduoutry, fornications, manſlaughter, theſte, couetouſnes, deceite, vncleanes, blaſphemy, pride, and folliſhnes. If hee call theſe volupouſnes, theſe bee they that come from the hart of man, and bee choſen by the election of the will, as our M. Chriſt doth clearely declare Marke. 7. Mark. 7. Yea, and that from the very bottome of the hart. Can they inuent any other vncleanely deſires thē theſe? And theſe come not from the bones, nor from the ſinowes, but frō the very ground of the hart, and theſe bee all hys deſires, and other hath hee none of hym ſelfe. Wherefore theſe dreamers dreame, they wot not what, and ſpeake, that they vnderſtand not. For all that is in man, harte, ſoule, fleſhe, and bone. &c. wyth all theyr workes, is but fleſhe, excepte the ſpirite of God bee there. Euery man hath a ſoule, but by that is hee not Chriſtes, for thē Infidels were Chriſtes, but the ſpirite of Chriſt, maketh hym Chriſtes, and the ſpirite of God geueth witnes to our ſpirite, that we bee the childzen of God. Our ſpirite geueth no witnes to himſelf, that hee is Chriſtes, for then were the ſpirite of God fruſtrate. Roma. 8.

Wherefore let our ſpirite as well as hee can, ſtudye hys beſte, to apply hymſelfe to goodnes after the vttermoſt of his power: and yet is it but wiſdome of thē fleſhe, and hath no witnes of God: yea, it is but an enemy, and it muſt needes bee ſinne. For S. Auguſtine ſayth: Hee that feedeth without mee, feedeth againſt mee. &c. Marke how hee ſayth, againſt mee. Wherefore all that freewill can doe without grace, is but ſinne. Marke alſo, that Paule did write vnto the Iewes: yea, and to the beſt of them, which did ſtudye to doe good workes: yea, and that the beſt workes, that were the workes of the lawe, and yet all theſe bee cauilleth but fleſhe, and declareth openly, that all theſe good workes coulde not helpe them, & yet no doubt but that the Iewes dyd as much as lay in theyr freewyll to doe, to come to the fauour of God, & yet it helped not, for all was but wiſedome of the fleſhe, and enemy to God.

De Verbis Domini ſer. xv.

Freewill without grace is ſinne.

Alſo S. Paule ſayth: If you mortifie the deedes of the fleſhe, by the ſpirite, you ſhall liue. You will not reken, that S. Paule doth iudge the ſpirite of God neceſſary, to kyll the deſires of the fleſhe, that is, of the ſynowes, or of the bones, or of any other thyng that is in man, beſide the ſpirite of man, for that were but a Roma. 8.

ſmall thyng, yea it were but fruſtrate to ſet the ſpirite of God to kylle theſe thynges, for the ſpirite of man can kill them, yea and alſo rule them. For after your owne Philoſophers, the ſpirite of man, is the ruler and the guider of all the workes, that bee done by the body. Wherefore the ſpirite of God muſt bee hee that ſhall kyll the diſeaſe of our ſpirite, the whiche is the moſt ſpirituall thyng in vs: and yet is it but fleſhe afore God. For if there were any power in hym, hye, or lowe, to kyll hys deſires, then were it but boyde to call the ſpirite of God to helpe. But let vs heare what S. Auguſtine ſayth on this terte, if you mortifie your &c. &c. Thou wylte ſay, that can my wyll doe, that can my freewill doe. What wyll? what maner of freewill? except that hee guide thee, thou falleſt: except hee lyfte thee vp, thou lyeſt ſtyll. How canſt thou then doe it by thy ſpirite, ſeeing that ỹ Apoſtle ſayth: As many as bee ledde by the ſpirite of God, bee the children of God. Wilte thou doe of thy ſelfe? Wilte thou bee ledde of thyne owne ſelfe to mortifie the deedes of the fleſhe? what will it profite thee? For if thou bee not an Epicure, thou ſhalt bee a Stoicke? Whether thou bee bee an Epicure, or a Stoicke, thou ſhalte not bee amonge the children of God. For they that bee guided of the ſpirit of God, bee the childrẽ of God: not they that lyue after their owne fleſhe: not they that lyue after theyr owne ſpirite: not they that bee ledde of their owne ſpiritẽ: but as many as bee led of the ſpirite of God, they bee the children of God.

De verbis Apoſt. ſ. xij.

We can doe nothyng that is good without the ſpirite of God

Who are ỹ children of God?

But heare a man will ſay, Ergo, then are wee well ruled, and we doe not rule. I aunſwere. Thou both ruleſt, and art ruled, but then doeſt thou well rule, if thou bee ruled of the good ſpirite. Utterly, if thou want the ſpirite of God, thou canſt doe no good. Thou doeſt truely without his helpe, by thy freewyll: but it is but euill done. Unto ỹ is thy will apte, which is cauled free, and by euell doeing, is thee made a damnanable bonde ſeruant. When I ſay without the helpe of God, thou doeſt nothing, I vnderſtand by it no good thing, for to doe euell, thou haſt freewyll, without the helpe of God, though that bee no freedome. Wherefore you ſhall knowe, that ſo doe you goodnes, if the helping ſpirite bee your guider, the whiche if it bee abſent, you can doe no good at all. &c. We thinke this ſaying is ſufficient, if men would beleeue S. Auguſtine. Marke how hee ſayth, without the ſpite of God we lye in ſynne, let our ſpirit doe ỹ beſt hee can. For they bee not the children of God, ỹ are guided after their owne ſpirite but after the ſpirit of God. For our ſpirite can doe no good at all, but euell, if the ſpirite doe not leade hym. Where is now our bonum ſtudium? our bonus conatus and applicacio ad bonum? For our ſpirite can doe nothing but euell, and is of hym ſelfe, but a damnable ſeruant. What good can a damnable ſeruant doe of hym ſelfe? So that here it is openly proued, that the free will of man, of his owne ſtrength, and of his owne power, can doe nothing but ſynne.

Bonus conatus Veritum de congruo.

But now commeth the damnable reaſon, and fleſhly wiſedome, & will diſpute, and ſay: if our freewill cã doe no goodnes, what neede God to commaunde ſo many good thinges? what neede God to geue thoſe cõmaundementes, that he knoweth well bee impoſſible for vs? And if they bee impoſſible, what right is in hym that damneth vs for that thyng, that is impoſſible, for vs to doe? I aunſwere.

Fleſhly & carnall reaſon, reaſoneth frowardly and crookedly.

O thou blinde and preſumptuous and damnable reaſõ, where haſt thou learned of any other creature, to enquire a cauſe of thy makers will? or els to murmour, agaynſt the ordinãce of thy lyuyng God? What haſt thou to doe to require a cauſe of his actes? Hee hath made thee without thy cõſẽt and counſell, & may hee not ſet lawes, and commaundementes to rule thee by, at his pleaſure, without thy counſel? thou art worthy of none aũſwere, thou art ſo preſumptuous: nor there is no godly annſwere, that will ſatiſfie thee. Neuertheles, I will ſtoppe thy blaſpheming mouth, by thine own wiſedome, to thy great ſhame.

As God is nothynge but goodnes, ſo can hee commaunde no thyng but that which is good.

Fyrſt, this thing muſt thou graunt mée, that thy God is eſſenciall goodneſſe, and is nothyng but goodneſſe. Wherefore hée can commaunde nothyng but that is good, iuſte, and righteous. Which thynges, if thou doe not, or hée not able to doe, thy maker may not let his goodnes vndone, becauſe of thy naughtines, or for thyne vnablenes. And if thou hée not able to doe thoſe good thynges, that hée cõmaundeth thée, there is no faulte in the commaunder, nor yet in the commaundementes. Wherfore then dooſt thou grudge agaynſt hym wythout a cauſe? But yet wilte thou murmure, and ſay, how that hée knoweth, how they bée impoſſible for thée. Truth that is, hée knoweth it. Then wylte thou ſay, wherfore doth hée cõmaũde them to mée? O thou preſumptuous creature, it were ſufficiently aunſwered to thée, to ſay, that it is his pleaſure ſo to commaunde. What couldeſt thou ſay more? what occaſiõ haddeſt thou to murmure? what wronge haſt thou?

But I wil goe farther. Thy maker knoweth that they bée impoſſible for for thée: hée knoweth alſo thy damnable & preſumptuous pryde, that reckeneſt, how thou canſt doe all thynges that bée good of thyne owne ſtrength, wythout any other helpe. And to ſubdue this preſũptuous pryde of thine, & to bring thée to knowledge of thyne owne ſelfe, hée hath géeuen thée hys commaundementes, of the whiche thou canſt not complayne, for they bée both righteous and good. And if thou complaine becauſe they bée impoſſible for thée, then conſider thy dampnable pryde, that thoughteſt thy ſelfe ſo ſtronge, that thou couldeſt doe all goodneſſe.

Why God hath geueu vs his commaundementes to bee kept.

But what wilt ỹ now doe? Theſe commaundementes bée géeuen, and can not, nor ſhall not bée chaunged, to ſatiſfie thy preſũptuous pryde. Wherof wylte thou now complayne? Gods commaundementes bée reaſonable, they be good, they bée righteous, and they bée laudable, ſhal all theſe things bée deſtroyed, to ſatiſfie thy pryde? nay not ſo. But thou ſhalt rather remaine wyth all thy pryde, vnder the damnation of theſe commaundementes. What ſayeſt thou thereto? Cãſt thou auoyde this? Cãſt thou ſay but this is right? Canſt thou ſaue thy ſelfe from daunger? Canſt thou auoyde thy dãpnation, by all thy carnall wyſdome? Nay verely. For hée that is thy aduerſary is omnipotent. Wherefore, ſay what thou wilte, ſo muſt it bée, for it is Gods ordinaunce, which may not bée chaunged. But now, wilte thou aſke what remedye? no remedy but this onely, to confeſſe thy weakenes, to confeſſe thy pryde, to knowledge thy vnablenes, to graunt, ỹ theſe cõmaundementes bée moſt full, holy, and good, & how thou art bounde to kéepe them, and to geue laude, and prayſe to God for them, & to goe to thy merciefull maker with thy confeſſion, and to deſire hym, that hée will helpe thée, that hée will bée mercyfull vnto thée, that hée will ſtrengthen thée, for thou art to weake, that hée will geue thée his ſpirite: for thy ſpirite is to fleſhly, to fulfill theſe ſpirituall commaundementes, and doubt thou not, but thou ſhalt finde hym both mercyfull, and alſo gracious, for hée gaue thée theſe cõmaundements for that intent, ſecretly declaryng, both thy pryde, & alſo thy weakenes, that thou mighteſt ſéeke, and call vnto hym for helpe.

This doth S. Auguſtine declare well in theſe wordes: If man doe perceiue, that in the commaundements, is any thing impoſſible, or els to hard let hym not remaine in hym ſelfe, but let hym runne vnto God, his helper the which hath geuen his commaundementes for that intent, that our deſire might bée ſtyred vp, and that hée might geue helpe. &c. Marke S. Auguſtine ſayth, that the commaundemẽts bée impoſſible vnto our ſtrength, but we muſt call to God for ſtrength. De temp. ſer. lxxij.

The Pelagians dyd recken, that they had got a great victory, whẽ they had made this carnall reaſon, ỹ God would commaũde nothyng, that was impoſſible. Of this reaſõ did they glory, and triumphe, and thought, that they muſt nédes haue ſome naturall ſtrength, and power to fulfill the commaundementes of God, ſeyng that God would commaunde nothing impoſſible to man. Of this ſame reaſon, doth my Lorde of Rocheſter, and all his ſcholers glory vnto this ſame day.

De lib. arb. cap. xvi.

But let vs ſée how S. Auguſtine aunſwereth them. The Pelagians (ſayth hée) thinke, that they know a wõderous thing, when they ſay, God will not commaunde that thyng, the whiche hée knoweth is impoſſible for man to doe. Euery mã knoweth this, but therfore doth hée commaunde certeine thyngs, that we can not doe, becauſe we might know, what thyng we ought to aſke of him, Fayth is ſhée, which by prayer, obtaineth that thyng, that the law commaundeth.

Eccl. 12. Gods commaundementes bee impoſſible to our nature.

Briefely, hée that ſayeth · If thou wilt, thou mayeſt kéepe my commãdementes. In éhe ſame booke, a litle after ſayth. Hée ſhall geue me kéeping in my mouth. Playne it is, that we may kéepe the commaundementes, if we will, but becauſe our will is prepared of God, of him it muſt bée aſked, that we may ſo much wil, as wil ſuffice vs to doe thẽ. Truth it is, that we will whẽ we will, but hée maketh vs to will that thyng, that is good. &c.

Here haue you playne, that my Lord of Rocheſters opinion, and the Pelagiãs, is all one, for they both doe agrée, that the commaundementes of God, bée not impoſſible to our naturall ſtrength. But S. Auguſtine ſayth, they bée impoſſible. And therefore bée they geuen, that we ſhould know our weakednes, & alſo aſke ſtrẽgth to fulfill them. For fayth by prayer, doth obteine ſtrength, to fulfil, the impoſſible commaundementes of the law. Here haue you alſo, that God moueth vs, and cauſeth vs to bée good willers, & geueth vs a good will, for els we wold neuer will, but euill.

whereof our good will commeth.

Here is alſo to bée noted, that ỹ Pelagians, & our Duns mẽ, agrée all in one, for they both ſay, that ỹ grace of God doth helpe mãs good purpoſe, ſo that man doth firſt intende, & purpoſe well. And as Duns ſayth, diſpoſeth hym ſelfe by attriciõ to receiue grace, & thẽ God doth helpeth hym. But the truth is contrary, for there is no good purpoſe in man, no good diſpoſition, nor good intent, but all is agaynſt goodnes, & cleane cõtrary againſt all thing that agréeth with grace, bytill that God of hys mére mercy commeth & geueth grace, & chaungéth a mãs will vnto grace, and geueth hym will, to will goodnes, yea, and that when hée thought nothing of goodnes, but doth clearely reſiſt all goodnes.

De cõgrua.

This doth S. Auguſtine proue in theſe wordes. The Pelagians ſay, ỹ they graunt how that grace doth help enery mans good purpoſe, but not ỹ hée geueth the loue of vertue to hym, that ſtriueth agaynſt it. This thyng doe they ſay, as though man of hym ſelfe, without the helpe of God, hath a good purpoſe, and a good mynde vnto vertue, by the whiche merite procedyng afore, hée is worthy to bée holpen of the grace of God, that foloweth after. Doubtles, that grace that foloweth, doth helpe the good purpoſe of man, but the good purpoſe ſhould neuer haue bene, if grace had not precedee. And though that ỹ good ſtudy of man, when it begynneth, is holpen of grace, yet dyd it neuer begyn without grace. &c.

De lib. arb. cap. xvi.

The Pelagians ſayth that God giueth good lawes & man may keepe them of his naturall ſtrength or els the cõmaundemẽts were fruſtrate.

Here it is open, that the Pelagiãs graunt as much of grace, as my Lord of Rocheſter doth, and all his Duns men, whiche learneth, that man may haue a good purpoſe, bonum ſtudium, and a good mynde, & a loue ỹ grace, of his owne naturall ſtrẽgth. The Pelagians graunt euen the ſame. But here you ſée, how Saint Auguſtine is cleare agaynſt them. But now let vs here Ỹ. Duns wordes. A ſinner may by the naturall, and by the commõ influence of God, conſider his ſinnes, as a thyng that hath offended God, & as a thing cõtrary to the law of God, and letteth hym from reward, & bringeth hym to payne, & by this meanes may hée hate, and abhorre his ſinne: this calleth hée attriciõ, wherby there is a diſpoſition (ſayth hée) or a merite in a man of congruence, to take away mortal ſinne, and this attrition is ſufficient for a man, that ſhall receiue the Sacramentes, & quod non ponat obicem.

iiij. ſen. diſt. xiiij. queſt. 9.

cem, that is, that hée haue no mortall ſinne actually in his will, this is ſufficient, and alſo a neceſſary way to receiue grace. &c.

This is ten tymes worſe then the Pelagians opinges, for they graunt, that man muſt néedes haue a ſpeciall grace, to performe his good purpoſe. And M. Duns ſayth, that man may performe his attrition, of his naturall power, yea, and this attrition of congruence, is a diſpoſition to take away mortall ſinne, without any ſpeciall grace.

I pray you M. Duns, of what congruence is it? What hath attrition deſerued, that mortall ſinne ſhould bée taken away for his pleaſure? what hath hée deſerued, that grace muſt folow hym? Infidels may haue this attrition (for you graunt, that it cōmeth of naturall ſtrength) and yet ſhall it not folowe of congruence, that they muſt receiue grace, and alſo remiſſiō of their ſinnes? Alſo had not Iudas this attrition, when hée ſayd, I haue ſinned? and was ſory for his ſinne, & alſo repēted him? and knew well, that hée had offended God, and alſo deſerued payne? and was no more willyng (I thinke) ſo to doe, and had all ỳ properties, that belongeth to your attrition, and yet ſée how hée dyd deſerue of congruence grace, and remiſſion of his ſinnes. Yea, dyd not this attritiō, bryng hym to extreme deſperation? Howe can a man without a ſpeciall grace, abhorre his ſinne? It is not poſſible, but hée muſt loue ſinne, ſo longe as hée is the enemy of God, yea hée woulde there were no God, to punithe ſinne, ſuch a pleaſure hath hée vnto ſinne.

Yee that hath not ỳ grace of God cānot abhorre ſin.

This is the nature of our hartes, and that doth euery one of vs féele, though theſe men teacheth the contrary, but I ſay to them the wordes of the Prophete, redite ad cor preuaricatores, grope in your boſomes, & there finde you the mortal enemy of God, which neither careth for Gods diſpleaſure, nor yet for his ſinne. And you ſay that hée may haue a good attritiō, of his naturall ſtrēgth, and if this attrition bée good, then may hée doe good before grace, ſo that we ſhall gather grapes of thornes, and figges of briers.

But what ſayth S. Paule to your good attrition? He ſayth, that all thing without fayth is nothyng. Is not this man a fleſhly man? and hath nothyng of the ſpirit of God (for by your own learnyng, hée hath but the commō influence) and yet ſhall hée bée ſory, that hée hath offended God? Shall hée abhorre his ſinne? Shall hée depoſe hym ſelfe of congruence to grace? S. Paul ſayth. The fleſh lufteth cōtrary to the ſpirite, and the workes of the fleſhe, bée aduoultry fornication, vnclennes, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, wrath, zeale, ſedition, enuying, with ſuch other. I pray you, how agrée theſe workes with your attrition? Call you this abhorryng of ſinne? Call you this heauines, for offēdyng God? Bée theſe good diſpoſitions? Bée theſe our good preparatiōs vnto God? Thinke you, that theſe workes, doe deſerue of congruence remiſſiō of mortal ſinne? Theſe bée the beſt workes, that a ſinner hath in his hart, or els S. Paule lyeth. Wherfore it is not poſſible, but hée muſt haue in his wil, actual ſinne, for hée cā will nothyng but ſinne. And therefore, if hée receiue the Sacramentes with this attrition, hée receiueth them to his damnation. For before grace, hée is an bitter enempe to God, and to all his Sacramentes. Wherefore God muſt of his mere mercy, mollifie his hart, and geue him grace to will goodnes, or els hée cā neuer doe it, nor yet deſire it. As S. Auguſtine doth declare in theſe wordes. The grace, which is geuē of the large nes of God, priuely into mens harts, can not bée deſpiſed of no maner of hard hart. For therfore it is geuē, that the hardnes of the hart ſhould bée taken away. Wherfore whē the father is hard within, and doth learne, that we muſt come to his ſonne. Then taketh hée away our ſtony hart, and geueth vs a fleſhely harte. And by this meanes, hée maketh vs the children of promiſe, & the veſſels of mercy, which hée hath prepared to glory. But wherfore doth hée not learne all men to come to Chriſte? Becauſe that thoſe, that hée learneth, hée learneth of mercy, and thoſe, that hée learneth not, of hys iudgement doth hée not learne them. &c. Marke, that S. Auguſtine ſayth. That there is no hardneſſe of hart, that can reſiſt grace. And Duns ſayth, that there may bée an obſtacle in más hart. S. Auguſtine ſaith, that grace findeth the harte in hardnes, & obſtinacie. And Dús ſaith, that there is a mollifieng, that precedeth grace, whiche hée calleth attrition. S. Auguſtine ſayth, when the father learneth vs within, then taketh hée away our ſtony hartes. And Duns ſayth, that we can doe it by the common natural influence, that is, we can diſpoſe our ſelues of cõgruitie. Marke alſo, how all men, bée not taught to come to Chriſt, but alonely they, ỹ bée taught, of mercy bée taught: and if it bée of mercy, then it is not of congruence by attrition.

De gredeſti. cap. 8.

Grace finneth our hartes ſtony.

Meritum de congruo.

Briefely, a greater hereſie, more contrary to Chriſte, and his bleſſed word, cã no man learne, and yet muſt hée bée taken for a great clarke, and a ſubtile Doctour, bicauſe hée pleaſeth the fleſhe. But ſhortly, haue I openly proued by inuincible Scriptures, and by Doctours of great authoritie, that frée will of his naturall ſtrength, with out a ſpeciall grace, can doe nothyng, but abyde in ſinne. Fayne inuent, excogitate, and dreame, as many holy purpoſes as we can, as many ſubtile diſtinctions, as many good attritions, as many good applicatiõs, and all they bée but ſinne, till grace come: yea our ſléepyng, our eatyng, our drynkyng, our almeſſes, our prayers, our ſingyng, our ryngyng, our confeſſyng, our mumblyng, our mournyng, our waylyng. Briefely, all that we cã doe, is but hypocriſie, and double ſinne afore God, till the tyme, that hée of hys mercy choſeth vs. For as hée ſayth. You haue not choſen me, but I haue choſen you.

Sine fide impoſſibile eſt placere Deo

Now will I declare a ſcripture or two, that men bring to proue our conatum and our bonum ſtudium. The firſt place is this. God, from the bégynnyng dyd ordayne man, and left hym in the handes of his owne counſell, hée did geue hym his commaundementes, and his preceptes, if thou wilt kéepe the commaundementes, & alſo kéepe peaſably fayth, for euer they ſhall kéepe thée. I haue ſet before thée water, and fyre, ſtretch thy hand to which thou wilt.

Of this place is gathered, that mã may haue a good intent, a good mynde, to apply hym ſelfe to God of his naturall power. But this can not be proued of this text. For there is neuer a worde of entending, of ſtudying, or of applying will. For if we will take the wordes of the text, as they ſound, they rather proue, that we may kéepe the Commaundementes of God, yea, and alſo beléeue in God, then any other thing, the which, I am ſure no man will graunt. For then howe could men auoyde, but that the Philoſophers be ſaued? For no man can denye, but that they dyd aſmuch, as lay in their naturall power to come to God? Moreouer the Pelagians bring this text, to proue, that man may doe good of his naturall ſtrength. Nowe how will we auoyde them? For if we denye, that it proueth their opinion (for the which ỹ wordes ſound moſt) then will they denye, that it proueth our conatum, and our bonum ſtudium, of the which, the text ſpeaketh neuer a worde. Wherefore this text maketh neither for thẽ, nor yet for you. Plaine it is, that the wordes of the text ſoũde of kéeping, and of beléeuing, if we will, and not of intending, nor of ſtudying. Wherefore it maketh not for your purpoſe.

But let vs goe to the text, God frõ the bégynning dyd make man. Theſe wordes bée open of the creation, of ỹ firſt man. Hée left hym in the handes of his owne counſell. Theſe wordes make nothing for frée will, for heare is nothing commaunded hym to doe, but all onely heare is ſignifyed, that man is made Lorde ouer all inferiour creatures, to vſe them, at hys pleaſure, as it is opẽ. Geneſis. 2. Where that all thinges were brought afore Adam, to receyue their names, ſignifying, that they were all left vnto his vſe, and to hys will, & hée was Lorde ouer

Eccl. 16.

Mans Lordſhyp ouer all creatures of God.

ouer them all, and none ouer hym. This was hys kingdome, in ẏ which hæ dyd raigne, and gouerne all things after his commaundementes, but yet was it by generall influence, geuen him firſt of God: Hæ did adde his cõmaundementes, and his preceptes. In theſe wordes is there no power geuen vnto hym, but heare hæ geuen hym commaundementes, Whereby hæ muſt bæ ordered, and ruled, And not rule after his owne counſell, but after the counſell, and commaundementes of God. Wherefore by theſe commaundementes, was their parte of hys frée domination, and lordſhip, that hæ had ouer the inferior thinges taken away, as where God commaũded hym. that hæ ſhould not eate of ẏ Træ of knowledge, both of good and euyll. Now was it not frée for hym to vſe this træ after his owne will, but after the commaundement of God, and what power hæ had, by his frée will to kæpe this commaundement, ẏ effect did declare. If thou wilt kæpe ẏ commaundementes. Here beginneth the doubt. But yet of theſe wordes can you not gather, that hæ hath power to kepe them, nor yet ẏ hæ might intend to kepe them. For it followeth not, if thou wilt, Ergo, thou mayſt, or thou mayſt entend, As it followeth not, if I would, Ergo, I could depoſe you, for you will let this conſequent.

Mans dominion reſtreined.

Also you haue a generall rule, Condicionalis nihil ponit. Wherefore theſe wordes, if thou wilt kæpe the commaundementes, geueth no power, nor ſtrength to frée will. But this all onely followeth of this texte, if man will kæpe the commaundementes, then they ſhall kæpe hym. But now, where ſhall hæ haue this will? that is not in hys power: but loke of S. Auguſtine aboue recited, and there ſhall ſhall you fynde, how man commeth by this will. Also the wordes of ẏ text bæ not, if thou wilt, thou mayſt kæpe them, or intende to kæpe them. Nor they bæ not, Man may kæpe them, or intende, if hæ will. But if thou wilte kæpe them, then they ſhall kæpe thæ. Wherefore of theſe wordes, can you not conclude any power in man. For it followeth not, when God ſayth, doe this, heare this, heare that, kæpe this, kæpe that, if thou wilte doe this, if ẏ wilt doe that, That we can doe theſe thinges, or can intende to doe them. For God commaundeth vs to doe all good thinges. Ergo, we bæ able of our naturall ſtrength to doe them? Then were the ſpirite of God fruſtrate, for the ſpirite of God is not geuen vs, to geue commaundementes, but for to geue vs ſtrength, to fulfill, and righteouſly to vnderſtand thoſe thinges, ẏ bæ commaunded vs.

Aug. de lib. arb. cap. xvi.

By the commaundementes, is declared that thynge, that we ought to doe and alſo they ſhew our weakeneſſe, and imbecillitie, that we might learne to ſæke for a greater ſtrength, and greater helpe, then is in vs. As Saincte Auguſtine ſayeth, in theſe wordes. The lawe was geuen that man myght fynde hym ſelfe, and not to make hys ſickenes whole, but by his preaching, the ſickneſs increaſed ẏ the phiſition might bæ ſought. Wherfore the lawe threatning, and not fulfilling that thing, that hæ commaundeth, maketh a man to be vnderneath hym, but the law is good, if a man doe vſe it well. What is that, vſe the law well? By the law, to know our ſinnes and to ſæke Gods helpe, to helpe our health. &c.

Auguſt. de Verb. Apoſt. ſent. xiij.

Wherefore the lawe is giuen.

Heare is it playne, that the commaundementes of God, geue vs no ſtrength, nor yet declare any ſtrength to bæ in vs, but ſheweth vs our dutye, and alſo our weakenes, and alſo moueth vs, and cauſeth vs to ſæke further for ſtrength? So that theſe wordes, ſi volueris, ſi feceris, ſi audieris, ſi emundaueris, ſi vis, with all other ſuch, that bæ wordes of commaundementes, or wordes vnder a condition, doe nothing declare, but what we are bounde to doe, and what ſhall followe, if we doe them. And as the wordes of the lawe doe threaten an euyll ende for ſynne, all onelye for to feare euel doers, and wicked perſons from euell, ſo doe the wordes of promyſe ſtyre vp and quicken good mẽs hartes, for to doe well, and alſo comfort thẽ, that they ſhould not diſpayre in aduerſities: But neither theſe, nor thoſe geue vs any ſtrēgth, to doe that that is commaunded: but aloncly they doe declare what paines and what reward ſhall folow to the breakers and the kēpers of them.

Math.23. An other ſcripture haue you, where as our Maiſter Chriſt ſayth: How often woulde I haue gathered thy children, and you woulde not? Here cry you, liberum arbitrium, lib.arb. For if they had no frēwyll, what nēde our Maiſter Chriſt to ſay, thou wouldeſt not? Firſt muſt wee conſider, ỹ there are two maner of wils in God: One is called hys godly wyll, or hys ſecrete or vnſcrutable wyll, whereby that all thinges be made and ordered, and all things bē done. Of this will no creature hath knowledge what hē ought thereby to doe, or not to doe, for as S. Paule ſayth, it is inſcrutable, & therefore it is ſufficient for vs, to knowe therof aloncly, that there is an inſcrutable will. The other will in God, is called a declared, and a manifeſt will, the which is declared and geuen to vs in holy Scriptures.

Two wils in God.

Gene.2. This will was ſhewed vnto the vttermoſt by our M. Chriſt the ſonne of God, and therefore is it lawfull. And alſo, men are bound to ſearch, & to know thys wyll, and for that conſideration, was it manifeſted vnto vs. This wyll doth declare what euery man is bounde to doe, and what euery man is bounde to flie. And by thys wyll is offered vnto euery man, thoſe thynges that bē of ſaluation: And by this will GOD will haue no man damned, for hē letteth his worde to bē preached indifferently to all men.

Nowe, hē that wyll knowe this wyll, muſt goe to our Maiſter Chriſt, in whome as S. Paule ſayth, is all treaſures of wiſedome and ſcience. So that hē will ſhew vs as much as is neceſſarye for vs to knowe, and as much as the father of heauen woulde wee ſhoulde know. Now to the texte, here ſpeaketh God, that is incarnated, that was ſent to will, to ſpeake, to doe, to preach, to bē familiar with vs, to doe myracles, yea, and alſo to ſuffer death for our ſaluation.

Howe Chriſt willed to ſaue the Iewes

Now, ſayth hē, I woulde haue gathered thy children, that is to ſay, I dyd preach, I did labour wyth all diligence to conuerte thē, I did myracles afore thē, yea, I wepte, I wailed for thy ſake: all theſe thynges did I, with all other thinges that myght bē to thy conuerſion, and that belōged to God incarnate to doe. But all theſe things did not profite them. And why? Becauſe they woulde not. In hym was there no faulte. For there was nothyng vndone, that belonged to hym to doe, ſo that hē was wyllyng, and yet did it not profite Ieruſalem. And why? Becauſe they woulde not. But now, why woulde they not? Becauſe it was in theyr power to wyll, to conſent? and to wyll, not to conſent? May truely, but becauſe as Iohn ſayth: Iohn.11. They coulde not beleeue, for hē had blinded their eyes, & hardened their hartes, that they ſhoulde not ſee with theyr eyes, nor vnderſtand with their hartes. So that they muſt nēdes aloncly wyll, not to conſent, and coulde no otherwyſe doe, but not conſent: and yet were they neyther conſtrayned, nor compelled, nor wrunge to it wyth violence, but freely they woulde not conſēt, and yet had they the libertie of their frēwill, that was to bē agaynſt Chriſte, and not to bē wyth hym. For the libertie of frēwill ſtandeth not in this, that he may wil this thing, and alſo will the contrary therof. But it ſtandeth in that, that all thyng that hē wyll, or wyll not, is at his owne wyll, and is not therto conſtrayned, but wylleth it freely wythout compulſion, and yet hē can not chooſe, no nor will not chooſe, but ſo to wyll, or ſo not to wyll. So that there is a neceſſitie immutable, but not a neceſſitie of compulſion, or coaction.

Wherin the libertie of freewill conſiſteth.

Magiſt. ſen. in.ij.

Nowe is it open, that this place maketh not for you, for there was no power, nor none entente in their frēwyll, to conſent vnto Chriſt, but to wyll the contrary, and not to wyl vnto hym: and all was becauſe they were blynded, and their hartes were hardened. And therefore of their naturall ſtrēgth coulde they none other-

It was not in their handes to chaunge their will.

wyſe

wyſe doe, but vary from Chriſt: no, they would not deſired no otherwiſe, but to ſwarue from hym: that was all their will and delyte. But wherefore they were blynded, and wherefore they were hardened, that muſt you inquire of the inſcrutable wyll, that pleaſed hym ſo to leaue thē. The cauſe therof, I am ſure hē cā tel you, if hē woulde. I am ſure it is rightteouſly done, that is inough for mē.

We may not bee to inquiſitiue of Gods ſecretes.

But now commeth the blynde and fleſhlye reaſon, and murmureth at thys, and aſketh, why āre wē cōdemned for this? why doth God punithe vs for this? ſeing wē can wyll no otherwyſe? Alſo hē blyndeth vs, hē maketh our harts harde, that wē can not amende vs, and it lieth not in our power wythout his will. Nowe, why complayneth hē of vs? why layeth hē it to our charge? Here is nothynge done but hys will: wē bē but inſtrumentes of hys will. And if wē doe not well, why geeueth hē vs not ſtrength to doe better? Thou damnable reaſon, who can ſatiſfie thē? which reckoneſt nothyng to bē well done, but that thou doſte, and that is done wyth thy counſell? Thynkeſt thou not, that thou art good and perfecte in thyne owne nature? and all that is in thē, is both wel and righteouſly made?

To this, thou wilte anſwere yea, for thou wilt not condemne thy ſelfe, nor any thing that is thine. But now aunſwere mē to this. What hath made thē ſo well? and geuen thē all thy righteouſnes? and all thys goodnes that thou haſt? Thou muſt nēdes ſay God.

But what was the cauſe that thou art ſo well? ſo righteous? and ſo good made? ſeyng that thou deſerueſt nothyng? Yea, and all theſe thynges bē done ſo well, and ſo righteouſly, that thou canſt not complayne, nor amēde them: no, nor yet deuiſe which way to amende them.

Now, why doeſt thou not murmur agaynſt God? ſeyng, that all thynges is done without thy knowledge? and alſo without thy deſeruing? why dorſt thou not inquire a cauſe of hym? why murmureſt thou not, that hē hath made thē ſo good, and ſo rightfull? ſeyng thou hadeſt nothyng deſerued? But here wilt thou graunt, that God dyd all thyng for the beſt. Why doeſt thou not lykewiſe in other thynges?

Furthermore, thou muſt nēdes graunt, that God thy maker, and the gouernour of all thyngs, is moſt wiſe moſt righteous, and moſt mercyfull: & ſo wiſe that nothyng that hē doth, can bē amended: ſo righteous, that there can bē no ſuſpition in hym, of vnrighteouſnes: ſo mercyfull is hē, that hē cā doe nothyng without mercy. Howe thinkeſt thou? wilt thou graunt theſe thynges of thy maker? Thou muſt nēdes graunt them.

Nothyng that God doth cā bee amended.

Now compare vnto this rule, thy blindnes that is within thē, thy induratiō, that is in thē, thy peruers will toward goodnes, and what cauſe haſt thou to complayne? Thou haſt graunted, that hē doth all thynges righteouſly: Ergo, thou haſt no wrong. Hē doth all things mercyfully: Ergo, thou art in thy blyndnes, and in thy hardnes, better intreated thē thou haſt deſerued. Moreouer, thou beleueſt, that God is righteous, that God is wiſe, and that God is mercyful. Now fayth is of thoſe thynges, that doe not appeare, nor that can bē proued by exteriour cauſes. Hold thē faſt to this fayth, then all thy fleſhely reaſons bē aſſoiled. For whē God ſaueth ſo few men, and damneth ſo many, and thou knoweſt no cauſe why, yet muſt thou beleeue, that hē is mercyful, and righteous. This is fayth, which if it could bē proued by exteriour cauſes, then were it no nēde to beleeue it.

Note here the wicked and ſinneſull ſtate of man.

Fayth doth not come of exteriour cauſes, but is the mere gift of God

Now, if thou beleeue, that hē is mercyfull, good, & righteous vnto thē. wherefore murmureſt thou? But yet wouldeſt thou know wherfore hē indurateth thē, and blyndeth thē, and geueth thē no grace to amende, and vnto thy brother, that hath no better deſerued then thou haſt: yea, hē hath likewiſe euill deſerued as thou haſt, and yet hē geueth hym grace, and taketh away his hardnes, & geueth him a will, to will all goodnes. This is not indifferently done as thou thinkeſt.

God disposeth hys mercy to whom it pleaseth hym.

First, I say to thée, thou hast no cause to complayne, for thou hast no wrong, thou hast all thyng, that is thyne, and nothyng is taken frō thée, that belōgeth to thée. Why doest thou complayne of this right? Yea, but yet sayest thou, that hée geueth the one mercy, and geueth the other none. I aunswere, what is that to thée? is not his mercy his owne? Is it not lawfull for him to geue it to whom hée will? Is thy eye euil, because hée is good? Take that, that is thyne, and goe thy way. For if it bée his will to shew his wrath and to make his power knowne, ouer the vessels of wrath, ordeined to damnation, and so to declare the riches of his glory, vnto the vessels of mercy which hée had prepared, & elected vnto glory. What hast thou therewith to doe? what cause hast thou therof to cōplayne? it is the will of God, which can not bée, but well, & righteous, the which (as thou sayest) thou beléeuest.

Math. 20.

Roma. 9.

God hath no delight in our damnation.

Wherefore leaue of thy murmuryng, & thy disputation agaynst God, and reckon, that hée is of his nature mercyfull, and hath no delite, nor no pleasure in thy damnatiō, but beléeue thou stedfastly, that if hée shewe hys mercy but vnto one man in all the worlde, that thou shalt bée that same one man, & though an aungell would make thée beléeue, that all the world should bée damned, yet sticke thou fast to his mercy, and to his iustice, that iustifieth thée, and beléeue, that the swéete bloud of his blessed sonne, can not bée shedde in vayne, but it must néedes iustifie sinners, and so many as sticke fast vnto it, though they bée neuer so blynded, and neuer so hardned, for it was shed alonely for them.

A comfortable and wholesome doctrine.

If thou canst thus satisfie thy selfe, then doest thou wel, & thou art doubtles out of ieoperdie. If thou wilt not bée content, but wilt dispute, and inquire causes of Gods inscrutable will, then will I stand by, and loke on, and sée what victory dome thou shalt get I doubt not, but it will repēt thée, and that hée will conclude with thée, on this maner. May not I doe what I will? Now here haue I aūswered, to an intricable doubt, that our schole men are wrapped in, whiche would know, what is the cause of predestination, and of reprobatiō. Duns bée- Scotus. d. 5. dist. 41.
yng wrapped betwéene carnall reason, and the inuincible Scriptures of S. Paule, can not tell, whether hée may graunt, that the will of God is alonely the cause of election, or els any merites of man precedyng afore: hée concludeth, that both ỳ opinions may bée defended. Bonauenture blyndly concludeth, that there may bée a cause preceding grace to deserue it. So that in these vnfrutefull questions, which ingender nothing but contētion, haue they spent all their liues, and for these thinges hée geuen vnto them peculiar names, as subtile and seraphicall, and irrefrigable Doctours. But agaynst them all, I set S. Paule, whiche toke intollerable labours, to prowe by inuincible Scriptures, and examples therof, that there was no cause but alonely the will of God. And to prowe this, hée byngeth in an euident example of Jacob, & Esau, how Jacob was elected, & Esau reprowed, afore they were borne, and afore they had done, either good, or bad.

Bonauenture. Iacob, Esau.

Can there bée a playner example? what meaneth Paule in these words when they weare neyther borne, nor had done neyther good nor bad, but that the election of God myght stand? Doth hée not clearely take away all manner of merites, both de congruo, & also de condigno? and declare the will of God to bée the cause onely? But heare will subtyll blyndnes say, that God sawe before, that Jacob should doe good, and therefore dyd hée chuse hym. Hée sawe also, that Esau should doe no good, and therefore hée repelled hym. Alas for blindenes, what will you iudge of that, that God saw. How know we that God sawe that? And if hée sawe it, yet how know we that that was the cause of Jacobs election? These children bée vnborne, and they haue done neyther good nor bad, and yet one of them is chosen, & the other is refused, S. Paule knoweth none other cause, but the will of God, and will you diseuse an other.

Meritum de congruo.

Jacob is elected and Esau reiected.

And where you say, that God did ſée afore, that one of them ſhould doe good, I praye you what was the cauſe or whereby ſaw hée, that hée ſhould doe good? you muſt néedes ſay by that that hée would geue hym his grace, Ergo, the will of God is yet the cauſe of election, for becauſe ỳ God would geue hym his grace. Therefore God ſaw, that hée ſhould doe good, and ſo ſhould alſo ỳ other haue done, if God woulde haue geuen hym that ſame grace. Wherefore you gyauntes, that will ſubdue heauen and earth, leaue your ſearching of this cauſe, and bée content with the will of God, & doubt not, but the will of God, is as righteous, and as lawfull a cauſe, as your merites can bée. And doubt you not, but S. Paule (that toke ſo great labours in this matter) dyd ſée as farre in mans deſeruing, as we can doe: & yet hée concluded with theſe wordes of ſcriptures, I will ſhew mercy: to whom I ſhew mercy: I will haue cõpaſſion, of whom I haue compaſſion. So lyeth it not in mans will, or cunnyng, but in the mercy of God. Hée ſayth not, I will haue mercy on hym, that I ſée ſhall doe good: but I will ſhew mercy to whom I wil. Hée ſaith not, I will haue compaſſion of hym ỳ ſhall deſerue it de congruo? But of him of whom I will haue cõpaſſion. This doth S. Auguſtine well proue in theſe words: The diſputatiõ of thẽ is vain ỳ which doe defend ỳ preſẽce of God, agayn? the grace of God, and therfore ſay, that we were choſen afore ỳ making of the world, becauſe ỳ God knew afore that we ſhould bée good, not bécauſe hée ſhould make hs good. But hée that ſayth, You haue not choſen mée, ſayth not that. For if hée dyd therefore chooſe vs, bécauſe that hée knew before, that wée ſhould bée good, thẽ muſt hee alſo knowe béefore, that wée ſhould? fyrſt haue choſen hym? &c.

Rom. 9.

Gods mercy is ỳ cauſe onely of our ſaluation.

Auguſt. ſuper Ioannem tract. lxxxvij.

Here is it playne, that the election of God is not, becauſe hée ſawe afore, that we ſhould doe well, but all onely the cauſe of election, is his mere mercy, and the cauſe of our doing well, is his election. And therefore S. Paule ſayth, not of workes, but of callynge.

Now goe to you ſubtill Duns men, with all your carnall reaſons, & ſearch out a cauſe of his ſecrete will. If you dyd beléeue, that hée were good, righteous, and mercyfull, it were a great comfort for you, that the electiõ ſtode all onely by hys will, for ſo were you ſure, that it ſhould bée both righteouſly done, and mercifully, but you haue no fayth, & therfore muſt you nedes myſtruſt God, and of that, fall you to inuent cauſes of election of your own ſtrength. As one ſhould ſay, bécauſe God will not of his righteouſnes, or of his mercy chooſe vs, we will be ſure that we ſhall bée elected. For fyrſt will we inuent, that the election commeth of deſeruyng, and then will we alſo dreame certayne workes, that ſhall thereunto bée appoynted of vs, and thoſe will we doe at our pleaſure, ſo that the election, and reprobacion, ſhall ſtande all in your hands, let God doe what that pleaſeth him. But now bécauſe there bée certayne open places of ſcripture, that geue onely the cauſe to God, all onely of election, & alſo of reprobation, therefore are theſe men ſore troubled, and can not tell no other remedy, but all onely to ſtudye, how they may wring, & wreſt the open ſcriptures, to the fortifying of their errour, and to the ſatisfyinge of their carnall reaſon: ſo that where the holy Ghoſt ſayth, I will obdurate the hart of Pharao, they will take vpon them to learne and to teach the holy Ghoſt to ſpeake better, and to ſay of this maner: I will ſuffer Pharao to bée indurated, but I will not doe it, but my eaſynes, my ſoftnes, whereby that I ſhall ſuffer him, ſhall bring other men to repentaunce, but Pharo ſhal it make more obſtinate in malice. So that God doth indurate (as you ſay) when hée doth not chaſtice a ſynner, but ſheweth ſoftnes, and eaſynes and ſufferaunce to hym. Hée is mercifull, when hée doth call a ſinner to repentaunce by affliction and ſcourging. So that induration after your expoſition, is nothing els but for to ſuffer euyll by ſoftnes, and by goodnes. To haue mercy, is nothing els but to correcte, to ſcourge, and to punyſhe

God is mercyfull.

Was good intent to ſaue hym ſelfe.

men for their synnes.

Origine in periarcon. Glos. Rom. 5. Hiero. super Esaiam.

This is the exposition of induration, after S. Hierome and after your common glose. S. Hieromes wordes bée these: God doth indurate, when hée doth not by and by castigate a synner. Hé hath mercy, when hée doth call a synner by and by vnto repentáce by afflictions. &c. This is auctoritie inough, as you thinke, what shoulde you search any farther? Dyd not these men vnderstand scripture? Is not this exposition playne? This taketh away all inconueniẽces? By this exposition God is not the auctor of euell? This is a darkely exposition? Briefly, this this must nédes bee the true expositiõ Wherfore it weare better for you, to erre with S. Hierome, and with our oulde schoolemen, then for to say true with these newe heretykes, so call you all them, that will reproue oulde errours.

Which bee newe men.

Now haue you well defended the matter. Now is your cause well proued. Now must the holy Ghost chang his wordes. For hée hath new schoolemaysters. And wheare hée was wont to say, I haue hardened Pharos hart. Now must hée say. Pharao hath hardened hym selfe, by my softnes, and by my easines, but I haue not done it.

But yet I pray you, how woulde you satisfie a weake conscience? that stickes fast to the worde of God, and reckeneth that the holy Ghost knoweth well what hée shall speake, and will speake nothing without a great cause but that that hée speaketh, shall bée so well spoken, that you can not amende it?

How thynke you? is it sufficient to say to this poore man, S. Hierome, and all schole men say so? holde thou thy peace, bée thou content with their expositions, serch thou no further, it doth not become thée to know it?

But now, if hée wyll laye to your charge, that this thyng is opẽly writin in scripture, and the wordes of Moyses and of Paule bée playne, therfore you must aunswere to them. And it shall bée as lawful and as necessary for hym to know the minde of holy scripture, as the expositiõ of S. Hierome, or of M. Duns. Scripture saith plainly, that God doth indurate Pharaos hart, and not Pharao his owne hart. It is a new exposition, to say, I will indurate Pharaos hart, that shall bée as much, as Pharao shall indurate himselfe thorough my softnes and patience. By this rule shal Anaragoras Philosophy come in place, that shall make of euery thing what hée wyll. And where as scripture sayth, Saul, Saul, why dostte thou persecute mée? Shall bée as much to say, as why sufferest thou mée, to bée persecuted. Also the father of heauen, sent hys onely sonne into the worlde, shall bée as much to say, as hée suffered his sonne to bée sent. So that wé shal expounde all places of Scripture, to our owne purpose, and not to loke what is the sentence of holy Scripture, nor yet what the mynde of the holy ghost is: but what expositiõ will please vs best, and what will best serue to our carnall minde. Furthermore, if God doe harden mens hartes, when hée sufferreth, and when hée is softe and sheweth mercy: then did hée harden the hartes of the Iewes, whẽ he brought them out of Egypt into wildernesse: then did hée harden them, when hée brought them out of the captiuitie of Babylon, then hardeneth hée all the worlde, whom hée suffereth in great softnes and mercy. Also after your exposition, hée was mercifull to Israell, when hée sent them into Babylõ. For there dyd hée chasten them, and by afflictions prouoked them to repentaunce.

Howe the Papistes & schoolemen peruert the holy scriptures.

Likewise the father of heauen had no mercy on the worlde, whẽ hée sent his sonne, for of that hée gaue men an occasion of induratiõ. But when hée hée damneth the sinners, then by your rule hath he mercy on them, for he chasteneth and punisheth them for their sinnes. This is your rule of induration, and no mã may say against it. Miserere may not signifie to geeue grace, nor to remitte sinne, but to chastice and to scourge, and by paines prouoke to repentaunce. And indurare, shall not signifie to harden, but to suffer, and to bée patient, and to bée mer-mercifull, and not to chaſtice.

But maiſters, how was God mercifull vnto Pharao, by ſoftenes, & by ſufferaunce, whome hee chaſtened ſo ſore with ten plagues, and wyth ſuch plagues as Moyſes marueyled of? Call you that ſoftnes? was that ſuffering of Pharao? was that an occaſion of induratiō? by patience? eaſines, & by ſufferaūce? God ſend his aduerſaries of that patience, and of that ſufferaunce. I pray you, how coulde God chaſtice hym more? and yet at euery plague, he ſayth: I will indurate Pharaos hart. Wherefore Pharao had none occaſion of induration by ſufferaunce, and patience of God, but rather by his ſcourging. Wherfore there muſt bee an other ſence in theſe wordes then you doe make, and wee muſt ſeeke out an other waye to know, how God doth worke induration in mens hartes (ſuch wordes doth the holy ghoſt vſe, therfore dare wee ſpeake them.) And how hee is ỹ doer both of good and euil: and yet all thynges that hee doth, is well done. Fyrſt, you muſt needes graunt, that after the fall of Adam, the pure nature of man was corrupted by ſinne, whereby wee bee all wicked, and borne (as S. Paule ſayth) by nature the children of wrath, and as Dauid ſayth, wee are all conceiued in ſinne. Notwithſtanding, of this corrupt nature, doth God make all mē, both good and bad. Thoſe that bee good, be good by hys grace. Thoſe that bee badde, bee badde of corrupted nature, and yet God hath made them. Neuertheleſſe, by nature they are of the ſame goodnes, and no better thē nature is, that is to ſay, euill: but yet the creation of God, and his workemanſhip is good, thouth the thyng bee euill in it ſelfe, yet is Gods worke before hym, ſelfe good; though all the worlde ſay naye.

How God indurateth.

Ephe. 2.

Nowe God of hys infinite power doth rule, and guide all maner of men both good and badde, and all mē by his infinite power, are moued vnto operations, but euery man after his nature. As after your owne philoſophy, Primum mobile, by the realō of his ſwifte motiō, caryeth all the inferiour thinges with him, & ſuffereth nothing to bee vnmoued: notwithſtāding, hee moueth all thynges after their owne naturall courſe.

All thynges are ſubiect to the will of God.

So likewiſe God of his infinite power, letteth nothyng to bee exempted from hym, but all thynges to bee ſubiecte vnto his action, and nothing can be done by them, but by his principall motion: ſo that hee worketh in all maner of thynges that bee eyther good or bad, not chaunging their nature, but mouinge them alonely to worke after their nature: ſo that god worketh good, and euill worketh euill, and God vſeth them both as inſtrumentes, and yet doth hee nothynge euill, but euill is done alonely thorowe the euill man, God working by hym (but not euill) as by an inſtrument. Take an example. A man doth ſawe a blocke with an euil ſawe. The which is nothyng apte for to cut wel, and yet muſt it needes cut at the mouing of the man, though it bee neuer ſo euill, for the man in mouing, doth not chaunge the nature of the ſawe. Neuertheleſſe, the action of ỹ man is good and cunningly done, but the cutting of the ſawe is after his nature. So likewiſe God moueth theſe euyll inſtrumentes to working, and by his comō influence geuen to all creatures, ſuffereth them not to bee idle, but he chaungeth not their nature. Wherfore their operation, is a fruite conuenient for their corrupted nature, but yet there is no faulte in Gods mouinge.

Gods actiō is good.

Here haue you now, howe God workes all thynges, in all men both good and bad. But now let vs goe to the induration of them, that bee euill. Thus is it. Firſt, they bee euill by nature, and can abyde nothyng that is good, nor yet ſuffer any good to bee done. Wherefore when God the author of goodneſſe, doth any thyng, or ſayth any thyng vnto them, then are they more, and more, ſorer, and ſorer contrary vnto God, and to all hys workes, for of their nature they are ſo corrupted, and can not agree to the will of God, nor to any thynge that is good, but when it is offered them either in word, or deede, thē blaspheme they, then withstād they with all their might, with all their power, then are they prouoked of their corrupted nature to more mischief, and more, and alwayes harder and harder: As for an example, when the blessed word of God is preached vnto them, that bee wicked, to whom God hath geuen no grace to receiue it, then are they nothyng amended, but more indurated, and alwayes harder and harder. And the more ỹ word of God is preached, the more obstinate are they, and the more mischief intende they.

As ỹ faithfull take profite by the hearing of the word of God, so the wicked and vnfaithfull take hurt thereby.

Then all their study, then all their wisedome, then all their labour, then all their might, then all their power, then all their craft, and subtiltie, then all their frendes, that they can make in heauen and in earth is nothyng els but to oppresse the word of God: yea and they thinke all to litle, for ỹ more it is preached the more they grudge, and the wodder bee they. After this maner was the hart of Pharao indurated, whē that the word of God was declared vnto hym by Moyses, & hee had no grace to receiue it: then the more that Moyses laboured in the worde, the more sturdyer was hee in withstandyng of it, and alwayes harder and harder.

This is also euidently seene in the corrupt nature of man, for the more a thyng is forbydden hym, the more desireth hee to doe it. But what nēde me to goe into Egypt to fetch an exāple to proue this? Loke of mine own countreymen, if they bee not openly indurated and so blynded, that no mā is able to defend them by any reason, or law, and therefore they take them selues to violence and oppression, as Pharao dyd, whiche bee the right signes, and tokens of induration. For the more ỹ word of God is preached, and the veritie is declared vnto them the more sturdyer, and obstinate bee they agaynst it. And all their study, all their wyttes, all their counsels, all their craft, and mischief with all glosinges and lyinges, and with blasphemyng of God & hys preachers, is nothyng els but to kepe ỹ word of God vnder, and to withstand that veritie, which they know in their conscience must nedes goe forth, though all the world say nay. And therfore will they heare no man, nor reason with any man but euen say as Pharao dyd, I will not let the people goe.

But if they were not indurated, & the verye enemyes vnto the veritie, they woulde at the lest wayes heare their poore brethrē of charitie, & know what they coulde say, & if they coulde proue their saying to bee true: then if they had ỹ loue of ỹ veritie, as they haue but ỹ shadow, they would geue immortall thākes to god, & with great mekenes, and with a low spirite, receiue the heauenly verity, and thanke their brethren hartely, that they warned them of such a damnable way, now in good tyme & season. But there is no loue to the veritie, nor yet feare of God, nor regarde to the daunger of their soules. And why? For they be children of induration and of blasphemy. And therfore the more it is preached, the more are they obstinate. This is the verye induration, that God worketh in mens hartes, wherby they bee the children of darkenes.

Therefore let vs pray instantly to God, to mollifie our hard harts, for Christes deare bloud sake. Amen.

That it is lawfull for all maner of men to read the holy Scripture.

How can Antichrist bee better knowen, then by thys token, that hee condemneth Scriptures, and maketh it heresie and high treason against the kynges grace for lay men to reade holy scripture. As though it were alonely a possession and an heritage of certayne men that bee marked alonely with exteriour signes, and the truth to say with the token of the beaste: as with shauē crownes, long gownes and banes about their neckes. They that haue these tokens bē the heyres of holy Scriptures, and may reade it at their pleasure, though they vnderstand as much as a Popingaye. But holy Scripture, that is sent vs from heauen, yea and that by the sonne of God, to destroy all heresies: this holy scripture shall ingender in lay men heresie: If this bē not the doctrine of Antichrist, I know not hys doctrine. Tell mē what can bē more contrary to Christ, then by violence to oppresse the scriptures, and to cōdemne them as vnlawfull, yea and as heresie, for certaine men to reade, and to say that there bē certayne secrettes in them that belonge not for lay mē to know. And that this thing shall not bē denyde (for I know they bē slipper that I haue so doe with, and there is no holde of them) therefore wyll I recite an open acte that all the worlde doth remember.

The Pope and his clergie will not allow ỹ scripture to bee in ỹ mother & vulgar tongue of ỹ people.

This was Bysshoppe Stokesley.

A common practise of Prelates to deface the scriptures.

My Lord of Londō openly at Pauls crosse was not ashamed with intollerable blasphemes to condemne the holy testament of Christ Jesus hauing for hym, but a damnable collour and ayd a deadly reason of the deuill, that was; how there were in the translation so many heresyes, that all ỹ world knoweth that it was abhominable & and a deadly lye, though it were a lord sayde. But such probations doth God all wayes let them haue, that bē agaynst hys holy veretye. But let vs graunt that that translation was so false. Why dyd not you therefore take vpon you openly for to amend it and to set forth truely the holy testament of Christ. You must nēdes graunt that there is an holy testament, of his in earth (except you will denye Christ, as I doubt not but that you will in effect) Wheare is it? Why haue we it not? If that weare not it? Why doe not you set ỹ very true testament out.

The clergie were more willing to finde faulte with the translating of the Scripture then to amende it.

W. Tyndal

You were ready to condemne an other mans faythfull labour and diligence: but you had no charytie to amende it. You thinke alwayes to disceaue the world with your holy hypocrisy. Men bē not so blinde but that they can well indge, If you had condemned that testament all onely bēcause of errours, yet at ỹ least wayes you should both of charitie, and also of dutye haue set forth the trew text, and then would men haue thought, ỹ you condemned the other by the reason of errours. But men may now evydently sēe, ỹ you dyd not condemne it for errours sakes, (For how sholde they indge errours that bē so vnlearned) but all onely bēcause that the veritie was there in, ỹ which you could not abyde that men should knowe: & that dyd the processe of your sermon and also your tyranny that doth folow wil proue. But my Lord I say to you, and to all yours if you doē not amend it shall bē to your euerlasting damnacyon: for God will not take this rebuke at your hand. Remember that hē hath sworne (by the mouth of hys Prophet) by hys right hand, and by the myght of his strength, that hē wil defende this cause. Bē not these lordly wordes, of the eternall God, think you to make hym forsworne? Remember how the holy ghost threatyneth you in an other place saying, if a man dyd dispise the lawe of Moses, hē must without any mercy dye. Howe much more are they worthy of punishment ỹ that doe treade the sonne of God vnderneath their fēte, and despise the bloud of his testament. How thinke you is not this openly agaynst you, that condemne not all onely Christ, but also his blessed worde, & all that longeth to hym, Take awaye Christes word, and what remayneth bēhynde of Christ? nothing at all. I pray you my Lorde to whome was this worde fyrst preached? to whome was this written? all onely to priestes and not vnto lay men? yea was it not written to all the worlde? yes truely. Wherby will you conuerte a Turke or an Infidell, not by holy Scripture? When they bē conuerted, what wil you learne them? what wyll you gēue them to reade, any other thing then holy Scripture? I thinke nay. Now will you make your owne countreymen, your owne citizens,

The onely cause why the Scriptures were condemned by the Byshops.

Esay. 62.

Hebr. 10.

The wordes of God was firste written to all nations and people, and not to priestes onely.

your owne subiectes, yea your owne brethren, redemed with Christes blessed bloud, worse then Iewes and Infidels: But there is no reason, nor no brotherhod, nor no Christen charitie that can moue you, or that can helpe you, for you are so blynded and so obstinate against Christ, that you had rather all the worlde shoulde perishe, then his doctrine shoulde bee brought to light: but I doe promyse you, if God doe spare mee lyfe, and geue mee grace, I shall so set it out, if you dog not reuoke it, that it shall bee to your vtter shame and confusion: finde the best remedye that you can. I doe beleeue stedfastly, that god is mightier then you: and I doe reckon and faythfully beleeue, that you are ten tymes worse then the greate Turke: for hee regardeth no more but rule and dominiõ in this worlde: and you are not therewyth content, but you will also rule ouer mẽs consciences, yea and oppresse Christ and his holy worde, and blaspheme and condemne his worde. Was it not a holy counsell of the Chauncelor of London, to counsell a certaine marchaunt to buye Robyn hode for his seruauntes to reade? What should they doe wyth vitas patrum, and with bookes of holy Scripture? Also the same Chauncelour sayde to an other man: what findest thou in the Gospell but a storye? what good canst thou take there out.

The Bysshoppes worse then the great Turke.

A worshypfull counsell of an vnpreachyng Prelate.

O Lord God where art thou? why sleepest thou? why sufferest thou this blaspheny. Thou hast defended thy Prophetes with wild fire from heauen, and wilt thou suffer thy onely sonne and thy heauenly worde, thus to bee despised, and to bee reckened but as a storye of Robin hode. Rise vp good Lorde. Rise vp, thy enemyes doe preuayle. Thy enemyes doe multiplye, shew thy power, defend thy glory. It is thy contumely and not ours, what haue we to doe with it but alonely to thy glory. Reuenge this cause or thy enemyes shall recken it not to bee thy cause. O thou eternall God thoughe our sinnes haue deserued this, yet looke on thy name, yet looke on thy veritie. See howe thou art mocked. See how thou art blasphemed, yea & that by them, that haue taken on them to defend thy glory. But now heauenly father, seeyng that thou hast, so suffered it: yet for the glory of thy name, geue some man strength to defend it, or els shalt thou bee clearely taken out of the hartes of all men. Wherefore most gracious Lord, of thy mercy and grace I beseech thee, that I may haue the strength to defend thy godly worde to thy glory and honour, and to the vtter confusion of thy mortall enemyes. Helpe good Lorde helpe, and I shall not feare a thousande of thyne enemyes. In thy name will I begyn to defend this cause.

The earnest zeale of Doctour Barnes.

First commeth thy faythfull seruaunt Moses, true and iust in all thy workes, and he commaundeth faithfully & truely, with great threatnings that man, woman and child shoulde diligently read thy holy worde: saying. Set your harts on all my wordes the which that I doe testifie vnto you this day, that you may commaunde them vnto your children, to keepe, to doe, & to fulfill all thynges that bee written in the booke of this law. Marke how hee commaũded them, to learne their children all thynges that bee written in this booke, and so to learne that they might keepe and fulfill all things that were written in ỹ booke: Moses made nothing of secretnes, & will you make secretes therin? how shall men fulfill those wordes that they knowe not. How can men knowe the very true way of God & haue not the word of God? is not all our knowledge therin? The Prophet sayth, thy word is a lanterne vnto my fete and a light vnto my pathes. Hee calleth it a lanterne and light, yea and that vnto all men: and you call it but a storye, darknes, and a thyng of secretnes, yea and occasion of heresie, how can the occasion of darknes geue light, how can a lanterne bee a thing of secretnes, how can the veritie of God bee occasion of heresie? The holy Prophet sayth, blessed is the man that setteth his delectation in the will of God, and his meditation in Gods law night and day.

Here

Here sayeth the spirite of God, that men bee blessed, that study the word of God: and you say that men bee heretickes for studying of it. How doth the spirite of God and you agree?

Ephes. 6. Also S. Paule commaundeth vs to receiue the helmet of health, and the sword of the spirite, the whiche is the worde of God. I pray you to whom doth hee here speake? to Priestes onely? How many of your Priestes dyd hee knowe? yea was not this Epistle written to the whole Churche of the Ephesians? And dyd not they reade it? were not they lay men? and why shall not our lay men reade, that they red? Moreouer doth not Paule call it the sword of the spirite: is it not lawfull for lay men to haue the spirit of God? Or is the spirite of God not free but bound alonely to you. Also S. John sayth, if any man come to you & bring not this doctrine, receiue him not into your house nor yet salute hym. Here the holy ghost would we should haue no other doctrine, but holy scripture: and you will take it alonely from vs. Furthermore this was written vnto a woman and to her children and you will ỹ no other man, wyfe nor childe shall reade it. But if we should receiue your Priestes into our houses, after this rule: I thinke we should not bee greatly cõbered with them, for their are few of them that haue this worde. Also our M. Christ saith vnto the pharisies, search you scriptures, for in them you thinke to haue eternall life. Our Master sent the Pharisies to scriptures, and you forbyd Christen men to reade them: who had worse spite then they? and yet they iudged better of holy scriptures thẽ you doe. For they iudged to haue lyfe in thẽ, & you iudge to haue heresyes in thẽ: so that you bee ten tymes worse to scriptures, thẽ euer were they. Also Paule saith, all scripture geuen by inspiration of God is profitable to teach, to improue, to enforme, to instruct in righteousnes, that the man of God may bee perfect, and prepared vnto all good workes. You will not denye but but scripture is geuẽ vs of God? Ergo it foloweth. &c. S. Paul saith it is profitable to learne with: and you say that it is dawnable & good to learn heresies with. S. Paule sayth it is good to improue heresyes, and you say it engendereth heresyes. S. Paule sayth it is good to informe, and to instruct righteousnes: and you say to enforme heresies. S. Paule sayth that the man of God may be perfect by it, and you say that the Priestes al onely shal haue it, so that you play ouerthwart with S. Paule in all thinges. Also S. Paule sayth, you may all interpretate scripture, one by one, that all men may learne, and all men may haue comfort, but let your wyues kẽpe silence in the congregation. Marke how that all men may prophesye: which S. Augustine doth declare, for interpretating Scriptures. Therefore, it belongeth not all onely to priestes. Also hee sayth that women must hold their peace, which hee nede not to cõmaund if they were vnlearned.

Furthermore hee will that womẽ shall learne of their husbãds at home: How shall their husbandes learne them if they bee vnlearned thẽselues? Also S. Paule geueth testimony of Tymothy that hee was learned in holy scriptures, from his childhode, the which were able to instruct hym vnto saluatiõ, by fayth that is in Christ Iesu. Here ye not how Tymothe was learned in holy scriptures before hee was eyther priest or byshop, yea being but a childe? the which as S. Paule sayth, weare able to enstruct hym, and you say they bee able to condemne mẽ. Is not this cleane cõtrary against S. Paule: are you not ashamed? What workes shall Antichrist doe more cõtrary to Christ thẽ these bee? let all christẽ men write the dedes of Antechrist & they must all agree in this that hee shal condemne scripture. But that shall he not doe, without some colour of right and of holynes: and you condemne it hauyng no colour, nor no shadow of holynes, but all onely reason of fleshlynes, and of starke madnes. Thinke you if the great Turk would receaue such reasons as yours bee, yea and a great deale better agaynst hys Mahomet, that hee coulde raigne so Papistes & S. Paule are contrarye.

2. Tim. 3.

A godly saying of S. Jhon.

The Pharisies iudged better of the scriptures of God, then our Byshops dyd.

2. Tim. 3.

One of the chiefest workes of Antichrist is to condemne the scriptures of God.

long as hée hath done.

Nay doubtles, and yet you loke to bée alowed agaynst Christ, the ryght sonne of God (yea and that of Christen men) which coulde not bée hard agaynst mahomet.

Mar.vlt. Mat.vlt. Also our M. Christ commaundeth his Apostles that they should preach ỹ Gospell vnto all creatures, & as Mathew sayth, that they should teach mẽ to kéepe all manner of things that hée hath cõmaunded them: Marke that the Gospell, must bée preached to all manner of men not to priestes onely, the Apostles must also learne to kéepe all thinges of the Gospell, which they can not doe without they know them no if these thinges that the Apostles: dyd learne should ingender or be any occasion of heresies, then the holy Apostles were occasion (by theyr doctrine) of heresies. Yea and that at the commaundement of our M. Christe, what néede the Apostles to learne vs any thing that might bée occasion of heresie: were wée not in heresie béfore they came: were wée not all disposed of our nature vnto all maner of mischiefe: and yet after your learning they come and learne that thing that is occasion of heresie. But of your conscience, are you not ashamed, thus damnably to blaspheme the heauenly worde of God: thus shamefully to cõdemne Gods worde: thus presumptuously to vndertreade the gifte of ỹ holy ghost: yea and thunder the prétéce of holynes, & of Christẽdome, as though you dyd fauour Christ. Will you make Christ an auctor of heresy, and that vnder the name of holynes: will you by your holynes, and your damnable hipocresye, condemne our M. Christ, the auctor of all godnes: But briefly if you woulde teach nothing, but that which our M. Christ hath left to bée taught, we should not haue so many heretykes as we haue. For nowe men bée no heretykes for speking agaynst Scripture (for you graunt that men speak scripture) but for speaking agaynst your law: for ỹ cause bée they made heretykes, and by ỹ bée they proued heretykes. Now let euery Christen man Judge in hys conscience if this bée right or lawfull. Is not this a merueilous thing, let a man liue in fornicatiõ, in whoredome in theft, in murther, drunkennes, in extortyon, in bribery, briefly in all mãner of mischyfe, and you will haue nothing to doe with thẽ, you will scarsly reproue hym: yea hée shall bée a great officer vnderneath you, & greatly in your fauour. But let a man come and preach ỹ very true Gospell of Christ, and thereby reproue your damnable lyuyng, and thẽ begynneth hée to bée an heretycke, & it shall cost you great labour, if you make hym not an heretyke in déede. And yet haue you nothing that you can reproue in hym as concerning hys lyuyng, but all onely that hée preacheth the Gospell. Is not thys a merueilous heretyke: whose lyuyng you must néedes graunt to bée good. And also you can not proue, but that his learning is of Christ: but all onely that it pleaseth you not: no you dare not take in hand to proue it false but all onely by violence you will condemne it. Thinke you that God will thus suffer: remember what hée sayth by the holy Prophet: Thou hast reproued the vnfaythfull people, & hast destroyed the wicked, and take away their name for euer. The Lorde hath prepared his throne of Judgmẽt, doubt you not but hée shall shortly reproue you. His trone is set, & to the Judgemẽt must you come, where you shall neuer bée able to defẽd this cause, but you must perishe for euer. But here will you say that you preach the Gospell to the people, and that is inough: for they néede not to haue it in Englyshe. I aunswere, I pray you when was there any lawe that euer men were bounde to kéepe, but that it was geuen them in wrighting: I will not say that you doe not teach them the right Gospell, for you know it not. But how are they able to beare away that thing ỹ they doe but heare: And if they may heare it of you, why may they not also reade it: But loke on S. Luke that wrot his Gospell that men might know for a certayne, those thinges that they were informed of.

Papistes abyde the true preachers of the Gospell.

The noblest of Thessalonia, whiche receiued the worde, searched the Scriptures daily, whether those thinges that Paule preached were so or not, here haue you playne that lay men searched Scriptures to knowe whether Paules doctrine were true or not, and also how they read daily Scriptures. Here will I recite how a great prelate of Christ Churche (the first letter Doct. Allen expounded Scripture. of his name is Doct. Allen) did interpretate and declare certaine places of Scripture, to the ghostly instruction of Christes Churche as all men may iudge.

The first place was this a threfold cable is hard to breake, by this threfold cable, he vnderstode, the Reuerend father in God my Lorde Cardinall. The first fold was, that he was
A Popish Doctors interpretation. an Englishmā borne, the which was a strong thing and hard to withstand. The second fold was that he was Legate, that not after the common maner, but Legatus a latere, this is sprōg out of the blessed side of our holy father the pope. This was a strong fold and could not be lightly broken. The thyrd fold, he was a Lord and that of A foolish tale of a tubbe. the kinges counsel. This was a strōg fold, and all these three together dyd make so strong a cable that no man within the Realme might breake it or withstand it. I was sore afrayde that he should haue reckened the noble & the royall bloud, that this threfolde cable dyd spryng out of, then had it been so strong, that the strongest Dre in the butchers stall could not breake it. This exposition dyd I here and fat by hym, therefore I can testifie it the better.

The seconde Scripture was this from Syon shall come out a law, and the word of God frō Jerusalem. This did he expounde on this maner. The commaundement of the most reuerēt father in God Lord Legate, is come from his highe Palace, and from his noble grace hither vnto you.
The Papisticall and playne doctrine of Papistes.

The thyrde Scripture, was this Sumite Psalmum & date tympanū, this dyd he expounde on this maner, I haue done my visitatiō, now geue me my money. How thinke you by this holy Doctour, and this Prelate of Christes Church hath he not wel declared holy Scripture, is he not worthy to be beleeued? What reasō were it that lay men shoulde searche Scriptures, then might they reproue this noble prelate? what other ware that? It were right if he were well serued ỳ he had a threfolo halter to stretche him in. But by such doctours as these be, must the poore people be ruled & if they wil search for the veritie themselues, then must they be heretickes bycause they will not beleeue these holy fathers. But let vs proceede in our matter agaynst these blasphemers of Gods word: Priscila & Aquila dyd expound vnto Apollo which was a great learned man ỳ perfite vnderstanding of scriptures. These were lay persōs and yet were they so learned in scriptures ỳ they wer able to teach a great Doctour. And now lay men may not read Scriptures? This was alowed by Peter, and Paul. But their successours will condemne it as heresie.
Authorities to proue that the scriptures ought to bee in the mother tounge.

Actes. 18.

Also Eunuches that was the treasurer vnto the Quene of the Ethiopians dyd read Esay the Prophete. The whiche he vnderstode not, till God sent him Philip to declare it vnto him. This was a lay man, and also an infidell and yet was not forbidden of God to read Scriptures. But rather holpen to the vnderstandyng of them and now will you forbid Christen mē, to read holy Scriptures, that are sworne vnto them, yea and also to defende them vnto death.
Actes. 8.

Also S. Paule sayth. Let the word of God dwell in you plenteously. S. Paule woulde that lay men shoulde learne the worde of God, yea & that plenteously. And you commaunde that they shall haue nothinge of it. How standeth your nothing wyth Saint Paules aboundaunce. Aboundantly, and nothing, bée farre a sunder. But thus doe you allwayes agrée with S. Paule and with holy Scripture. And if you woulde say playnely in wordes that your déedes doe declare openly, then were wée in no doubt of you: for all ỳ worlde woulde take you, as you bée taken before God, that is, for the Antichrystes that the worlde loketh for. Neuertheleſſe, doubt you not, but God shall declare it openly at his time, to your bitter confusion and damnation. For doubt lesse you neither holde with Christ, with his holy doctours, nor yet with your owne layne, where they bée agaínst you: but all these must bée expounded and wronge vnto your carnall purpose, or els you make it herese. But thinke you that the father of heauen (which for the great tender loue, that hée had to mans soule, sent hys onely sonne to redéeme it, and also to géeue it a lawe to liue by, out of his owne mouth) shall thus suffer it lolle thorough your hypocrisie: and his godly worde to bée ouer trodden for the mayntaynyng of your worldly glory? Nay doubtles, for if it were possible that hée coulde more regarde your pompe and pryde, then mans soule and his godly word: yet were it vnpossible that euer hée should so dispise the swéete bloude of his blessed sonne swéete Iesus. Wherefore loke vppon your charge.

The Pope and hys Clergy are the very Antechristes.

August. ad fratres. ſ. 38.

But to our purpose, S. Augustine is openly agaínst you in these wordes. My brethren, reade holy Scripture in the which you shall finde what you ought to holde, and what you ought to flye. What is a man reputed without learning? what is hée? Is hée not a shéepe or a Goate? Is hée not an Oxe or an Asse? Is hée any better thẽ an Horsse or a Mule, the which hath no vnderstandyng. &c.

Here S. Augustine moueth men to reade holy Scripture: and you commaunde them not to reade it. S. Augustine sayth: they shal know in them what to doe, and what not to doe, & you say they shal learne nothing therout but hereſies, S. Augustine sayth, a mã without learning & scriptures, is no better then a brute beast: are not you good fathers that will make all your childrẽ no better thẽ beastes? Also Athanasius: If thou wilte that thy children shall bée obedient vnto thee, vse them to the wordes of God. But thou shalt not saye that it belongeth alonely to religious men to study Scriptures: but rather it belongeth to euery Christen man, and specially vnto hym that is wrapped in the businesses of this worlde; and so much the more, because hée hath more nede of helpe, for hée is wrapped in ỳ troubles of this worlde: therefore it is greatly to thy profite that thy children should both heare and also reade holy Scriptures, for of them shall they learne thys commaundement: Honour thy father and thy mother. &c.

In epist ad Epheſ. c. 6.

Scriptures teache the commaundementes of God.

These wordes bée playne inough agaínst you, they néede no exposition: And the doctour is of auctority, wherfore answere you to hym. Also Chrisostome that was a Bysshop as well as you bée, cõdemneth your sentence openly, saying: I beséeche you that you will oftentimes come hither, and that you will diligently heare the lesson of holy Scripture, and not alonely when you bée here, but also take in your hándes when you are at home the godly Bibles, and learne thè thyng therein with great study, for thereby shall you haue great aduantage. &c.

In Gen. c. 9. ho 28.

A notable saying of S. Chrisostome.

These wordes bée so plaine, that I can adde nothyng to them, woulde you that wée should take you for bysshops, and for holy fathers, that bée so openly agaynst Scripture, and so contrary to holy doctours? That will I neuer doe while I liue. I will neuer loke to sée other Antichristes then you, and so will I take you, till I sée almighty God conuerte you. Also the same doctour saith. Which of you all that bée here, (if it were required) coulde say one Psalme without the booke, or any other part of holy scripture, ſure, not one doubtles. But this is not alonely the worſte, but that you bée ſo ſlow and ſo remiſſe vnto ſpirituall thinges, and vnto deuilliſhneſſe you are héter then any fier, but men will defende this miſchief with this excuſe, I am no religious mã, I haue a wife and children, and a houſe to care for. This is ỳ excuſe wherewith you doe (as it were with a peſtilence) corrupt all thinges: for you doe reckon that the ſtudye of holy Scripture belongeth alonely vnto religious men, when they bée much more neceſſary vnto you then vnto them. &c.

The ſcripture is meete to bee knowen of all ſtates and ſortes of people.

Here may you ſée that your damnable inſtitution was in the hartes of men in Chriſoſtomes dayes, & howe they woulde reade no ſcriptures: but you ſée hée condemneth it, and calleth it a peſtilẽce, and will you now bring it in agayne? If you had but a louſie ſtatute of your owne againſt mée, or an other man, you woulde call vs hetikes. But you neither regarde Chriſtes holy worde, nor holy Doctours, nor yet any other thinge ỳ is agaynſt you. But let vs ſée what your owne lawe ſaith to this: If Chriſt (as Paul ſayth) bée the power and the wiſdome of God, thẽ to bée ignorannt in ſcriptures, is as much as to bée ignorannt of Chriſt. &c. Here haue you playnely that to take away ſcriptures from lay men, is as much as to take away Chriſt fro̅ them, the which no doubt but that you doe intẽde in your harts to doe, and that thing God knoweth, and your workes doe declare it, the which God ſhall aduenge full ſtraitly ouer you. Alſo in an other place. I will ſet my meditation in thy iuſtifications, and I will not forgette thy wordes, the which thing is exceeding good for all Chriſten men tõ obſerue and kéepe. &c.

Di. 38. Si iuxta.

7. Sinod. c. Omnes et. di. 38.

Here is a counſell of your owne that hath admitted that all Chriſten men ſhall ſtudy Scripture. And will you now condemne it? Is there neither Scripture of God, nor practiſe of Chriſtẽ men, nor expoſition of Doctours, nor your owne law, nor yet any ſtatute of counſels that will hold agaynſt you? You bée marueilous giantes. how ſhal a mã behaue him ſelfe to handle with you? it is not poſſible to ouercome you, for you wil admitte nothyng that is againſt you. But yet will I not ſo leue you, but I will firſt declare it manifeſtly, ỳ you bée cõtrary to Chriſt, and to all holy doctours. S. Hierome, reprouyth you very ſore in theſe wordes. O Paula and Euſtochium, if there bée any thyng in this life that doth preſerue a wiſe mã and doth perſuade him to abide with a good will in the oppreſſions and the thraldomes of the world, I doe recke̅ that ſpecially it is the meditations and the ſtudy of holy ſcripture, ſeeyng that we doe differre from other creatures ſpecially in that that we bée reaſonable & in that that we can ſpeake: now is reaſon and all maner of wordes cõteined in godly Scripture, whereby that we may learne to knowe God & alſo the cauſe wherefore we bée created. Wherfore I doe ſore marueile, ỳ there bée certein men the which geue thẽ ſelues, to ſlouthfulnes, & ſluggiſhnes and will not learne thoſe things, that bée good, but recken thoſe men worthy to bée reproued, that haue that good mynde. &c.

In prohe. In Epiſt. ad Epheſ. Li. 1.

What benefites we may receaue by readyng of Scripture.

Marke how that this was written to two women that were learned. Alſo hée reckeneth nothyng better, then to ſtudy holy ſcriptures, hée alſo marueileth, that certaine will neither ſtudy Scriptures them ſelues nor yet let other mẽ ſtudy thẽ. It is well knowẽ, that theſe wordes pricke no men but you, and ye bée ſo ſlouthfull & ſo geuen to voluptuouſnes, that you your ſelues will not ſtudy Scriptures nor yet ſuffer other mẽ to ſtudy them: but if you doe ſtudy them, it is to deceiue your ſimple and poore brother thereby, and to maintaine your abhominable liuing, with wreſtyng and wrynging of them: other profite commeth there none of your ſtudy, as all the worlde knoweth. For you may not preach, but when you haue damnably condemned Chriſtes bleſſed word or els by violence, made ſome of your poore brethren hetickes: then come you with all your gorgious eſtate, pompe and pride, to out face Chriſt and your simple brother, with your outward dánable pryde afore the face of the world. But my Lordes, leue of your fasting and your brasing: for our Lord whose cause we defend agaynst you, will at length not bée out faced. Remẽber how the holy ghost prayeth Psal. 5. against you saying: iudge them Lord, that they may fall from their cogitations: expell them Lord for they haue prouoked thée: doubte you not but this holy spirite will preuaile agaynst you, though God suffer you for a season, yet hath hée till this day defended him selfe & his godly wordes agaynst all the proude crakyngs of the world: and thinke you that hée wil now take a fall at your hand? nay nay, hée shall first thrust you out headlonge that all the world shall take example by you: this is my beléefe. For that word that you haue cõdemned doth thus learne me. Wherfore if you doe not reuoke the condemnation of the new Testament, and ordeine that all Christen men may read holy Scripture, you shal haue the greatest shame that euer men had in this world: for you are neuer able to defend it by any meanes, nor by any power ỳ is in earth. And if all power in earth wil withstand it, hée shall rather bryng them all to dust and raise vp of stones newe rulers.

The great arrogancy, pryde & tyranny that is in Papistes.

Doctour Barnes is behement. You wormes meate, you stinking carrion, you nourishmẽt of hell fire, how dare, you thus presume against your God omnipotent? whether will you flie to auoyde his daunger. Heauen & earth, water and fire, sunne, moone, and starres, saintes and angels, man and child, bée against you and holde you accursed. What though the deuill laugh on you for a season. Remember the ende, but God geue you hys grace, that I lose not my labour about you.

The Papistes first reason to prooue that lay men ought not to read Scriptures. But now let mée assoyle your carnall reasons that you bring for you. The first is this, euyll men doe take an occasion of heresy out of scriptures Wherfore it is best they haue it not. I aunswere lykewise, good men doe take an occasion of goodnes there of Ergo, the people ought to haue it: but will you condemne all thinges where by men doe take occasion of euill? Thẽ must you first put out your own eyes for by them, take you occasiõ to sée many idle thinges: you must also destroy your handes, your féete, your tongue, and al that you haue for these doe you mysuse very often, you must also destroy your own harts whereby you haue not alonely occasion of euil, but you doe thinke euil in very déede: you must also destroy all fayre womẽ, for of them take you sore occasions of euyll: you must also burne all your goodes and destroy all your riches, for of thẽ men take occasion to be théeues and you to bée proud: you must also destroy all wynes, for of thẽ men take occasiõ to bée drõkẽ, you must destroy all meates, for they géeue mẽ occasiõ of gluttony, yea you muste destroye the mercy of God, of the which euell men take boldenes in their mischief. Briefly what is there so good a thing but that euell mẽ can take an occasion of euill, yea and that of Christ hym selfe, as Saint Paule saith which vnto the Iewes is offence, and vnto the Gentyls occasion of folysshnes: & yet for al this you may not destroy Christ but hée must remayne still, and so likewise the Gospell: for though that the euell men (which will neuer bée good) receiue of it occasion of euyll: yet ther bée many thousandes ỳ receaue there by their saluation.

Euill men will take occasion of euill of euery good thyng.

1. Cor. 1.

Now bécause the spider gathereth poyso̅ of ỳ good herbes, it were no reason therfore to destroy al good herbes.

Another of your reasõs: thére bée certayne sẽtences in scripture ỳ doe not belõg for euery man to know, as our M. Christ sayth, vnto you it is geuẽ to know the misteries of the kingdome of heauen, vnto them it is not geuen. I aunswere, whom meane you when you say, vnto you it is geuen: if you meane that Apostles & all onely there successors, then may not you reade holy scripture, for you bée not the successors of ỳ Apostles, by my Lord of Rochesters auctorytie, but if you meane the Christẽ people, that haue ỳ spirite of God, as our M. Christ ment, then bée you excluded, for you haue not the spirite of God as ỳ effect doth declare,

Math. 13.

Another reason of the Papistes.

therfore

therfore you may not read scriptures. Marke also that our mayster saith, vnto you it is geuen, as who sayth if it were not geuen you, you shoulde no more haue it then other men.

Now how can you proue that the vnderstanding of scripture is geuen to you: but now to ỳ text: our Master Christ speaketh heare of the spirituall, and the right vnderstanding of holy scriptures, which is the gift of God onely, and hee speaketh not of studying or reading of holy scripture: for you haue in the same place, how that many dyd followe him, and heare his preaching, but yet they vnderstode him not. Therefore this text maketh directly against you, and your workes doe declare that you bee the hearers & readers of the worde of God, but the vnderstanding is not geuen you. But now will my Lord of Rochester saye that you haue the very vnderstanding as holy doctors had it, for though that scriptures in themselues and of their owne nature bee plaine & best to bee knowen, yet bee ỳ holy doctors playne vnto vs: wherefore hee that will vnderstand scripture must fyrst learne to vnderstand the doctours, & they shal bring hym to the true vnderstanding of holy scripture, or els hee must erre. I aunswere: O my Lorde doe you wryte this with a safe conscyence? thinke you ỳ you can discharge your conscience before the dreadfull face of Christ with this trifling distynction, Quedam sunt notiora nobis, et quedam notiora naturæ, I pray you if you will proue that God were wise, would you begin to proue it at your wisedome? if you would proue that God were alyue, woulde you proue it by that ỳ you bee alyue? if you would perswade a man to beleeue that there is a God, would you learne hym, that hee must needes beleeue it, because ỳ there bee creatures? These thinges bee best knowen vnto you, and if you woulde proue that a man hath a true sence of Scriptures, will you proue it, by that that hee hath the sence of the doctours? What if ỳ doctours had taken a false and a contrary sence, (this case is possible) would you therefore say that the sence which the mã hath take out of scripture is false. But I pray you my Lorde, after this this rule, how could men vnderstand scriptures, in Peter & Paules dayes when there weare no doctours. But after your owne learning, that same science which must proue the principelles of other sciences is fyrst knowē actualiter, & distinctly. Now bee all the principels of all other doctours proued trew by holy scripture: therefore there is no saying nor exposition of holy doctours ỳ can bee perfectly knowē except that scripture bee fyrst knowen this is your owne dyuynitie you can not denye it, wherefore if you will proue that you haue the verytie you must proue it, because you haue the sence of holy scripture, and not the sēce of holy doctours. But doubtles I haue great meruell, that my Lord of Rochester, is neyther ashamed of mã, nor yet afrayde of the vengeance of God ỳ thus trifleth wt holy scripture.

Scotus. 11. Sent. di. 3. q. 3.

Besides this you haue an other bauld reason, the Citie of London hath certeine priuileges and secrete counsels, it were no reason that all men should know them, this was my Lorde of Londons reason at Paules crosse, when hee condemned the new Testamēt. I aunswere my Lord: say of your cōscience, did you not speake these wordes to please my Lorde the Maior of London and his brethren? But I pray you is this a like similitude of ỳ certeine counsels of mē, the whiche must bee kept secrete bycause they bee coūseis: and of the holy scriptures the whiche were brought into this world not to bee kept secrete, but to bee preached openly, as our maister Christ commaundeth, preach the Gospell to all creatures, heare you to all creatures, let these mē haue it (for all these bee of ỳ counsell) & keepe you it from the resdue. Furthermore our maister Christ saith in an other place, that I haue shewed you in secretnes, preach it on the tope of the house.

Also S. Paule sayth, the Gospell is declared openly through preachyng & in an other place God haue brought life and immortalitie, vnto light thorough

What is meant by this saying, to you, is geuen the true vnderstyng and interpretation of scriptures.

Scriptures must bee first knowen & then by you may iudge the opinion of the Doctours, whether they say right or not.

A third reason of the Papistes.

Counsailes are to bee kept secret, but the Scripture must bee made knowen to all men.

rough the Gospell. Also our maister calleth it the light of the world: nowe who will set (as he saith) a light vnder a bushell, and not rather openly that all mē there by may be lightned. Wherfore my lord your similitude is very far vnlike: and if you were not a Lord, it were worthy to be despised.

A foolishe similitude made by Stokesley Bysshop of London.

But doubtles it may wel thought that you were at a sore exigent, when you were compelled to proue this thynge with so bauld a reason. Who would haue loked for so simple a reason in so earnest a matter of so wise a man, of so great a Doctour, of so worshipfull a father, and of the Bishop of London, yea and of him that is called an other Salomon, notwithstanding such an halting similitude dyd he neuer learne in the Prouerbes of Salomon: but it had beene a better similitude, of the kings proclamatiō, which is proclaimed ỹ all men might know it and also kepe it, no man is bound to kepe it, till it be proclaimed: likewise the Gospel was geuen for to be proclaimed, and euery man is bound to kepe it. Wherfore it must needes be proclaimed to euery man, and vnto you my Lorde. I beseche God that you may be one of them of whom it is spokē, To you is it geuē to know the misteryes of God. Amen.

¶ That mens constitutions, which are not grounded in Scripture, bynde not the conscience of man vnder the payne of deadly sinne.

There are two maner of powers.

TO this article we must note that there be two maner of ministers or powers: one is a temporal power, the other is called a spiritual power:

A temporal power.

the tēporall power is cōmitted of God to Kinges, Dukes, Earles, Lordes, Barons, Iudges, Maiors, Shriues, & to all other ministers vnder thē, these be they that haue onely the tēporall sword, wherby they must order al ỹ cōmō wealth with all worldly thinges lōgyng thereunto, as ỹ disposition of these worldly goodes, who shal be right owner and who not, the probation of mens testamentes, the ordering of payments and customes, the settyng of all maner of taskes and forfaites, the correction of all transgressions, wherby the cōmon wealth, or any priuate person, is disquieted or wronged: as correction of theues, murderers, harlotes, baudes, slanderers, wranglers, extortioners, brybers, sherers, false buyers and sellers, and of all other thynges whereunto belongeth any outwarde orderyng, or any corporall payne. In thys power is the kyng chiefe and full ruler: all other be ministers and seruauntes, as Paule doth declare, saying: let euery soule be subiect and obedient vnto the hye powers. &c.

The description of the temporall power.

Also S. Peter: be subiect vnto the kyng as vnto the chiefe heade, eyther vnto rulers as vnto thē that are sent of the kyng for the punishmēt of euil doers. Vnto this power must we be obedient in all thynges that pertaine to the ministration of this present life and of the commō wealth, not alonely (as Paule sayth) for auoydyng of punishment, but also for discharging of our consciences: for this is ỹ wyll of God. So that if this power commaunde any thing of tyranny against right and law (alwayes prouided that it repugne not agaynst the Gospell, nor destroye our fayth) our charitie must needes suffer it: For as Paule sayth, charitie suffereth all thyng. Also our maister Christ: If a man strike thee on the one cheeke, turne hym the other, for he doth exercise tyranny. But ouer these worldly goods, & these present thynges, and ouer thy corporall bodye, which Christen men doe not alonely not regarde, but dispise it. Neuertheles, if he commaunde thee any thyng agaynst ryght, or doe thee any wronge. (As for an example cast cast thée in prison wrongfully) if thou canst by any reasonable and quyet meanes, without seditiõ, insurrectiõ, or breakyng of the commõ peace saue thy selfe, & auoyde hys tyranny, thou mayst doe it wyth good conscience. As if thou were in prison, if thou couldest auoyde without any sedition, thou mayst lawfully doe it, & thy cõscience is frée so doyng, and thou dooste not sinne, nor offende the lawe of God, as Paule sayth: If thou mayste bée frée vse it: but in no wise (bée it ryght or wrong) mayst thou make any resistaunce wyth swoorde or wyth hand, but obey, except thou canst auoyde, as I haue shewed thée. But if ỳ cause bée ryght, iust, profitable to the cõmon wealth, thou must obey, and thou mayst not flye wout sinne. That men haue fled from the tyranny and the wrong of thys power, wée haue it openly in diuers places of scriptures.

1.Cor.7.

Such as haue made offices to the common weale ought not to breake prison.

4.Kyng.6. As of Elezy, that fled from the tyranny of the kyng of Siria. Also Helyas fled from the tyranny of kyng Achas.

3.King.89.

Actes.12. Also S. Peter fled out of prison: And idem.9. and.14. S. Paule out of the Citie of Damascum, and out of Iconium, as it is open in the Actes of the Apostles. So that agaynst this power (though thou haue wrong) mayst thou not make any corporall resistaunce: but alonely auoyde by flying, or els kéepe ỳ thing that is commaunded thée. But if it bée ryght, and to the profite of the cõmon wealth, thou must both fulfill it and also abyde.

But here wil it bée inquired of mée of this case: if it please ỳ kinges grace to condemne the newe testament in Englishe, and to commaunde that none of his subiectes shall haue it vnder displeasure, whether they bée bounde to obey thys cõmaundement or no? To this will I aũswere: That I doe beléeue, that our most noble Prince hath not forbidden that Christen men may haue Christes Testamẽt, whether it bée in latyne or Englishe, French, Douche, Greeke, or Hebrue, for Christes veritie, is all one in all tonges. And as his grace knoweth, it were very vnreasonable that any man should eyther counsell, or forbid his grace that bée shoulde know or reade the Testament of the most noble Prince hys father, in the which is alonely gœuẽ and promised worldly goods, which as sone as they bée gœuen, bée ready to decay and to perishe: and if (I say) this bée vnreasonable and vnright: how much more were it vnreasonable to take awaye from vs our father of heauens testament, whose legacy and promises doe as farre excell the legacies of the noble Prince his father, as God doth excell man. But what should I make many reasons, to proue vnto hys grace that thyng to bée lawfull, that the father of heauen hath sent vs, frõ whom cõmeth nothyng but goodnes. Yea, and it was not sent by man, by Angell, or by Saint, but by the onely sonne of God both God and mã, and diligently declared by hym to all the worlde. Not vnto the Pharesies alone, but vnto all maner of people, and that to the houre of death, and also thereof toke his death, and not yet so content, but sent his glorious Apostles to declare and to learne thys godly worde thorough all the worlde. And bécause the ministration of thys worde, required a greater strength then was in any naturall man, therefore also gaue hée them his eternall spirite, to establishe them, to confirme them, and to make them strong in all thinges, that there might bée nothing desired, to the declaration and setting out of his worde.

What were to bee done if the kyng should forbyd vs the readyng of the Scripture.

Now, who coulde finde in his hart that is a true subiecte, and regardeth the honour of our noble Prince, and the saluation of his soule, eyther to thinke that his grace would condẽne it, or els to moue hym to condemne that thyng, that cõmeth from heauen, yea, and that frõ the father of heauen, and sent and learned by his eternall sonne, which hath sealed it wyth hys most precious bloude, and also commaunded his glorious Apostles to preach it, and confirmed it wyth so many myracles, and did also gœue to the confirming and the writing of it, the glorious consolatour of the holy Ghost. So that it is open, that the father of heauen did not send this godly worde with a small diligence, or as though hee cared not whether it shoulde remayne in earth or not. But so hath hee declared this holy worde, wyth such a processe, that heauē, earth & hell, should know ý it is his worde, and that it is his will, that all men shoulde haue it, and that hee woulde defende it, and bee enemy vnto all thē that woulde ouerpresse it. Wherfore let them that bee cappitall enemies vnto his grace, both in hart and in deede, suspect that of his grace and moue him vnto it, for doubtles I will neuer doe it. For I dare boldely say, that the deuill of hell which is enemy vnto his grace, both of body and soule will moue hym vnto no other thing but alonely so to condemne Gods worde: and this thing doth his grace know well, and therefore I doubte not but that hee hath and also will auoyde the daunger thereof. Neuertheless, it may please God to take so great vēgeaūce for our abhominable sinnes that after hys graces dayes, hee may sende vs such a tyraunt, that shall not alonely forbid the Newe Testament: but also all thynges that may bee to the honour of God: yea, and that paraduenture vnder such a coullour of Gods name, that all men shall recken none other, but that hee is Gods frende.

This will bee a great scourge, and an intollerable plague, the father of heauen of hys infinite mercy defende vs from such a terrible vengeaunce. For it is the greatest plague that can come in earth (as S. Paule doth declare to the Romaynes) when that Gods veritie is condemned in Gods name, and mē bee so blynde that they can not perceaue it, for they bee gone into a peruerse sēce. This plague neuer cōmeth, but it is a token of euerlasting reprobatiō. Our most merciful redeemer Christ Jesus, defende vs frō it, Amē. But if it come that wee must needes suffer this plague, howe shall Christen men bee themselues to this Prince, that will so condemne Gods worde? My Lordes the Byshoppes woulde depose hym with shorte deliberation, and make no conscience of it. They haue deposed Princes for lesser causes thē this is a great deale. But against them will I alwayes lay Christes facte, and his holy Apostles, and the worde of God, whom Christen men must alonely follow. Therfore, the kynges commanndement, must bee considered on this maner: If the kyng forbid the newe Testament, or any of Christes Sacramēts, or the preaching of the worde of God, or any other thynge that is agaynst Christ vnder a temporall payne, or els vnder ý payne of death: men shall first make faythfull prayers to God, and then diligent intercession vnto ý kynges grace with all due subiection, that hys grace woulde release that commaundement. If hee will not doe it, they shall kéepe their Testament, with all other ordinaunce of Christ, and let the kyng exercise his tyranny (if they can not flée) & in no wise, vnder the payne of damnation shall they withstand him with violence, but suffer patiently all the tyranny that hee layeth on them both in their bodyes & goodes, and leaue the vengeaunce of it vnto their heauenly father whiche hath a scourge to tame those bedlames with, when hee seeth hys tyme. But in no wise shall they resiste violētly, neither shall they deny Christes veritie, nor yet forsake it beefore the Prince, lest they runne in the daūger of these wordes: hee that denyeth me and my worde beefore men, I shall deny hym beefore my father in heauen. And let not men regarde this matter lightly, and thinke that they may geeue vp their testamentes, and yet not denye Christ. For what so euer hee bee that geeueth vp his Testament, as a thyng worthye to bee condemned, hee doth beefore God denye Christ, though his testamēt bee peraduenture (hee not knowyng) false and vntruly Printed, or vntruly trāslated: yet vnto him is it a true testament, and therfore shall hee not deliuer it to any that will condemne it as vnlawfull. But this shall hee doe. If any man that is learned doe finde any faulte there in hee shall bee glad to amende that faulte,

but

Note here what is to bee done if the kyng doe forbid the Scripture to bee read of his subiectes.

Subiectes must obey, but here is shewed in what sorte and maner.

Roma. 1.

Note here how a Christian subiecte must shewe himselfe obedient.

but not to suffer in any wise for that or for those faultes the whole testament to bee condemned as vnlawfull. For if that should bee suffered, then should we haue no testamēt: for there is no testament ỳ is so true, but either there bee faultes in deede, or els men by cauilations may inuent ỳ there bee defaultes. For this dare I say boldly, that the new testament in Englishe, is ten tymes truer, then the old translation in Latin is, in the which bee many places that doe want whole sentēces, and many places, that no man cā defend without heresie, as this texte. 1.Cor.15. Non omnes immutabimur. Also this. Math.20. Sedere ad dexteram meam vel sinistram Act 20. non est meum dare vobis. Also these places want. 1.Tim.6. Commorati sumus trogilij. Seiungere ab is qui huiusmodi sunt, with many other places more, that no man can say but they bee euidently false: & yet we may not burne our bookes for all that, but kepe them and amende them. Neither shall they goe about, to depose their Prince, as my Lordes the Bysshops were wont to doe, but they shall boldely confesse, that they haue the veritie, and will there by abyde: and alonely shall they praye to their heauenly father to chaunge the hart of their Prince, that they may lyue vnderneth hym, after Christes worde, & in quietnes, as Paul exhorteth vs saying. I exhorte that prayers supplications, petitions, and geuyng of thankes, bee had for all men: for Kynges, & for all that are in prehemi- 1.Tim.2. nence, that wē may lyue a quyet and a peaceable lyfe in all godnesse and honesty.

This shal men behaue them selues towarde their Prince and in no wise shall they denye Christes worde, or graunt to the burning of their testamentes: but if the kyng will doe it by violence they must suffer it but not obey to it by agreement. This may bee proued by ỳ examples of the Apostles when the hie Priestes of the temple commaunded Peter and John, that Act 4.&5. they should no more preach and teach in the name of Iesus. But they made them answere it was more right to God is to bee obeyed before mē. obey God then man. Also the Pharyses came and commaunded our M. Christ, in Herodes name, That hee should depart frō thence, or hee would kyll hym: but hee would not obey, but made them answere to Herode with a great threatning: Goe tell the wolfe beehold I cast out deuils and I make Luke. 13. men whole this day and to morrow, and the third day am I consumed: neuertheless I must continew this day to morrow and the next day &c. So ỳ hee left not the ministration of ỳ word neyther for the kinges pleasure nor yet for feare of death.

Also we haue openly, that the three children would not obey to the com- Daniell. 3. maundement of king Nabuchodonosor, but because it was against ỳ word of God. Lykewise we haue an exāple where as the king Darius commaun- Dan.6. ded that no man should aske any petytyon, eyther of God or of man within the space of 30. dayes but of hym onely. Notwithstanding Daniell wēt into his house, & thrise in a day made his prayers to God of Ierusalem, for the which thyng hee was put into the denne of Lyons, the which hee dyd obey as in suffering of the payne, but not in consenting to the vnright commaundement, So that Christen men are bounde to obey in suffering the kinges tyrānye, but not in consenting to his vnlawfull commaundement: alwayes hauing before their eyes the comfortable saying of our M. Christ: Feare not them ỳ kill the body, which Math. 10. when they had done they can no more doe. Also S. Peter, happy are yee if 1.Pet.3. you suffer for righteousnes sake, neuertheless, feare not, though they seeme terrible vnto you, neither bee troubled, but sanctifie the Lord God in your hart. And let them not feare, but God doth wōderfully worke to saue and defend hys poore flock. ỳ their father of heauen hath care for them, and shall deliuer them, and also bryngе his godly worde vnto lyght when it shall please his eternall will, agaynst the which no tyraunt is able to withstand. But when the tyrants thinke themselues most sure of the victory, and bee all ready prouided to burne Susanna, then shall hee rayse Dan.13. vp a Daniell that shall caule agayne the sentēce of the lecherous priestes:

He bringeth also to passe that proude Haman (hee hee neuer so great in the kinges fauour) shalbee hanged on his owne gallowes, that hee made for Mardocheus the Israelite. Also when Pharao hath cõmaũded vnder payne of death to destroy all ỹ mẽ childrẽ of Israell. Then cã hee finde the meanes

Did Pharao suppose this? or was there any coũsell of Pharaos that could preuaile agaynst this? was there any wisedome or tyranny in the earth that was able to extinct Moses? nay verely. Furthermore when Israel hath beene in Egypt iiij. C. yeres in great captiuitie and thraldome, yet agaynst Pharaos will keepeth hee his promise and deliuereth them, and maketh water, fire, & earth to serue thẽ: and when all Israell was in despayre and Pharao the tyraunt was ready to sucke bloud, then shewed our God his mighty power. What can Israell thinke when hee hath the read Sea before him? And Pharao with all his might and power after him, and of euery side a great mountaine? what hope hath hee by mans might, by mãs power, by mans wisedome, by mans pollicie, for to bee deliuered? none at all. But before Israels carnalitye all thyng is in extreme desperation.

Psal. 2. But now you Princes that Judge the earth learne and take heede: here commeth the God of Israell, whom all Egypt hath despised, scorned mocked and condemned, and sheweth his might where as nothyng cã helpe but hee onely, and where the tyrauntes recken to bee most sure of victorydom, there bryngeth hee all their malice to Actes. 12. an end. And when Herode hath Peter in prison fast bound in cheynes, & of euery side of him a souldier, & keepers set at the prison dore euery man in his office watching that Peter shal not escape (for Herode intendeth the day folowyng to bryng hym forth to wonderyng and also to death.) Then agaynst Herodes will, aboue all his might, aboue all his wisedome & pollicie, notwithstandyng all the souldiers and gaylers of the prison, cõmeth the power of our eternall God and leadeth Peter through the first and the second ward, yea and the brasen gate must wilfully opẽ, and let Peter out, whom our Lord God would deliuer.

Shortly, what should I bring many examples to proue Gods power & to declare how the truth of God and his childrẽ bee alwayes in persecutiõ, but the ende is alwayes glory vnto them. Wherfore this one example of our master Christ shall bee sufficiẽt to stablish & to confirme all feeble harts, & also to mollifie all stony harts, and finally to cõfound, the violẽt tyranny of mortall tyraũtes which [illegible] hape and dust, & in a momẽt bee brought to a lumpe of stynkyng carryon. Cõsider our maister Christ which is the very Math. 27. and. 28.
true sonne of God, & God him selfe & yet is hee crucified and put to death, as a seditious persõ, as a malefactor, as a theefe, as a traytor, yea and as an hereticke: hee is layd also in the graue and a great stone before the dore, & souldiours that were not of the common sort, but of the Romaines, hee set diligently to keepe the graue with all the pollicie and wisedome that the byshoppes could deuise, and all that hee should not rise by agayne according to his worde: but all this could not helpe, for the power of God woulde not bee set, his veritie could not bee proued false, his worde could not bee oppressed: but when the tyrauntes thought to make their triumphe of victory, thẽ were they most ouercõmed. For it is neither water nor fire, Sea nor land, heauen nor earth, death nor hell, that cã let God to defend his children, or to bring forth his godly word to light, and to keepe his eternall promises. Therfore let Christen mẽ not feare to keepe the worde of God, and fast there by to abyde, and not to deny it for any tyranny: for the day shall come when it shall bee greatly to their glory. And Sodome, and Gomorra shall bee more easely handled, thē such Princes, that doe persecute the holy word of God.

Now is it cleare made that we can not resist this temporall power in no wise by violēce: but if we haue wrong eyther we must doe the thing that is commaunded vs, or els flie, but if any thing bee commaunded vs that is against the word of God whereby our fayth is hurt, that we should not doe in any wise: but rather suffer persecution and also death. But against this power goeth not our article, for it cōmaundeth nothing as concerning the conscience, but all onely as concerning the ordering of worldly thinges, and therefore, it ministreth a temporall payne ouer the body onely and therwith is cōtent. Wherfore we will now speake of the other power which men call spirituall.

wee must rather suffer persecution, then in any wise resiste.

A spirituall power.

First here is to be noted that this is no power, nor none auctoritie worldly, but all onely a minist*r*ation of the word of God and a spirituall regiment, preaching the gouerning of the soule and the mynistration of ỹ spirit, hauing nothing to doe with the exterior Justice or righteousnes of the worlde, and therfore hath it no power by right and law to make any statutes or lawes to order the worlde by, but all onely faithfully & truely to preach, and to minister the word of God thee by instructing the conscience of man, nothing addyng there to, nor taking there from: but as S. Paule sayth, to abyde in those thinges that they haue learned, and that bee commytted vnto them, for. S. Paule (as hee hym selfe sayth) durst speake no other thing but those things which christ had wrought by him. For hee curseth him bee he mā or Angel that preacheth any other gospell, then hee had preached. Therefore the Prophet commaundeth vs that we should not heare the wordes of those prophetes which disceaue vs, for they speake visions of their owne hartes and not out of ỹ mouth of god, and yet speake they in the name of God. Wherefore these men so long as they speake onely ỹ worde of God, so long are they to be heard, as Christ himself, after ỹ saying, hee ỹ heareth you hereth mee: also what soeuer they say vnto you sytting in the chayre of Moses do it. On ỹ which text speketh S. Augustine, By sytting in ỹ chayre is to vnderstand the learning of the lawe of God, and therefore God doth teach by them, but if they will teache their owne doctrine heare it not, doe it not, for such men seeke that is theirs and not Christes. &c.

The Spirituall power hath no auctoritie to make lawes to rule the worlde by.

By the chayre of Moses is vnderstand the lawe of God which Moses deliuered to the Iewes.

These wordes bee playne agaynst all them that preach any thing but the law of God onely. Wherfore if these mynysters will of tyranny, aboue the worde of God, make any lawe or statute, it must bee considered after two maner of wayes: first whether it bee openly and directly agaynst the word of God and to ỹ destructiō of ỹ faith, as that statute is wherby they haue condemned the new testament, & also forbydden certayne men to preach the worde of God, hauing no trew cause agaynst them, but all onely their malicious suspectiō: also ỹ learning wherby they learne, that workes doe iustifye: moreouer that statute whereby they bynde men vnder the payne of damnation to bee assoyled of them. These statutes I say with other lyke men are not bound for to obey neither of charitie (for here is faith hurt which geueth no place to charitie) nor yet for auoyding of sclaunder, for the worde of God may not bee auoyded, nor yet geue place vnto sclaūder, for then shoulde it neuer bee preached, but it must bee facte stucke vnto: and the more that men be offended withall, and the stiffer that they bee against it, the more openly and playnely, yea and that to their faces, that make such statutes, must wee resiste them wyth these wordes: wee are more bounde to obey God then man.

Act. 5.

This is well prooued by Hilarius wordes: All maner of plantes that bee not planted of the father of heauen, must bee plucked vp by the rootes, that is to say, the traditions of men, by whose meanes, the cōmaundementes of the lawe bee broken, must bee destroyed, and therefore cauilleth hee thē blynde guides of the waye to euerlasting life, bécause they sée not that thyng they promise: and for that cause bée sayth, that both the blynde guides, and they that bée led, shall fall into the dyke. &c.

All traditions of men that are agaynst God, must bee rooted vp by the rootes.

Marke that all traditions of men, which are agaynst Gods lawe, must be destroyed. Therfore let euery man take héede, for it longeth to their charge: for both the blynde guides, and also they that bée led shall fall in the dyke. It shall bée none excuse for hym that is led, to say that hys guyde was blynde: but let them heare the worde of God by his holy prophetes,

Ezechi. 20. walke not in the preceptes of your fathers, nor kéepe not their iudgemẽts, but walke in my preceptes, and kéepe my iudgementes. The other maner of statutes bée, when certaine thinges that bée caulled indifferent, bée commaunded as thinges to bée done of necessitie, and vnder the paynes of deadly sinne. As for an example: To eate fleshe or fishe, this day or that day is indifferent and frée: also to goe in this rayment, of this colour or that colour: to shaue our heades or not: a priest to wear a lõg gowne or a short: a gray Fryer to weare a gray coate or a russet: a whyte Fryer to weare a white or a blacke: a Priest to marry or not to marry: an Heremyt to haue a beарde or not. These with all other such outwarde workes, bée thinges indifferent, and may bée vsed and also left. Now if the Bysshoppes will make any lawe or statute, that these thynges shall bée determinately vsed, so that it shall not bée lawful for vs to leaue it vndone, but that wée must precisely doe them, and not the contrary vnder the payne of deadly sinne: here must they bée withstanded, and in no wise obeyed, for in this is hurt our fayth and libertie of Christendome, whereby wée are frée and not bounde to any exteriour worke, but frée in all things, and vnto all men at all tymes, and in all maner, except it bée in such a cause where as brotherly charitie, or the common peace should bée offended. Therefore in all these thynges bée wée frée, and wée must withstand them that will take this libertie from vs, with thys texte of Scripture: Wée are bought 1. Cor. 7. with the price of Christes bloud, wée will not bée the seruaunts of men. This texte is open against them that will bynde mennes conscience vnto sinne, in those things that Christ hath lefte them frée in. Of this wée haue an euident example of Saint Paule, the whiche would not circumcise Ti- Galat. 2. tus when the false brethren woulde haue compelled hym thereunto as a thynge of necessitie, vnto whom. S. Paule gaue no roome as cõcernyng to bée brought into subiectiõ. S. Paul dyd not withstand them, bycause that Note here that thynges that of the selues are indifferent and yet are commaunded to bée of necessitie obserued, those are to bee disobeyed. Circumcisiõ was vnlaufull or might not bée vsed of Christen men, but bycause that they would haue compelled hym vnto it as vnto a thyng of necessitie, that thyng woulde not Saint Paule suffer, for that was agaynst the libertie that we haue in Christ Iesus as hée sayth here playnely. Wherfore we bée not alonely by Christe made frée from sinne, but also made frée in vsing all maner of thynges that bée indifferent, and vnto them we can not bée bounde as vnto thynges of necessitie, as on the Friday to eate fish, and thereunto bée bounde in conscience vnder the payne of deadly sinne. In this we may not obey for it is against the worde of God, not bécause it is euill to eate fishe (for in tyme conuenient and when thou art disposed it is good) but bycause that they will in this thyng bynde our consciences and make that thynge of necessitie, that God hath left frée.

Therfore speaketh Paule agaynst them in these wordes. In the latter 1. Tim. 4. dayes certeine men shal swarue from the fayth applying them selues to the spirites of errours, and doctrines of the deuill, forbidyng Mariage, and to abstaine from meates, that God hath created to bée receiued of faythfull mẽ with thanks: for all creatures of God bée good, and nothyng to bée refused that is receiued with thãkes. Marke how Paule sayth, nothyng is to bée refused that may bée receiued with thankes this is openly agaynst thē that will forbid either fish, or flesh, this day or that day, as a thynge vnright for a Christē man to eate: for as S. Paule sayth, meate doth not commende vs vnto God. Also in an other place the kyngdome of heauen is neither meate nor drinke. Therfore they doe vnright to bynde our conscience in such thynges, and to thinke vs vnfaythfull because we obserue thē not.

1.Cor.8.

Rom.2.15.

Superstition of the Monkes of the Charterhouse.

Now let our holy hypocrites of the Charter house loke on their cōsciēce, whiche recken to buy and to sell heauē, for a pēce of fish or flesh: but they recken it no vice to lyue in hatred, rāncour, and malice, & neither to serue God nor their neighbour, but with such an hypocrites seruice as they haue inuēted of their own hypocrisie, & not receiued of God. They thinke it a great perfection to abstaine from beefe and mutton, and to eate pike, tenche gurnarde and all other costly fishes, and that of the dentiest fashion dressed: but a pēce of grosse beefe may they not touche, may they not smell: for them they lose heauen and all the merites of Christes bloud. Is not here a godly fayned hypocrisie, before the world it shynneth bryght, but compare it vnto Christes Scripture and there can not be a greater blasphemy. For here in they clearely damned Christ and his ordinaunce & make that of necessitie, ỳ Christ left as indifferent. Agaynst these holy hypocrites writeth S. Paule saying, we ought not to be led with the traditiōs of men, that say touche not, taste not, handle not, which thynges perish with vsing of them, and are after the commaundements and doctrine of men: whiche thynges haue the similitude of wisedome in superstitious holynes and hūblenes, in that they spare not the body and doe the flesh no worshyp vnto his nēede.

A notable saying of S. Paule.

Here is clearely condemned all superstitiousnes, and fayned holines, that men haue inuented in eating or drinking, in touching or in handling, or in any other such, thinges not that we may not doe them, but that we doe them as thinges of necessitie and recken our selfe holy why we doe thē, and to synne deadly when we doe thē not. This is by the dānable institutions of men, The which S. Augustine condemneth in these wordes, The Apostle sayth, Touche not, handell not &c. Because that those men by such obseruations were led from the veritie, by ỳ which they were made frē, whereof it is spoken, the veritie shall deliuer you. It is a shame (sayth he) and vnconuenient and farre from the noblenes of your libertie (seeing you bē the body of Christ) to bē diseased with shadowes and to bē iudged as sinners if you dispise to obserue these things. Wherfore let no mā ouercom you (seing you are the body of Christ) that will seeme to be meeke in hart in the holynes of Aungels and bringing in thinges which he hath not seene &c.

Ad Paul. Epi. 59.

Here haue we playnely that those thynges which be of the inuention of man doe not bynde our conscience, though they seeme to bee of neuer so great holynes and of humblenes and holynes of Angels, as Paule sayth. Wherefore, let them make what statutes they will, and as much holynes as they can deuise, Inuent as much Gods seruice as they can thinke, and lye that they haue receaued it frō heauen, and that it is no lesse holynesse then Angels haue, and set thereunto all their mandamus, remandamus, excōmunicamus, sub pena excommunicationis maioris, & minoris, Precipimus, Interdicimus, & sub indignatione dei omnipotentis, & Apostolorū Petri & Pauli ligamus, with all other such blasphemies that they haue (for doubtles, if their bellies were ripped, there should bee nothing found but blasphemes of God and of his holy word, detractions, oppressions, Confusyons, damnations of their poore brethren, Other good haue we none of them, let all Christen men aunswere to this of their conscience if it be not trew) And yet are we frē in our conscience, and all these can neyther bynd, nor damne our conscience, for we are frē made thorow Christ, And in conscience not bound vnder ỳ paine of deadly sinne, to nothing that mā can order or set, except it be conteined in holy scripture.

Coloss.2.

But

Epi. ad ro propo. 72.

But in body we are bound to euery man. This doth S. Augustine proue in these wordes. Seing that we bee made of soule and of body, as long as we doe liue in this temporall lyfe we must vse to the norysshing of this lyfe, these temporall goodes. Therefore must we of that part that belongeth to this lyfe bee subiect vnto powers, that is vnto men that doe ministre worldly things with some honour, but as concerning that part, wherby we beleeue in God and bee cauled vnto hys kingdome, we ought not to bee subiect vnto any mã that will peruert that same thing in vs that hath pleased God to geue vs to eternall lyfe. &c.

Our bodyes are subiect to princes, but our soules to God.

Here is it playne, that we in conscience by Christ bee made free, & nothyng can hynd vs vnto sinne but his word onely. Now is it clearely open, that if any power of heauen, or earth, commaunde any thyng against Gods worde, or to the destruction or minishing of the same, no mã may obey in any case vnder the payne of damnation: for Gods veritie is not indifferent, to bee lefte or not to bee lefte. Agayne, if man commaunde any thyng to bee done that may bee done in time and place conuenient, if hee will binde vs vnto indifferent thinges, as vnto a thing of necessitie, then shall wee not doe it, not because it is euill to doe, but that it is damnable to bee done as a thyng of necessitie. Neuertheless, if any of these thynges bee commaunded of the Bysshops, as burdens, and as thinges indifferent, then shall wee keepe them in tyme and place conuenient, as where I may by them serue my brother, or edifie hym, or doe hym any good, or that it may bee vnto hym any meanes to come to the verity: neuertheless, at an other tyme, when I am in place conuenient, where I shall not offende my brother, nor ingender no sclaunder, nor any disquietnes in the common wealth: There may I freely, without any charge of conscience, and without all maner of sinne, breake the Bysshops commaundement. For it is but as a burden of a tyraunt, that is layde on vs, and neither helpeth to the increasing of gods honour, nor to the edifyng of our brethẽ, & they them selues kepe thẽ not. Of these speaketh our master Christ: they binde greeuous and vntollerable burdens, & lay them on mens neckes, but they themselues will not once set their litle finger to them. As for an example: To eate flesshe on the Fryday is forbidden by the Bysshoppes, now if they compell thee to it as vnto a thyng necessary, and without the which thou canst not bee saued, then shalt thou not doe it vnder the payne of sinne: but if they will haue thee kepe this as a thyng of congruence, and as a thyng that may bee an exterior meane to mortifie the bodie, or an outwarde shyne of holynes, and vnto this he will compell thee by outwarde paynes, this thyng shalte thou doe of thy charitie, because thou wilt not breake the outwarde order, nor make any disquietnesse for those thinges that neyther make thee good nor yet condemne thee before God: for as S. Paule sayth, if wee eate neither are wee the better, nor if wee eate not, are wee the worse. Allwayes prouided, that in these indifferent thynges, thou neyther set confidence nor holynesse, nor yet offende thy weake brothers charitie: for therein though thou bee free in thy selfe, & the thyng is also indifferẽt to thee, yet of charitie freely makest thou thy selfe seruaunt to all mẽ, as S. Paule saith: When I was free from all thynges, yet dyd I make my selfe a seruaunte, that I might winne many men. Note that hee allwayes speaketh of weake brethren, and not of obstinate and indurate persons, agaynst whome thou shalt allwayes withstand and defende thy libertye as hee dyd: hee is thy weake brother that hath a good minde and beleeueth the worde of God, neuercheleese, hee hath not that gifte to perceaue as yet this libertie to vse indifferent thynges freely wyth thankes. Therfore fayth and charitie must bee thy guide in all these thynges, and folowing them thou canst not erre.

When things that are indifferent are cõmaunded to bee done of necessitie then are not the same to obeyed, because the same destroyeth our freedome in Christ.

FINIS.

That

That all men are bounde to receiue the holy Communion vnder both kyndes vnder the payne of deadly sinne.

IF men had stucke to the opē scriptures of God, & to ẏ practise of Chriſtes holy church, and to ẏ exposition of olde doctours as it did bēcome Chriſten men to doe: then had it not bēne nēdefull for mē to haue taken these paynes & labours in this cause, nor yet to haue layd to their charges those thinges ẏ Antechriſt doth onely. But now seyng that they will doe the open dēdes of Antechriſt, they muſt bē contēt that I may also geue them his name. And that all the worlde may openly know ẏ Antechriſt doth raine in the worlde (yea and that vnder the name of Chriſt) I will heare set you forth an act of his which whē it is cōpared to our Ma. Chriſtes wordes I doe not doubt but all trew Chriſten men will iudge it to bē of the deuyll, as it is in very dēde, though that the childrē of the worlde doe iudge it otherwyse.

Hee that doth the workes of Antechriſt, the same is Antechriſt.

This doe I say of an acte, that the Councell of Conſtance dyd make agaynſt the moſt holy and glorious sacrament of our eternall God Jeſus Chriſt. Where in, the one kynde of this moſt bleſſed ſacrament was condēmned as vnlawfull for lay men to receiue: and ẏ euery man may know, by what auctoritie they dyd ẏ, & what thing did moue them to condemne so bleſſed and so glorious an ordinance of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, here will I wryte their owne wordes which be these. As this custome for auoyding certayne ſclaunders and perils was reſonably brought in, notwithſtāding in the bēginning of the Church this ſacrament was receiued of Chriſten men vnder both kindes, & afterward it was receiued al onely vnder ẏ kind of bread, wherefore ſeing that ſuch a cuſtome of the Church, and of holy fathers reaſonably brought in & long obſerued muſt bē taken for a lawe ẏ which ſhall not bē lawfull to repreue nor without auctoritie of the Church to chaūge it at a mās pleaſure. Wherfore to ſay ẏ it is ſacrilege, or vnlawfull to obſerue this cōſuetude or law, muſt bē iudged erronius, and they that doe pertinaciter defende the contrary of theſe premiſſis, muſt bē reſtrayned as heretikes, and greuouſly puniſhed by the Biſhops or their officials, or by them that bē inquiſitores hereticæ prauitatis, which that bē in kyngdomes or in prouinces, in theſe men that doe attempt or preſume any thyng agaynſt thys decrē, ſhall men procēde agaynſt them, after the holy and lawfull decrees that bē inuented agaynſt heretickes and their fauters, into the fauoure of the Catholicall fayth. &c.

Councell of Cōſtāce forbad the Sacramēt to bee receaued of the lay people in both kyndes.

The wordes of the councell and determination of Antechriſt.

Now wyll I exhorte all Chriſten men in ẏ glorious name of our mighty Lord Jeſus Chriſt (which is both their redēmer & ſhall bē their iudge) that they wyll indifferently heare this article diſcuſſed, by the bleſſed wordes of our Maiſter Chriſt Jeſus, whiche was not alonely of God, but alſo very God himſelfe: and all that hē dyd was done by the counſel of the whole trinitie, and not alonely by his, by whoſe counſell all counſelles both in heauen and earth muſt bē ordered, and that counſell that is contrary to it whether it bē of Sainte, Angel, or of man, muſt bē accurſed, and iudged to bē of the deuil, though they bē neuer ſo mighty, neuer ſo well learned, and neuer ſo many in multitude, for there is no power, no learning, nor yet no multitude, neither in heauen, nor in earth, nor no ieoperdies, nor no ſclaūders that may iudge Chriſt and hys holy worde, nor that they may gēue place vnto. Wherfore if I can prouue by open Scriptures, of our Maiſter Chriſt, and alſo by the practiſe of holy Church, that this counſell is falſe and damnable, then let all Chriſten men iudge which of vs muſt bē heard and bēlēued, eyther the counſell hauyng no ſcripture, yea contrary to all ſcripture, or els I that haue the opē worde of God, and the very vse and practise of the holy Apostles, & of holy church. Christ is of God, & that no mā doubteth, but ẏ holy counsell though there were fiue thousādes of bysshops, therin must proue thēselues to bē of God by the worde of God, and by theyr workes, the which they can not doe if they bē contrary to Christ and hys blessed worde.

Who ſoeuer doth alter ẏ worde of God & ſet vp theyr owne inuentions the ſame are of the deuill.

Moreouer Christ is not true vnder a condition bycause that men doe alow hym, for though all the worlde were agaynst hym, yet were hē neuertheles true, but the coūsell is not true but alonely vnder this condition bycause it doth agrē with Christes holy worde, and of it selfe it hath no veritie, but is of the deuill if it varye from Christ. Before the dreadfull trone of God shall ẏ counsell bē iudged by Christes holy worde, & Christ shal not bē iudged by the decrē of the counsell, but hē shall bē the counsels iudge: and if Christes worde condemne the coūsell, who shal appruue it, who shall 'prayse it, who shall defende it? The temporall sworde, nor the multitude of Bysshops, nor interdiction, excommunication, nor cursing, can then helpe. Wherefore, let euery true Christē man loke on this matter indifferently: it is no trifling wyth God, nor with his holy worde, for God will remayne for euer, & his holy word must bē fulfilled: and if we wil not fulfill it, hē shall vs down to the dēpe pit of hell, and make of stones mē in our stede that shall kēpe his worde. It is no light thyng, for it lyeth on the salvation and damnation both of body and soule, frō the which we can not bē deliuered, with these glorious wordes, Concilium, Concilii, Patres, Patres, Episcopi, Episcopi: for all these may bē the ministers of the deuill, yea though they were aungels. Therfore ones agayne, I doe monish and exhorte in the glorious name of the lyuing God, and in ẏ swēt bloud of Christ Iesus all true Christē men, to take hēde what they doe agaynste Christes holy word, whiche is their eternal God, their mercyfull redemer, and shall bē also their mighty and glorious iudge.

All counsailes are of the deuill if they varye frō Christe.

Gods worde is the iudge of Councels and not Councels iudges of Gods worde.

Now let vs examine the wordes of the Councell. First of all the Councell graunteth that in the begynning of the church, all Christen men were houseled vnder both kyndes, nowe would I knowe of the Councell of whom the Church had receiued this maner: of Christ or his holy Apostles (as doubtles shē dyd) then what authoritye had the Councell to chaunge the institution of Christ, and of his holy Apostles, and also the vse and practise of holy Church? was not the first Churche of God? Dyd shē not kēpe Christes institution? did shē not fulfill Christes word? Did not ẏ holy Apostles learne here so? And now shall the Councell of Constance first condemne Christ and his blessed word, & then the learnyng of Christes holy Apostles? and also the long vse and practise of Christes blessed Church, without any Scripture, without authoritie, or without any speciall reuelation frō God, but alonely for auoydyng of certeine perils? Yea and not content alonely to cōdemne these thinges but vnder the paine of heresie to cōdemne them. This is to sore a cōdemnation of Christes open worde, and of that thyng whiche they graunt that the Church dyd vse at the begynnyng.

Note here what the Councell hath graunted.

Furthermore the Councell sayth that holy fathers and the Church dyd bryng in this custome to housell laye men vnder one kinde. Are you not ashamed of these wordes? Doth not your conscience prike you thus openly to lye? yea of Christ and of his holy Church? Christes worde is openly agaynste you, and you graunt that the vse of the church was also otherwise. And as for holy fathers here may you sē what they say to it, but you are the children of the kyngdome of lyes: and doubtlesse if you bryng not forth the holy fathers that make for you, you shall not alonely bē taken for abhominable and open lyers, but also for shameful and detestable sclaunderers both of holy Church, and also of holy fathers.

The Councell doth shamefully bee lye both the fathers and the Scriptures.

But it is no wonder, for Antichrist must declare him selfe openly to bē agaynst Antichrist doth at all tymes declare hym selfe to bee agaynste Christ.

gaynst Christ, & yet is hée neuer without an excuse, and a shaddow of holynes, wherby hée may blynd the poore people. But what excuse had hée here in the Councell to cõdemne Christes worde? That they might auoyde certaine sclaũders and perrils, & bécause that there is no body without blood. Bée not these lawfull causes to condemne Christes open worde, yea and that vnder the payne of heresie? Is not this a new maner of law to make that hée that will not obeye a statute made agaynst Gods worde, which hée is boũde to obey vnder payne of euerlastyng damnation, alonely for auoydyng perrils to bée condemned for an heretick?

New doctrine made by Antichrist.

Briefely by this reason may they condemne all holy Scripture, by layeng ieoperdies & perrils thereto, they may condemne all the creatures of God, for there may hée peril in vsing of them all. But what néede many wordes to proue this Councell to bée of the deuill? for if that bée not of the deuill that is contrary to Christ, and hath no excuse for it but alonely to auoyde perrils, I cã not tell what is of the deuill? I am sure Antichrist shall neuer bée without some carnall excuse, for if hée will deny Christ to bée both God & man, hée shall haue stronger carnall reasons for him then the Councell hath for this: but this matter must not bée iudged by carnal reasons. It is Gods worde that is aboue all creatures: wherefore let vs goe to the Scriptures as a sure ancore to ouercome Antichrist with all his carnall reasons.

What soeuer is contrary to Christ, the same is of the deuill.

First our maister Christ when hée dyd institute this blessed Sacrament did vse these wordes, take it and eate it, this is my body. &c. Likewise takyng the challice hée gaue thankes & gaue it vnto them saying, drinke all of this, this is my bloud of the newe testament the which shall bée shed for many into remission of sinnes. These bée playne wordes drinke of it all: hée that sayth all excepteth no man. Furthermore hée knewe that there might bée ieoperdies in the receiuyng of it & yet hée sayth drinke of it all, for it is my bloud that shall bée shed for the remission of sinnes.

Math. 26. Marke. 14. Luke. 22.

Christes institution of the Sacrament of his body and bloud.

Now was it not shed for lay mens sinnes? why shal they not then drinke of it? The maister and the Lord sayth drinke therof: and shall the miserable seruaunt withstand his commaundemẽt? yea commaunde the playne contrary and say drinke not therof?

But now commeth my Lord of Rochester (which perceiueth that the Councel is conuict in that, that it consenteth that the whole Church in the begynnyng did receiue this Sacrament vnder both kyndes, and yet forbideth that same thyng, and sayth to mainteine this errour, that Christe spake these wordes, drinke of it all, alonely to his Apostles (for there were no other men there but the Apostles) and therfore they must alonely drinke therof.

Rochesters glose vpon Christes wordes.

I aunswere: My Lord if this thing were alonely lawfull vnto the Apostles, how will you discharge the primatiue Churche, in the whiche were those men that Christ ministred this Sacrament vnto? yea & the selfe men did minister it vnder both kyndes to the whole congregation accordyng to this commaundement drinke of it all. Dout not but they vnderstode Christes will as well as you in this commaundement.

But in the way of communication let vs graũt you, that to the Apostles this was onely sayd, how will you thẽ discharge your owne Priestes from deadly sinne, the which receiue it vnder both kindes, and yet bée they neither Apostles nor successours of thẽ, but after your own learnyng the Bishops alonely bée their successours, & the Priestes doe represent vrty. Disciples. Shal they in this thyng represẽt the Apostles, and in absolueyng from sinne but the Disciples? But let vs sée farther in your forfetched reason: tel vs how and by what authoritie (your highe pollitike rule saued) that you dare geue either of these kindes to the laye men, seyng they were both alonely geuen to the Apostles, for euẽ by that authoritie that you haue power to take away the one kynd, by that ſelfe ſame haue you power to take away the other, for they were both geuen at once and indifferently to the receiuers, ſo that as many as receiued the one, receiued alſo the other, and to them that hee ſayd take and eate this, this is my body, to them hee ſayd, drinke all of this. &c.

Now if you may thus take away ỹ partes of ỹ ſacramentes at your pleaſure, ỹ cõſequent ſhall bee, ỹ incontinuance all the ſacramentes ſhalbe deſtroyed, and Chriſtes word ſet at naught. Wherefore my Lord this blaſphemous euation will not helpe you: but ſuch ſhamfull ſolutions muſt they vſe that will be agaynſt the open worde of God. Amend your conſcience my Lorde, for if you doe not remẽber the terrible wordes of ỹ Prophet: hee ſhall ſhake his ſword & bend his bowe & make it al ready & therein hath hee prepared the ſhot of death, & his arrowes for to burne. This is no ſmal threatning nor lightly to auoide.

D. Barnes is playne with the Byſhop of Rocheſter.

But let vs ſee what the ſcriptures ſay, that which I gaue vnto you I receaued of ỹ Lord. Marke. S. Paules wordes how hee receaued this thyng of the Lorde. &c.

The Lord Jeſus the ſame night in ỹ which hee was betraied, toke bread and thanked, and brake it, and ſayde. Take ye and eate, this is my body which is broken for you: this doe yee in the remembraunce of mee. After ỹ ſame manner, hee toke ỹ cup & ſaid, this cup is the New teſtament in my bloud: this doe, as oft as you drinke in the remembraunce of mee: for as often as you ſhall eate this bread and drinke this cup, you ſhall ſhew the Lordes death tyll hee come. Marke diligently how S. Paule declareth, how the Lord Jeſus Chriſt dyd inſtitute this bleſſed and comfortable ſacramẽt in both kindes, and in both kindes dyd myniſter it hymſelfe, and not that all onely, but alſo enacted this cõmaũdement to all Chriſten people which muſt receiue it. This doe as often. &c. Yea and this commaũdement is geuẽ after the Sacrament is miniſtred in both kindes, Teaching vs that in both kindes the Lord hath inſtituted this Sacrament to bee receiued, and alſo that they ỹ ſo receaue it not, breake this commaundement of the Lorde. This doe as often. &c.

S. Paule ſetteth forth the inſtitution of Chriſt.

This commaundement, S. Paule did not lightly let ſlyp, but hee knew that it was the ordinaunce and ỹ commaundement of the Lord: and alſo knew ỹ one iot or tytle of his wordes ſhould not, nor ought, nor can not bee let ſlip, without perrell of the ſoules of them ỹ ſo littell makes of his word. And therfore hee durſt not, nor would not (and yet hee had as great auctorite as the counſell of conſtance) let ſlip or tranſpoſe the inſtitution and commaundement of the Lord, but wholy and fully with all diligence hee wrote thoſe wordes vnto all the whole congregation of the Corinthians, not to the miniſters or prieſtes all onely, but to the whole congregation, that is as well to the myniſters of the Lord as to lay men: and alſo the contrary, for hee ſayth when you come togither: & that you may perceaue ỹ hee ſpeakes indifferently, hee there reproueth thẽ that tarryed not for ỹe men. And alſo theſe wordes bee playne, who ſo euer ſhall eate of this bread and drink of this cup worthely. &c. Now vnto this whole congregatiõ (I doubt not but by ỹ ſpirit of the Lord which ſawe beefore this damnable errour to bee inſtituted of antichriſt and his bery & all onely myniſters) hee ſayd drinke you, yea and to reprone and manifeſtly to declare this open errour, hee adeth this worde, Cuppe, ſignifying and teaching that Chriſtes ordinaunce is not to receaue the bloud in the body onely, but to receaue the bloud after his inſtitution) by it ſelfe out of the cup, leſt they ſhould bee found correctours and blaſphemers of the holy inſtitution and commaundement of the Lord, Of whom S. Paule receaued this cõmaundemẽt, and of no coũſels.

Chriſtes bloud is not to bee receaued in his body onely, but in the cup.

Now what Chriſtẽ man can doubt but our M. Chriſt (to whom all thing is bare and open both things preſent & alſo to come) knew that there was bloud in his owne body. Alſo Sayne Paule his ſcholer which learned this leſſon of hym was not ignorant that there

there was bloud in his body. And yet firſte our maiſter Chriſt gæueth his bloud alone by it ſelfe out of the cup. and his diligent ſcholer knowyng the doctrine of his maiſter dyd the ſame, regardyng his maiſters doctrine and preferring it before his carnall reaſō, which knew that there was bloud in euery body, but his maiſters doctrine taught him that his maiſter kept not his bloud in his body, but for vs loſt and damned perſons for our innumerable deteſtable (and aboue all capacitie to declare) damnable and abhominable ſinnes, brake his body & ſhed his bloude thereout plenteouſly, and therewith made ſacrifice and ſatisfactiō for all our ſinnes, as Saint Iohn ſayth. The bloud of Ieſus Chriſt cleanſeth vs from all ſinne, also we are ſanctified by the offeryng of the body of Ieſus Chriſt once for all. Now that all Chriſten men which bée ſanctified by the offeryng of this body, and by ſheadyng the bloud out of this body, ſhoulde alwayes haue both thoſe partes in remembraunce, bée according as the bloud was deuided frō the body for all ſinners indifferētly that will come vnto Chriſte, and accordyng to his maiſters inſtitution & commaūdement, miniſtred this Sacrament, and also ordeined it to bée miniſtred to all men. The body by it ſelfe & the bloud by it ſelfe. That they might alway not remember alonely that our Sauiour Chriſt offered his body for vs, but also ſhed out of that ſame body his moſt precious bloud and therfore ſayth S. Paule (as his maiſter Chriſt taught him.) As often as you ſhall eate this bread and drinke this cup, you ſhall ſhew the Lordes death till hée come.

1. Iohn. 1.

Hebr. 10.

Paule miniſtred Chriſtes body by it ſelfe, and the cup of his bloud by it ſelfe to the lay and commō people.

Now my Lordes come to your counſelles. Chriſt and S. Paule defendeth thys thyng partinaciter, (as you call it) that is, ſtiffly and ſtrongly wyll they abide by it and will not reuoke it. Wherfore after the decrée of your Counſell, they bée condemned for heretickes. I can no more ſay, but God helpe them, for there is no remedy with them, but they muſt nédes to the fier, for they will not bée abiured in no wiſe. It is a piteous caſe, that two, ſo good men as theſe bée, will bée thus openly againſt the decrée of the holy counſell, yea and againſt ſo many and ſo noble fathers, and ſo great clarkes, the which knew this matter (as ye ſay) as well as they, and it is not to bée thought that the holy Ghoſt would leaue ſo many excellent and holy fathers, and great Doctours of Diuinitie, and ſo many noble Princes and wiſe men of the worlde, and bée with theſe two poore men which bée of no reputation in this worlde.

Wherefore my Lordes, procéede againſt them after the holy decrées that bée inuented againſt heretickes, ſticke not for their names, for it is neither Chriſt nor Paule that hath hurt you, you haue also condemned their learning and preuailed againſt them: why ſhould you not condemne them as well? you bée Lordes, and you haue the ſtrength and the wiſdome of the worlde with you, and as a certayne Doctour of the law ſayde: they haue no man to holde with them but a ſorte of beggers, and deſpiſed perſons of the worlde, wherfore ſpare them not, bée bolde, Implete numerum patrum veſtrorum, All tyrantes bée not yet dead.

Councell of Conſtance condemne Chriſt and Paule for heretickes.

But now, when you haue condemned them, yet haue you as muche to doe as euer you had: for your owne lawe is openly againſt you, in theſe wordes. We vnderſtand that certayne men receaning alonely the portion of the bleſſed body, doe abſtaine from the chalice of the holy bloud, the which doubtles (ſéeing I can not tell by what ſuperſtition they are learned to abſtayne) let them eyther receaue the whole Sacrament, or els let them bée forbidden from the whole Sacrament, for the diuiſion of one and of ỹ ſame miſtery can not bée done wythput great ſacrilege. &c.

De conſecra. di. 2. c. cōperimus.

The popes own lawes againſte both hym ſelfe & his Clergie.

How thynke you by theſe wordes? bée they not playne that all men ſhall eyther receaue both kyndes or none? Here haue you an other hereticke, for hée iudgeth, and ſayth that it is a ſacrilege (which is openly againſt your Counſell) to receaue it in one kynde. But paraduenture you wyll say this law was written to prieſtes: I aunſwere, to whomſoeuer it was writtē, it maketh no matter, for theſe wordes bée plaine: the diuiſion of one miſterye can not bée done without great ſacrilege. Theſe wordes bée not ſpoken of the perſons that ſhall receaue it, but of the deuiding of the ſacrament, whoſoeuer ſhall receaue it, it is ſacrilege to deuide this thynge, aunſwere you to that. Marke alſo, that your owne lawe cauleth it ſuperſtition to receaue but one kynde, and no doubt they that did receaue it ſo, were blynded by this damnable reaſon of yours, that there is no body without bloude, and yet hée calleth it ſuperſtitiō.

The popes owne lawe ſayth it is ſuperſtition to receaue but the one kinde onely.

But let vs ſée what your gloſe ſaith on this texte, it is not ſuperfluouſly (ſayth hée) receaued vnder both kindes, for the kynde of bread is referred vnto the fleſhe, and the kynde of wyne vnto the bloude. The wyne is the Sacrament of bloude, in the which is the ſeate of the ſoule, & therfore it is receiued vnder both kindes, to ſignifie that Chriſt did receiue both body and ſoule, and that the partaking thereof, doth profite both bodye and ſoule. Wherefore if it were receiued alonely vnder one kynde, it ſhoulde ſignifie that it did profite alonely but one part. &c.

The gloſer agaynſt the counſell.

Howe thinke you, doth this gloſe vnderſtand it of prieſtes onely? haue lay men no ſoules? May not this Sacrament profite them both bodye and ſoule? Marke alſo that hée ſayth it is not ſuperfluouſly nor without a cauſe receiued vnder both kyndes. Alſo an other lawe: When the hoſt is brokē, and the bloude ſhed out of the chalys into the mouthes of faythfull men, what other thyng is there ſignified, but the immolation of our Lordes body on the croſſe, and the ſhedding of hys bloud out of his ſide. &c.

De conſecr. di. 2. c. cum frangimus.

Here is it plaine, that the bloud is gēuen out of the chalys, and not out of the body, and into faythfull mens mouthes, and not alonely into prieſts mouthes. Alſo an other lawe: If that the bloud of Chriſt bée ſhed for remiſſion of ſinnes (as oftē as it is ſhedde) then ought I lawfully for to receaue it. I which doe alwayes ſinne, muſt alwayes receaue a medecyne. &c.

De conſecr. di. 2. c. Si quocienſcunq;

Here your owne lawe ſayth, that the receiuing of the bloude is a medycinall way to bée receiued of thē that ſinne: you will not denie but that lay men ſinne. Wherefore ſhoulde they not then receiue a medicyne for their ſinne? you may perceiue that thys is not alonely ſpoken of Prieſtes, but of ſinners. &c.

Popes lawe ſaith the receauing of Chriſtes bloud is medicinable

Furthermore, S. Cipzian ſayth: How doe wée [illegible] how can wée prouoke men to ſhed their bloude for the cōfeſſion of Chriſtes name, if wée doe denye them the bloude of Chriſt when they ſhall goe to battayle? Or how dare wée able them vnto the victorium of martyrdome, if wée doe not firſte by right admitte them to drincke the cuppe of our Lorde in the congregation. &c. Here is Cyprian openly againſt you which will that as many ſhall receiue ỹ bloud of Chriſt, as doe confeſſe the name of Chriſt, yea and that out of the cuppe and not out of the body.

Ad Cornelium Papam.

A goodly ſaying of Cyprian.

Alſo S. Ambroſe ſayth to the Emperour Theodoſius, how ſhalt thou lift vp thy handes out of ỹ which doth yet droppe vnrighteous bloud? how ſhalt thou with thoſe handes receaue the body of God? with what boldnes wilt thou receaue into thy mouth the Cup of the precious bloud, ſeeing that through the wodnes of thy wordes, ſo great bloud is ſhed wrongfully. &c. Marke that the manner was in Saint Ambroſe tyme that lay men ſhould receiue ỹ bleſſed bloud of Chriſt, yea and that out of the cup ſeuerally, and not out of the body onely: wherefore my Lords ſee to your conſcience, how you can diſcharge your ſelf before the dreadfull trone of Chriſt Jeſus, for making this deteſtable & dānable ſtatute agaynſt ỹ beauēly word of God, and agaynſt the vſe of holy Church, & contrary to the expoſition of all holy dōctours. It were to great a thing for you ſo preſumptuouſly to breake the ſtatute of your mortall prince, howe much more of your immortall God, which will not bée auoyded with a carnall Ecclesiaſtica hiſt.

Saint Ambroſe willeth all men to receaue the cup of the bloud of Chriſt.

The Pope and hys clergie feare not to breake Chriſtes inſtitution and ordinaunce.

nall reason, nor with condemnation of heresye, nor yet with saying there bee ieoperdies, perils, and sclaūders, for these proud crakes can not there excuse you, nor yet helpe you. For I doubt not but the great Turke hath as good reasons for hym as these bee, & also as proude crakes as you haue, though peraduenture hee vseth them not so hipocritely agaynst God omnipotent as you doe, but yet it will not helpe hym. Wherefore now most excellent and gracious Prince, I doe with all meekenes, with all due subiection admonyth & exhorte your most noble grace, yea and the father of heauen doth openly commaund you vnder the payne of his displeasure, and as you will auoyde the daunger of eternall damnation, and also by the vertue of Christes blessed bloud, and as you will receiue remission from all your sinnes thorow the merites of his glorious bloud, that you doe defēd with all your might Christes blessed worde and his swete bloud, and his holy ordinaunce, and suffer them not so lightly to bee oppressed and troden vnder the fote. Your grace may not consyder in this cause the multitude nor the dignitie of men, for you bee as good as the best of thē, but your grace must consider that it is God omnipotentes cause, it is Christes cause, it is the worde of God, it is the blessed bloud of Christ that is ouer troden, it is the ordinaunce that commeth out of heauen, and not out of counsels, yea and geuen by God hymselfe, and not by mans auctorite: And now shall your grace suffer thys thynge so lightly to bee broken, because men doe inuent carnall reason agaynst it? the deuill was neuer without a reason, but that proueth not the cause against Gods worde. King Saul had no smale reasō for hym, whē hee shuld saue kyng Agag & the best shepe and Dre to offer to God, was not this a resonable cause, to saue the beastes to Gods honour, and to offer thē vp vnto God? was it not a godly thinge to saue the kyng rather then to kill hym. What man will reken it euill to saue a mā? what man can iudge it euill to saue beastes, and that the best to offer them to God? Was not God best worthy? was not this a good consideration? was not this a good intent?

Barnes exhorteth K. Henry the viij. to restore the sincerite of Christes holy word.

1. Reg. 15.

Finally it is ten tymes better then the reason of the counsell is, and yet Saul with all his good reason, with all his good deuotion, with all his good purpose, with all his fatte beastes, is repelled of God for euer & all because hee stucke to his good intention & left the commaundement of God. Some men will thinke it but a light thynge whether they receiue the blessed bloud by it selfe, or els with the body: but as light as they thinke it, yet is it Gods word, yet is it Christes ordinaūce, yet did the Apostles obserue it, yet did the holy Church so fulfill it. And if the word of God were away, by reason it were but a light thyng to Baptise in water or in wyne, but the worde of God is open that it must be done with water and not in wyne, and yet there is no cause why, but the worde of God.

Reason and deuotion, being contrary to Gods will, is mere blyndnes & impietie.

Moreouer, by reason it was but a light thyng to say: Bee glad the daughter of Sion, behold thy kyng cōmeth to thee sittyng on an Asse & on her fole. This saying by reason is not alonely simple, but also folishe, to say that a kyng shal come riding on an Asse, yea and on a borowed Asse, and therof to make so much a doe as though it wer a notable thyng: who would not now mocke a kyng if hee dyd so ryde, notwithstandyng all this, these bee the wordes of God, yea and also fulfilled in very deede of our maister Christ in his owne proper person.

Zacharie. 9 Math. 20.

Moreouer by reason, it was but a madde token that the Sauiour of the world Christ Jesus was borne, to say you shal finde a young child wrapped in cloutes & layd in a cribbe, what is this to purpose? what is this to proue that the sauiour of the world is borne? will not reason mocke this? when will reason bee persuaded by this token the Messias (whom all the Prophetes & all the Patriarkes haue promised so many hundred yeares afore) was now borne? and yet this token came from heauē, yea and by the ministration of

Luke. 2.

The sayinges and domges of Christ are not to bee iudged by naturall reason.

aungels and the shepheardes dyd beléeue ỹ woꝛd. Briefly by reason what bée all the articles of the fayth? where is Chriſt? where is remiſſion of ſins? where is ỹ lyfe to come? Reaſon mocketh all theſe thynges but yet they bée true, bycauſe alonely ỹ woꝛd of God ſpeaketh them. Wherfoꝛe moſt noble and excellẽt Pꝛince, loke on the woꝛd of God and not of blynde reaſon, and ſaue the honour therof, foꝛ it ſhal ſaue your grace at your moſt néede.

Iohn. 6. bloud, that they doe ſée this oꝛdinaũce of the God of heauen obſerued to the vttermoſt of theꝛ power, and when ſoeuer that they will bée houſeled, that they receiue the bleſſed Sacramẽt vnder both kyndes, and at the leſt deſire it with all their hart of their curates, and ſo deſire it that they may bée diſcharged afoꝛe the immoꝛtall God of heauen whiche will not bée mocked noꝛ auoyded with a damnable reaſõ: but what ſoeuer thyng there bée that
What ſoeuer is oꝛdeined agaynſt the oꝛdinaunce of Chriſt, the ſame be accurſed. is agaynſt the holy woꝛd of God, and the gloꝛious oꝛdinaũce (what cꝑlour ſo euer it bꝛyng with it of holynes) let it bée a curſed and reckened of the deuill. This doth S. Cypriã learne vs ſaying, what thyng ſoeuer it bée that is oꝛdeined by mans madnes, where by the oꝛdinaunce of God is violated, it is whoꝛedome, it is of the deuil and it is ſacrilege. Wherfoꝛe fly frõ ſuch contagiouſneſſe of men and auoyde their woꝛdes as a canker and as peſtilence. &c.

Theſe woꝛdes bée playne of all maner of men of what eſtate what dignitie, oꝛ of what honour ſoeuer they bée, and what collour of holynes ſoeuer they bꝛyng with them. Wherfoꝛe in this pꝛeſent wꝛityng I doe counſel and exhoꝛte all true Chriſten men to take héede what they doe. The woꝛd of god is ſo playne in this matter that they can deſire it no playner. It is no childes game to trifle with Gods woꝛde: God will not bée trifled with noꝛ yet mocked. But nowe to helpe poꝛe men that bée vnlearned I will aſſoyle certeine of their damnable reaſons. The firſt is we will not geue it vnder that kynde of wyne, leſt that there ſhoulde by negligence either of the Pꝛieſt oꝛ of the receiuer, fall any doꝛoppe on the grounde. Blynd reaſons of the Papiſtes.

I aunſwere, our Chriſt dyd know that ſuch a chaunce might come, you can not deny it (except you will ſay that hée was not God, as you would not greatly ſticke to doe, if you might haue maintenaunce) and yet notwithſtanding dyd hée inſtitute it in both kindes. Aunſwere you to this. Moꝛeouer, why doe not by this reaſõ your owne pꝛieſtes abſtayne frõ the wine, ſéeing that this perill may alſo chaũce to them, as your cautelles of ỹ Maſſe doe graunt. Alſo if it bée a reaſonable cauſe that you ſhal not kéepe Chriſtes oꝛdinaunce, bécauſe of auoyding of perilles, then may you take away all the whole Sacrament to auoyde perilles, foꝛ in receauing of it in ỹ kinde of bꝛead, is ieopardous, leaſt there remayne any crumme in the receauers téeth. This reaſõ is as good as yours: ſo that now all the Sacramẽt in both kindes is taken away.

Furthermoꝛe, if you will auoyde all perilles, then may you géeue thys Sacrament to no man, foꝛ you can not tell who is in deadly ſinne & who not, foꝛ you know not their hartes: & it were a ſoꝛe perell and greatly moꝛe ieoperdye to geue the pure body of Chriſt Jeſus into a foule ſoule, then ỹ a doꝛop of bloud by negligence ſhould fall on the ground, foꝛ there falleth but a doꝛop, and here is ỹ whole body in a foular place then the ground is. Also that may bée auoyded with good diligence and wiſedome of the Pꝛieſt, but that the ſacrament ſhall alwayes bée receiued into a pure conſcience there is no dilygence of the pꝛieſt that can make it. The Papiſtes finde faulte with gnattes, & ſwallowe Camels.

How thinke you now? now is all the whole ſacrament & Chriſtes bleſſed oꝛdinaunce clearely taken away and all foꝛ auoyding ieoperdies and perrells perells. Thus trifle you with Chriſtes holy woꝛd, yea and yin your great and holy cõunsels. Other reasons my Lorde of Rochester bringeth that bee woꝛthy of go solution: foꝛ hee doth but mocke & scoꝛne and trifle with Gods woꝛd. Hee bringeth ỹ myracle of ỹ fiue loues, where there is no mentiõ made of wyne, therefoꝛe lay men muſt bee houseled in one kinde: is not this madnes? What meane these men ỹ neyther feare God, noꝛ yet bee ashamed of man? what is this to the purpose? Iohn. 6. Chriſt dyd a myracle of fyue loues, where is no mencion made of wyne: what is this to the sacrament? If the bread sygnifyed one part of the sacrament, what sygnifyed the 2. sythes & they that were there. These 2. things muſt needes signifye the other part. Also lay men did touch this breade. Moꝛeouer in an other place, Chriſt geueth all onely wine. Therefoꝛe the sacrament muſt bee receiued in the kinde of wine al onely of the lay men. Wee not these goodly argumentes yea and that of bishops? it were madnes to aunswere to them.

Fonde argumentes made by ỹ Bysshop of Rochestr.

That by Gods worde it is lawfull for Prieſtes that hath not the gift of chaſtitie, to marry Wiues.

The cauſe that moued hym to write of this thing.

I Haue seene and heard in diuerse countryes, where I haue beene, intolerable persecutiõ agaynſt Prieſtes, that were compelled by weakenes of nature to mary wyues, foꝛ that intent that they might after Gods law, and mans law vse an honeſt cõuersation in this woꝛld. Foꝛ the which thyng, I say, they haue beene soꝛe persecuted, some cast out of their countrey, some drowned, some burned, and some beheaded: Finally, all the cruelnes that could bee excogitated againſt them, men thought it to litle.

Therefoꝛe I, that recken my selfe a debtoꝛ, and a seruaunt vnto all mẽ in all thynges, wherein I may profite them, and specially in thynges that apperteine to instructiõ of their conscience, hath taken vpõ me, in this cause to shew my litle and small learnyng: charitably desiryng thẽ that bee some thing yet againſt this thyng, that they will let them selues bee taught, and instructed by Gods woꝛd, and not to set them selues obstinately agaynſte the verity of Gods blessed woꝛd. Foꝛ our Lord can easely beare and suffer, an vnwilled ignoꝛaunce, but a peruerse malice and a froward resistyng of his veritie, can hee not suffer, but thereunto is hee a moꝛtall ? and an extreme enemy.

Wherefoꝛe let men consider, that if this article doth stand with Gods woꝛd, & with Chriſtes holy doctrine, that if then they resiſte, and set them selues agaynſt it, how that they doe resiſte God, the which no man is able to perfoꝛme. Certaine men there bee, that of a very peruerse, froward, and obstinate mynde, doth set them selues agaynſt this article & other moe. And will in no wise admit either reason, noꝛ learnyng, but still remaine in theyr old errour, that they haue conceiued in their braynes, whiche is neither grounded in Gods holy woꝛd, noꝛ yet in the holy conuersation, noꝛ lyuyng of blessed and vertuous mẽ. Vnto these men will I write nothyng, bycause I will not trouble them, and bycause I would bee loth to bee toꝛne with dogs teeth, noꝛ elles to cast pearles beefoꝛe swyne.

Two soꝛtes of men.

An other soꝛte of mẽ there bee, that doth not admit this article, by the reason that they bee ignoꝛaunt in Scriptures, and know not the very groũde therof, but alonely are led by an old custome, that they haue been brought vp in. Yet neuertheleſſe they are not obstinate enemyes vnto the veritie, but would gladly geue place to learnyng, Math. 7.

nyng, and reaſon. And all that they doe, is to ſearch with a ſober mẽkenes, what ẏ truth is. The which thing they are glad to embrace, as ſone as it is layde to them. Unto theſe men is my writyng, and my labour ſpent: whom I doe charitably beſeche, that they will fauourably, and indifferently iudge this my writyng. This doe I bynde my ſelfe, to prouе this thing (by Gods grace) out of Chriſts holy worde, by the ſayinges of holy Doctours, by the authoritie of authẽticall ſtories, by the examples, & practiſe of holy and vertuous men. And if I doe not this, I will bee contented not to bee beleeued, which thyng, if I can performe, I thinke all reaſonable men will geeue credence to mee.

Finally, and laſt of all I will ſhew thoſe reaſons, and authorities, wherby that the Pope hath bounde hys Prieſtes to keepe (as hee calleth it) pure chaſtitie. And in concluſion, after my poore learnyng, I will alloyle all thoſe Scriptures and reaſons, and prouе that in this thyng they cã haue no place. Unto the performyng of the whiche, Jeſus of his infinite mercy graunt me of his holy ſpirite. Amen.

FIrſt cõmeth bleſſed Saint Paule, whom the Church of God hath alwayes had in reuerence, and hee approueth this doctrine of mine, ſaying: 1.Cor.7. Let euery man for auoyding of fornication haue his wife, and euery woman haue her huſband. Marke how bleſſed S. Paule cõmaundeth, where as any daunger of fornication is, that euery man in auoyding of vicious lyuyng, ſhould take a wife. Here is no man excepted, for the text is for euery man, and ſpecially for them, that can not lyue ſole. Unto thẽ it is a ſtreight commaundement to marry: there is none other remedy ordeined of God to auoyde fornication, but mariage. Yea, and if there were ten other remedies more then mariage, yet muſt mariage bee as lawfull as they to bee vſed, yea and a great deale more, ſeeyng, that it is ſpecially appoynted of God, for a remedy in this caſe. For as for all other remedyes (as faſtyng, watchyng, labouryng, chaſtiſing of a mans body) though they bee lawfull, laudable and good, yet bee they not appropriately, and onely appoynted of God, to bee remedies agaynſt fornication: as bleſſed S. Paule doth here appoynt mariage for to bee.

Prieſtes are more bounde to marry for auoyding vicious liuing thẽ to other chaſtiſing of theyr body, ſeyng that is Gods ordinaunce ther unto appointed.

Wherefore if it bee lawfull for Prieſtes for to faſt, and watch, to auoyde fornication, it muſt needes bee more lawful for thẽ to marry wiues, if they bee in daunger of fornication. For mariage in this caſe, is not alonely commaunded of God, but it is appointed of God for an eſpeciall, and ſingular medecine for this diſeaſe. Marke alſo the occaſion that S. Paul had to write this text to the Corinthians. There were certeine men amõg them, that reckened it an holines, and a perfectiõ (as certeine mẽ doth now, for Prieſtes) that Chriſten mẽ ſhould lyue ſole without wiues, as the text declareth. It is good for a man, not to touch a woman. Now doth bleſſed S. Paule aunſwere to this holy hypocriſie on this maner: To auoyde fornication, ſayth hee, notwithſtandyng your holyneſſe, let euery man mary a wyfe.

Now, if bleſſed Sayne Paule had thought it vnlawfull to marry for any Chriſten man, then would not hee haue ſayde: Let euery man marry. Marke alſo, that it is not agaynſt the perfection of any Chriſten man for to marry, but hee is rather boũde to marry, if hee haue not the gifte of chaſtitie.

Farthermore, note that S. Paule neither biddeth them, that thought it holynes to bee vnmaryed, to faſt, or to labour, or to weare heere. But alonely to marry, as who ſhoulde ſay, God hath ordayned and approued a lawful and a laudable remedy againſt your ſicknes. My doctrine is, that you ſhall heare your God, and vſe to your comforte, thoſe creatures & remedies with thankes geeuing, that God hath appointed, and therewith bee you cõtent, and recken not your ſelues wyſer then God, in helpyng and curyng your diſeaſes. For nothing can bee vnlawfull that God doth allowe, and

prowue. And for vsing of Gods creatures and his ordinaunces, in tyme, and place requisite, can no man bee blamed before God. But for refusing of Gods remedies, whē they bee necessary, let no man thinke, that hee shall auoyde Gods daunger.

As for an example: Hee that wyll not eate and drinke when hee is hungry and thirsty, but excogitateth some other remedie of his owne brayne, so long that hee bringeth himselfe in vtter destruction: let no man doubte, but in this case before God hee is a murtherer, and an homicide. I thinke there is no learning to the contrary. Wherefore I woulde that mē should well remember themselues in thys case, & thinke not that they cā inuent a thyng more pleasaunt vnto God, then hee can doe hym selfe. His pleasure is best knowen vnto himselfe. For this cause, I iudge it lawfull for euery Priest that hath not the gift of chastitie, to vse the remedy that God hath ordayned, and also sanctified. Blessed S. Paule saith, that mariage is honorable, and the bedde of them is vndefiled: but fornicatours, and aduoulterers God shal iudge. Marke that S. Paule calleth it honorable, and a cleane thyng. What presumption is therefore in vs, that recken it a dishonour, and vncleannesse for priestes to vse marryage? God sayth, hee shall iudge whorekeepers and aduulterers: but not them that bee maryed. Wherefore yet agayne, after ỳ doctrine of S. Paule, I exhorte all Priestes that can not liue chaste, to receiue Gods remedie with thankes. This is S. Paules doctrine, where hee sayth, I woulde that all men were as I my selfe am. But euery mā hath his proper gift of God, one after this maner, an other after that. I say vnto the vnmaryed men and wydowes, it is good for them, if they abide as I doe. But and if they can not abstaine, let them mary. For it is better to mary then to burne. I can not deuise a clearer text for my purpose then thys is. Saint Paule woulde that euery man had the gifte of chastitie. But in as much as all men hath not one gift, therefore sayth S. Paule, must euery man vse himselfe after his gifts. And hee that hath not the gifte of chastitie, S. Paule wyll plainely, that hee shall mary. Hee sayth not, that hee shal chastice himselfe wyth labour and wyth payne, to remedye that weakenes, though I woulde bee contente for my parte gladly, that men shoulde prowue all maner of lawfull remedies, to helpe them to lyue sole. But then, if they can not so continue, I wyll in no wise that they shall refuse marryage, as a thyng vnlawfull and filthy: but rather vse it, and prowue it at the least wise, as they haue done other remedies, that they haue inuented, seeing that God hath instituted this, as a thyng that hee iudgeth for a lawfull and principall remedy. But note, that S. Paule sayth, it is better to mary, then to burne. S. Paules meanynge is, that if man hath not the gifte to extincte the burnyng, and ardent desire of nature, that then hee must mary, rather then bee subiecte vnto such concupiscence. S. Paule sayth not, rather mary then to keepe whores. But hys will is, that wee shoulde bee so farre from all whoredome, that wee should not suffer our selues so much as to burne. The whiche precedeth all whoredome, and is lesse in very deede then whoredome. And yet S. Paule wylling vs to auoyde this lesse thing, commaundeth vs to mary: how much more to auoyde open whoredome, & abhominable and detestable vncleannes, that is now vsed shameleslie in the worlde?

Hebr. 13.

1. Cor. 7.

It is not sufficient before God to auoyde S. Paule with a light and a vayne solution.

I doe not reprowe that Priestes doth lyue sole, I had rather thereto exhorte them. But this I detestate, that men had rather suffer, and allow priestes to liue in whoredome, and in all abhominable fornication, then for to vse that lawfull remedy that God hath both ordayned and sanctified. We haue no mention in any storye, that euer any Priest was burned for keepyng of whores, but for mariage, we haue seene, and doe see dayly, how cruelly and violently men doth persecute them, as though Gods blessed ordinaunce were rather to bee extincted Whoredom is lawful in no case, but mariage is lawfull in diuerse cases, ergo mariage must rather bee alowed then whore dome.

and

and abhorred, then that thyng, ỹ both God, & nature reprooueth. Where is there one man in England, that hath ſo great loue, and reuerence to the holy ſtate of Matrimony, that hée ſhould kéepe a maryed Prieſt in hys houſe? But Prieſtes that lyue vnlawfully agaynſt Gods law, and mans law, and agaynſt all honeſty, and morall vertue, hée in euery mans houſes & company, and rulers, and coũſellers, and controllers. Alas for pitie, what ſhall I ſay to the affectiõs of mens hartes, that thus can winke (I will not ſay allow) at ſuch abhominable thynges. Yea, and the ſelfe ſame men ſhall hée moſt extreme, and cruell vnto a poore ſimple Prieſt, that of a good hart towardes Gods ordinaunce, maryeth a lawfull wife. This Prieſt, I ſay, ſhall neither haue meate, nor drinke of thẽ, nor yet no office of charitye. But the other ſort ſhalbée exalted, and ſet vp in all honour and kept in reuerence and eſtimatiõ. And why? Bycauſe as they ſay they hée good and cleane felowes, and loueth a péece of fleſh well. Theſe blaſphemous wordes haue I heard diuerſe tymes and many. And men ſit and laugh at them, & haue a great reioyſing in them. So ſore is Gods holy ordinaunce, & a morall vertue, & goodnes extincted in mens hartes.

O Lord God, and thy mercy were not, how were this world able to cõtinewe, that thus abhominably, and ſhamefully iudgeth of thy halowed, & ſanctified workes? But oh Lord haue thou mercy, and pitie on vs, for the ſwéete bloud of thy ſonne Chriſt Ieſus. Loke not on our ſynnes, oh lord God, for who is able to abyde in thy ſyght. But Lord of thine infinite mercy, ſend downe thy ſpirit into ỹ harts of thy people, that they may hée taught better to iudge of thy heauenly, and Godly inſtitutions. Amen.

To our purpoſe. Other articles that I haue written of, hée ſomething harde, and obſcure, ſauing all onely to theſe men, that hée learned. But as for this article, mée thinke it is ſo playne, that I meruayle how any mã ſhould doubt in it. For doubtles it néedeth no learned iudge, but onely a Ciuell, and a morall good man, that is indued with reaſon and equitie. For ſurely mine aduerſaries doth not earneſtly defend pure, and cleane chaſtitie, for they know how few prieſtes there hée, that kéepeth theyr chaſtitie. Yea & they know how ſore they haue punyſhed thoſe men, that hath broken theyr chaſtitie. So that they doe not defend chaſtitie, but rather fylthines, and abhominable lyuing. In ỹ which the moſt part of the ſpiritualtie doth liue. Of this I will hée reported to the recordes of the kinges courts, and alſo to their owne recordes. in ỹ which (if they ſhould hée ſerched) ſhould hée found an innumerable ſort detected of vncleanes. Theſe matters hée open, notwithſtanding I am right ſorye to rehearſe it, but I am compelled, ſeing there is ſuch intollerable violẽce vſed agaynſt thoſe poore mẽ that marry, becauſe they would not all onely lyue vertuouſly béefore God, but alſo morally before the world.

I write not agaynſt thoſe Prieſtes that cã, and doe lyue chaſt, but I rather exhorte thẽ ſo to continue,

Let thoſe men at the leſt marrye wyues ſeyng they doe not, nor can not lyue chaſt.

Now let men all onely vſe reaſon in this caſe, and make compariſon betwéene theſe two maner of lyuings, and conſyder which of them doth bécome a polytike order, and a common wealth beſt. Whether is it after reaſon better for mée to defile ſhamefully, other mens wyues, other mens daughters, and other mennes maydens, that no mans ſeruaunt ſhoulde bée in ſafegarde for mée? or els that I ſhould marry a wyfe of myne owne, as other noble kinges, and Dukes, and other good men of the world hath done, and doth dayly, and ſo to continewe my lyfe with myne other neighbours, after this mãer of good neighbourhod? Let men heare without malyce iudge indifferẽtly. Bleſſed Saint Paule procéedeth farther with this matter, and prooueth clearely, that no man ought, or can bée bound to verginitie, farther then ỹ gift of God doth ſtrengthẽ hym. Thus hée ſayth, as cõcerning virgins, I haue no precept of the Lord, but all onely I geue you my councell, for I thinke it good by ỹ reaſon of this preſent neceſſitie, that a man ſhould lyue ſo. As hée would ſay Vnto verginitie I can not binde you,

No man doubteth, but a greate many doth thus lyue, the whiche bee greate perſecutors of maryed Prieſtes, I would deſire them not to proue my patience to fore. For I know theyr names, and ſome of theyr children. 1. Theſſ 4.

IF men had ſtucke to the opē ſcriptures of God, & to ỹ practiſe of Chriſtes holy church, and to ỹ expoſition of olde doctours as it did bēcome Chriſten men to doe: then had it not bēne nēdefull for mē to haue taken theſe paynes & labours in this cauſe, nor yet to haue layd to their charges thoſe thinges ỹ Antichriſt doth onely. But now ſeyng that they will doe the open dēdes of Antechriſt, they muſt bē contēt that I may alſo geue them his name. And that all the world may openly know, ỹ Antechriſt doth raine in the world (yea and that vnder the name of Chriſt) I will heare ſet you forth a part of his which whē it is cōpared to our M. Chriſtes wordes I doe not doubt but all trew Chriſten men will iudge it to bē of the deuyll, as it is in very dēde, though that the childrē of the world doe iudge it otherwyſe.

Mee that doth the workes of Antechriſt, the ſame is Antichriſt.

This doe I ſay of an acte, that the Councell of Conſtance dyd make agaynſt the moſt holy and glorious ſacrament of our eternall God Jeſus Chriſt. Where in, the one kynde of this moſt bleſſed ſacrament was condemned as vnlawfull for lay men to receiue, and ỹ euery man may know, by what auctoritie they dyd it, & what thing did moue them to condemne ſo bleſſed and ſo glorious an ordinance of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, here will I wryte their owne wordes which be theſe. Aſ this cuſtome for auoyding certayne ſclaunders and perrils was reſonably brought in, notwithſtāding in the bēginning of the Church this ſacrament was receiued of Chriſten men vnder both kindes, & afterward it was receiued al onely vnder ỹ kind of bread, wherefore ſeing that ſuch a cuſtome of the Church, and of holy fathers reaſonably brought in & long obſerued muſt bē taken for a lawe ỹ which ſhall not bē lawfull to repraue nor without auctoritie of the Church to chaūge it at a mās pleaſure. Wherfore to ſay ỹ it is ſacrilege, or vnlawfull to obſerue this cōſuetude or law, muſt bē iudged erronius, and they that doe pertinaciter defende the contrary of theſe premiſſis, muſt bē reſtrayned as heretikes, and greuouſly puniſhed by the Biſhops or their officials, or by them that bē inquiſitores hereticæ prauitatis, which that bē in kyngdomes or in prouinces, in theſe men that doe attempt or preſume any thyng agaynſt thys decrē, ſhall men procēde agaynſt them, after the holy and lawfull decrees that bē inuented agaynſt heretickes and their fauters, into the fauure of the Catholicall fayth. &c.

Councell of Cōſtāce forbad the Sacramēt to bee receaued of the lay people in both kyndes.

The wordes of the councell and determination of Antechriſt.

Now wyll I exhorte all Chriſten men in ỹ glorious name of our mighty Lord Jeſus Chriſt (which is both their redeemer & ſhall bē their iudge) that they wyll indifferently heare this article diſcuſſed, by the bleſſed worde of our Maiſter Chriſt Jeſus, whiche was not alonely of God, but alſo very God himſelfe: and all that hē dyd was done by the counſel of the whole trinitie, and not alonely by his, by whoſe counſell all counſelles both in heauen and earth muſt bē ordered, and that counſell that is contrary to it whether it bē of Sainte, Angel, or of man, muſt bē accurſed, and iudged to bē of the deuil, though they bē neuer ſo mighty, neuer ſo well learned, and neuer ſo many in multitude, for there is no power, no learning, nor yet no multitude, neither in heauen, nor in earth, nor no ieoperdies, nor no ſclaūders that may iudge Chriſt and hys holy worde, nor that they may gēue place vnto. Wherfore if I can prowe by open Scriptures, of our Mayſter Chriſt, and alſo by the practiſe of holy Church, that this counſell is falſe and damnable, then let all Chriſten men iudge which of vs muſt bē heard and bēlēeued, eyther the counſell hauyng no ſcripture, yea contrary to all ſcripture, or els I that haue the opē worde of God, and the very vse and practise of the holy Apostles, & of holy church. Christ is of God, & that no mā doubteth, but ẏ holy counsell though there were fiue thousādes of bysshops, therin must proue thēselues to bée of God by the worde of God, and by theyr workes, the which they can not doe if they bée contrary to Christ and hys blessed worde.

Who ſoeuer doth alter ỹ worde of God & ſet vp their owne inuentions the ſame are of the deuill.

Moreouer Christ is not true vnder a condition bycause that men doe allow hym, for though all the worlde were agaynst hym, yet were hée neuertheless true, but the coūsell is not true but alonely vnder this condition bycause it doth agrée with Christes holy wordes, and of it selfe it hath no veritie, but is of the deuill if it darye from Christ. Before the dreadfull trone of God shall ẏ counsell bée iudged by Christes holy worde, & Christ shal not bée iudged by the decrée of the counsell, but hée shall bée the counsels iudge: and if Christes worde condemne the coūsell, who shal appeaue it, who shall 'prayse it, who shall defende it? The temporall swerde, nor the multitude of Bysshops, nor interdiction, excommunication, nor cursing, can then helpe. Wherefore, let euery true Christē man loke on this matter indifferently: it is no trifling wyth God, nor with his holy worde, for God will remayne for euer, & his holy word must bée fulfilled: and if we wil not fulfill it, hée shall vs down to the dépe pit of hell, and make of stones mē in our stede that shall kéepe his worde. It is no light thyng, for it lyeth on the saluation and damnation both of body and soule, frō the which we can not bée deliuered, with these glorious wordes, Concilium, Concilii, Patres, Patres, Episcopi, Episcopi: for all these may bée the ministers of the deuill, yea though they were aungels. Therfore ones agayne, I doe monish and exhorte in the glorious name of the lyuing God, and in ẏ swéet bloud of Christ Iesus all true Christē men, to take héede what they doe agaynste Christes holy word, whiche is their eternal God, their mercyfull redemer, and shall bée also their mighty and glorious iudge.

All counsailes are of the deuill if they darye frō Christe.

Gods worde is the iudge of Councels and not Councels iudges of Gods worde.

Now let vs examine the wordes of the Councell. First of all the Councell graunteth that in the begynning of the church, all Christen men were houseled vnder both kyndes, nowe would I knowe of the Councell of whom the Church had receiued this maner: of Christ or his holy Apostles (as doubtles shée dyd) then what authoritye had the Councell to chaunge the institution of Christ, and of his holy Apostles, and also the vse and practise of holy Church? was not the first Churche of God? Did shée not kéepe Christes institution? did shée not fulfill Christes word? Did not ẏ holy Apostles learne here so? And now shall the Councell of Constance first condemne Christ and his blessed word, & then the learnyng of Christes holy Apostles? and also the long vse and practise of Christes blessed Church, without any Scripture, without authoritie, or without any speciall reuelation frō God, but alonely for anoydyng of certeine perils? Yea and not content alonely to cōdemne thése thinges but vnder the paine of heresie to cōdemne them. This is to fore a cōdemnation of Christes open worde, and of that thyng whiche they graunt that the Church dyd vse at thē begynnyng.

Note here what the Councell hath graunted.

Furthermore the Councell sayth that holy fathers and the Church dyd bryng in this custome to housell laye men vnder one kinde. Are you not ashamed of these wordes? Doth not your conscience prike you thus openly to lye? yea of Christ and of his holy Church? Christes worde is openly agaynste you, and you graunt that the vse of the church was also otherwise. And as for holy fathers here may you sée what they say to it, but you are the children of the kyngdome of lyes: and doubtlesse if you bryng not forth the holy fathers that make for you, you shall not alonely bée taken for abhominable and open lyers, but also for shameful and detestable sclaunderers both of holy Church, and also of holy fathers.

The Councell doth shamefully bee lye both the fathers and the Scriptures.

But it is no wonder, for Antichrist must declare him selfe openly to bée agaynst Antichriſt doth at all tymes declare hym ſelfe to bee agaynſte Chriſt.

gaynſt Chriſt, & yet is hē neuer without an excuſe, and a ſhaddow of holynes, where by hē may blynd the poore people. But what excuſe had hē here in the Councell to cōdemne Chriſtes worde? That they might auoyde certaine ſclaūders and perrils, & bēcauſe that there is no body without bloud. Bē not theſe lawfull cauſes to condemne Chriſtes open word, yea and that vnder the payne of hereſie? Is not this a new maner of law to make that hē that will not obeye a ſtatute made agaynſt Goos word, which hē is boūde to obey vnder payne of euerlaſtyng damnation, alonely for auoydyng perrils to bē condemned for an hereticke?

New doctrine made by Antichriſt.

Briefely by this reaſon may they condemne all holy Scripture, by layeng ieoperdies & perrils thereto, they may condemne all the creatures of God, for there may bē peril in vſing of them all. But what nēde many wordes to proue this Councell to bē of the deuil? for if that bē not of the deuill that is contrary to Chriſt, and hath no excuſe for it but alonely to auoyde perrils, I cā not tell what is of the deuill? I am ſure Antichriſt ſhall neuer bē without ſome carnall excuſe, for if hē will deny Chriſt to bē both God & man, hē ſhall haue ſtronger carnall reaſons for him then the Councell hath for this: but this matter muſt not bē iudged by carnal reaſons, but Gods worde that is aboue all creatures: wherefore let vs goe to the Scriptures as a ſure ancore to ouercome Antichriſt with all his carnall reaſons.

What ſoeuer is contrary to Chriſt, the ſame is of the deuill.

First our maiſter Chriſt when hē ordeined inſtitute this bleſſed Sacrament did vſe theſe wordes, take it and eate it, this is my body. &c. Likewiſe takyng the challice hē gaue thankes & gaue it vnto them ſayeng, drinke all of this, this is my bloud of the newe teſtament the which ſhall bē ſhed for many into remiſſion of ſinnes. Theſe bē playne wordes drinke of it all: hē that ſayth all excepteth no man. Furthermore hē knewe that there might bē ieoperdies in the receiuyng of it & yet hē ſayth drinke of it all, for it is my bloud that ſhall bē ſhed for the remiſſion of ſinnes.

Math. 26. Marke. 14. Luke. 22.

Chriſtes inſtitution of the Sacrament of his body and bloud.

Now was it not ſhed for lay mens ſinnes? why ſhal they not then drinke of it? The maiſter and the Lord ſayth drinke therof: and ſhall the miſerable ſeruaunt withſtand his commaundemēt? yea commaunde the playne contrary and ſay drinke not therof?

But now commeth my Lord of Rocheſter (which perceiueth that the Councel is conuict in that, that it conſenteth that the whole Church in the begynnyng did receiue this Sacrament vnder both kyndes, and yet forbideth that ſame thyng, and ſayth to maintaine this errour, that Chriſte ſpake theſe wordes, drinke of it all, alonely to his Apoſtles (for there were no other men there but the Apoſtles) and therfore they muſt alonely drinke therof.

Rocheſters gloſe vpon Chriſtes wordes.

I aunſwere: My Lord if this thing were alonely lawfull vnto the Apoſtles, how will you diſcharge the primatiue Churche, in the whiche were thoſe men that Chriſt miniſtred this Sacrament vnto? yea & the ſelfe men did miniſter it vnder both kyndes to the whole congregation accordyng to this commaundement drinke of it all. Dout not but they vnderſtode Chriſtes will as well as you in this commaundement.

But in the way of communication let vs graūt you, that to the Apoſtles this was onely ſayd, how will you thē diſcharge your owne Prieſtes from deadly ſinne, the which receiue it vnder both kindes, and yet bē they neither Apoſtles nor ſucceſſours of thē, but after your own learnyng the Biſhops alonely bē their ſucceſſours, & the Prieſtes doe repreſent Iesy. Diſciples. Shal they in this thyng repreſēt the Apoſtles, and in abſoluyng from ſinne but the Diſciples? But let vs sē farther in your for fetched reaſon: tel vs how and by what authoritie (your highe politike rule ſaued) that you dare gēue either of theſe kindes to the laye men, ſeyng they were both alonely geuen to the Apoſtles, for euē by that authoritie that you haue power to take away the one kynd, by that selfe same haue you power to take away the other, for they were both geuen at once and indifferently to the receiuers, so that as many as receiued the one, receiued also the other, and to them that hee sayd take and eate this, this is my body, to them hee sayd, drinke all of this. &c.

The Pope may aswell forbid all lay men to eate of Christes body, as to forbid them to drinke of Christes bloud.

Now if you may thus take away ỹ partes of ỹ sacramentes at your pleasure, ỹ cõsequent shall bee, ỹ incontinuance all the sacramentes shalbe destroyed, and Christes word set at naught. Wherefore my Lord this blasphemous euation will not helpe you: but such shamfull solutions must they vse that will be agaynst the open worde of God. Amend your conscience my Lorde, for if you doe not remẽber the terrible wordes of ỹ Prophet: hee shall shake his sword & bend his bowe & make it al ready & therein hath hee prepared the shot of death, & his arrowes for to burne. This is no smal threatning nor lightly to auoide.

D. Barnes is playne with the Bishop of Rochester.

But let vs see what the scriptures say, that which I gaue vnto you I receaued of ỹ Lord. Marke. S. Paules wordes how hee receaued this thyng of the Lorde. &c.

The Lord Jesus the same night in ỹ which hee was betraied, toke bread and thanked, and brake it, and sayde. Take ye and eate, this is my body which is broken for you: this doe yee in the remembraunce of mee. After ỹ same manner, hee toke the cup & said, this cup is the New testament in my bloud: this doe, as oft as you drinke in the remembraunce of mee: for as often as you shall eate this bread and drinke this cup, you shall shew the Lordes death tyll hee come. Marke diligently how S. Paule declareth, how the Lord Jesus Christ dyd institute this blessed and comfortable sacramẽt in both kindes, and in both kindes dyd mynister it hymselfe, and not that all onely, but also enacted this cõmaũdement to all Christen people which must receiue it. This doe as often. &c. Yea and this commaũdement is geuẽ after the Sacrament is ministred in both kinds, Teaching vs that in both kindes the Lord hath instituted this Sacrament to bee receiued, and also that they ỹ so receaue it not, breake this commaundement of the Lorde. This doe as often. &c.

S. Paule setteth forth the vnstitution of Christ.

This commaundement, S. Paule did not lightly let slyp, but hee knew that it was the ordinaunce and ỹ commaundement of the Lord: and also knew ỹ one iot or tytle of his wordes should not, nor ought, nor can not bee let slip, without perrell of the soules of them ỹ so littell makes of his word. And therfore hee durst not, nor would not (and yet hee had as great auctoritie as the counsell of constance) let slip or transpose the institution and commaundement of the Lord, but wholy and fully with all diligence hee wrote those wordes vnto all the whole congregation of the Corinthians, not to the ministers or prieستes all onely, but to the whole congregation, that is as well to the mynisters of the word as to lay men: and also the contrary, for hee sayth when you come togither: & that you may perceaue ỹ hee speakes indifferently, hee there reproueth thẽ that tarryed not for poore men. And also these wordes bee playne, who so euer shall eate of this bread and drink of this cup worthely. &c. Now vnto this whole congregatiõ (I doubt not but by ỹ spirit of the Lord which sawe beefore this damnable errour to bee instituted of antichrist and his bery & all onely mynisters) hee sayd drinke you, yea and to reproue and manifestly to declare this open errour, hee adeth this worde, Cuppe, signifying and teaching that Christes ordinaunce is not to receaue the bloud in the body onely, but to receaue the bloud after his institution) by it selfe out of the cup, lest they should bee found correctours and blasphemers of the holy institution and commaundement of the Lord, Of whom S. Paule receaued this cõmsundemẽt, and of no coũsels.

Christes bloud is not to bee receaued in his body onely, but in the cup.

Now what Christẽ man can doubt but our M. Christ (to whom all thing is bare and open both things present & also to come) knew that there was bloud in his owne body. Also Saynt Paule his scholer which learned this lesson of hym was not ignorant that there

there was bloud in his body. And yet firste our maister Christ geueth his bloud alone by it selfe out of the cup, and his diligent scholer knowyng the doctrine of his maister dyd the same, regardyng his maisters doctrine and preferring it before his carnall reaso, which knew that there was bloud in euery body, but his maisters doctrine taught him that his maister kept not his bloud in his body, but for vs lost and damned persons for our innumerable detestable (and aboue all capacitie to declare) damnable and abhominable sinnes, brake his body & shed his bloude thereout plenteously, and therewith made sacrifice and satisfactio for all our sinnes, as Saint Iohn
1.Iohn.1. sayth. The bloud of Iesus Christ cleanseth vs from all sinne, also we are sanctified by the offeryng of the body of Iesus Christ once for all. Now that all Christen men which bee sanctified by the offeryng of this body, and by sheadyng the bloud out of this body, Hebr.10. shoulde alwayes haue both those partes in remembraunce, bee according as the bloud was deuided frō the body for all sinners indifferētly that will come vnto Christe, and according to his maisters institution & commaūdement, ministred this Sacrament, and also ordeined it to bee ministred to all men. The body by it selfe & the bloud by it selfe. That they might alway not remember alonely that our Sauiour Christ offered his body for vs, but also shed out of that same body his most precious bloud and therfore sayth S. Paule (as his maister Christ taught him.) As often as you shall eate this bread and drinke this cup, you shall shew the Lordes death till hee come.

Paule ministreth Christes body by it selfe, and the cup of his bloud by it selfe to the lay and comm̄ people.

Now my Lordes come to your counselles. Christ and S. Paule defendeth thys thyng partinaciter, (as you call it) that is, stifly and strongly wyll they abide by it and will not reuoke it. Wherfore after the decree of your Counsell, they bee condemned for heretickes. I can no more say, but God helpe them, for there is no remedy with them, but they must needes to the fier, for they will not bee abiured in no wise. It is a piteous case, that two, so good men as these bee, will bee thus openly agaynst the decree of the holy counsell, yea and against so many and so noble fathers, and so great clarkes, the which knew this matter (as ye say) as well as they, and it is not to bee thought that the holy Ghost would leaue so many excellent and holy fathers, and great Doctours of Diuinitie, and so many noble Princes and wise men of the worlde, and bee with these two poore men which bee of no reputation in this worlde.

Councell of Constance condemne Christ and Paule for heretickes.

Wherefore my Lordes, proceede against them after the holy decrees that bee inuented against heretickes, sticke not for their names, for it is neither Christ nor Paule that can hurt you, you haue also condemned their learning and preuailed against them: why should you not condemne them as well? you bee Lordes, and you haue the strength and the wisdome of the worlde with you, and as a certayne Doctour of the law sayde: they haue no man to holde with them but a sorte of beggers, and despised persons of the worlde, wherfore spare them not, bee bolde, Implete numerum patrum vestrorum, All tyrantes bee not yet dead.

De consecra. dis. 2. c. cōperimus.

But now, when you haue condemned them, yet haue you as muche to doe as euer you had: for your owne lawe is openly agaynst you, in these wordes. We vnderstand that certayne men receauing alonely the portion of the blessed body, doe abstaine from the chalice of the holy bloud, the which doubtles (seeing I can not tell by what superstition they are learned to abstayne) let them eyther receaue the whole Sacrament, or els let them bee forbidden from the whole Sacrament, for the diuision of one and of ỹ same mistery can not bee done wythout great sacrilege. &c.

The popes own lawes agaynste both hym selfe & his Clergie.

Now thynke you by these wordes: bee they not playne that all men shall eyther receaue both kyndes or none? Here haue you an other hereticke, for hee iudgeth, and sayth that it is a sacrilege (which is openly agaynst your Counsell) to receaue it in one kynde. But paraduenture you wyll say this law was written to priestes: I aunswere, to whomsoeuer it was writtē, it maketh no matter, for these wordes bee plaine: the diuision of one misterye can not bee done without great sacrilege. These wordes bee not spoken of the persons that shall receaue it, but of the deuiding of the sacrament, whosoeuer shall receaue it, it is sacrilege to deuide this thynge, aunswere you to that. Marke also, that your owne lawe cauleth it superstition to receaue but one kynde, and no doubt they that did receaue it so, were blynded by this damnable reason of yours, that there is no body without bloude, and yet hee calleth it superstition.

The popes owne lawe sayth it is superstition to receaue but the one kinde only.

But let vs see what your glose saith on this terte, it is not superfluously (sayth hee) receaued vnder both kindes, for the kynde of bread is referred vnto the fleshe, and the kynde of wyne vnto the blonde. The wyne is the Sacrament of blonde, in the which is the seate of the soule, & therfore it is receiued vnder both kindes, to signifie that Christ did receiue both body and soule, and that the partaking thereof, doth profite both bodye and soule. Wherefore if it were receiued alonely vnder one kynde, it shoulde signifie that it did profite allonely but one part. &c.

The gloser agaynst the counsell.

How thinke you, doth this glose vnderstand it of preistes onely? haue lay men no soules? May not this Sacrament profite them both bodye and soule? Marke also that hee sayth it is not superfluously nor without a cause receiued vnder both kyndes. Also an other lawe: When the host is brokē, and the blonde shed out of the chalys into the mouthes of faythfull men, what other thyng is there signified, but the immolation of our Lords body on the crosse, and the shedding of hys blond out of his side. &c.

De consecr. di. 2. c. cum frangimus.

Here is it plaine, that the blond is geeuen out of the chalys, and not out of the body, and into faythfull mens mouthes, and not alonely into preists mouthes. Also an other lawe: If that the blond of Christ bee shed for remission of sinnes (as oftē as it is shedde)

De consecr. de. 2. c. Si quocienscunq.

then ought I lawfully for to receaue it. I which doe allwayes sinne, must allwayes receaue a medecyne. &c.

Here your owne lawe sayth, that the receiuing of the blonde is a medycinall way to bee receiued of thē that sinne: you will not denie but that lay men sinne. Wherefore shoulde they not then receiue a medicyne for their sinne? you may perceiue that thys is not alonely spoken of Preistes, but of sinners. &c.

Popes lawe sayth the receauing of Christes blond is medicinable

Furthermore S. Cipryan sayth: How doe wee teach, or how can wee prouoke men to shed their blonde for the cōfession of Christes name, if wee doe denye them the blonde of Christ when they shall goe to battayle? Or how dare wee able them vnto the victorium of martyrdome, if wee doe not firste by right admitte them to drincke the cuppe of our Lorde in the congregation. &c. Here is Cyprian openly against you which will that as many shall receiue ỹ blond of Christ, as doe confesse the name of Christ, yea and that out of the cuppe and not out of the body.

Ad Cornelium Papam.

A goodly saying of Cyprian.

Also S. Ambrose sayth to the Emperour Theodosius, how shalt thou lift vp thy handes out of ỹ which doth yet droppe vnrighteous blonde? how shalt thou with those handes receaue the body of God? with what boldnes wilt thou receaue into thy mouth the Cup of the precious blond, seeing that through the woodnes of thy wordes, so great blond is shed wrongfully. &c.

Ecclesiastica hist.

Marke that the manner was in Saint Ambrose tyme that lay men should receiue ỹ blessed blond of Christ, yea and that out of the cup seuerally, and not out of the body onely: wherefore my Lords see to your conscience, how you can discharge your self before the dreadfull trone of Christ Jesus, for making this detestable & dānable statute against ỹ heauēly word of God, and against the vse of holy Church, & contrary to the exposition of all holy doctours. It were to great a thing for you so presumptuously to breake the statute of your mortall prince, howe much more of your immortall God, which will not bee auoyded with a carnail

Saint Ambrose willeth all men to receaue the cup of the blond of Christ.

The Pope and hys clergie feare not to breake Christes institution and ordinaunce.

nall reason, nor with condemnation of hereſye, nor yet with ſaying there bee ieoperdies, perils, and ſclaũders, for theſe proud crakes can not there excuſe you nor yet helpe you. For I doubt not but the great Turke hath as good reaſons for hym as theſe bee, & alſo as proude crakes as you haue, though peraduenture hee vſeth them not ſo hipocritely agaynſt God omnipotent as you doe, but yet it will not helpe hym. Wherefore now moſt excellent and gracious Prince, I doe with all meekenes, with all due ſubiection admonyſh & exhorte your moſt noble grace, yea and the father of heauen doth openly commaund you vnder the payne of his diſpleaſure, and as you will auoyde the daunger of eternall damnation, and alſo by the vertue of Chriſtes bleſſed bloud, and as you will receiue remiſſion from all your ſinnes thorow the merites of his glorious bloud, that you doe defẽd with all your might Chriſtes bleſſed worde and his ſweete bloud, and his holy ordinaunce, and ſuffer them not ſo lightly to bee oppreſſed and troden vnder the foote. Your grace may not conſyder in this cauſe the multitude nor the dignitie of men, for you bee as good as the beſt of thẽ, but your grace muſt conſider that it is God omnipotentes cauſe, it is Chriſtes cauſe, it is the worde of God, it is the bleſſed bloud of Chriſt that is ouer troden, it is the ordinaunce that commeth out of heauen, and not out of counſels, yea and geuen by God hymſelfe, and not by mans auctoritye: And now ſhall your grace ſuffer thys thynge ſo lightly to bee broken, becauſe men doe inuent a carnall reaſon agaynſt it & the deuill was neuer without a reaſon, but that proueth not the cauſe againſt Gods worde. King Saul had no ſmale reaſõ for hym, whẽ hee ſpyd ſaue kyng Agag & the beſt ſheepe and Drẽ to offer to God, was not this a reſonable cauſe, to ſaue the beaſtes to Gods honour, and to offer thẽ vp vnto God: was it not a goodly thinne to ſaue the kyng rather then to kill hym. What man will recken it euill to ſaue a mã: what man can iudge it euill to ſaue beaſtes, and that ſ beſt to offer them to God: Was not God beſt worthy: was not this a good conſideration: was not this a good intent:

Warnes exhorteth K. Henry the viij. to reſtore the ſincerite of Chriſtes holy word.

1. Reg. 15.

Reaſon and deuotion, being contrary to Gods will, is mere blyndnes & impiete.

Finally it is ten tymes better then the reaſon of the counſell is, and yet Saul with all his good reaſon, with all his good deuotion, with all his good purpoſe, with all his fatte beaſtes, is repelled of God for euer & all bycauſe hee ſtucke to his good intention & left the commaundement of God. Some men will thinke it but a light thynge whether they receiue ſ bleſſed bloud by it ſelfe, or els with the body: but as light as they thinke it, yet is it Gods word, yet is it Chriſtes ordinaũce, yet did the Apoſtles obſerue it, yet did the holy Church ſo fulfill it. And if ſ word of God were away, by reaſon it were but a light thyng to Baptiſe in water or in wyne, but the worde of God is open that it muſt bee done with water and not in wyne, and yet there is no cauſe why, but the worde of God.

Moreouer, by reaſon it was but a light thyng to ſay: Bee glad ſ daughter of Siõ, behold thy kyng cõmeth to thee ſitting on an Aſſe & on her fole. This ſaying by reaſon is not alonely ſimple, but alſo fooliſhe, to ſay that a kyng ſhal come riding on an Aſſe, yea and on a borowed Aſſe, and therof to make ſo much a doe as though it wer a notable thyng: who would not now mocke a kyng if hee ryd ſo ryde, notwithſtandyng all this, theſe bee the wordes of God, yea and alſo fulfilled in very deede of our maiſter Chriſt in his owne proper perſon.

Zacharie. 9 Math. 10.

Moreouer by reaſon, it was but a madde token that the Sauiour of the world Chriſt Jeſus was borne, to ſay you ſhal finde a young child wrapped in cloutes & layd in a cribbe, what is this to purpoſe: what is this to proue that the ſauiour of ſ world is borne: will not reaſon mocke this: when wil reaſon bee perſuaded by this token ſ Meſſias (whom all the Prophetes & all the Patriarkes haue promiſed ſo many hũdred yeares afore) was now borne: and yet this token came from heaue, yea and by the miniſtration of aungels and the shepheardes dyd beléeue ẏ word. Briefly by reason what bée all the articles of the fayth? where is Christ? where is remission of sins? where is ẏ lyfe to come? Reason mocketh all these thynges but yet they bée true, bycause alonely ẏ word of God speaketh them. Wherfore most noble and excellẽt Prince, loke on the word of God and not of blynde reason, and saue the honour therof, for it shal saue your grace at your most néede.

Luke. 2.

The ſayinges and domges of Chriſt are not to bee iudged by naturall reaſon.

Furthermore I doe exhorte and require with all honour, yea and I doe cõmaunde in the vertue of Christ Iesus and his blessed word, all Dukes, all Earles, all Lordes, all maner of estates hygh and lowe, that will bée Christen men, that will bée saued by the vertue of Iesus Christes blessed Iohn. 6. bloud, that they doe sée this ordinaũce of the God of heauen obserued to the vttermost of their power, and when soeuer that they will bée houseled, that they receiue the blessed Sacramẽt vnder both kyndes, and at the lest desire it with all their hart of their curates, and so desire it that they may bée discharged afore the immortall God of heauen whiche will not bée mocked nor auoyded with a damnable reasõ: but what soeuer thyng there bée that is agaynst the holy word of God, and the glorious ordinaũce (what collour so euer it bryng with it of holynes) let it bée a cursed and reckened of the deuill. This doth S. Cyprian learne vs saying, what thyng soeuer it bée that is ordeined by mans madnes, where by the ordinaunce of God is violated, it is whoredome, it is of the deuil and it is sacrilege. Wherfore fly frõ such contagiousnesse of men and auoyde their wordes as a canker and as pestilence. &c.

What soeuer is ordeined agaynst the ordinaunce of Christ, the same be accursed.

These wordes bée playne of all maner of men of what estate what dignitie, or of what honour soeuer they bée, and what collour of holynes soeuer they bryng with them. Wherfore in this present writyng I doe counsel and exhorte all true Christen men to take héede what they doe. The word of god is so playne in this matter that they can desire it no playner. It is no childes game to trifle with Gods worde: God will not bée trifled with nor yet mocked. But nowe to helpe more men that bée vnlearned I will assoyle certeine of their damnable reasons. The first is we will not geue it vnder that kynde of wyne, lest that there shoulde by negligence either of the Priest or of the receiuer, fall any droppe on the grounde.

Blynd reasons of the Papistes.

I aunswere, our Christ dyd know that such a chaunce might come, you can not deny it (except you will say that hée was not God, as you would not greatly sticke to doe, if you might haue maintenaunce) and yet notwithstanding dyd hée institute it in both kindes. Aunswere you to this. Moreouer, why doe not by this reasõ your owne priestes abstayne frõ the wine, séeing that this perill may also chaũce to them, as your cautelles of ẏ Masse doe graunt. Also if it bée a reasonable cause that you shal not kéepe Christes ordinaunce, bécause of auoyding of perilles, then may you take away all the whole Sacrament to auoyde perilles, for in receauing of it in ẏ kinde of bread, is ieopardous, least there remayne any crumme in the receauers téeth. This reasõ is as good as yours: so that now all the Sacramẽt in both kindes is taken away.

Furthermore, if you will auoyde all perilles, then may you géeue thys Sacrament to no man, for you cannot tell who is in deadly sinne, who not, for you know not their hartes: & it were a fore perell and greate more ieoperdye to geue the pure body of Christ Iesus into a foule soule, then ẏ a drop of bloud by negligence should fall on the ground, for there falleth but a drop, and here is ẏ whole body in a foulat place then the ground is. Also that may bée auoyded with good diligence and wisedome of the Priest, but that the sacrament shall alwayes bée receiued into a pure conscience there is no dilygence of the priest that can make it.

The Papistes finde faulte with gnattes, & swallowe Camels.

How thinke you now? now is all the whole sacrament & Christes blessed ordinaunce clearely taken away and all for auoyding ieoperdies and perrells perells. Thus trifle you with Chriſtes holy worde, yea and yin your great and holy counsels. Other reasons my Lorde of Rochester bringeth that hée worthy of no solution: for hée doth but mocke & scorne and trifle with Gods worde. Hée bringeth ỹ myracle of ỹ fiue loues, where there is no mentiõ made of wyne, therefore lay men muſt hée houseled in one kinde: is not this madnes? What meane these men ỹ neyther feare God, nor yet bée ashamed of man? what is this to the purpose? Iohn. 6. Chriſt dyd a myracle of fyue loues, where is no mencion made of wyne: what is this to the sacrament? If the bread sygnifyed one part of the sacrament, what sygnifyed the 2. fyshes & they that were there. These 2. things muſt nédes signifye the other part. Also lay men did touch this breade. Moreouer in an other place, Chriſt geueth all onely wine. Therefore the sacrament muſt bée receiued in the kinde of wine al onely of the lay men. Bée not these goodly argumentes yea and that of bishops? it were madnes to aunswere to them.

Fonde argumentes made by ỹ Bysshop of Rochestr.

That by Gods worde it is lawfull for Prieſtes that hath not the gift of chaſtitie, to marry Wiues.

The cauſe that moued hym to write of this thing.

I Haue séene and heard in diuerſe countryes, where I haue béene, intolerable perſecutiõ agaynſt Prieſtes, that were compelled by weakenes of nature to mary wyues, for that intent that they might after Gods law, and mans law lyue an honeſt cõuersation in this world. For the which thyng, I say, they haue béene sore perſecuted, some cast out of their countrey, some drowned, some burned, and some beheaded: Finally, all the cruelnes that could bée excogitated againſt them, men thought it to litle.

Wherfore I, that recken my selfe a debtour, and a seruaunt vnto all mẽ in all thynges, wherein I may profite them, and specially in thynges that apperteins to inſtructiõ of their conſcience, hath taken vpõ me, in this cauſe to shew my litle and small learnyng: charitably desiryng thẽ that bée some thing yet againſt this thyng, that they will let them selues bée taught, and instructed by Gods worde, and not to set them selues obſtinately agaynſte the verity of Gods bleſſed worde For our Lord can easely beare and suffer, an vnwilled ignorauncs, but a peruerſe malice and a froward reſiſtyng of his veritie, can hée not suffer, but thereunto is hée a mortall, and an extreme enemy.

Wherefore let men conſider, that if this article doth stand with Gods worde, & with Chriſtes holy doctrine, that if then they reſiſte, and set them selues agaynſt it, how that they doe reſiſte God, the which no man is able to performe. Certaine men there bée, that of a very peruerſe, froward, and obſtinate mynde, doth set them selues agaynſt this article & other moe. And will in no wise admit either reason, or learnyng, but ſtill remaine in their old errour, that they haue conceiued in their braynes, whiche is neither grounded in Gods holy worde, nor yet in the holy conuerſation, or lyuyng of bleſſed and vertuous mẽ. Vnto these men will I write nothyng, bycause I will not trouble them, and bycause I would bée loth to bée torne with dogs téeth, or elles to caſt pearles before swyne.

Two sortes of men.

An other sorte of mẽ there bée, that doth not admit this article, by the reason that they bée ignorant in Scriptures, and know not the very grounde therof, but alonely are led by an old cuſtome, that they haue béen brought vp in. Yet neuertheleſſe they are not obſtinate enemyes vnto the veritie, but would gladly geue place to learnyng, Math. 7.

nyng, and reaſon. And all that they doe, is to ſearch with a ſober meȝkenes, what ẏ truth is. The which thing they are glad to embȝace, as ſone as it is layde to them. Unto theſe men is my wȝityng, and my labour ſpent: whom I doe charitably beſeche, that they will fauourably, and indifferently iudge this my wȝityng. This doe I bynde my ſelfe, to pȝoue this thing (by Gods grace) out of Chriſts holy wozde, by the ſayinges of holy Doctours, by the authozitie of authẽticall ſtozies, by the examples, & pȝactiſe of holy and vertuous men. And if I doe not this, I will bee contented not to bee beleeued, which thyng, if I can perfozme, I thinke all reaſonable men will geeue credence to mee.

Finally, and laſt of all I will ſhew thoſe reaſons, and authozities, wherby that the Pope hath bounde hys Pꝛieſtes to keepe (as hee calleth it) pure chaſtitie. And in concluſion, after my pooze learnyng, I will aſſoyle all thoſe Scriptures and reaſons, and pȝoue that in this thyng they cã haue no place. Unto the perfozmyng of the whiche, Jeſus of his infinite mercy graunt me of his holy ſpirite. Amen.

FIrſt cõmeth bleſſed Saint Paule, whom the Church of God hath alwayes had in reuerence, and hee appȝoueth this doctrine of mine, ſaying:

1. Cor. 7. Let euery man foꝛ auoyding of foznication haue his wife, and euery woman haue her huſband. Marke how bleſſed S. Paule cõmaundeth, where as any daunger of foznication is, that euery man in auoyding of vicious lyuyng, ſhould take a wife. Here is no man excepted, foꝛ the text is foꝛ euery man, and ſpecially foꝛ them, that can not lyue ſole. Unto thẽ it is a ſtreight commaundement to marry: there is none other remedy ozdeined of God to auoyde foznication, but mariage. Yea, and if there were ten other remedies mooze then mariage, yet muſt mariage bee as lawfull as they to bee vſed, yea and a great deale mooze, ſeeyng, that it is ſpecially appoynted of God, foꝛ a remedy in this caſe. Foꝛ as foꝛ all other remedyes (as faſtyng, watchyng, labouryng, chaſtiſing of a mans body) though they bee lawfull, laudable and good, yet bee they not appȝopꝛiately, and onely appoynted of God, to bee remedies againſt foznication: as bleſſed S. Paule doth here appoynt mariage foꝛ to bee.

Pꝛieſtes are mooze bounde to mary foꝛ auoyding vicious liuing thẽ to other chaſtiſing of theyꝛ body, ſeeyng that is Gods ozdinaunce ther unto appointed.

Wherefoꝛe if it bee lawfull foꝛ Pꝛieſtes foꝛ to faſt, and watch, to auoyde foznication, it muſt needes bee mooze lawful foꝛ thẽ to marry wiues, if they bee in daunger of foznication. Foꝛ mariage in this caſe, is not alonely commaunded of God, but it is appointed of God foꝛ an eſpeciall, and ſingular medecine foꝛ this diſeaſe. Marke alſo the occaſion that S. Paul had to wȝite this text to the Cozinthians. There were certeine men amõg them, that reckened it an holines, and a perfectiõ (as certeine mẽ doth now, foꝛ Pꝛieſtes) that Chꝛiſten mẽ ſhould lyue ſole without wiues, as the text declareth. It is good foꝛ a man, not to touch a woman. Now doth bleſſed S. Paule aunſwere to this holy hypocriſie on this maner: To auoyde foznication, ſayth hee, notwithſtandyng your holyneſſe, let euery man mary a wyfe.

Now, if bleſſed Saynt Paule had thought it vnlawfull to marry foꝛ any Chꝛiſten man, then would not hee haue ſayde: Let euery man marry. Marke alſo, that it is not agaynſt the perfection of any Chꝛiſten man foꝛ to marry, but hee is rather bouñde to marry, if hee haue not the gifte of chaſtitie.

Farthermooze, note that S. Paule neither biddeth them, that thought it holynes to bee vnmaryed, to faſt, oꝛ to labour, oꝛ to weare heere. But alonely to marry, as who ſhoulde ſay, God hath ozdayned and appȝoued a lawful and a laudable remedy againſt your ſickneſs. My doctrine is, that you ſhall heare your God, and vſe to your comfoꝛte, thoſe creatures & remedies with thankes geeuing, that God hath appointed, and therewith bee you cõtent, and recken not your ſelues wyſer then God, in helpyng and curyng your diſeaſes. Foꝛ nothing can bee vnlawfull that God doth allowe, and

prowe. And for vsing of Gods creatures and his ordinaunces, in tyme, and place requisite, can no man bee blamed before God. But for refusing of Gods remedies, whē they bee necessary, let no man thinke, that hee shall auoyde Gods daunger.

As for an example: Hee that wyll not eate and drinke when hee is hungry and thirsty, but excogitateth some other remedie of his owne brayne, so long that hee bringeth himselfe in vtter destruction: let no man doubte, but in this case before God hee is a murtherer, and an homicide. I thinke there is no learning to the contrary. Wherefore I woulde that mē should well remember themselues in thys case, & thinke not that they cā inuent a thyng more pleasaunt vnto God, then hee can doe hym selfe. His pleasure is best knowen vnto himselfe. For this cause, I iudge it lawfull for euery Priest that hath not the gift of chastitie, to vse the remedy that God hath ordayned, and also sanctified. Blessed S. Paule saith, that mariage is honorable, and the bedde of them is vndefiled: but fornicatours, and aduoulterers God shal iudge. Marke that S. Paule cauleth it honorable, and a cleane thyng. What presumption is therefore in vs, that recken it a dishonour, and vncleanneſſe for priestes to vse mariage? God sayth, hee shall iudge whoremongers and aduoulterers: but not them that bee maryed. Wherefore yet agayne, after ỹ doctrine of S. Paule, I exhorte all Priestes that can not liue chaste, to receiue Gods remedie with thankes. This is S. Paules doctrine, where hee sayth, I woulde that all men were as I my selfe am. But euery mā hath his proper gift of God, one after this maner, an other after that. I say vnto the vnmaryed men and wydowes, it is good for them, if they abide as I doe. But and if they can not abstaine, let them mary. For it is better to mary then to burne. I can not deuise a clearer text for my purpose then thys is. Saint Paule woulde that euery man had the gifte of chastitie. But in as much as all men hath not one gift, therefore sayth S. Paule, muſt euery man vse himselfe after his gifts. And hee that hath not the gifte of chastitie, S. Paule wyll plainely, that hee shall mary. Hee sayth not, that hee shal chastice himselfe wyth labour and wyth payne, to remedye that weakenes, though I woulde bee contente for my parte gladly, that men shoulde prowe all maner of lawfull remedies, to helpe them to lyue sole. But then, if they can not so continue, I wyll in no wise that they shall refuse mariage, as a thyng vnlawfull and filthy: but rather vse it, and prowe it at the least wise, as they haue done other remedies, that they haue inuented, seeing that God hath instituted this, as a thyng that hee iudgeth for a lawfull and principall remedy. But note, that S. Paule sayth, it is better to mary, then to burne. S. Paules meanynge is, that if man hath not the gifte to extincte the burnyng, and ardent desire of nature, that then hee muſt mary, rather then bee subiecte vnto such concupiscence. S. Paule sayth not, rather mary then to keepe whores. But hys will is, that wee shoulde bee so farre from all whoredome, that wee should not suffer our selues so much as to burne. The whiche precedeth all whoredome, and is lesse in very deede then whoredome. And yet S. Paule wylling vs to auoyde this lesse thing, commaundeth vs to mary: how much more to auoyde open whoredome, & abhominable and detestable vncleanes, that is now vsed shameleſſe in the worlde?

Hebr. 13.

1. Cor. 7.

It is not sufficient before God to auoyde S. Paule with a light and a vayne solution.

I doe not reprowe that Priestes doth lyue sole, I had rather thereto exhorte them. But this I detestate, that men had rather suffer, and allow priestes to liue in whoredome, and in all abhominable fornication, then for to vse that lawfull remedy that God hath both ordayned and sanctified. We haue no mention in any storye, that euer any Priest was burned for keepyng of whores, but for mariage, we haue seene, and doe see dayly, how cruelly and violently men doth persecute them, as though Gods blessed ordinaunce were rather to bee extincted Whoredom is lawful in no case, but mariage is lawfull in diuerse cases, ergo mariage must rather bee alowed then whoredome.

and

and abhorred, then that thyng, ẏ both God, & nature reprooueth. Where is there one man in England, that hath ſo great loue, and reuerence to the holy ſtate of Matrimony, that hée ſhould kéepe a maryed Prieſt in hys houſe? But Prieſtes that lyue vnlawfully agaynſt Gods law, and mans law, and agaynſt all honeſty, and morall vertue, bée in euery mans houſes & company, and rulers, and coũſellers, and controllers. Alas for pitie, what ſhall I ſay to the affectiõs of mens hartes, that thus can winke (I will not ſay allow) at ſuch abhominable thynges. Yea, and the ſelfe ſame men ſhall bée moſt extreme, and cruell vnto a poore ſimple Prieſt, that of a good hart towardes Gods ordinaunce, maryeth a lawfull wife. This Prieſt, I ſay, ſhall neither haue meate, nor drinke of thẽ, nor yet no office of charitye. But the other ſort ſhalbée exalted, and ſet vp in all honour and kept in reuerence and eſtimatiõ. And why? Bycauſe as they ſay they bée good and cleane felowes, and loueth a péece of fleſh well. Theſe blaſphemous wordes haue I heard diuerſe tymes and many. And men ſit and laugh at them, & haue a great reioyſing in them. So ſore is Gods holy ordinaunce, & a morall vertue, & godnes extincted in mens hartes.

O Lord God, and thy mercy were not, how were this world able to cõtinewe, that thus abhominably, and ſhamefully iudgeth of thy halowed, & ſanctified workes? But oh Lord haue thou mercy, and pitie on vs, for the ſwéete bloud of thy ſonne Chriſt Jeſus. Loke not on our ſynnes, oh lord God, for who is able to abyde in thy ſyght. But Lord of thine infinite mercy, ſend downe thy ſpirit into ẏ harts of thy people, that they may bée taught better to iudge of thy heauenly, and Godly inſtitutions. Amen.

To our purpoſe. Other articles that I haue written of, bée ſomething harde, and obſcure, ſauing all onely to theſe men, that bée learned. But as for this article, méethinke it is ſo playne, that I meruayle how any mã ſhould doubt in it. For doubtles it néedeth no learned iudge, but onely a Ciuell, and a morall good man, that is indued with reaſon and equitie. For ſurely mine aduerſaries doth not earneſtly defend pure, and cleane chaſtitie, for they know how fewe prieſtes there bée, that kéepeth their chaſtitie. Yea & they know how ſore they haue punyſhed thoſe men, that hath broken theyr chaſtitie. So that they doe not defend chaſtitie, but rather fylthines, and abhominable lyuing. In ẏ which the moſt part of the ſpiritualtie doth liue. Of this I will bée reported to the recordes of the kinges courts, and alſo to their owne recordes. in ẏ which (if they ſhould bée ſerched) ſhould bée found an innumerable ſort detected of vncleanes. Theſe matters bée open, notwithſtanding I am right ſory to rehearſe it, but I am compelled, ſeing there is ſuch intollerable violẽce vſed agaynſt thoſe poore mẽ that marry, becauſe they would not all onely lyue vertuouſly béfore God, but alſo morally before the world.

I write not agaynſt thoſe Prieſtes that cã, and doe lyue chaſt, but I rather exhorte thẽ ſo to continue,

Let thoſe men at the leſt marrye wyues ſeyng they doe not, nor can not lyue chaſt.

Now let men all onely vſe reaſon in this caſe, and make compariſon betwéene theſe two manner of lyuings, and conſyder which of them doth bécome a polytike order, and a common wealth beſt. Whether is it after reaſon better for mé to defile ſhamefully, other mens wyues, other mens daughters, and other mennes maydens, that no mans ſeruaunt ſhould bée in ſafegarde for mé? or els that I ſhould marry a wyfe of myne owne, as other noble kinges, and Dukes, and other good men of the world hath done, and doth dayly, and ſo to continewe my lyfe with myne other neighbours, after this mãer of good neighbourhod? Let men heare without malyce iudge indifferẽtly. Bleſſed Saint Paule proceedeth farther with this matter, and proueth clearely, that no man ought, or can bée bound to bergynitie, farther then ẏ gift of God doth ſtrengthẽ hym. Thus hée ſayth, as cõcerning birgins, I haue no precept of the Lord, but all onely I geue you my councell, for I thinke it good by ẏ reaſon of this preſent neceſſitie, that a man ſhould lyue ſo. As hée would ſay Vnto bergynitie I can not binde you,

No man doubteth, but a greate many doth thus lyue, the whiche bee greate perſecutors of maryed Prieſtes, I would deſire them not to proue my pacience to ſore. For I know theyr names, and ſome of theyr children. 1. Theſſ 4.

farther

farther then your gift is, nor I doe not recken it a thing necessary to wyn heauen by. For heauen is neyther the price of virginity, nor yet of mariage. But all onely I reken verginitie, a good, and an expedient thing to liue quietly by in this world. For in mariage is many thinges ỹ doth distracte, and disturbeth a mans mynde. That this is S. Paules meanyng, it is wel proued by ỹ texte that followeth. If a virgin doth marry, she doth not sinne but shee shall haue much tẽptation in the flesh. That is to say, many occasyons of disquietnes. But I (sayth S. Paule) would gladly spare you from such occasions, for I would haue you without sorowe. And shée that is vnmaried, hath no care, but how to serue God. But shée that is maryed, hath much care, and sorowe, how shée shall dispatch all worldly busines.

Maryed men shall testifie that Virginitie is a quyet lyfe.

Mariage hath a greater crosse, then virginitie.

So that S. Paule doth clearely declare his meaning, how that virginity is no nearer way to heauen, then mariage is: sayyng that all onely an vnmaried person hath not so many occasyons to bée disquieted, as a maryed hath. Wherefore you shall marke of this text, Fyrst that S. Paule hath no commaundement to binde men to chastitie.

Now commeth it not therefore, ỹ the Pope compelleth all those men ỹ will bée Priestes, fyrst to forsweare mariage, and to vow chastitie? There is no learning, that is able to proue, how that the pope cã make more preceptes of God, then blessed S. Paule could doe. Furthermore, what auctoritie hath the Pope to bynde vs to any thyng, that God, and his holy Apostles hath left frée? All learned men that euer wrote, doth graunt, ỹ there bée two manner of thinges in this world. Some bée called, Res necessariæ. Thinges that bée necessary, and must bée done, bécause that God hath commaunded them. And these things no man is able to make indifferent, but they must nédes bée necessarily done. Other thinges there bée, which lerned mẽ cauleth, Res mediæ. thinges that bée indifferent: and these may bée done, and may bée left, without sinne.

Dist. xxxi. ca. ante triennium.

Res necess.

Et res mediæ.

Now is the nature of these, contrary to the other, for they can not, nor may not bée chaũged into thinges necessary. For that is agaynst their nature, as S. Paule declareth to the Romans and in other diuers places. Roma. 14.

Now is this of trueth, that virginitie is a thyng of him selfe by Gods ordinaunce indifferẽt, and may bée vsed and left without sinne. Wherefore it standeth with no learnyng, that mãs law should chaũge the nature of this thyng, and make it vnto any man a thyng necessarie, whereas after gods commaundement, it is a thyng but indifferent. For that were as much, as both to chaunge Gods ordinaunce, & also ỹ nature of the thing. The which stãdeth with no learnyng. For as the Pope, and all the world can not make of Gods commaundement a coũsell: no more can they of Gods counsell make a precept. Wherfore I cõclude out of blessed S. Paule, that no man ought to vow chastitie, farther then God hath geuen hym the gift. For if chastitie were a thyng that could bée obtayned, and kept through vowyng, then were it not the gift of God, but the gift of vowyng, the whiche is agaynst our maister Christ, and also agaynst blessed S. Paule.

Virginitie is a state indifferent.

Chastitie is Gods gift.

Math. 19. 1. Cor. 7.

Farthermore, let euery man now thinke in him selfe, séeyng that blessed S. Paule had no commaundement ouer chastitie, nor yet would geue any commaundement, whether that it bée the surest way, and the lawfullest to folow the Popes commaundement, or els to folow blessed S. Paules doctrine: the which knew the perfection of virginitie, and also what dyd bécome Priestes for to doe, as well as the Pope doth.

whether it bee better to folow S. Paule, or the Pope.

Moreouer, if men will iudge those Priestes, that will marry, whiche folowyth S. Paules counsell, & doctrine greuously for to sinne, and for to bée heretickes: Why should they not rather iudge those men more greuously for to sinne, & to bée ten tymes worse then heretickes, that folowyth the popes commaundement in not maryyng? Is not S. Paules doctrine as lawful to bée kept, and as farre from ſinne, as the Popes cõmaundements bée? Or is not S. Paule of as great auctoritie in the Churche of God as the Pope is? I thinke yes. Note alſo, that S. Paule would not bynde the Corinthians to virginity, bycauſe hée would not tangle them in a ſnare, but alonely hée exhorteth them to virginitie, as vnto an honeſt & comely thyng, that they might ỹ more quietly ſerue God. Upõ this ſame text, ſayth Athanaſius, that the Apoſtle would compell no mã to kéepe virginitie agaynſt his will, nor hée would not make virginitie a thyng of neceſſitie.

1.Cor.7.

Athanaſius.

1.Cor.7.

Wherefore it muſt nœdes folow. Firſt, that the Pope byndyng men to virginitie, doth lay a ſnare for them, & doth nothyng els (except they haue the gift of chaſtitie) but bryng men in daunger of damnation.

Secõdarily, hée maketh a thyng of neceſſitie, that ỹ holy ghoſt in bleſſed S. Paul durſt not, nor would not doe.

Thyrdly, that thyng that S. Paule reckened onely to conduce, and helpe to quietnes in this preſent lyfe, that ſame thyng maketh the Pope a Sauiour, and a helper to heauẽ, the which is a great blaſphemy to Chriſtes holy bloud, and alſo a peruerſe vſing of Gods bleſſed creatures.

Now let euery Chriſten mã iudge, if this bée charitably done of the pope, yea, whether hée hath authoritie this to doe or not? Let no man, I beſeche hym iudge in this matter after parcialitie, but euen as hée will aunſwere béfore God.

After this bleſſed S. Paule goeth farther, as cõcernyng them that haue a purpoſe, & a promiſe between, God and them, to kéepe their charitie: hys wordes bée theſe: Hée that purpoſeth ſurely in hys hart, hauyng no nœde, but hath power ouer his owne wil, & hath ſo decréed in his hart, ỹ hée will kéepe hys virginitie doth well. Here note firſt, that S. Paule compelleth no man to vow, but hée letteth euery man ſtand to his owne will.

Athan. legit. Et iudicauit in eor de ſuo ſeruare virginitatem ſuam.

Farthermore, bleſſed S. Paul willeth what ſoeuer hée bée, that decréeth in his hart to kéepe virginity, that hée muſt firſt conſider, whether it lyeth in his power to kéepe his decrée or not. If it bée in his power, then ſayth S. Paule doth hée better to kéepe his virginitie, thẽ to marry. But if it lye not in his power to bée chaſt both body & ſoule, then willeth S. Paule that hée marry. Note here, that S. Paul, notwithſtandyng mans decrée, and purpoſe which hée made to kéepe virginity, willeth that hée doe marry, if hée cã not kéepe his decrée & purpoſe. How cõtrary is this to the popes doctrine, whiche rather ſuffereth his Prieſtes to liue in all vnclennes, by ỹ reaſon of their fooliſh promiſe made vnto hym, then hée would ſuffer them to marry wyues after S. Paules holy doctrine. Yea the Pope is not aſhamed, more cruelly to puniſhe a poore woman for marying, then hée doth, if ſhée were a whore. For a Nunne if ſhée marry (ſayth hée) ſhall neuer bée admitted to receyue the bleſſed Sacrament of Chriſt. But if ſhée bée an whore, then (ſayth hée) may ſhée after penaunce, bée admitted to the Sacrament. What is abhorryng of Mariage, if this bée none? For to compare it, yea and to make it worſe thẽ whoredome? what if ſhée haue vowed chaſtitie & hath ſhée not alſo vowed to flye fornication? Now is ſhée bounde vnto virginitie, but by mans law. But for to auoyde fornicatiõ, and whoredome, is Gods commaundement. Wherefore ſée how hygh that the Pope will ſet hym ſelfe aboue God and his holy ordinaunce.

Bleſſed S. Paule diſpenſeth with vnlawfull vowes.

xxxij q.e. de filia, in verbo de filia.

Theſſ.4.

Furthermore S. Paule ſayth, that the will of God is, that we ſhould abſtayne from fornicatiõ, and that euery one of vs ſhould know to kéepe his veſſell in ſanctifiing, and honour. Marke S. Paules saying: Firſt, that it is the will of God, that we ſhould abhorre fornication. Who will now reſiſte the will of God? & not regarde the thyng that God will haue done? I truſt no Chriſten man. Furthermore the will of God is, ỹ euery man ſhould kéepe his veſſell in honour. Now if Prieſtes bée men, and haue not the gift of chaſtetie, then are they bounde to regard this commaundement. For hée ſayth, euery man.

Marke alſo, that bleſſed S. Paule calleth calleth the vessell of maryed men honorable and sanctified. Wherfore thē should it bee vnlawful for a priest to vse a sanctified, & an holy vessell? To possesse other mens vessels in vncleanes is agaynst God, and man. But it is lawfull for any man here by this text, to possesse a vessell of hys owne, the which God hath sanctified and honored. How can man now for any occasion curse that thyng, that God hath sanctified, or make it vncleane, that God hath purified.

1.Tim.4. S.Paule hauing ỹ spirite of God did prophecie, that there should come men in the latter dayes, which should forbid men to marry, and these men should speake lyes in holy hipocrisie. Nowe marke the texte. Men shall forbyd marryage, and that in the latter dayes. The trueth is, that no mā hath forbidden any certayne state of men to marry, but the Pope onely. Wherefore this texte must nedes touch his kingdome, seing that hee is also in the latter dayes. There were certayne heretickes called Taciani, which did condemne fully and wholy all maner of marryage. And though Sayne Paule speaketh against them, yet in very deede the Popes doctrine is not excepted, seeing it is contayned in these latter dayes. For though there were twenty heresies more thē Taciani, yet must the texte bee applied agaynst them all, that doth cōdēne, or despise mariage, in the whole or in the parte. For the text is against them all that doth forbid marryage, and specially in the latter dayes.

Taciani.

The Pope forbydeth mariage.

But hee that doth forbid his priests to marry, doth forbid for so much mariage: therefore the texte maketh agaynst the Pope. Note also, that these men that shall forbid marlage, shall haue an holy colour of hypocrisie. Now hath the Pope forbidden hys Priestes to marry, vnder the colour of holynes, bēcause (as hee sayth) that his Priestes must bee pure, and cleane: As who shoulde say, that maryage were vncleane and vnpure for priestes to vse. What can bee holy hypocrisie, if this bee not hypocrisie? Here is the holy and pure institution of God condemned, as a thyng vncleane for his holy Priestes to vse. Moreouer, the Taciani did not forbid mariage vnder the colour of holynes: but they said it was fully, & wholy an vnlawfull thynge. The which doctrine had no maner of colour. But the Pope sayth, that mariage is good and laudable in it selfe, but his priests bee to pure, and to holy for to vse that simple thyng. For it is not a thynge (sayth hee) that doth become ỹ state of perfecte mē, but it belōgeth to weake & vnperfect men. Now iudge good reader, which of these heresies, eyther Taciani, or Papacy doth pretende ỹ greatest colour of holynes? And yet I am sure ỹ the holy Ghost in S. Paul, did speake both against the greatest, & also smallest hypocrisie. For hee alloweth no maner of fayned holynes.

There were other certayne heretikes called Marciani. These did receiue no man to bee a Christen man, excepte hee woulde refuse mariage. Marke what diuersitie is betweene these heretickes and the Popes learning. The Pope receiueth no priests except they forsweare maryage. The Marcianites, they receiue no man to bee a Christen man, excepte hee forsweare maryage. So that there is no diuersitie betweene the heretikes and the Pope, but that these heretikes doth except a greater number then ỹ Pope doth, and speaketh more generally: but the thynge is all one. For the Marcianites iudgeth mariage vncleane for their sorte, and so doth the Pope for his sorte. Farthermore, Marcian sayth, that among Christen men may bee no temporal marryages, but all coniunctions must bee turned vnto a spirituall mariage. And the selfe same thing saith the Pope of his Priestes. Wherefore seing that they doe graunt how that blessed S. Paul, and also holy fathers hath condemned this heresie of Marcian, it must nedes also folow, that the opinion of the Pope is lykewyse condemned. But yet paraduenture here will bee sayde, as Doctour Eckius, and other mē writing of this matter sayth, how that the Pope doth not condemne marryage, but hee causeth men alone-

The Marcianites & the Pope, all one.

Dist. xxxi. ca. lex.

1.Tim.4.

Obiectio.

The Pope compelleth mē to vow, and for ſo much hee forbiddeth maryage.

ly to kéepe their vowe. I aunſwere, that thys is but a ſmall euaſion. For firſt the Pope cōpelleth them, if they wyll bée prieſtes, to vowe, and to forſweare maryage. For if there were no ſtatute made béefore of the Pope, that all prieſtes ſhould forſweare maryage, then ſhoulde there no vowes bée made of prieſtes againſt mariage, but the thing ſhoulde bée frée. So that the vowe commeth out of the Popes decrée & prohibition, and not the decrée out of the vowe. Therfore ỳ prohibition goeth béefore the vowe. Wherfore this euaſion can haue no place.

A good example agaynſt the Popes practiſes.

Take an exāple. The Emperour maketh a ſtatute, that no man ſhalbée admitted into his ſeruice excepte that hée firſt ſweare to bée an enemy vnto the kyngs grace of England. Is not now the Emperour firſt an enemye vnto the kynges perſon, and then alſo a forbydder of loue and fauour, towardes the kinges grace of Englād? I thynke hys grace wyll take this acte none otherwiſe. For though hée doth not, nor can not make all men the kynges enemies, yet hée maketh all that appertayne to hym, to bée the kinges enemies. So lykewiſe the Pope, though hée doe not forbid all men maryage, yet hée forbyddeth as many as will bée Prieſtes. Yée, and hée will admitte no man to bée prieſt, excepte hée firſt forſweare maryage. So that ỳ vow is firſt made, ere that that prieſthode is géeuen.

Now if hée were not an enemy in very déede vnto maryage, what ſhoulde moue hym to compell hys prieſtes to forſweare maryage? why doth hée not as well bynde all hys Prieſtes to maryage, as hée doth to chaſtitie? Yea, why doth hée not at ỳ leaſt kéepe hymſelfe indifferent, and neither make decrée againſt mariage, nor agaynſt chaſtitie? But the very trueth is, that all the protectours of vncleannes & filthy liuing, doth know very well, that this ſolution is of no ſtrength or valure. For in very déede their hartes doth recken matrimony vncleane and vnpure: and though they wonlde now make a gloſe, yet their owne lawes, ỳ which hée ſprong out of their hartes, doth ſhewe how much they holde of holy & vnpolluted matrimony. The pope doth cal clarks ỳ bée maried, impios, ỳ is, wicked, curſed, vncleane, filthy, and all ỳ nought is. Alſo in an other place, Hée cauleth the matrimony of lay men, a fleſhly, and carnall thyng, and the chaſtitie of his ſpiritualtie, hée cauleth ſpirituall maryage. What ſaith Marcian more then this is? Is not this abhominable doctrine? thus ſhameles to ſpeake of holy and ſanctified matrimony? and to call it fleſhly and carnall? And yet hée is not thus content, but hée cauleth ỳ maryage of prieſtes ſinne, and defenders of the ſame, ſectatores libidinum, the folowers of filthy luſtes, preceptores vitiorum, the teachers of vice, laxantes frena luxuriæ, géeuing libertie to lecherye. Tell mée, if any man woulde ſpeake and repraue ỳ whores of the ſtewes, what other wordes could hée vſe agaynſt them more ſhameful then theſe? And yet they wil not bée noted to condemne matrimony. What miſchiefe can not the deuill cloke, if men woulde beléeue hym.

Diſt. 32. c. Erubeſcant.

D. 31. c. lex.

Diſt. 82. c. Plurimos.

But farthermore, let vs ſée, how holy, and bleſſed that hée reckeneth matrimony for to bée, by the reaſon of honours, and rewardes, that hée geueth vnto prieſts that marry. Firſt, ſaith hée, if a Prieſt doth marry of ignorance, by the reaſon that hée knew not the ſtatute of the pope, forbidding prieſtes to marry, that then this prieſt ſhalle forſake his wife, and then ſhall ſo continue without any farther promotion, as long as hée lyue. And if there bée any Prieſt, that will defend his mariage, by the example of the Prieſtes in the ould lawe, hym doth the Pope priuate of all maner of Eccleſiaſticall honour for euer. Moreouer hée ſayth, that if any ſpirituall mā doth after this decrée marry, then his ſinne ſhall neuer bée forgeuen hym, nor they may neuer afterward handle the bleſſed ſacramēt, becauſe that mariage is a fylthy, and a foule concupiſcence ſayth hée.

Ex. ſt. 82. c. Quia aliquanti.

The popes lawes agaynſt maryage of Prieſtes.

New deuiſed ſinne agaynſt the holy ghoſt, helpe God.

Now iudge indifferently Chriſtē reader, if this bée not diſpiſing of holy matrimony, thus ſhamefully to ſpeake of it, and ſo cruelly to handle them, that holyholyly doth liue in it, hauing nothing for hym, but a lousy decree of Pope Siricius. So that men may perceaue clearely, how that hee byndeth not his prieſtes, by the reaſon of their bowe, as his protectours doth ſay, but by ỹ reaſon of the ſtatute, that Siricius had made afore the prieſtes had bowed any chaſtetie.

1.Tim.3. S. Paule, when hee ſhould order ſuch byſhoppes, as ſhould bee in the Church of God irreprehenſible, among all other thinges hee would that hee Tit.1. ſhould bee a man of one wife, hauing children well brought vp. Here Saint Paule alloweth hym one wife.

How commeth it then, that men ſay, that a Prieſt ſhall haue no wyfe? How agreeth this one, with none? Men muſt at the leaſt wayes graunt, that S. Paule dyd not recken mariage vnpure, & vncleane for a byſhop, for if hee had, hee would not haue graũted hym one wife. Yea moreouer hee ſpeaketh of his children well brought vp, in the which hee admitteth, and alloweth, the coniunction, and copulation betweene them two, for to bee godly, and vertuous. Hee hath other eyes to looke on the bleſſed, and holy coniunction, which is betweene man, and wyfe, then the Pope hath. For the Pope reckeneth it fylthy, and not ſeemely, that a Prieſt ſhould with his holy handes touch a womans body, & with the ſame handes to conſecrate ỹ holy ſacrament. Oh Lord God, what cã not the deuill bring to paſſe? what abhominable holynes of hypocriſye is this? to recken a Prieſt vnpure, and vncleane, becauſe hee hath vſed hym ſelfe in Gods holy ordinaunce? Is not this as much to ſay? God thou art an inuenter, and ordayner of that thing that maketh men vnpure, & vncleane? thou art the auctour of this vncleanes? For hadeſt thou not inſtituted it, ſo had men not vſed it?

Children bee not gotten with looking on women only.

The Pope alloweth his prieſtes to keepe whores, but cannot abyde that they ſhould haue an honeſt wife.

Alas how fayne would I chide. I could here ſay ſome thing, If I would but I may not. Neuertheles it greeueth mee, for I can not tell where to vſe euell wordes, if I ſhall not vſe thẽ againſt ſuch abhominable, and execrable hereſye as this is. But yet I pray you one worde. Why bee not your hãds defiled for handeling of whores fleſhe? Is whores fleſh ſo cleane? that Prieſtes may handle it? and the fleſhe of an honeſt, and a good woman ſo vncleane, that Prieſt muſt bee burned for handeling of it? Fye on the, deuill. Thinkeſt thou that men hath neyther reuerẽce in their hartes toward God, nor yet reaſõ to iudge of theſe things? What can bee ſhameles, if this thing ſhall bee thus alowed amongeſt Chriſten men? Here bee all honeſt women and that in honeſtie, abhorred & deſpiſed, and whores in compariſon of them, bee ſanctified, and bleſſed. But oh thou Lord God, I doe yet beleeue that thou wilt once bee reuenged of this diſhonour, & ſhamefulnes. Moreouer, why doth not oppreſſion, and violence, and theft, defyle Prieſtes handes, as well as mariage? What hath pure matrymonye offended, that it alonely ſhould defyle prieſts hands, and all other maner of vices, and vncleanenes, doth nothing contaminate them. But alas for pitye, how blindly doe we iudge of this holy ordinãce, and inſtitution of God, that thus doe blaſpheme it?

Burne all Prieſtes that bee knowen for open whore maſters, & benefices will bee thẽ better chepe And I will recken you then earneſtly to defend chaſtitie.

What will men ſay to bleſſed S. Paule, where hee ſayth, Haue we not power to lead about a ſyſter to wife, as well as the bretheren of the Lord, and as Cephas? I will not diſpute, whether that Paule had a wife or not But this I am ſure, that this text doth clearely proue, and that after ỹ mind of great doctours how that Peter, & other Apoſtles had wiues. Wherefore then ſhould it bee vnlawfull for our prieſtes to marry? Bee our prieſts holier thẽ S. Peter & other Apoſtles? Or is mariage now more vnlawfull, then it was then? But peraduenture here will bee ſayd, that the Apoſtles had wiues before ỹ Chriſt dyd chuſe thẽ, but afterward they forſoke their wyues, and folowed Chriſt.

1. Cor. 9.

A great blaſphemy agaynſte Chriſt and his holy Apoſtles.

To this I anſwere, that it is not inough ſo to ſay. For ſeeing that they haue graunted, how the apoſtles had wiues, whẽ they were cauled, it ſtandeth with reaſõ, that theſe men ſhould proue by an open ſcripture, that the Apoſtles after theyr caulyng, dyd forſake theyr wyues. Yea, I wyll goe farther wyth them, and ſay playnely, that is an abhominable lye, & a great blaſphemy agaynſt God, and his holy Apoſtles, to ſay that they had forſaken theyr wyues. For our M. Chriſt taught them not to forſake their wyues, but in any wyſe to kæpe thē, ſauing alonely for fornication. Now is the election vntō Apoſtleſhip, neyther fornication, nor yet like vnto fornication. Wherefore I ſay boldely, that it is a falſe lye agaynſt the holy Apoſtles, to ſay that they forſoke their wyues. Also this ſame place of S. Paule doth proue it a falſe lye. For S. Paule ſpeaketh, how S. Peter after hys Apoſtleſhyp, and alſo other diſciples of Chriſt, caryed theyr wyues about wyth them, when they went a preaching. Wherefore it is but a lye, to ſay, that they had forſaken them.

Math. 19.

The Apoſtles forſooke not their wiues as men dreame.

Now Chriſten reader, here haue I performed I truſt, one part of my promiſe, that is to ſay, I haue proued this article of myne by Gods holy worde ſo playnely, that no man (I truſt) can or will deny, but that theſe Scriptures bæ ſufficient to moue me and al other mē to bæ of this doctrine that I am of. The ſecond part of my promiſe was to proue this alſo by holy doctours. Vnto the which, I will now prepare my ſelfe.

But afore all thinges, I louingly, and charitably, deſyre the reader to ſet apart all partialitie and malice, and to iudge indifferently of my doctrine, as hæ will aunſwere at ỹ dread full day of dœme, and not to refuſe that thyng that is truth, for hatred, or diſpleaſure of my perſon: For ſurely myne intent is neyther to hurte, or harme, nor yet diſpleaſe (as much as lyeth in mæ) any perſon. And though I haue in tymes paſt, ſomwhat behemently written agaynſt thoſe thinges that I thought errours: yet would I require hartely euery man to weye euery thyng indifferently by hymſelf, and conſider how I haue taken vpon mæ, not to enuey agaynſt any perſō, but alonely to fight agaynſt that deuilliſhe doctrine, which is diſhonour to Chriſt and hys bleſſed Woude, and perillous and dampnable vnto all Chriſten mens ſoules.

Secondarily, I haue bæne wrongfully, and vncharitably handeled, as God and all good men doth knowe, the which I will bæ bounde to proue whenſoeuer it ſhall pleaſe God and the kyng to aſſigne indifferent iudges to heare mæ, and myne aduerſaries. Now, let no mā require in mæ, that hæ can not finde in hymſelfe, that is tō ſay, that I can ſo patiently, and ſo eaſely beare and ſuffer theſe intollerable wronges, as I ought for to doe, yea and paraduenture as I gladly woulde doe. Wherefore I confeſſe, that many wordes hath bæne ſharpely written by mæ, the which I would gladly had bæne more charitabiyer written, but then God had not gæuē mæ ſo great patience. Wherefore I truſt now by Gods grace, ſomethyng more temperately to ſpeake, deſiring euery good man of hys charitie, to helpe mæ wyth his deuoute prayer. Amen.

To our purpoſe. Fyrſt commeth bleſſed S. Ciprian, of whom was aſked a queſtion, what ſhould bæ done wyth thoſe religious perſonnes, that could not kæpe theyr chaſtitie as they had vowed. Theſe bæ hys wordes. Thou doeſt aſke what wæ doe iudge of vyrgins, the which after they haue decreed to liue chaſtly, are afterward founde in one bedde wyth a man. Of the which thou ſayſt that one of them was a Deacon. Wæ doe wyth great ſorow ſee ỹ great ruine of many perſons, which cōmeth by ỹ reaſō of ſuch vnlawfull and perillous companying togither. Wherefore if they haue dedicate them ſelues vnto Chriſt, out of fayth to liue purely, and chaſtly, then let them ſo remayne wyth out any fable, and ſtrongly, and ſtedfaſtly to abyde the rewarde of virginitie. But and if they wyll not abyde, or els can not abyde, then is it better to marry, then for to fall into the fier of concupiſcence, and let them gæue vnto the brethren and ſiſterne none occaſion of ſclaunder. &c. I doe for my parte re-require no more then blessed Cyprian doth here teach, that is to say, if Priestes can lyue sole, I beseeche our Lord to reward them for it, & geue them grace to continue. But if they can not, I woulde haue no snare layd for their soules, nor yet haue them compelled to a thyng that they can not kepe. But I woulde the thyng shoulde bee indifferent for them that can lyue chaste, so to remayne. And they that haue not the gifte, nor can not so lyue, for to vse that lawfull remedy that God hath ordained. What hath men to doe, or what moueth thē to compell Priestes not to marry, as long as God is contēted with priests wedlocke? Let no man thynke that such a compulsion is acceptable to God. And if men wyll not bee contēted with this doctrine, that is so good, so reasonable, and so honest, what cā I say to it? I must bee content, I can doe no more, but say my learnyng, and let God alone wyth hys punishment.

The marryage of Priestes is allowed of God, and therefore not to bee condemned of men.

Also blessed S. Augustine writing of thys same matter, sayth these wordes: Certayne men doe affirme those men to bee aduoutrers, that doth marry after they haue vowed chastitie: but I doe affirme, that those men doe greuously sinne, the which doth separate them. &c.

Aug. de bono coniugali ad Iulianum.

Note first that S. Augustine wryteth of them that had vowed chastitie, And yet notwithstanding hee woulde that those men shoulde continue in their marryage togither. The which thyng hee would neuer haue suffered if it had beene vnlawfull and heresie, as men woulde make it now a dayes.

Secondarily obserue that there were in his dayes (as bee now many in ours) that thought it a greuous sinne, for a man to marry after hys vowe. And yet this opinion S. Augustine doth condemne.

S. Aug. dispenseth wyth vowes where danger is of fornication.

Now let men admit this doctrine of S. Augustine, and I wil require no more. And if they will condemne me, then let them also condemne S. Augustine, for I haue learned it of hym. Also blessed S. Ambrose, writeth of virginitie in this maner: Chastitie of body ought to bee desired of vs. The which thyng I doe geue for a cōsell, and doe not commaūde it imperiously. For virginitie is a thyng alonely, that ought to bee counsayled, but not to bee commaunded, it is rather a thyng of voluntary will, then of a precept. &c. Note how S. Ambrose teacheth, how that virginitie ought not to bee required, as vnder a precept. Wherfore it must nedes folow, that the Popes doctrine is vnlawfull, whē hee commaundeth, that no man shall bee a Priest, except hee vow chastitie. For here the Pope compelleth men vnder a colour, for to vow chastitie. As for an example.

Ambro. 32. quest. cap. 1. Integritas.

It chanceth me to meete by the way a theef, the which sayth vnto me. Thou shalt not goe ouer ỳ bridge, except thou wilt deliuer mē thy purse. Now is it of trueth, that I may chose whether I will goe ouer the bridge or not, but yet this man doth violence, for cōpellyng mee either to goe backe agayne, or els to lose my purse, if that I will goe ouer. And I doubt not, but the kynges lawe will both condemne hym for doyng violence, and also take him for a theefe. So likewise the pope doth wrong, when hee sayth, I shall not bee a priest, except that I first vow chastitie. I say, that this condition is vnlawfull, and it is wrongfully done, to bynde me to any thyng vnder any condition, that God hath left free to me. Moreouer, our M. Christ dio not require that condition of hys priests. Wherfore it must nedes folow, that it is not a thyng, that of necessitie belongeth to Priesthode.

Vowes that haue vnlawfull conditions are not to bee obserued.

Also S. Hierome approueth this doctrine of mine, saying: Let bishops, and priestes read this thyng (hee speaketh agaynst mispendyng of goodes, that is offered to helpe poore men with) the which doth teach their children prophane letters, and maketh them to read commedies, and to sing baudy songes of iesters, and these children they finde of the charges of the church. &c. Obserue this ỳ S. Hierom speaketh here of Bysshops, and priests children, the whiche they could not haue, if they were vnmaryed. For it is not to bée ſuppoſed, that S. Hierome ſpeaketh of baſtardes, or of whores children, for then hée would haue vſed other wordes. So that good reader, it is cleare, after the doctrine of holy Doctours, that it is lawful for Prieſtes to haue wiues, and ſpecially if they can not lyue ſole.

But now will we goe farther, and ſée what holy councels hath ordeined in this cauſe. The trueth is that ỹ deuill hath of long tyme harped on this ſtryng, to forbyd Prieſtes Matrimony. Not for any deuotion, that hée had to virginitie, for hée knew well men could not kéepe it, farther then their gifts were: but alonely that hée might lay a ſnare for mens ſoules, and alſo bring the holy inſtitution, and ordinaunce of God into a contempt, and a deſpiſing. But God hath alwayes of hys infinite mercy, ſtyred vp ſome good man to reſiſte hym. We doe read in authenticall ſtories, that in the coũcell of Nicene, certeine men went about to haue priuated Prieſtes from their wyues. But almighty God dyd let them. The wordes of the ſtories bée theſe. The Councell of Nicene, willyng to reforme the lyfe of men, dyd ſet certayne lawes, the which we call Canones: among the whiche, certayne men would haue had a lawe to bée brought in, that Byſhops, prieſts, Deacons, and Subdeacons, ſhould not lye with their wyues, which they had maryed, before their cõſecratiõ. But Paphnutius a confeſſour, dyd withſtand them and ſayd, that their mariage was honorable, and it was pure chaſtitie for thẽ to lye with their wyues. So that the Coũcell was perſuaded, not to make any ſuch law, affirmyng it for to bée a greuous occaſion both vnto them, & alſo vnto their wyues of fornication. And this thyng dyd Paphnutius, though that hée hymſelfe was vnmaryed. The Councell dyd alowe this ſentence. So that nothyng was decréed, as cõcernyng this thyng: but euery man was left vnto hys frée will, and not bounde of any neceſſitie. &c.

The holy Councell.

Ex tripertita hiſtoria. Diſt. xxxi. ca. Nicena.

Here is to bée noted, that this holy Coũcell dyd not recken it an vnpure, or a filthye thyng, for a Byſhop, or a Prieſt, to cõpany with his wyfe. But they doe graũt, that it is a pure, and a cleane chaſtitie for a Prieſt to company with his wife. The which is cleare ly agaynſt ỹ Pope. For hée ſayth, that it is fleſhly, and carnall, and that their handes bée defiled, and they made vnworthy thereby, to handle the bleſſed Sacramentes. But here will bée ſayd that theſe mẽ had wyues before their conſecration, the whiche thyng they will alſo graunt, that a maryed man may bée choſen a Byſhop, & alſo kéepe his wife afterward. But hée may not marry after hys cõſecration, that had no wyfe before.

The Coũncell of Nicene dyd not thinke it an vnmeete thing for a Byſhop to haue a wife.

To this I aunſwere, that it is no lawfull ſolution, thus to ſay. For if it bée lawfull for a mã to kéepe his wyfe after his Prieſthode: why ſhall it not bée as lawfull for hym to take a wyfe after hys cõſecration? What thyng is there in hys matrimony, that is made after hys conſecration, that was not in his matrimony before hys conſecration? Or for what cauſe dyd hée take a wyfe before hys conſecration? If hée dyd it to auoyde fornication, then is hée now much more bound to take a wyfe then before: for it becommeth hym a great deale worſe to lyue in fornication, after hys conſecratiõ, then hée dyd before. But theſe mẽ that maketh this lighte ſolution, doe not héede this matter truely before God. For it is not their meanyng, that maryed men ſhould either bée Byſhops, or Prieſtes. For let them ſhew me in all their chronicles, that euer any maryed man was choſen to bée a byſhop, ſince they had made lawes, that Prieſtes ſhould haue no wyues, and then I wil beléeue them: But alonely they ſéeke an euaſion, how to defende the matter by. For I dare ſay, if any man ſhould goe aboute to chuſe a maried man to bée a byſhop, or els a perſon, they would thinke hée were mad. In ſo much that ſome of them hath ſayd, that mariage was ſo vnlawfull for Prieſtes, that they haue ſayned, ỹ holye Apoſtles for to forſake their wiues, after their election. How ſtãdeth theſe two togeathers? that maryed

The Pope will not ſuffer that maryed mẽ ſhalbe choſen Byſhops.

Diſt. xxxi. ca. Omnino.

If maryed men may be Bysshops, then second brethren shall no longer bee beggers.

ryed men may bée bishops, I feare me the bysheprickes will sone bée gotten out of their handes, and most parte also of all benefices. Wherefore I woulde counsell them rather to graunt that Prieſtes myght haue wiues, then for maried men to bée made bysshops.

Furthermore marke, that the holy counsell made no lawe, whether ỹ Prieſt should marry after their consecration or not. Wherefore it muſt nédes bée taken away of them as frée and an indifferẽt thing, for a prieſt to marry after his cõsecratiõ or not. For if they had reckened it vnlawfull for hym to marry, then would they haue forbidden it. For the counsell was gathered for to reforme those thinges ỹ were amiſſe, as the text saith clearely. Moreouer, if it had chaunced then a prieſt to haue maried after his consecration, hée had not offended, for there was no lawe at that day, that did forbyd hym. Therefore, it is now no neceſſary artycle.

If men will not bée content with these auctorities: yet somewhat to ſatiſfye them, I will bringe them an other lawe, which the Papiſtes calleth Canon Apoſtolorum, the wordes bée these. If any man doth teach, that a Prieſt by ỹ reason of his order ought to forſake his wyfe, curſed bée hée. &c. Marke of this lawe, that for colour of holines, no mã ought to forſake their wyues. Wherefore it muſt nédes folowe, that for prieſts to marry wiues after their consecration is not againſt their holynes. Note also, that the text saith: how Prieſts had wiues of their owne, and went not a borowing, as they doe now. We reade in the counſell of Gangrens, how they made this decrée. If any man doth iudge or condemne a Prieſt that is maried, that hée may not, by the reason of his mariage doe sacrifyce, but will abſtayne from his maſſe by the reaſon thereof, curſed bée hée. &c. Fyrſt you ſhall know the occaſion wherefore this counſell was gathered.

Canon Apoſt.

Conſilium Gangrens. Canon. 4.

There was a certayne heretyke called Euſtachius, the which dyd among all other hereſyes teach, that no maried man could be ſaued. Also he taught that Prieſts, which dyd marry, ought for to bée deſpiſed, and in no wiſe for to handle the bleſſed ſacramentes.

Euſtachius, Hereticus.

Againſt this heretick, is this decrée made. Now let euery mã iudge what diuerſitie is betwéene this heretyke, and the Popes doctrine. This heretyke ſayth, that mariage is vnpure, & vncleane, and that a maryed Prieſt may not touch the ſacramentes. The ſelfe and the ſame doctrine ſayth the Pope in diuers places: and eſpecially in a chapter, ỹ beginneth vó Nullum. Where hée ſayth, that no bysshop ſhall preſume to conſecrate any Deacon, except hée will fyrſt vow chaſtitie. For no man ought to bée admitted (ſayth hée) to ſerue at the aulter, except his chaſtitie bée fyrſt knowen.

Diſt. 28.

Alſo in an other chapter hée ſayth, They that eyther kéepe whores, or els marry wiues, ſhalbe priuated of their benefices. For they are vnworthy for to bée in the temple of God, & to touch the holy veſſels of the Church, that doth vſe them ſelues in ſuch vncleanes, ſayth hée. What is condemning of matrymony, if this bée not? Hée cõpareth whordome and matrymony to bée like cleane, the which did neuer none heretyke. The Pope goeth further, and ſayth: No man may bée eyther Prieſt, or Deacon, that is maryed, except they will promiſe to forſake their wiues. &c. These lawes make againſt them that ſay, how that maryed men may bée Prieſtes. The ſame thyng doth the Pope alſo confyrme in dyuers other places of his lawe, hauing none other cauſe why, but only becauſe (as hée ſayth) Prieſtes muſt bée pure, and cleane. This ſame cauſe had alſo Euſtachius. For he reckened as the Pope doth, how maryage, was vnpure, and vncleane, and dyd therefore forbyd Prieſts to marry. Yea in our dayes, I dare ſay, that no man forbiddeth Prieſts to marry, but only they that reckẽ mariage vncleane. But let vs goe farther, and ſée what holy counſels haue decréed, as conſerning Prieſtes matrimony.

Diſt. 28. c. Decernimus.

Sauyng the Pope, & Euſtachius.

Diſt. 28. Diſt. 28. c. Aſſumi, & preterea.

We doe reade in a counſell, that is called the fyrſt Sinod, theſe wordes:

Diſt. 31. ca. ſacerdotibus Epiſcopi. Tenere eos. Si laicus.

6. Sinodus.

Conſidering ý it is decréed amongeſt the lawes made by thē of Rome, that no deacon, nor Prieſt, ſhall company with their wiues. Therefore we not withſtanding that decrée, folowing ý rules of the Apoſtles, and the conſtitutions of holy men, wyll, that from thys day forth, maryage ſhal bée lawfull, in no wyſe diſſoluyng the matrimony betwéene them & their wiues, nor depriuing thē of their familiarity in time conuenient. Whoſoeuer ther fore ſhall bee founde able of the order of Deacon, Subdeacon, or of Prieſthode, wée wyll that no ſuch men bée prohibited to aſcende the dignities afore ſayd, for the cohabitation of their wyues: Nor that they bée conſtrained at the reſceite of their orders, to profeſſe chaſtitie, or to abſtayne from the company of their lawfull wyues.

This Counſell doth fully eſtabliſh and confirme the mariage of Prieſts.

It folowеth, if any man preſume ther fore agaynſt the Canons of the Apoſtles to depriue Prieſtes, or Deacons from the copulation and felowſhip of their lawfull wyues, let ſuch a man bée depoſed. Semblably, both prieſts and Deacons, which putteth away their wyues vnder the colour of holynes, let them bée excommunicated. But if they continue in the ſame, let them bée depoſed.

Note how thys counſell doth condemne by name the Popes decrée, which hath commaunded ſpirituall men to forſake their wyues. And in thys is alſo to bée obſerued, that the euaſion of the Papiſtes, when they ſay, that marryed mē may be prieſts, is a falſe lye. For the Pope and they dyd neuer admit that, as this counſell witneſſeth, but alonely that they are driuen to a narrow exigent, by ý violence of our argumentes, & they haue none other euaſion to delude the people by. Wherefore they bée compelled to helpe themſelues with ſuch a lye. For here is it playnely in thys Counſell declared, how the Pope, & they haue prohibited thoſe Prieſtes ý were marryed, to cōpany with their wyues, and would not admit them to mynyſter, bēfore they had forſaken their wiues.

Farthermore, note how that thys counſell doth alleadge for them, the rules of the holy Apoſtles, and the cōſtitutions of bleſſed men. What Chriſten man wyll nowe ſet hym ſelfe agaynſt thys holy counſell, the which hath ſo good auctoritie for it? Afterwarde it is to bée marked, how that this counſell doth commaunde, that no man ſhall bowe chaſtitie, whē bée ſhall bée conſecrated, the which thing is clearely agaynſt the Pope, that cōpelleth all hys prieſtes to bowe chaſtitie, bēfore they bée ſacred.

The popes doctrine is condemned by a Counſell.

Now let euery Chriſten mā iudge whether it bée better, or ſurer to follow the Pope hauing none auctoritie for hym, and bēyng alſo but one mā: then to follow thys holy Cōunſel, hauyng for it the auctorite of the holy Apoſtles, and of other bleſſed men.

Finally, marke how that this bleſſed counſell doth depoſe all thoſe that doth priuate Prieſtes from the companye of a lawfull wyfe. Out of the which doth follow, that the Pope, & all hys adherentes bée ipſo iure depoſed. And if they remayne in their errour, they bée excōmunicated. Wherfore I conclude out of this counſell, that Prieſtes may lawfully haue wiues. Wée haue alſo eūen there theſe wordes. It is open that neither Deacons, nor ſubdeacons, ought to bée forbidden from maryage. &c. If thys bée not playne? I can not tell what is playne. Wherfore Gratianus concludeth, that whether hée bée Prieſt, Deacon, ſubdeacon, he may lawfully vſe matrimony. If men will not bée content wyth theſe ſayinges, I can not tell will ſatiſfie them. Reaſonable men ought not to fight both agaynſt God and man. But yet let vs goe farther, and ſe what the Popes lawe ſayth more.

Innocent the thirde writeth in his decretalles, on thys maner: Thoſe Prieſtes, that after the maner of the countrey, hath not forſaken the coniunctiō of maryage, if they doe breake their wedlocke, ought greuouſly to bée puniſhed, ſeyng that they may vſe lawfully matrimony. ry. Therefore it muſt nedes follow, that Prieſtes matrimony is not forbidden by Gods lawe. And if it bee not forbidden by Gods lawe: what charitie is in the Pope to compell mē ſo violently vnto the thyng, ỹ which God hath not bounde thē to. Is it not a cruell thyng for the Pope to burne a man as an hereticke, becauſe that hee keepeth not his commaundement and lyueth not in open whoredome? Why doth hee not commaunde hym as well neyther to hunger, nor yet to thyrſt? And if hee eyther hunger, or thyrſt, why doth hee not forbid hym to eate and to drinke? It is as much in our power to bowe chaſtitie, and to keepe it, if wee haue not the gift of God, as it is to bowe that wee wyll neyther hunger nor thyrſt: for they are both inclinations of nature, implanted of God. For as Cicero ſayth, and alſo the Emperour in hys lawe: wee are naturally inclined vnto the coniunction that is in matrimony, for cauſe of propagation. And it is as much in our handes, neyther to hunger nor to thyrſt, as it is to chaunge this naturall inclination. And as wee when wee are hungry and thirſty, cā not abſtayne from eatyng and drinking: no more can wee keepe our chaſtitie (notwythſtanding our bowe) if God haue not geuen vs the gyft. Mē may here pleaſe themſelues, and ſtand in their owne conſeyte, & ſay how they can inuent many remedies to keepe their chaſtitie by.

Cicero. lib. i. officiorū. Iuſtinianus lib. i. cap. Ius naturale.

It is implanted in nature to marry, if Gods gift doe not chaūge ou nature.

But I dare ſay, they woulde not for all the clothes that belongeth to their backes, that the pureñes, and cleannes of their hartes were writtē in great letters, & ſet vp on ỹ church doze. Wherfore I woulde deſire mē to bee contented, and to ſet aſide all hipocriſie, and ſpeake the trueth, as it is written in their hartes: for God wyll not bee deceaued, nor yet mocked. And doubtles, if I coulde not ſhewe infinite examples, how that Prieſtes neyther doe, nor yet cā keepe their chaſtitie, mē myght well blame mee for mouyng thys article. But now ſeeyng that their lyuyng doth teſtifie my doctrine, and that to ỹ great offence and ſclaunder of Chriſtes holy Church, and alſo to the great rebuke and ſhame of many a good mans childe: yea finally to the dampnation of many a deare ſoule: Mee thynke men ought to bee contēt and to thāke mee for takyng of ſo great labours, for deliueraunce of their ſoules, and alſo for mayntenaūce of honeſty, and and good morall vertue, according to Gods lawe, and mans lawe.

But let vs proceede farther to proue thys matter. The maiſter of the ſentēces, writeth on thys maner: Our weakenes is prone to fall into filthynes, but it is helped wyth honeſt maryage. And the thyng that is vnto whole men an office, is vnto ſicke mē a remedy. Marke how the M. of the Sentences ſayth, that wee are ready to fall into filthynes? And how that maryage is an honeſt remedy? How can men then after their owne learning condemne mariage, as no honeſt thyng? ſeeyng that their owne Clarkes cauleth it honeſt? Moreouer the maiſter of the Sentēces will, that both perfect and vnperfect may vſe this honeſt thyng: for to the firſt it is an office, & to the other it is a neceſſary remedy. Ieſus how woulde men cry agaynſt vs poore men, if they had halfe ſo much againſt vs, as wee haue againſt them. But our Lorde ſende them hys grace, and molifie their hartes. Amen.

Magiſter Sētentiarum. lib. ij. Diſt. xx.

We haue alſo in the Popes law a title, De filijs Presbyterorum, in the which there bee many chapters written to the Byſhops of Englande, as concernyng Prieſtes children. Wher fore it is to bee ſuppoſed, that Prieſts had then wyues. And if they had thē, why may they not now? By what authoritie are our Prieſts now more compelled then they were? Haue our Prieſtes nowe more articles of their fayth then they had? But yet here will bee ſayd, that the Popes law ſpeaketh of baſtardes, and not of lawfull children. Mee thynketh that this ſame is not charitably aunſwered, for here they doe accuſe of fornication many an honeſt Prieſt, agaynſt whom they haue alonely but a light ſuppoſition.

Ext. de filijs Preſ. cap. ad preſentiam. Veniēs. Propoſuit. Extranſmiſſa.

For

For they that made this aunſwere, knew not thoſe men, nor yet they lyuyng. And the text ſpeaketh but of Prieſtes children, & not of baſtardes.

I doe not ſo much defame holy Prieſthode as they doe that graunt thē to haue baſtardes.

Farthermore by this ſolution is many an honeſt man defamed, for to bee a baſtard, the whiche is an euill name, and me thinke vncharitably layd by theſe men vnto their charges. Wherefore note, that theſe men doth ſore defame prieſthode, & that agaynſt the order of charitie, that had rather graunt all theſe Prieſtes, that the law ſpeaketh of (which is no ſmall nōber) for to bee breakers of their vow, and to bee open whoremaiſters, yea, and alſo their children to bee baſtardes, rather then they would graūt that thoſe Prieſtes had lawfull wyues. The which were neither agaynſt honeſty, nor yet the order of prieſthode. Wherfore if I ſhoulde thus haue defamed Prieſtes, & their children, men would ſore haue beene greued with me: yea I am afrayde, that ſome men will bee diſpleaſed with me, alonely bycauſe I doe write agaynſt thoſe prieſtes, whō I know of ſurety to bee naught, if hauyng of children can teſtifie it.

But what will they ſay to ỹ popes law in the ſame place, whoſe wordes bee theſe. Thou doeſt aſke of vs (ſaith the Pope, to the Byſhop of Caſtell) whether that theſe men, that hath Prieſtes to their fathers, may bee promoted to holy orders or not, if they bee of good, and honeſt demeanour, & well learned. To this we aunſwere (ſayth the Pope) that if they bee gottē of lawfull marriage, & there bee none other Canonicall impediment, then may they lawfully bee promoted vnto holy orders, and may enioy that ſame benefice, which their fathers had before, &c.

Extra. lib. i de filijs preſbyterum. c. Ad hac.

This no mā cā not deny, but ỹ law ſpeaketh of Prieſtes children, ỹ were gotten in lawfull matrimony. Wherfore it muſt nedes follow, ỹ Prieſtes were then maryed: yea, and the lawe calleth their marriage lawfull, which muſt alſo bee noted: ſo ỹ men may ſee that this doctrine of myne is no new thyng, but it is elder then their law.

Alſo in that ſame title, the Pope ſayth, we haue vnderſtanded, that N. borne, and gotten in Prieſthode of a lawfull wife, hath alwayes had an affection to ſerue God in the office of a ſpirituall man. &c. Here note, that the Pope ſpeaketh of Prieſtes children: yea, and of them that were gotten in lawfull marriage, and not in fornication. Wherfore the Pope ſuppoſeth, that Prieſtes may haue a lawfull matrimony. And therfore mee thinketh, that when men finde in the law, mention made of Prieſtes children, they ſhould rather ſuppoſe them to bee gotten in matrimony, then in fornicatiō, both for the honeſty of the father, mother, and alſo of the childe: ſpecially ſeeyng ỹ Prieſtes had wyues in thoſe dayes. And it ſtādeth alſo more with honeſty of Prieſthode, to graunt that they had wyues, rather then whores.

Ibidem. cap. Litteras.

Now let vs ſee what the Emperours lawe ſayth to Prieſtes wyues. We will (ſayth hee) that all maner of ſpirituall men ſhal haue this preroga-tiue, that their wyues, and their children, and their ſeruauntes, that is for to ſay, both male, and female, ſhall bee free from an homage, whiche is called Perāgariam. Here is to bee noted, that the Emperour doth not alonely admit Prieſtes matrimony, but alſo he honoreth it with a priuilege, & a prerogatiue, the whiche hee would not haue done, if hee had iudged their matrimony vnlawfull. Wherefore men may ſee, if they will, how indifferent our forefathers hath beene vnto this holy ſtate of matrimony. And it wold not become vs euill, if we leaned them better to iudge of theſe thyngs, that God our maker hath both inſtituted and ſanctified.

Imperator Conſtan. le-ge. Omnis Pa. Ad petrangariam. Codice de Epiſ. & cle.

Now good reader haue I proued this article by Gods holy word, by the ſayinges of Doctours, by the authoritie of Councels, & by ſome certaine lawes, both Emperiall, and Popiſh. Wherfore now wil I goe farther vnto the hyſtories, and proue this thing by examples, and practiſe of holy mē.

Firſt, we haue the example of bleſſed S. Peter, the which had doubtles a wyfe, as it may bee proued by Mathew, which ſayth: Quod ſocrus Petri Math. 8.

tenetenebatur magnis febribus. Peters wyues mother had a gret agew. Now, if Peter had a wife, as this text is clere, what thyng should forbyd our prestes mariage? I thinke they are not bounde to more chastitie, then Peter was? Nor it will not helpe to say, that hee forsoke his wife after his calling. For the Scripture here speaketh of Peters wyues mother. Why doe they not as well take hys wyues mothers name awaye, as they take away hys wife? But I haue aunswered to this reason largely inough before.

S. Peter had a wife.

Actes. xi.

Also Philippe the Euangelist, had three daughters, the whiche hee could not haue had, if that hee had had no wyfe: for I thinke there is no good mā that will reckē them to bee bastardes, and whores children. Neither it can helpe, to saye, that these children were borne before hys electiō, for this is but a simple saying, and no probatiō. And it is not inough to say, seeyng that men will haue it for so necessary an article: but men must also prouе it by open Scriptures. For els I may saye by as good authoritie, that these daughters were borne after hys election, as other mē say, how they were borne before hys election. And I haue better supposition for me out of the texte, then they haue: for they are not called Philips daughters alonely, but Philippe the Euangelist daughters. Wherefore they may by a good reason say, they were not Philippes daughters, as they may say, that their father was none Euangelist.

Philip the Euangelist was married.

Ex tripertita historia. lib. 9. cap. xxxviij.

We doe read in Tripertita Historia these wordes: All Prestes in the orientall Church doth abstayne with a free will, of no necessitie frō wyues. For many of them, in tyme whē they bee bishops, haue had of their lawful wiues children. Note how this history declareth clearely, that prestes in the orientall Church were not compelled to bowe chastitie. Secondarily the history cauleth prestes wiues lawfull wiues. And also how the bishops had children, after their consecration. Now doth all learned men know, that the orientall Church receiueth their maners nerer of the Apostles then we.

Wherefore it is to bee presupposed that these men toke their custome of marryage, of the holy Apostels. And at the least wise, it must followe, that if their prestes may haue wiues lawfully, that then our prestes may haue also. For God hath layde none other burthen on our Prestes neckes, thē hee had on theirs.

Moreouer we doe reade in Eccleſiaſtica Hiſtoria, that Penitus bishop of a citie called Gnoseos, would haue made a decree, the prestes should haue bowed chastitie. But Dionisius Bishop of Chorinth, wrote agaynst hym and required hym, that hee would not lay no necessitie of compulsed chastity in other mens neckes? Penitus followed his counsell. Here you may see, the deuell hath beene of long tyme aboute to bring in this snare for prestes but God hath resisted hym.

Li. iiij. ca. xxij.

Penitus. Dionisius.

We haue also in the same history, agaynst those men, that did despise mariage, a godly saying which is this what will they reproue the Apostles? Peter, and Philip had wiues, and did also geue their daughters to mariage. In so much as S. Peter did crye vnto his wyfe, when shee should bee led vnto her passion, and called her by her name, and sayde vnto her: Oh deare wyfe, remember our Lord. Heare is it cleare, that Peter had a wife. And heare is also against them that sayth, how the Peter forsoke his wife, which is here proued a false lye.

Li. iij. ca. xxx.

A playne place to proue that Peter had a wife.

Moreouer, Spiridon the bishop of Cipres, hauing the gift of prophecye, had also a daughter, whose name was called Irenem, which after her faithfull seruice dyed a virgin. Heare is it cleare, the this holy man had a daughter, which hee could not haue, if hee had had no wife. Farthermore we do reade, that Policrates, bishop of Ephesum, doth shew, that seuen of his parentes kynially were bishops in order before hym, and hee hym selfe was the eyght. Now coulde not this bee, that his fathers from the seuenth degree could haue beene bishops, if bishops had had no wiues, for the text is cleare of his fathers, and not of his kynsmen. We thinke this is a cleare example, & ſufficient to proue as great a matter as this is if men would bee content, and ſatiſfied with reaſon.

¶ Ex damaſo Papa, ad Hieronimum, ex Platina, & Nauclero.

BVt let vs goe farther, and ſee, how many Popes haue beene prieſtes childzen, that this matter may bee opened by them, and that Popes themſelues may be witnes of this doctrine

Siluerius Papa. Fyrſt is there Siluerius, pope, the which had a byſhop to his father called Ormiſda. This Siluerius lyued about the yeare of our Lozd. 524.

Felix iij. Pope Felix, the third of that name was ỹ ſonne of Felix, prieſt of Rome. This man lyued about the yeare of our Lozd. 474.

Deus dedit. Pope Deus dedit, was the ſonne of Stephane the ſubdeacon, which lyued about the yeare of our Lozd. 623.

Theodorus. i Pope Theodorus, was the ſonne of Theodore byſhop of Hieruſalem. This man lyued about the yeare of our Lozd. 634.

Hadrianus. ij. Hadrian, ỹ ſecõd was the ſonne of Thalare, the byſhop. This man lyued about the yeare of our Lozd. 873.

Iohãnes. xv. Pope Iohn, the xv. of that name, was ỹ ſonne of prieſt Leo, This man lyued aboute the yeare of our Lozde. 984.

Agapitus. i. Pope Agapitus, the fyrſt of that name, had a prieſt to his father called Gordianus, hee lyued about the year of our Lozd. 534.

Siluerius. Pope Siluerius, had a father called Siluerius, a byſhop of Rome, This man liued about the yeare of our lozd 544.

Bonifacius. i. Pope Boniface, the fyrſt of ỹ name was ſonne to Iucundus prieſt.

Oſius. Pope Oſius, was ỹ ſonne of Stephan the ſubdeacon.

Gelaſius. i. Pope Gelaſius, the fyrſt, had a byſhop to his father called Valenus anno Domini, 484.

Iohannes. x. Iohn the .x. pope of ỹ name, was ſonne to pope Surgius, about the yere of our Lozd. 924.

Diſt. lvi. ca. Oſius. All theſe, & a great many moze (as the Popes lawe teſtifieth) were the childzen of ſubdeacons, deacons, and Prieſtes, and haue bozne rule in the Church of Rome. Wherefoze I meruayle very ſoze, that men doe recken it ſo new learning, that prieſts ſhould haue wiues, ſeeing, that it ſtandeth with Gods holy wozd, with the ſaying of the olde doctours, with the determination of counſels, with ỹ Emperours lawe, and alſo with ỹ Popes olde decrees.

Moreouer, Chriſtes holy Apoſtels, and many other holy men, ſince their dayes, haue liued in the holy eſtate of matrymony. Finally, there hath been many holy men, and alſo holy women borne in the wedlocke of Prieſtes.

By what reaſõ now can, oz wil mẽ damne all theſe thynges, that bee of ſo great auctozitie? If men wyll heare neyther God noz mã, noz yet no good reaſon, what nede men then ſo much to ſpeake of learning? ſeeing that they wyll heare nothyng, but that they alonely iudge good? Truely this is a great high minde of mẽ, thus wrongfully to condemne other men foz heretikes, hauyng ſo good learnyng foz them: and yet they themſelues are grounded onely of their owne ſenſuall mynde, hauyng no learnyng, noz reaſon foz them. But I wyll put this matter to Gods iudgement. And let not men doubt (if they beleeue there is a God) but that God wyll bee a reuenger of ſuch wrongfull violence, as men doe vſe in thys caſe, both agaynſt hym and agaynſt all his bleſſed company of Saintes. But yet foz to doe men pleaſure, and that they myght bee perſwaded if it were poſſible, I wyll declare vnto them, how ỹ wee doe finde old monuments, teſtifyng clearely, that prieſts were in peaceable poſſeſſiõ of matrimony, & their childzẽ gottẽ in that ſame matrimony were admitted to ſpiritual benefices.

In the tyme of Pope Alexander ỹ thirde, there was a controuerſie foz the patronage of a benefice betweene the pzyoz of Plimptõ in Deuenſhyre, and one Iohn de Valletorda. Now were there deputed iudges, Rychard Archbyſhop of Caunterbury, & Roger Byſhop of Wynchester, beefoze whome the pzyoz of Plympton pzoued his patronage, by the reaſon that hee hée was in poſſeſſion, and had géuen it vnto diuers perſons. Fyrſt (hée ſayth) there was a Prieſt of Plymptõ called Alpheghe, which had by ỹ gyft of the Prior of Plympton, the benefice of Sutton, which is now called Plymmouth. This Alpheghe had a ſonne cauled Sadda, which had alſo the benefice after hys father. And after Sadda, was there an other Prieſt cauled Alnodus, which had the benefice likewyſe. This Alnodus had a ſonne called Robert Dunpruſt, which after the diſceaſe of his father Alnode had alſo the ſame benefice. And after thys Robert Dunpruſt, William Bacon hys ſonne, enioyed the benefice lykewyſe. Here men may ſée, that it is neyther ſo new learnyng, nor yet ſo long agoe ſince Prieſtes had lawful wyues.

Croni, Fabi. Moreouer, I reade in our owne Chronicles, that in the tyme of kyng Henry the iy. which raygned ỹ yeare of our Lord 1101. prieſtes myght lawfully marry wiues, in ſo much ỹ Anſelme than Archbyſhop of Caunterbury in a Seane that hée helde at London, did make a decrée, ỹ prieſtes ſhould forſake their wiues, the which was both agaynſt Gods lawe, and mans. For thy terte of our Mayſter Chriſt is cleare. Quos deus coniunxit, Homo non ſeperet. Marke theſe two wordes, Deus, and Homo. And howe much the one palleth the other.

Furthermore, the Pope hymſelfe hath not greatly regarded Prieſtes chaſtitie, if hée myght get any money for diſpenſations, in the which thyng hée coulde not haue diſpẽſed, if it had bẽne of Gods lawe. And if it bée but but mans lawe, what charitie is in the Pope to compell men ſo ſore to kéepe it, ſéeyng that it is ſo great daũger vnto prieſtes, and that ſo many ſoules bẽne loſt thorough it? Yea, what tyranny is in hym, thus cruelly to kill men for breakyng alonely of hys commaundement, the which is not in their power to kéepe? To our purpoſe, the Pope hath often tymes diſpenſed both wyth Prieſtes, and religious men for their howe, & hath géuen them licence to marry.

It is not vnknowen to many men that there was an Abbot of Reading, whom men for his perfecte lyuinge, called Abbot Sancte. This man béeyng in daunger of a certayne diſeaſe, by the reaſon hée had no wyfe, ſente vnto the pope, deſiring hym to diſpenſe wyth hym for hys howe, and ỹ pope diſpenſed wyth hym, and gaue hym licence to marry a wyfe, but vnder a condition that it ſhoulde bée ſecretly done, and not In facie eccleſie. By this men may ſée, that the Pope himſelf holdeth not ſo much of prieſts chaſtitie: for then hée woulde not regarde more money, then it. And if the pope may diſpence wyth thys Abbot for auoyding of a diſeaſe corporall: how much more ought hée now to diſpenſe with prieſtes: ſéeing there bée ſo many ſoules in daunger? Yea, and alſo the order of prieſthode is ſore defamed and ſclaundered, by the reaſõ that prieſtes hath no wyues.

Abbot Sãcte of Readyng.

Prieſtes hath maryed after their prieſthode.

Moreouer, wée doe reade, that pope Celeſtine the third, did diſpenſe with a Nunne, whoſe name was cauled Conſtatia, kyng Rogers daughter of Cecyll, and gaue her licence to marry with Henry ỹ Emperour, the ſirt of that name. This was about ỹ yeare of our Lorde. 1186. So that mẽ may perceaue how the pope doth not greatly regarde the howe of hys ſpiritualtie, if any thing may bée gotten, to pay for a diſpenſation. And it will not helpe to ſay, that the pope did diſpenſe with this woman for a common wealth. For the ſtories maketh mention that the pope diſpẽſed with him vnder a cõdition, that hée ſhould paye hym a yearely pencion for the kyngdome of Cecyll, and ſhould recouer it of his owne charges, out of the handes of Tancredus, which was then in poſſeſſion of it. And bécauſe that hée myght haue the better title to the kyngdome, hée gaue hym the onely daughter of Cecill. So that ỹ pope did it not for a cõmon wealth, but for his owne lucre. But now graunt that it were for a common wealth, therefore, firſt it was not Gods commaundemẽt, that prieſtes ſhould liue ſole. For gods word géueth no place

Naucleri generatione. xl.

Cranſius, Canutus was ſeuen yeares a Monke Cluniacenſis, and yet the Pope diſpenſeth with hym to marry a wife.

to no common wealth. And if ỹ pope did then diſpence for a cõmõ wealth: why doth hée not now diſpence for auoyding of fornication, in ſo many innumerable prieſtes? Doth not mẽ recken it for a common wealth, to expell fornication, & all occaſions therevnto? But now there is no commõ wealth to bée regarded, bécauſe there is no ſhyning golde offered. But at ỹ leaſt wayes mée thinketh that prieſtes which marry, bée very farre from hereſie: for it is neyther againſt Gods lawe, nor yet againſt the common wealth.

Mariage of Prieſtes is neither againſt Gods lawe nor mans lawe.

Here were many examples to bée brought in, how the pope hath diſpenſed both with Monkes, Friers, and Nunnes, the which I will paſſe ouer, and will ſhewe as neare as I can out out of Chronicles, how lõgit is, that the pope hath gone about to bryng in the vow of chaſtitie. Doctour Eckius doth ſay, that Calixtus primus dyd firſte make the ſtatute, that prieſtes ſhould vow chaſtitie, but that is falſe. For all Chronicles beareth witneſſe, that prieſtes had wyues in the Councell, of Nicene, the which was almoſt an hundreth yeares after Calixtus dayes. Wherfore it can not bée ſuppoſed, that ỹ ſtatute was made béfore the Councell of Nicene. But authenticall hyſtories doth make mention, that Nicholas the firſt, whiche was Byſhop of Rome, the yeare of our Lord 860. did goe about this thyng: but hée could not bryng it to paſſe by the reaſon of an holy man S. Huldericke, Epiſcopus Auguſtenſis, the which wrote a very ſharpe Epiſtle againſt hym, reprouyng hym ſore, bycauſe hée would compell prieſtes to vow chaſtitie. Hys wordes bée theſe. Thou haſt not ſwarued a litle from diſcretion, ỹ where as thou oughteſt to haue counſayled prieſtes to chaſtitie, thou haſt with a Lordly violence compelled them to it. Is not this after the iudgement of all wiſe men, a great violence, whẽ that thou againſt the inſtitution of the Goſpell, and againſt ỹ decrée of the holy ghoſt, wilt compell men to obſerue thy priuate decrée? &c. Hée reciteth alſo againſt ỹ Byſhop of Rome all thoſe ſame ſcriptures, that I haue brought herein my booke of this matter, and alſo certain of the counſels, to that purpoſe, that I haue brought them. So that men ought not to thinke, that I am the firſt, that thus hath vnderſtande the Scriptures, nor yet the firſt, that hath ſpoken againſt prieſtes vowes.

Nicholaus.1

Compelled chaſtitie is againſt the inſtitution of the Goſpell.

Note alſo how this holy mã ſayth, that prieſts ought to bée admonyſhed, & counſelled to chaſtitie, but not compelled. For that (ſayth hée) is a great violence, and againſt Chriſtes holy Goſpell, and ỹ bleſſed ſpirite of God. These bée as behement wordes as I haue ſpokẽ. For out of theſe wordes men may gather, that it is not farre from hereſie to compell prieſtes to vow chaſtitie. This holy man procéedeth farther with ỹ Biſhop of Rome, and telleth a fact of S. Gregory, the which went about to compell prieſtes to vow chaſtitie.

To compel Prieſtes to vowe chaſtitie that hath not ỹ gifte, is halfe brother vnto hereſie.

Vpon a day S. Gregory ſent vnto hys pondes for fiſh, and in the nettes that they fiſhed withall, were brought vp aboue fire thouſand young childrens heades, the which thyng, when S. Gregory ſaw, ſtroke hym ſore to the hart, & hée was very heauy of that ſight, and perceyued anone, that hys decrée, that hée made for prieſtes chaſtitie, was the occaſion of this great murther: In that that prieſtes could not lyue ſole, nor yet they durſt not auow theyr children, for feare of the decrée. And ſo for ſauegarde of theyr honeſty, they fell into a fearefull, and abhominable ſinne, to kyll theyr owne children. And for this cauſe S. Gregory (ſayth this holy Byſhop) dyd reuoke hys decrée againe, and dyd greatly alow the ſaying of the Apoſtle: It is better to marry then to burne. Adyng vnto it of hys owne: It is better to marry then to geue occaſion to murther.

A lamentable and horrible ſight.

O Lord God that our Byſhoppes woulde nowe bee ſo charitable.

Here note good reader, what a terrible, and a fearefully example this is? Is not this a piteous caſe, that ſo many thouſandes innocẽtes bée thus ſlayne? When ſhall the chaſtitie kéepyng of all the prieſtes in the worlde bée an occaſion of ſo great goodnes, as the law of chastitie hath bene hereof mischiefe? Alas is there no pyty in mes hartes? that are nothyng moued, whē they read such horrible facies in holy mens writyngs? Or doe men thinke, that there is no mischief now in our dayes done, by the reason that prestes are compelled to chastitie? If men thinke that there come any mischiefe by the reason of it, how can men recken to auoyde Gods vengeaūce, that will so stifly and stronglye mayntayne the same?

I haue bene informed of credible persons, the whiche if nede were, I could yet bryng forth, that in a place of Religion within this fewe yeares, there was a religious man, that dyd get a woman with child, the whiche woman was brought a bed in the brothers chamber of a fayre sonne. This child was Christened in the same chāber, and as sone as it was christened, he brake the necke of it, and buryed it in the night, in the Churcheyarde. This is the trueth, I cā proue it. Is not this a terrible thynge doth not nature abhorre this? And yet men had rather here this abhominablenes, thē for to release a litle of theyr own will. But oh Lorde God, howe streightly shalt thou punish this?

A frute of chastitie.

A horrible tale.

It is not yet out of ỹ minde of mā, sinnes ỹ an honest man lost his daughter, by the reason that a priest defiled her, the which (bycause he would not be dishonested) kylled the mayde priuely, and afterwarde cast her into a well. If men will not be moued at this? and such lyke other facies? I can not tell what will moue them?

In other crabbe of ỹ same tree.

I could recite a great many of abhominable, and detestable facies, if I were not more ashamed to tell them, then prestes hath bene to doe them. Neither will I recite how shamefully that mens daughters, mens wyues, mens seruauntes hath bene, and are dayly cast awaye, by the reason that prestes are so hoate of courage, and can not kepe theyr chastitie. Would it not abhorre a Christen mā to heare tell of the innumerable baudes, that are made by ỹ reason ỹ prests cā not lyue chaste? What a petious case is it to see so many young men cast away? the whiche doth see dayly their maisters vncleane lyuyng? Here were many thynges to be recited, but honesty compelleth me to passe thē ouer. But I thinke there is no god man, but he will thinke as much in hym selfe, as I either would say, or can say.

I will not speake of the litle prety Boyes that folow Prestes in long doubletes, and short hosen.

I could tell, if If I would, the occasion why ỹ those Cardinals of Rome, which kepeth whores, be noted of the common people to be of the best sort of Cardinals? But I will passe it ouer. Neuertheles it greueth mee a lyttell, that I may not somewhat opē my hart. But this I promyse them, if any of these protectours of this filthy chastitie doth take in hand to defende it agaynst mee, I will not be ashamed to write, that they haue not bene ashamed to doe. For I will not kepe secrete how certayne byshops of England, and also of other countries doth let whores to ferme vnto prests. And all bycause they will not suffer them to marry. Yet heare will I tell you one prety tale.

The chastitie of the court of Rome, frō the whiche God defend vs all.

There is a byshop lyuyng at this same day in Germanye, which had nede of a great some of money (I could tell his name if I would) this byshop called vnto hym a gentilman, a great frend of his, which smelled a litteil of the new learning, so called. Vnto this mā he made his complaint how that he must nedes make shifte shortly for a great somme of money, desyring hym both to helpe hym, and also of his counsell. This man sayde vnto hym, if he would folow his cōsell, he would shortly helpe him. The byshop was very glad, and graūted to folowe his counsell. Then sayde the gentylman.

M. spare me a little, to speake but one word more.

In hystory sprong out of the chastitie of Prestes.

This man intended to declare to this holy father, what honestye was mayntayned by Prestes chastitie.

My Lord, your Lordshyp shall geue a strayte commaundement, that all your Prestes within your diocese, shall put away their whores within this two monethes, vnder the payne of heresye at the least. After this, your Lordshyp shall send .ij. of your cōsellers, that be knowen to be greately in your fauour, to handle with the prestes, in their owne names, for to take vp thys matter, betweene your Lordeſhip and them. But vnder this condition, that the prieſts ſhall graūt vnto them a certayne ſome of money and they ſhall promiſe the prieſtes, ỹ they will bring it to paſſe, that your Lordſhip (notwithſtāding your ſtrait commaundement) ſhall bee contented to ſuffer them to liue, as they haue done in tymes paſt, and after the olde cuſtome of the Church. The byſhop was contented with this counſell, & incontinent gaue out ỹ commaundement, and afterward ſent out two of his beſt frendes, priuelye to treate with the Prieſtes in their names, but not in his. For hee woulde not bee knowen of it, becauſe hee had vowed chaſtitie.

A prety practiſe to finde out a naughty couetous Byſhop.

But what thinke you, that theſe two mē did gather in this one byſhoprycke, within ỹ ſpace of .ij. moneths? Verely .xx. M. guyldens, the which money the byſhop receiued very deuoutly, and thought it not againſt the vowe of chaſtitie. What ſhall men ſay to theſe mens conſcience? that will not ſticke to burne a poore prieſt, that maryeth a wife? but yet, they will receyue .xx. M. guyldens to maintayne open whoredome. O lord God thou knoweſt this, & yet doubtleſs thou ſuffereſt it. And all becauſe they ſhould haue ſpace, and reſpite, to amende, vnto which, God geue them grace. Amen.

But agayne to our purpoſe: men may perceaue that this holy byſhop Hulderyke was agaynſt the pope, & dyd alowe my doctrine, and declare that S. Gregorie did repēt him of ỹ ſtatute ỹ hee had made for prieſts chaſtitie. Wherefore I conclude here yet agayne, that Gods holy worde, olde doctours, holy counſelles, the Emperours lawe, olde decrées of the Church, the practice of the holy Apoſtels, the lyuing of holy men, Gods lawe, and mans lawe, nature & reaſon, doth alowe this article of myne. Wherefore I truſt no good nor reaſonable man, will withſtand mée, in this caſe.

Diſt. 31. ca. Ante trie. ſium.

The world will lye.

There runneth a greate voyce of mée, that I haue maried a wife, and for that cauſe men doth recken that I will ſomething proue my witte, and alſo ſtretch my learning, to maintain that prieſtes myght haue wyues. But the very trueth is before God, & mā that I haue no wife, nor neuer went about to marry: I thanke God of his grace. And of this I haue as noble princes as bee in Germany, to beare mée witneſſe, and alſo many other worſhipfull, and honeſt men, ỹ doth knowe mée, and my conuerſation. I haue alſo the ryght worſhipfull man Doctour Lée, which was the kinges Embaſſadour with vs, and all his ſeruauntes to teſtifye for mée, which bee honeſt men, and ſufficient in a greater cauſe then this is.

I haue merueyle why men are aſhamed to come & lay this thyng to my charge, now that I am here.

Finally, here is alſo the byſhop of our citie, with whom I doe dwell, & am moſt conuerſant with. Heare is alſo the Embaſſadours of Lubycke, which doth alſo know mée, and my conuerſation. And I doubt not, but all they will teſtifye for mée, as farre as any lawe ſhall require. Yea I dare boldly ſay, ỹ myne aduerſaries haue not ſo good teſtemony, that they keepe theyr vowe of chaſtitie, as I haue, that I am not maryed. But all is done to bringe mée in defamation. Let God prouide. Neuertheles, what if I had a wyfe? is ỹ ſo great a crime? What can men make of it? Hath not many noble Princes, and good men wyues? Will mē make more articles of ſaluation for mée, then for princes or for other Chriſten men? what haue I deſerued thus to bee taken? Men will haue to doe with mée, but I promiſe them, they ſhall get no good by it, if I may come to my aunſwere, I wil bee able alwayes to defend a wyfe (if I weare diſpoſed to marry) agaynſt all thoſe that keepe whores. Let them begin when they will. Notwithſtanding, I doe not abſtayne from a wife becauſe that is euell, and vncleane to marry: but I haue other lawfull conſiderations. Let no man doubt, but this is of trueth, if I had a wyfe, I would not haue medled with this article, becauſe that men myght haue ſuſpected mée, that then I would haue defended this article, for the maintenaunce naunce of my facte. But now on the other syde, that men should not think how I despised mariage, or thought it vnlawfull for a Priest to marry, in as much as I my selfe doe not marry. Therfore haue I take this labour on mée, to wryte my meaning, & so much the more boldely, bécause that men haue no cause to suspect mée, that I speake to defende myne owne cause, but all onely to set out the veretye, so God helpe mée. Amen.

But now will I goe to the Popes lawe, and sée what tyme that thys thyng begunne to take strength. It had béene often times attempted, but it was alwayes repelled by one good man or other, tyll after the dayes of Saint Gregory.

Pope Siricius made a statute, that Dist. 82. ca. Plurimos. priestes should haue no wyues, but it toke none effect.

After hym came Pelagius the seconde, and hée commaunded, that those priestes that had maryed wiues should abstayne from their wyues.

Next after hym came S. Gregory, and hée thought that statute of Pelagius to sore, that men should abstaine from their wyues, which had neither vowed chastitie, nor yet had vsed thémselues to continencie. And therefore hée decreed, that the Bishops should consecrate no Subdeacon, except hée woulde first vowe chastitie. Thys is openly in the popes lawe. Here began a thyng somthyng to springe, Dist. 31. ca. Ante triennium. and to take effecte, but yet it was not fully stablyshed. For afterwarde S. Gregory hymselfe repented hym, as S. Hulderike beareth witnesse, by the reason of the great murther thath hée sawe come thereof. Wherefore it remayned so tyll a great whyle, vnto the commyng of Leo the ix: and hée Dist. 31. ca. Omnino. sayth, that priestes may kéepe theyr wyues, but they may not company wyth them, for the Apostles (sayth hée) dyd forsake the company of their wyues: alonely they prouided them meate and clothe.

After hym commeth Innocentius Dist. 28. ca. Decernimus. the second, the which (not regarding Gods ordinaunce) ioyneth priestes that maryeth, and priestes that kéepeth whores, all vnder one damnation.

But all these yet coulde not bryng thys matter to passe as they woulde. For in many places (for all this) all priestes had wyues: tyll the tyme of Gregory the seuéth, which was called Hildebrande, a man of euill lyuyng, as the chronicles testifieth, and also a great nygromancer, and very familyar with the deuill. And as chronicles sayth, a man that had poysoned 4. or 5. popes before, that hée myght come the soner to it. Thys man (I say) in the yeare of our Lord. 1074. began to attempte thys matter very sharpely in Germany, where priests were then quietly suffered to haue wyues. Thys man sent his commaundement vnto Otto bysshop of Constantinople, commaundyng to forbydde priestes that had not yet maryed, for to marry. And those y had maried, to bée separated from their wyues. But bysshop Otto perceiuyng thys thyng for to bée deuillishe, woulde not exercise hys commaundement. Wherfore Pope Gregory cursed him, and assoiled all men from his obedience, and cited hym vnto Rome, where hée had gathered a counsell, in the which hée had made a decrée, that no Priest shoulde afterwarde marry. And they that had maryed bécfore, shoulde forsake their wyues. Moreouer, it was there decreed, that no man should receaue holy orders afterwarde, except hée first sweare to lyue sole.

Nauclerus, Alberius. Hirsfeldensis.

Here beginneth priests chastitie to get the ouer hand. For this was a captaine for the nonce.

Per illam legem. Quos deus cõiunxit homo nõ separet. Et nemo dimittat vxorẽ, excepta fornicationis causa.

These decrées were prouulgated ouer all Italy. But the priestes, and Bysshops of Fraunce resisted this decrée, and sayde, that this counsel was contrary to Gods worde, and toke from Priestes, that God and nature had graunted them. And therefore y Pope (sayde they) was an hereticke, and an auctour of damnable doctrine, and that this decrée came not of God, but of the deuil, and alleaged for them the saying of our mayster Christ. Non omnes capiunt verbum hoc. And also S. Paule, De virginitate preceptum non habeo. They sayde also, that the pope woulde compell them to lyue lyke Angels, and how hée dyd opẽ a wyndow vnto fornicatiõ & vncleannes. Wherfore they made hym aunſwere, that they had rather to forſake their benefices, then their wyues. And if hé woulde deſpiſe maryed prieſtes, then ſhoulde hé goe & prouide him Angels to ſerue his cures. But the pope was nothing moued at all with their ſcriptures or reaſons: but ſtill wrote to ỳ byſhops ſtraite letters, cõmaundyng them, and threatning them vnder the payne of curſing, and priuating them of their byſhopprickes, ỳ they ſhould bring this thing to paſſe. So that at ỳ laſt, the moſt parte of the Byſhoppes conſented to him for feare, and laboured all ỳ they coulde to perſwade the prieſtes to forſake their wiues, and to vowe chaſtitie. But it was long ere the prieſts were perſwaded: yea ſome of them wouldé neuer agrée thereunto as long as they liued.

This byſhop called a conuocatiõ, in the which hé declared the Popes pleaſure. But ỳ prieſtes reſiſted meruaylous earneſtly, alleaging for them Scriptures, reaſons, and counſels. So farre they proceéded togither, that there had lyke to haue béene a greate tumulte. Then the byſhop beynge a wyſe man, conſideryng how ſtiffe, & earneſt the prieſtes were, deſired thẽ to take halfe a yeares deliberation, exhorting them to agrée vnto that thing wyth a good will, vnto the which, hé muſt els compell them, by the Popes auctoritie. After the halfe yeare was come out, the byſhops called a conuocation at the Vniuerſitie of Erfoꝛde, and there required an aunſwere of the prieſtes, but they were ſtiffer thẽ before, and ſayde, how they had rather dye then forſake their wyues cõtrary to Gods law. On the other ſide the archbiſhop was earneſt in ſetting forth the popes commaundement.

Then the prieſtes required to take their counſel, and ſo when they were departed out of the conuocation they agréed (ſéeyng that neither ſcriptures, reaſons, counſels, nor yet intercelliõ could helpe as they ſayd) that they would go in agayne, and kyll the Byſhop, that all other Byſhops after hym ſhould bée well aduiſed, ere they ſet forth that thyng any méere. But the Byſhop had ſome frendes amõgſt them, the which reuelated this thyng vnto hym, and hé ſtreight wayes ſent certaine of his frendes vnto ỳ prieſts, requiryng them to come in agayne peaceably, and hé would promiſe thẽ ſo to entreate the pope, that hé ſhould bé contẽt to let it paſſe, and that they ſhould kéepe their cures ſtill as they had done before. Notwithſtandyng the Archbyſhop could not chaũge the popes mynde in any wiſe. For the yeare after the pope ſent downe hys Legate Curienſen Epiſcopum, and ioyned the Byſhop of Mentz with hym, commaundyng them to gather a conuocation in Mentz, and there to propounde his decrée agayne. But yet ỳ prieſtes would in no wiſe agrée vnto them, but layde all Scriptures, and reaſõs for them, that they could. And when all theſe thynges would not helpe, then they fell to entreatie, and interceſſion. But the popes Legates were ſo ſtiffe, that there was no remedy, but tyranny, and violence muſt bée vſed.

But aſſone as the prieſtes ſawe that, they gathered them togither, & made a tumulte, that the popes Legates ſcaped very hardely with their lyues out of the conuocation hauſe, & ſo was the conuocation broken. And the Archbyſhop of Mentz would neuer medle more in it, but committed the matter to the popes diſcretion. So that the pope was fayne to tary a conuenient tyme, till hé had gotten certaine Byſhops, and certaine prieſtes of his partie. The determinate tyme doth not ỳ ſtories declare, but alonely we ſée that nowe hé is prenayled in miſchief.

Wherfore I will now proceéde after my promiſe, and recite their Scriptures and reaſõs, wherby they proue Celibatum Sacerdotũ. Their firſt ſcripture is. Bée ye holy, for I am holy, ſayth the Lord. Vpon this Scripture

This hath alwayes beene the Popes maner of teachyng, other doctrine had hée neuer.

What ſhall men doe agaynſt violence, and tyranny.

A tumulte for prieſtes wyues.

The deuill ſleepeth not nor geueth not gladly place to Chriſt.

disputeth ỹ pope on this maner. The prieſtes of the old law did not company with their wyues, in the tyme of their miniſtration. Wherefore the prieſtes of the new law, whiche doth alwayes miniſter, muſt much more alwayes kæpe their chaſtitie. Firſt, the pope doth alleage this Scripture wrong. For it is not Moyſes mynde, where this text is ſpoken, to compell men from their wiues, or not to marry (the which thyng the pope hath taken vpō hym to prowe.) For Moyſes ſpeaketh there to the whole houſhold of Iſraell.

Solutions to their reaſons.

The popes arguments for ỹ maintenaunce of their conſtrained chaſtitie.

Now was not the houſe of Iſraell cōpelled by the text, either to forſake their wyues, or els to vowe chaſtitie. Wherfore this text can not make for the popes purpoſe. Farthermore, the text ſayth no more, but that we ſhould bæ cleane, and holy. Now is not matrimony, either vncleane, or vnholy: for it is a thyng inſtituted, and ſanctified of God. And the pureſt creatures that euer God made dyd vſe it, & was not therby defiled. Ergo, this text maketh not for the popes purpoſe. And where as the pope ſaith, that ỹ prieſts of the newe law ſhall bæ cleane, we graūt the ſame, and deſire God with all our hartes, that they may bæ ſo. And bæcauſe that we would, that it ſhould bæ ſo: therfore doe we exhorte them to vſe Gods holy ordinaunce, that they may bæ holy. For all creatures of God bæ good. And vnto them that bæ cleane, nothyng is vncleane. Holy is matrimony gods ordinaūce. Wherefore it muſt nædes bæ cleane of it ſelfe, and may bæ lawfully vſed with thankes.

Adam. Eua.

The Lenticiall cleannes lyeth to much in the Popes head.

1. Tim. 4.

Farthermore, what argument is this of the popes? The prieſtes of the old law, did abſtayne frō their wiues, the tyme of their miniſtration, Ergo, our prieſtes muſt alwayes abſtayne? How foloweth this, alwayes, out of the old prieſtes, ſometyme? But me thinketh the pope ſhould rather take an occaſiō of this place, to bynd hys prieſtes to mariage, if they can not lyue ſole. For the prieſtes of the law, by Gods cōmaundement had wiues: Ergo, God would not recken mariage vncleane, and vnpure. And if it were cleane for them, it muſt much more bæ cleaner vnto our prieſtes. For all thynges bæ cleaner vnto vs, then to them. Wherfore me thinketh ỹ pope ſhould rather diſpute on this maner. The prieſtes of ỹ old law had wyues, and were not thereby defiled, Ergo, my prieſtes muſt much rather haue wyues, for they ſhall bæ leſſe defiled.

Alwayes. Sometime.

Why hath not our Prieſtes ſometyme wyues, as the olde Prieſtes had.

Moreouer, it foloweth not. The prieſtes of the old law abſtained from their wyues, in the tyme of their miniſtration, Ergo, our prieſtes muſt abſtayne alwayes, bycauſe they bæ alwayes in miniſtration. For many thinges were vncleane to the prieſtes of the old law, that bæ not vncleane vnto our prieſtes. Alſo vnto them it was a commaundement ſo to doe, or els it had bæne lawfull for them to tary by their wyues. But our prieſtes hath no commaundement. Ergo, they are not bounde to abſtayne. Finally, this text of Scripture dyd not bynde the Apoſtles, nor all the holy fathers after the Apoſtles till Innocentes tyme to abſtayne from theyr wyues. Ergo, it byndeth not our prieſtes now. For gods word was in as full ſtrēgth before Innocentes dayes, as after.

The ſecond Scripture is this. Abſtayne for a tyme that ye may the better gæue attendaunce to prayer. On this texte diſputeth the pope on this maner. Paule commaundeth (ſayth hæ) laye men to abſtayne for a tyme. Ergo, much more are prieſtes bounde to abſtayne alwayes. The whiche muſt alwayes pray, and bæ in a continuall ſacrifyng. This argument is alſo falſe, and not concluded after Saint Paules mynde. For S. Paule woulde not by this text forbydde mariage, by the reaſon of prayer. For howe could hæ ſaye then, Abſtayne for a tyme? Unmaryed men muſt abſtayne alwayes, and not for a tyme onely. For it is no commaundement vnto lay men (as the pope ſayth) to abſtayne. For S. Paule will, ỹ they ſhall not abſtayne, except that they be both agræd. Yea and alſo in a caſe, ỹ is, where their abſtayning ſhould bæ an occaſyon of more prayer. But if their abſtayning may bée the occaſyon of vncleanenes: Or els, if the one party will abſtayne, and the other can not: Then will bleſſed S. Paule that neyther of them ſhall defraude the other. For they are more bounde in thys caſe to vſe them ſelues in the office of matrimonye, then pro illo loco, & tempore to pray. For ỳ text is clere Vxori vir debitum reddat. Let men marke my ſaying well. For though we bée bound to pray by the Goſpell, yet I thynke that the circumſtance of tyme, and place, is of mans lawe, & reddere debitum, is in this caſe of the Goſpell. Wherefore the other muſt geue place. Take my wordes charitably, and after learning. But yet graũt it a commaundement. How can it followe there out, that prieſtes ſhall neuer marry? Becauſe that lay men are bound (as the pope ſayth) to abſtaine for a tyme? Why doth not the pope rather bynde his prieſtes in tyme, and place requiſite to matrimony, for auoyding of fornication, as S. Paule doth? All the world knoweth, ỳ prieſts doth not alwayes pray. Wherefore then doth not the pope graunt them that ſame libertie, ỳ S. Paule doth. For he will (leſt ỳ deuyll ſhould tẽpt them by incontenency) ỳ they ſhould returne againe after their prayer to ỳ office of matrimony.

The popes doctine is repugnaunt to the doctrine of S. Paule.

O Lorde God, how would mẽ crye out agaynſt mée, if I ſhould thus teare, and wringe ſcriptures? But this popet may doe what hée lyſt: and all that hée doth, men doe reckon to bée articles of our fayth. There is not a ſtronger place in all ſcripture for matrimony, then this is. In ſo much that all learned men, that euer ſpake of this matter, hath brought this ſame chapter of S. Paule for them, & yet ỳ deuill in the Pope can turne this topſe turuy. And that ỳ maketh agaynſt him, muſt nédes make for hym, or els hée will wring him tyll hée breake his necke. What learning can proue this, that prieſts may not marry? becauſe they are boũde to pray? & to doe ſacrifyce? Doth mariage defyle their prayers, or can it cõtaminate their ſacrifyces? then the holy patriarches, & Prophetes, haue no cleane ſacrifyces. Yea Chriſtes Apoſtles had vncleane ſacrifices. But here is a wonderfull iuglynge of the deuyll. For ſometime matrymony ſhall bée an holy, and a bleſſed ſacramẽt, and ſhal gẽue grace: and an other while it ſhall bée againſt God, and all his ſacrifices, and a defyler of Gods mynyſters, & of all their prayers.

The Pope maketh a hotchpot of mariage.

Wherefore I conclude, that this texte of S. Paule, Abſtaine for a time that you may the more diligẽtly pray, maketh nothing for the Pope. For if wée ſhould bée boũde (as ỳ pope ſaith) not to marry, by the reaſon that we ought to pray, then might no lay man marry a wife. For laye men are as much bounde by the Goſpell to prayer, as prieſtes bœ. There is no tyme, that the Goſpell cõmaundeth a prieſt to pray in, nor yet no prayer, that is commaunded to prieſtes by ỳ gоſpell, but lay men are bound to the ſame. Wherefore if the pope will conclude that prieſtes ſhall haue no wiues, becauſe they are bound to pray. By the ſame reaſon will I proue, ỳ no chriſtẽ man may haue a wife. For it will not help to ſay, that prieſtes are more bound to pray, then lay men, & therefore they haue no wyues. For whether that they be bounde leſſe or more that maketh no matter to ỳ argumẽt. For both the parties are bounde to prayer. Therefore, after the popes doctrine, neyther of them both may marry. But whether the one be more bounde then the other, it maketh no matter to mé, for they are both bounde: therfore they muſt both abſtayne. I woulde deſyre all Papiſtes, to let this reaſon of myne ſtande ſtill vnanſwered.

Lay men are bounde to prayer, as well as Prieſtes.

The Pope is a teарer and wreſter of Scriptures.

An other reaſon their is of Pope Leo the. ix. that bringeth this text of S. Paule: Haue not we power to leade aboute with vs a wyfe, as the brother of our Lord, and Cephas? Out of this texte diſputeth the pope thus. S. Paule ſayth not, we haue power amplectendi mulierẽ, to embrace a woman. But circunducendi, that is to leade her with vs, that ſhée may bée ſuſtayned (as the Pope ſayth) of her Diſt. xxxi. ca. Omnino. 1. Cor. 9. Nunquid nõ habemus poteſtatẽ mulierem ſoroꝛem circunducẽdi. &c. 1. Cor. 9.

husbande? But there may bée no company of maryage betweéne them. Euery Christē man may sée what a slēder argument this is of the pope. S. Paule sayth not, amplectēdi sed cercūducendi. Ergo, non licet sacerdotibus habere vxores? This can no man denye, but S. Paules mening is there, how that prieſts may lawfully haue wiues as the example of Peter doth there proue. Wherefore I thinke no man so madde to iudge, that the Apoſtels dyd myrry wyues, alonely to lead thē about with them (as the Pope sayth) and to put other men to coſtes and charges? For this office they might haue had of all other women, and needed not to marry, for leading about of women with them. Wherefore it muſt nédes follow, séeing S. Paules meaning is, that prieſtes may lawfully haue wiues that they may also lawfully vſe the office of matrimony. For his owne doctrine is, that the man hath no power ouer his owne body, but his wife. Wherefore it muſt followe, that the pope maketh an euell ſuppoſition, when hée ſuppoſeth, that the Apoſtles hadde wiues, and did onely but cary them about, to geue them meate, and drinke, and not to company with them.

1.Cor.7.

Also marke of this argument, how the pope graunteth, that the apoſtles had wyues? Wherefore he muſt now proue, that the Apoſtles, forſoke the company of their wiues, as hée sayth. But I am content to take this argument at the popes hand.

This the pope graunteth, that the Apoſtles ledde their wyues aboute with them. Wherfore it muſt nédes follow (euē after the Pope) that our prieſtes may also leade wiues aboute with them. If ye graunt me this, I am content, I will not binde prieſtes amplectendi vxores, I will put it to his wiues diſcretion, and his, as they two cā agrée: ſo am I cōtent, alonely to let them haue the libertie that the Pope graunteth the holy Apoſtles to haue had. And I doubt not but there wyll folow tokens, not onely of circumducendi but of amplectendi.

How many facties could I recite here, of amplectēdi?

Truely I haue great maruayle, ỹ men bée not aſhamed, thus to trifle with holy Scripture, yea, and that in matters that bée ſo waighty, & wher. by they ſée dayly ſo great offence and ſclaunder to ſpring in the holy church of God.

if children that bee gotten might beare witnes.

An other Scripture the pope hath which is this: They that are in the fleſhe can not pleaſe God. On thys text diſputeth the Pope thus: They that are defiled, are in the fleſhe: But prieſtes that marry wyues, are defiled: therefore, they bée in ỹ fleſhe, and can not pleaſe God.

Diſt. lxxxij c. Propſui-ſti. Qui in carne ſunt Deo placere non poſſunt.

If men had eyther feare of God in thier hartes, or els reuerēce to Gods holy inſtitutions, and ordinaunces, they would not thus ſpeake nor iudge of pure & cleane matrimony. I truſt there is no Christē man, but bée will graūt mée that matrimony is of gods ordayning and ſettinge? Wherefore it muſt nédes bée pure and cleane. For our God is no God of vncleanes, or of filthines, let the pope iudge hym as hée wyll. Nowe to the Popes argument. The Pope sayth in hys minor, how Prieſtes that marry, bée vncleane. I denye that, and say ſtedfaſtly, that the pope blaſphemeth both God and his holy giftes. And whē hée can proue his minor true, then will I graunt it vnlawfull for Prieſtes to marry.

The Pope accompteth whoredom to bee more cleane then holy matrimony.

But I wyll take the Popes argument, and proue that no man ſhall haue wiues, and ſo ſhall the worlde ſone bée at an ende. The popes maior is this: They that bée in the fleſh can not pleaſe God. But maryed mē (as the Pope thinketh) leue after ỹ fleſh, therefore no maryed man can bée ſaued. Let the pope of Rome, and all hys adherentes aunſwere to my argument, and I will ſone aunſwere to theirs. For this I am ſure of, that ỹ ſcriptures which he bringeth, maketh not agaynſt matrimony, nor yet more againſt prieſts then agaynſt lay men. Wherfore let hym conclude what hée can out of them againſt prieſtes, and I will conclude the ſame agaynſt laye men. Theſe bée all the Scriptures that I can finde in the Popes law againſt this matter. Wherefore, now

The Pope blaſphemeth God.

will

When that haue wiues may bee Prieſtes, but after their prieſthode they may not marry.

will I gde to their reaſons.

Their principall reaſon is this. Maryed men may bée choſē to bée prieſts, but after their prieſthode (ſay they) may they not marry.

These mē muſt firſt conſider what doctrine they defend, ý is to ſay, how they intēde to defēd ý popes doctrine, and ý doctrine, which they call the doctrine of the church: for there is none other doctrine agaynſt vs but that.

Diſt. xxxiij. c. Nullam. &c. Aſſumi &. ca. Prererea. &. c. Priuſquam.

Nowe doth this doctrine clearely deferne agaynſt them, and ſay how no mā that hath a wife, may bée choſē to bée Prieſt or a Deacō, neither they cā bring mée one exāple, that euer the Pope did graunt, that a maryed man myght bée a prieſt excepte hée got money for diſpenſing. So that the Pope by his diſpenſation hath alwayes teſtified that it was againſt his law for a maryed man to bée a Prieſt. Wherfore theſe mē (if they will defende the lawes of the Church) muſt bée bound to prouue that maryed men may after the lawes of the Church (as they call them) bée choſen, or elles their anſwere is naught. For it is no reaſon that they ſhould faine this ſolution of their owne braynes, and ſay, that it may bée ſo. But they muſt prouue me, that their church doth graūt it lawful ſo to bée. Moreouer, where bée now all their Scriptures, whereby they prouue that Prieſtes may not marry for defilyng of them? Is not the company that a Prieſt kéepeth with hys wife after his conſecration (which they graunt) as pure, and as cleane, as it was bēfore his conſecration? Hath his conſecration made ý thyng vncleane, ý was before pure? Wherfore if hée may kéepe his wyfe (after theſe men) which hée maryed before his conſecration, why may not an other Prieſt lykewiſe marry a wife after his Prieſthode. What doth thys man, as concerning the office of matrimony, that the other mā doth not?

Remember the tyranny of Gregory the vij. which compelled prieſtes to forſake their wiues Mariage is all one, before prieſthode, and after.

Farthermore, they were wont to ſay, that Prieſtes might not kéepe their wiues, in ſo much that they fained how ý Apoſtles did forſake their wiues. How ſtādeth thys wyth their ſolution, that maryed men myght bée biſhops? But mée thinke they doe but trifle with this matter, and ſéke no more but a light euaſion, to helpe them for a tyme.

Moreouer, both the practiſe and the lawes of their church declareth clearly, that their meaning is nót to choſe a maried man to bée a byſhop. For their cuſtome is that a man may bée a Subdeacon at 16. yeares olde. Now is there no man cuſtomably maryed ſo younge. And when hée ſhall be ſubdeacon, hée muſt forſweare mariage, as the Popes lawe commaundeth. Therefore, it muſt néedes folow, that no maryed man can bée a Prieſt. For hée hath forſworne marryage many yeares before. Moreouer, all Doctours doe graunt, that after the fall of Adam, matrimony was a remedye againſt fornication, and S. Paule approueth the ſame. Vnuſquiſq; ſuam habeat vxorē propter fornicationē. What if this man, after his conſecration is in more ieoperdie of fornication then hée was before? What remedy will men finde nowe for this infirmitie? His conſecration taketh not away his naturall appetite, nor it maketh Gods remedy vnlawfull. And eyther hée muſt lyue in fornication, or elles marry a wife. Let men iudge, which of them becommeth a prieſt beſt after his conſecration.

Diſt. xxxiij. cap. Nullū.

Farthermore no man can denye, but the hyſtories make mention, how diuerſe prieſts haue bēne maryed after their conſecration, at the diſpenſation of the pope. Wherfore it muſt folow, that it is not agaynſt Gods law, for a Prieſt to marry after his conſecration. For then the pope might not diſpenſe with him. Men muſt graunt, that many Prieſtes haue had wyues. Now ſtādeth it with good reaſon, and learnyng, that they prouue, ý all theſe men dyd marry before their prieſthode onely, and not after, ſéeyng they will haue it ſo neceſſary, and ſo perfect a ſolutiō. And if they cā not prouue it, why doe they affirme it ſo ſtyffly? what moueth thē ſo to ſay? yea, and ſo boldly? But yet I will bée content, let the matter bée indifferently handled, and let as many maryed men bée choſen to bée Byſhops, as bée vnmaryed, ſéeyng yng they graunt it lawfull: And then am I sure, ẏ we shall auoyde a great heape of fornications, that dẽ now bled. Yea I feare me, that our chaste men shall sone bẽ quyt of all, and the maryed mẽ shall haue all.

Another reason they haue, & that is this. Priestes may extinct the brennyng heate that is in thẽ, by fastyng, labouryng, watchyng, prayng, & by other good workes doyng. And if they doe thus, no doubt, but God wil geue them the gift of chastitie, for he is liberall in geuing, and mercyful in heryng of their prayers, Ergo, they nede not to marry.

Priestes may get chastitie, by prayng, & fastyng.

First I desire to know of those mẽ, if they wilsay of their cõscience, that the thyrd part of Priestes in Englãd doe kepe their chastitie: I thinke they will rather sweare nay, thẽ yea. Now come to their argument, and se how shamefully they doe reproue priests. I durst not speake so much agaynste them, as these men doe. For first they say, that if priestes did pray, or fast, or did like good workes, thẽ God would, yea hee must of his liberalitie, & mercy geue them the gift of chastitie. Secondly, they graunt that ẏ thyrd deale of priestes kepe not their vow. Now is this as much to say, thinketh me. Firste, that Priestes bee naught in deede. Secondarely, that they neither will, nor yet desire to bee better. For if they did desire it of God, hee would geue it them, saye they. In hym is no fault, Ergo, the fault is in the priestes, that neither bee good in deede, nor yet will praye, or desire to bee good. I would not gladly haue such patrons in my cause.

A Notary of London sayd to me openly, that hee had written a thousand dispensations for Priestes children in his dayes. How many then haue all Notaries written.

Moreouer I graunt that Priestes shall fast, and pray to kepe their bodyes lowe. But now to them. Why shal not priests also marry to auoyde fornication, as well as fast, and prayer? seyng that God hath ordeined matrimony, for a peculiar, and singular, remedy agaynst fornication? I doe not condemne true fastyng, and prayyng. Why doe they then condemne maryinge? seyng that God which ordeyned fastyng, and prayng, hath also ordeyned maryng? Yea, and me thinke, if any one thing should bee first proued, then should mariage bee first proued, seyng that it is deputed of God, for a proper, and spedy remedy agaynst fornication? Notwithstanding I will bee content, first to exhorte all Priestes, both to prayng, and fastyng, & if they can so kepe their chastitie, I will thanke God with them. But if they can not, then will I in no wise, that they shall bee cõpelled either by law, or by vow to chastitie. For that is agaynst Gods word, and the doctrine of his holy Apostles.

Priestes shall fast, and pray. But what if all that will not helpe.

But yet let me touch their grounde nearer. I would desire thẽ to tell me, and to proue vnto me by learnyng, that God is bounde, in as much as hee is liberall, and mercyful to graunt vnto them ẏ gift of chastitie, for theyr prayng, and fasting. It is not inough for them thus to saye, seyng that many good men hath both prayed, and fasted, and yet had not the gift of chastitie: But they must bryng me an open Scripture, wherin that this promise is made vnto their fastyng, and watchyng, or elles they must graunt that they bee bounde to vse Gods remedies, which hee hath ordeined, and instituted, to the helpyng of our infirmitie. If I were hungry, and thurst, and would goe, and praye to God to slake my hunger, and thurst, & would not vse those meanes, and remedies, that God hath ordeined, thinke you that God were bound of his liberalitie to graunt me my requeste? Nay for soth. But it were rather to bee iudged, that I were a tempter of God, & a despiser of his holy ordinaunce, and would not bee content with those remedies, that God hath appointed.

God is bound to as much as he hath promised.

The deuill commeth with like tẽptatiõ to our M. Christ, and requireth him to the honour of God to doe a miracle, to leape down from the highest of the temple, if hee would bee taken for the sonne of God, & as for harme hee could haue none. For the Scripture testifieth (saith hee) that God had commaunded his aũgels to beare thee vp in their armes. Wherefore (sayth the deuill) it shall bee a great honour to God, and also a great declaration

Math. 4.

Psal. 90.

to thy power, if thou deſcende frō the height of the temple, otherwiſe then any other man can doe. And if thou goeſt downe by the ſteyers, God ſhal no more bee glorified in thy fact, then in other mens, nor thou ſhalt not bee taken for the man, that thou art, and wouldeſt bee.

The deuill tempteth God.

Moreouer, thou needeſt not doubt, but God will helpe thee. For the ſcripture ſpeaketh of thee, whiche can not bee falſe. Notwithſtandyng all this, our M. Chriſt calleth it temptyng of God, when men will ſeeke vnto hym for other remedyes, then hee hath appoynted. And therfore our M. Chriſt doth clearely declare, that the ſame Scripture, which the deuill bryngeth for him, maketh not for his purpoſe. For though that God doth promiſe to helpe Chriſt, & all his, yet will hee bee glorified in his creatures, & will that we ſhal vſe them with thankes, to the entent, & purpoſe, ỹ hee hath ordeined them for: And then, if there bee any thing lacking vnto our health, & ſalua tion, hee will, that we ſhal both pray, & truſt in hym. With what boldenes cā I deſyre of God to helpe mee? and am not content to receiue his creatures, that hee hath inſtituted to helpe mee? Whereby ſhall God helpe mee, If I diſpiſe his ordinaūces, and creatures that hee hath alreadye ordeyned to my helping? Is it reaſon, that God at my inſtaunce, ſhal make a new ordinaūce and new remedies for my diſeaſes? Why am I not content (if I will bee helped at Gods hand) with thoſe remedyes, that bee all ready inſtituted? It was but a ſmall thynge, and a vyle thyng in a maner, for Chriſt to deſcēd by the ſteyers from the heyght of the temple, ſeeyng that the deuill required hym, by Gods honour, & alſo by his owne, to ſhew ſome ſpeciall power.

God chaungeth not his order for our pleaſure.

If I weare diſeaſed, and ſycke, and would not vſe the counſell of Phiſicions, nor of other medecines, ỹ God hath inſtituted, but wil faſt, and pray, and watch, and doe almes deedes, thynke you that men would recken mee wiſe? And if I did thus dye, were not I a deſpiſer of God, and of his good ordinaunces? God hath apoynted Phiſicions, and geuen vertue to hearbes, and other creatures, to help my diſeaſe. Wherefore I am bounde with meekenes, and with thankes to receyue them, and to pray to God, ỹ hee will fortifye, and ſtrengthē the natures of theſe creatures, and that they may haue vertue, and efficacy in me. This is a Chriſten man bound to do: For if this reaſon of theſe men ſhall haue ſtrength, thē will we vſe no māner of creatures, or remedies ỹ God hath ordeined, but agaynſt hunger, and thirſt, heate, and could, agues, and peſtilences, pouertie, and neceſſitie, ſwordes and gonnes, agaynſt all maner of diſeaſes, againſt all manner of miſfortunes, will we bee nothing, but all onely pray, or faſt, or els geue almes, as we ſhall thinke beſt. So that we will teach God what thing is beſt to the helpyng of all imperfections. I thanke you good Maiſters for your good doctrine, I praye God reward you.

God hath ordeined euery thyng to a purpoſe, and thereunto muſt they bee vſed.

Fynally I haue great mervayle, why that prayer, and faſtynge ſhall all onely get Prieſtes to the gift of chaſtitie? and not all other men? And if other mē may haue the gift of chaſtitie through their prayers? why bee not all men moued to lyue chaſte? ſeeing ỹ chaſtitie in a very deede is a higher ſtate then matrimony is. Why bee prieſtes more bounde to pray for the gift of chaſtetie, then other Chriſten men bee?

Prieſtes haue a priuilege beefore other men.

Nowe marke this doctrine. If a lymme of the deuyl would come now and preach vniuerſally to all men the excellencye of chaſtitie, and to ſhew what a greate quiet lyuing it is, and what a pleſaūt ſtate it is before God, And contrarywiſe, of mariage would ſay, that it weare a ſorowfull ſtate, full of troubles, full of cares, full of heauines, and (as the Pope ſayth) a fleſhely, and a carnall ſtate, and that ſeemeth to haue in it ſelf any vncleanes: and by theſe reaſōs, and perſwaſyons, with many moe that hee might bring, would exhort all manner of mē in England to lyue ſole, and vnmaried, And would alſo teach them to pray, and to faſt for the gift of chaſtity

The fleſh would gladly haue a quyet lyuyng, & pleaſaunt.

and

and not to doute, but that God of his liberalitie would geue it thē. I would fayne know of learned men, if this man were gods frend and the kings: How much he is gods, I will not dispute. But I am sure there could not be a greater traytour to the kinges grace thē he is. For if he might bring to passe that he intendeth by his doctrine. Fyrst he should destroy ẏ kyngs succession. Secondarily, he should within this seuen yeres, make ẏ king a Lorde of a fewe subiectes, or none, and fynally of none indede. And all this would they doe by fasting, and praying.

Had the world continued, they would haue made vs poore men beleeue, that they had gotten children by fastyng, & praying.

But what thing so euer they tell vs of their fasting, and praying, I am sure that they fall to getting of childrē as sone as other men doe, and all is with fasting and praying. Alas what thing can not the deuill misuse.

But let no mā take mee, as though I condemned fasting, and praying. For surely I would that they should be vsed, and that diligently. But I would, haue them vsed in tyme, and place conuenient, and for the intent, and purpose, that God hath ordayned them. But yet I would not, that other remedies, and gyftes of God should be thought vnlawfull, & also be despised for them.

Now most gracious Prince, here haue I shewed vnto your grace, fyrst myne obedience, willyng that euery man should both so learne, and so doe. Secōdarylye, I haue shewed my learning in certaine articles, for ẏ which there is a variēce in the world at this day, protesting vnto your grace, that I haue sayde nothing, but I trust be true, and agreeable with Gods holy worde, and with the learning of the Doctours. Notwithstanding, if there be any man within your realme, that can proue by good learning the cōtrary (so that your grace shall alowe it to agree with Gods word, and to be sufficient before Gods dreadfull iudgment) I shall be content to submyt my selfe to your graces determination, and to doe that thing that becōmeth a Christen man, & a true subiecte to doe. Thus our Lord Jesu Christ, ẏ purchasour of all grace and goodnes, euer preserue your grace in al vertue and honour,

Amen.

That it is against the holy Scripture to honour Images, and to pray to Saintes.

IF men had the verye true faith in Christe Jesus, that belongeth to Christē mē, to haue, this article were open of it selfe without any farther probation: for if men did beleeue first that Christ were God and omnipotent, and mighty, to geue all thinges: Secondarily, that he were mercifull, gracious, & louing towarde vs, and so louing, that we coulde desire nothing of hym, but ẏ he woulde geue it vs: if men (I say) had thys fayth, and this loue towarde Christ, they would goe no farther but to him onely, they woulde make, inuente, & deuise no mediatours, but faithfully receaue hym (according to ẏ Scriptures) for their onely mediatour, Sauiour, and redēmer: and beleeue and knowe surely, that they coulde aske nothyng so great in his name, but that they shoulde receaue it, so that he woulde hym selfe geue it, and thereunto is able. Also by this fayth, they should perfectly know, that they coulde not be so vnworthy, but he of his onely and mere mercy, is able, & also woulde make them worthy to receaue their peticions, so that if men had faith, they should perfectly know that they had nede of no more then this one Christ, that they should nor ought not seeke to any other mediatour, eyther to obtayne any thing, or els to make them worthy: but should know and confesse both in worde and dæde, that Christ alonely is able inough, yea & so mighty & so mercifull, that all other fayned and inuented mediatours of men bée vile, filthy and abhominable of themselues, to bée compared to him. If this fayth (I say) were printed in the hartes of mẽ, then what shoulde they or could they, desire more then this one mediatour Jesus Christ? What could they haue, that of him and by him they could not obtaine? Truely nothinge that they coulde righteously aske, as all Scriptures beare witnes.

But nowe, let all these makers of new Gods cumulate themselues togither on a heape, and shewe mée but one place, yea but one iot, or one example in holy Scripture, that euer men did pray to Saintes? or one that entered into heauen by Saints prayers? Christ ascended (as the Scriptures bée plaine) into heauen by hys owne power: now would I knowe of these new Godmakers, by whose power and helpe that the first Sainte came into heauen: say not by the intercession of Saintes, for I will say then there were none in heauen: nor by his owne holynes, for then dyed Christ in vayne: and if hée came by Christ onely, why may hée not alone helpe vs thither? His power is not weakened: his mercy is no lesse towarde vs then it was towarde him. Now here you sée all the causes that brought the first Sainte to heauen, & these causes bée sufficient, yea & alonely allowed of the Scriptures of God: therfore they bée also sufficient for vs, if wée will bélæue the scriptures of God.

Christ ascended into heauen by his owne power.

But now to declare and make this matter open, I will recite the wordes of the Scriptures: first I will speake of Images, of whom speaketh Moyses these wordes. Thou shalt make thee no grauen Images, nor similitude of any thing that is in heauen aboue, or in earth beneath, or in waters vnder the earth: thou shalt neither honour nor worship them. Bée not these wordes plaine against all maner of Images or similitudes? For if saints bée in heauẽ or in earth, or vnder the earth, here bée their figures excepted, either to bée honoured, or worshipped: and marke that hée excepteth both honouring and also worshipping. Now what can you géeue to Images that is neither honour nor worship? It maketh no matter to mée, whether you call it latria or dulia, if it bée eyther honour or worship, then is it against Scripture: and if it bée neither, then is it nothyng but a voyde name inuented of your insaciable couetousnes, to deceaue simple men with, and to heape innumerable good to your selues. For if you had no more profite by Images then you haue deuotion to them, then shoulde they bée sone lefte downe. Who hath séene a precious offeryng of a Priest géeuen to any Image? but wée sée dayly how yée robbe Images of other mens oblations.

Exod. 20. Deut. 5.

Wee are forbidden of God to make Images.

Wee must neither honour Images nor worshippe them.

But let vs returne to our purpose, Duns on this text saith, that by it was it forbydden to make images béfore the incarnation of Christ. &c. Now must you prowe where they bée allowed since the incarnation and shew with manifest scriptures where this text is condemned in the new Testament or els it stãdeth fast agaynst you after your owne M. Duns, whom you dare not deny. Also ỳ Prophet saith, a mã dyd plante a pinaple tree, and the raine did nurrish it, and therof was made a fire vnto men, hee toke of it and warmed hym, and burnt it and baked bread therewith, and of the other parte hee Made hym a God, and dyd honour it, and prayd vnto it saying, deliuer me for thou art my God. Marke the processe of ỳ Prophet, first the man planted this trée, thẽ hée burnt part of it and baked bread with it, and of the other part he made hym a God whom hée honoured and worshypped, marke also if all these bée not true, and fulfilled of your images, of the one is made your God which you doe honour, and of whom you desire to bée deliuered, some frõ death, some from sickenes, some frõ pestilence, some from pouertie, some from théeues, some frõ euill fortune, some frõ hãging, some frõ drowning, and some to saue you from the toth ake, some to saue your horse, some your pygges, and some to helpe your wemen with child, with many other thynges more, so that for euery thyng that you will desire, you haue a God to aske it of. Now of the other part is made a payre of gallowes: is not this true? is not this playne? of what other thyng in earth can the saying of ỹ pro phet be verified, but of your images? And if it may be verified of an hundred other things, yet is it also true of your images: and vnto them agreeth most peculiarly. The prophet speaketh not of one onely, but of all thinges that be lyke. Now deliuer your Gods if you can. They will not be deliuered wt the aunswere that Doctour Rydley did once make vnto me, that there was no man so blynde, nor so mad, or folishe, for to honour the stocke and the stone that standeth before them, but they referre the honour to that thyng that the Image doth represent. I aunswere: good Maister Doctour, I pray you tell me one thyng, what did Cicero with all the whole Senatours of Rome? did they not honour that same thing that stode before thē (and yet as you say) they did referre it vnto the thing that was thereby representeth. These men were wise men and as well learned in their tyme as you, & yet you see (for lacke of knowledge of the trueth) they honoured stockes and stones. I am sure you will not excuse them from Idolatry, yea and that because they did honour the stockes and stones, and not alonely for honoring of the the thing that was represented.

and

Mayne Imaginatiōs of men.

3. Kyng. 12. Also what dyd Roboam when he dyd set vp two golden calues in Bethell and sayd to the people, Goe no more to Hierusalē behold thy Gods Israell. Was not this done to the honour of God? for they were not so mad (as ye say) to thinke that those calues were Goddes, but they did honour them in the honour of God, and that was well declared in their sacrifice whiche was none other, but such as God had commaunded in the law, Ergo, after your rule they might lawfully honour these calues referryng it to God. They had also a great colour for them, for all the old fathers did alwayes offer to god calues, as Abrahā wt many other which, oblatiō was accepted of God. Wherfore they might well thinke that God would be honoured in the images of Calues.

Now what thing can you lay to them whereby you will proue that they honoured their stocks and their stones, and their Calues, but those same thinges shall also be layde vnto you, and vnto yours, to proue that you doe likewise honour your stocks and your stones. First you runne frō place to place, to seke them, which is a token that you doe honour the stocke or stone, for there haue you nothynge of the Sainte more then in an other place, sauyng onely the stocke & stone.

Howe wee haue beene by ignorance led to worship stockes and stones.

Now, when you haue founde thē, then pray you before them, and that with knelinges, and knockings, and shaking of your heades, and lokyng deuoutly and pitiously, then kisse you their fete or their showes (for they be seldome barefoted least they shuld haue the murre or the coake, by the reason they be not vsed to coulde, as you may see by their smoked scolions faces, handes, and fete, with all the place where they stande) and wipe your napkyns, and rubbe your beads on them, and licke them with your tounges, and lay your eyes on them. Then set you lightes before them, & then offer you to them (though in ỹ M. Doctour your person is nothyng giltie) great oblations, so that they shine in golde and siluer and precious stones: yea and not thus content, but also promise to visite that stocke once a yeare, if God and that good Sainte sende you life and health. &c.

I pray you is not this honourynge of the stocke and stone? what did Cicero with all the Romaines to their stockes and stones? what did Roboam to his Calues, if this be not honouring, deine me what honouring is: what more exteriour honour can you deuise then this is? and yet you doe say ỹ you honour no stockes nor stones. But worldly shame, and inuincible Scriptures, haue brought you to make this damnable euasion, bycause you see men now ware wyse in the Lorde, by the which they see clearely your false dissimulation and hypocrisie. But if you were the true honourers of God, as you be secret hypocrites, you would not make this damnable euasion to stablish, vphold and maintaine your Idolatry, nor yet suffer (so much as laye in you) any thynge to be done that hath any colour or shadow of holynes that might be an occasion of Idolatry. But bycause you be hypocrites and vnsaciable belly Gods, you care not (so you may deceaue the simple people & lead them with blynd shadowes, therby to fill your offeryng bores and chestes to maintaine your vnsaciable carnall appetites) how the honour of God be saued, or how your poore brethrēs conscience be deceaued. Thinke you that this is inough to say that no mā is so mad nor so folishe as to honour the stockes and stones. And yet to suffer and dayly before your eyes to see, so great exteriour honour geuen vnto them. That no toung can expresse nor hart can deuise more: yea if you will beleue your subtile Duns, they geue vnto them (as I shall well proue by his diffinition) honour whiche is called Latria: the which Latria after your owne learnyng ought to be geuen to God onely. This sayth Duns, Latria is called an exteriour honouryng or a bodely seruice. &c.

Stockes & stones the Papistes honour as Gods.

Now if that be trewe, it followeth that they geue that honour to stockes and stones that onely pertayneth to God, which doe any exterior honour (whether it be offering of candels, or kissyng of their showes, or any other thing) to them: Make you the conclusion, for I nede not to say that they doe Idolatrye. Farthermore, this word Latria, (wher with you deceaue the symple people) is a Greke word and after. S. Augustine it signifyeth no more but seruice, the which you cā not denye but that you geue to your stockes and stones. Cōclude now this proposityon after .M. subtill doctour Dunces diffinition I pray you, for I haue no leasure. Thinketh your doctourhed that the children of Israeli wt their hie Priest Aaron could not haue made this Pope holy excuse, that they were not so mad nor so folyshe as to honour the golden Calfe, but rather to refer that honour to ỹ lyuing God? They had a good colour for them. For they knewe none other God nor saint but hym: and yet this excuse was not lawful, nor could not be alowed whē Moses came with the word of God. Marke also what he was that made this Calfe, not a fole nor ignorāt person among the people, or one of none auctoritie: But the most wisest eloquent and chiefe amonge them: yea he was that tyme the very hed of the Church or congregation. Also note ỹ intent which was to kepe the people togither in good order. He also made a Calfe with the which thing all their fathers had pleased God in doing sacrifyce with them: so that they might well thinke ỹ it might be acceptable to God to be honoured in the image of a Calfe before any other Image. But all these colours be naked before the worde of God.

Briefly would you alowe that the people should geue that same honour to me ỹ they doe geue to your stokes and stones? And vnder ỹ same colour that it should be in ỹ name & honour of God (you can not say but I am as good as your best stocks & stones: and if they be the Images of sayntes and represent sayntes after your sayning, I am the Image of God and represent hym so long as I beleue in hym according to the holy scriptures. And if a conning and an artificyall grauer made them, God made me. And I haue .ij. thinges aboue them, which all your carners, and you with all your distinctions can not geue to your stockes nor stones: That is, I am a liuinge creature, and your stockes be deade: I am created to lyue with the euerlasting God, and your stockes be made to the fyer) I am sure you nor no man wil alowe it. But there is one merueilous wōder, That if the best and most holy of all your new gods, yea one that doth myracles racles euery day, were taken out of your handes, & set againe in ỹ Corners & his makers house, hée should bée no better thẽ a stock or a stone, nor could doe no myracles: yea if hée were prayed neuer so much: no not so much as if ỹ house were a fyer, to saue either ỹ house or hym selfe.

Practise of Papistes to cause Images to worke myracles.

Also it is not lawful so longe as hée there stãdeth neyther to pray to him, nor yet to offer to him, which offering would both helpe the poore man, hys wyfe, childrẽ, and seruaunts. But let them suffer you to take this worme God into your handes agayne, and then is hée Lord ouer all the world, then maketh hée rych men and poore men, then maketh hée men blynde, & blynde to see agayne, then maketh hée lame men whole, then maketh hée women with childe, yea and also bringeth them well to bed. Then expelleth hée deuils, then telleth hée thinges to come, then ruleth hée in heauen and earth and in water, briefly hée defendeth both king and kingdome. Is not here a sudden mutation? And all is bécause hée hath got hym a new M. and a new place. O you hypocrites thynke you that men bée so blynde ỹ they cã not see this falsed? You would make them blynde in déede the which would make them to honour stockes and stones: yea and that in the name of an other thing, the which also they know not. Which of you all hath seyn our Lady or any other saint where by you may lerne to make her similitude? and if you haue nothing to lay for you but bécause shée was a woman, then is your Image as much ỹ similitude of an harlot of the stues the which bereth al the shape ỹ belongeth to a naturall woman as wel as of our Lady. Notwithstanding that our blessed lady is a vergin and the other a strumpet, yet in exterior formes and shapes that may bée séene and iudged by senses, bée they all one, yea and your Image in all exterior signes is a great deale more lyker vnto an harlot, then to a pure and a blessed méke virgin. And yet are you not ashamed wt these damnable shadowes, both to priuate God of his honour and also compell your simple brethren to this shamefull idolatry. If you will loke your selfe and sée clearely your idole in a pure mirour, reade the .bj. chapter of Baruch, wherin you shall fynde these wordes, Their stockes be polished of the carpenter, and they bee gilded & siluered, but they be false & cã not speake. How thinke you, haue not your Images these properties? Their Gods haue golden crownes on their heades from whom the Priests doth take away golde & siluer & spend it on themselues: They geeue also of it vnto their strũpets, and decke their harlotes: And whẽ they haue takẽ it away frõ their harlots, thẽ deck they there with their Gods againe. Wherfore know that they bee no Gods. Bée not all these thinges fulfilled on you? doe not you take away their oblations & therwith maintayne your pompe and pride, & decke also your harlotes, say not nay, for all the world will condemne you, for opẽ lyers, the matter is so plaine. Their Gods haue a septer like a mã, and like a Iudge of a land, but they cã not sley hym that offendeth thẽ, wherefore feare them not. Doth not this agre with your Gods? Note how bolde the prophet is which dare crake with your God, & sayth how ỹ they cã not hurte their enemies: wherefore hée biddeth vs that we shall not feare them.

Baruch. 6.

A notable declaration of Baruch the Prophet against Idols and Idolatry.

The hypocrisie of the Papistes hath greatly preuailed in the practysyng and aduaunsing of Idolatry.

Now if you think that this bée not spoken of your Gods (not with standing that none of these thinges they bée voyde of) goe to them and cry: but remember that you crye aloude, for they bée very thicke of hearing or peraduenture they be gone forth a toune and occupied. Therefore I say crye & whoope aloud, and byd them if they be Gods or will haue any honour ỹ they will now auẽge themselues of their enemyes. If they can doe nothing, thẽ will we lay vnto them this mocke of the prophet and will not feare them. They haue a sworde in their hande, and an axe, but they can not delyuer themselues from battel, nor frõ theeues: therfore feare them not. A righteous mã is better that hath none Images for he shall be free frō obprobriousnes. How thinke you haue not your Gods all these tokens? how many theeues haue you hanged for robbyng of your goods? but your gods neuer saued thē selfe frō theeues. Moreouer, why make you so suer lockes, & so sure doores, if your Gods bee able to keepe your goods? I thinke you feare not their runnyng away.

Farthermore, why keepe you so great bandogs, if your Gods bee able to saue their Gods frō theeues? But mee thinketh the bandogs bee mightier then your Goddes, and also you trust more to them: for they defende both you and your Goddes. You dumme stockes, where is all your reason? where is all your wit? where is all your wisdome? where is all your policy? where is all your godly faith that you ought to haue in the God of heauen? Are you not ashamed thus grossye to deceaue men? yea & wyth those thynges which you can neither defende with scripture, nor yet wyth any reason. But paraduenture you will say that the Prophet speaketh here of Idols and not of Images.

There is no differēce betweene an Idoll & an Image.

I aunswere: I pray you what call you Idolum? is it not as much as Imago in Latin? which wee call in inglishe an Image, but wee will not barry for the name: let vs goe to ỹ properties. Haue not your Images all these properties that ỹ Prophet layeth to these thinges which you call Idols? cā you say nay? can you proue the contrary? Doth not experience learne vs that they bee all one? Now what matter is it what name you geeue them, when the properties and the very thyng is all one. Moreouer the Prophet Dauid doth define an Idole wyth these properties: First it hath eyes & can not see: it hath a nose and can not smell: it hath a mouth and can not speake: it hath eares and can not heare: it hath handes and can not feele: it hath feete, and can not goe, &c.

The description of an Idoll or Image.

Now which of all these properties hath not your Idolles? what will you make now of them? The Prophet Dauid maketh an Idolle of ỹ thynge that hath these properties: and wyll you make a God and a helper of thē? will you pray to them? will you offer to them? will you runne from place to place to seeke them? There is no distinction, there is no subtiltie that can helpe you. For more reuerence, more seruice, more honour, more cultus dulie may you not doe to your Images then the Prophet woulde that wee should not doe to Idols: for they bee one in all properties and conditions. And as for your myracles that you defende them by, they bee but illusions of the deuill, inuēted of your owne imaginations, and cōtrary to the worde of God, vnto the greate blaspheming of the omnipotent God of heauen. For myracles bee neuer done of God that any man can proue of surety, but all onely to the magnifying & declaratiō of his blessed worde. As for all other myracles may bee suspected to bee done of the deuill, by the sufferaunce of God, to the probation of our fayth, and specially when they bee against the open worde of God. This may bee proued by the wordes of Moyses: If there arise in the Deut. 13. midst of thee a Prophet, or a man that saith I haue seene a vision, and tell thee afore a signe and a wōder, and that thing that hee tolde thee doe also come to passe: Now if this man say vnto thee, let vs goe and follow strainge Gods which thou knowest not, and let vs serue them, thou shalt not heare the Prophet, nor the dreamers wordes, for God doth proue you, that it may bee open whether you loue hym in all your harte, and in all your soule or not.

Bee not these wordes open against all manner of myracles? yea & against Prophetes whose prophecie is true: and yet because hee will drawe the hartes of ỹ people vnto other things beside God, therefore shall hee not bee heard: your Images bee not here excepted. Farthermore, what signifieth this, that God will haue all our hartes and all our soules. If God haue all, then can your Images haue no part. But marke how God doth

Idolles or Images worke no myracles.

Hipocrites fayne them to bee the workers of myracles.

proue our faith with ſuch myracles, ſo that hée woulde that neyther heauē nor hell, Sainte, nor myracles, Prophet true, nor falſe, ſhoulde draw our harts frō him, or frō his word: but alonely to ſticke faſt to him. Wherfore lay for your Idols what you cā: firſt they bée no Gods: ſecōdarily they can no more doe (if they doe ſo much) but doe miracles, & tel you before of thoſe thynges that bée to come. And yet all this can not helpe, for it is openly agaynſt the word of God and we may not heare them.

Farthermore agaynſt your Idols will I ſet the braſen Serpent, of whō it is written that it did miracles ſo openly that no man cā deny it, yea and that by the worde of God: which did alſo ſtand many hundred yeares, till the people did to it ſo much as they now doe to your Gods: that is, they did offer inſēce & other oblations therto, and therfore was it deſtroyed. Not withſtāding it was inſtituted of God, and ſo bée none of your idolles, wherfore miracles can not helpe. And among the Turkes bée miracles done as they thinke, and yet that proueth not their ſect to bée lawfull. I will tell you of a miracle that is writtē in their law. On a certeine time there was a controuerſie betweene the Prieſtes and the religious men which of them ſhould haue, the oblations of the people. The Prieſts layd that they were beſt worthy bécauſe they were miniſters in the temple and ſeruauntes to the Gods, and night and day toke payne for the people. The Friers laid for them that they were the ſucceſſiō of all their holy fathers and by their prayers and merites, was the kyng & all the people kept, and the land defēded from all euill with many other thinges more.

A notable myracle done by falſe gods in Turkie.

Briefly this matter was deferred of both partes to the ſentence of the kyng, the whiche had thought to haue geuen ſentēce with the Prieſtes. But when the Friers knew it, they came to the kyng and deſired him that hée would deferre the ſentēce vij. dayes, and ſée what the Gods would ſhewe for them. The night bēfore that the kyng ſhould geue ſentence, was hée compelled by nature to goe to the preuy, which whē hée came there, ỹ preeuy brake, and hée fel in, & there was hée crying by the ſpace of an houre, til hée was ſo wery that hée coulde cry no more, & no man could come to him for the pallace was locked. Thē ſodēly appeared vnto hym a religious mā wt a glorious light, ſaying vnto hym. Now where bée they ỹ thou woldeſt haue geuen ſentence with all: are not they wel worthy of the oblations that can not helpe thée out of dāger? but now mayſt thou ſée what we may doe with the Gods for thée and all thy land: and with this the kyng without paine or hurt was taken out of ỹ preeuy and layd agayne in his bed or hée wiſt it: and the day folowyng gaue hée ſentence that the religious men ſhould haue the oblations.

A ſtinking myracle.

Now thinke you was not here an open miracle: and was it not done on the kyng the which had vnderſtādyng and reaſon. It was an open matter when hée was in the preeuy and the preeuy broken, and hée layd agayne in his bed without any hurt, this paſſed mās power. But what wil you proue of this miracle? all your Gods together can not doe a more open miracle then this is.

Libro 5. ad Iacob.

But let vs ſée what the Doctours ſay agaynſt your Gods, Clemēs writeth theſe wordes, We doe honour viſible Images to the honour of the inuiſible God, the whiche is a falſe thyng: but if you will honour the image of God in doing well to man, in hym ſhall you honour the true image of God. Wherfore if you will truely honour the image of God, we will open that thynge vnto you that is of trueth, ſo that you muſte doe well vnto man the whiche is made vnto the Image of God: geue hym honour and reuerence: geeue hym meate when hee is hungrye: geeue him drinke when hee is thyrſty: Clothe him when hee is naked: ſerue hym when hee is ſicke: geeue hym lodgyng when hee is a ſtraunger: and when hee is in priſon miniſter to hym neceſſaries. This is the thing that shall bee counted to bee geeuē God truely. What honour is this of god to rūne about fooliſhly to ſtony & wooddy Images, and to honour as Godes idle and dead figures, and to deſpiſe man in whō is the very true Image of God. Wherfore vnderſtāde you that this is the ſuggeſtion of the Serpent that lurketh within, the whiche doth make you beleeue that you bee deuoute when you doe honour in ſenſible thyngs. And maketh you to beleue that you bee not wicked when you hurt ſenſible and reaſonable men. &c.

How thinke you? doth not this damme the worſhypping of Images, yea though it bee in ỹ honour of God. Hee ſheweth you alſo that there is no other true Image but mā. Which of you all goe a pilgrimage to ỹ Image? whiche of you all doe offer to that Image? which of you all doe honour that Image? You land lepers, you inuenters of new gods, you Idolaters, what ſay you to this? how can you auoyde this? is not this agreable with Scriptures? And yet this Image doe you deſpiſe: This image caſt you in priſon: this Image doe you ſtocke & chayne, and whippe from towne to towne, wout any cauſe. This image dyeth in the ſtreates before your doores for hunger and colde, and you runne to Walſingam & to Ipſewiche with great pompe & pride to honour your dead ſhadowes. It were better for you to burne thoſe Idolles and to warme this true image of God there by: for this Image was made vnto God onely, and all your dumme gods were made for this Images ſake. Wherfore it commeth of the deuill, that you forſake this very true image & leape to your wormeeaten Gods: yea you haue burnt many a poore mā for ſpeakyng againſt theſe dumme Idolles. But tell me when all the Byſhops in England did here or trouble any man for ſpeakyng or for doyng, yea or for deſtroying this very true Image of GOD: they had rather deſtroy it them ſelues, then it ſhould bee vndeſtroyed. Let the kynges bookes bee ſearched throughout the Realme and there ſhall bee no ſmall number founde of theſe Images that bee troubled and vexed and caſt in priſon for trifles, yea and vtterly vndone by the Byſhops and by their Prieſtes: & yet will they bee ỹ honourers of Images, yea and that to the honour of God, and of all holy Saintes. Is not this againſt all wiſedome? yea is it not againſt nature? and yet no man may tell it.

Of the liuely Images of man, many haue the Byſhops burned: But of theyr wormeeaten images not one.

There is no true Image, but onely the Image of man which few doe honour.

Alſo the ſame doctour in an other place, What thing is there ſo wicked & ſo vnthākfull, as to receaue a benefyte of God and to geue thankes vnto ſtockes and ſtones? wherfore wake and vnderſtād your health. &c. Clemens in eodē libro.

How thinke you, are you not vnthankfull vnto God of whō you haue receiued all thyng, and for them you thanke your wormeeaten Gods? farthermore. S. Auguſtine ſayth, Let vs not loue any viſible ſpectakilles leſt by erring from the veritie, and by louing ſhadowes we be brought in to darknes, let vs haue no deuocyon to our phanteſies. It is better to haue a trew thing what ſo euer it be then all māner of thinges that may be fayned at our owne pleaſure &c. Bee not your idols viſible ſpectakles? Bee they any other thinges then ſhadowes? and yet you will loue them & honour them. Aunſwere to Saint. Auguſtine. You Infydels haue not we a lyuing God, and will you bring vs from hym to dead ſtockes? Alſo S. Hierome, Be it knowen vnto the Kyng. &c. the properties of the wordes be to be marked that he he ſayth, we will not worſhip thy gods nor yet honour thy image, for neither of both be come the ſeruauntes of God to doe. &c. Here haue you that neyther worſhipping nor honouring belōgeth to Images. De Vera religione, Vltr. Super Dani.

But now to ỹ worſhiping of ſaints, which hath a greater ſhadowe of holynes then theſe dumme Gods haue. In primis you ſay that ſayntes muſt pray for vs and bee mediators to God for vs, that by them wee may bee able to receiue our petition. This is Richardes ardes oppnion De media villa, there can not a thing bee inuented by ỹ craft of the deuil that may bee a greater blaſphempe or moze derogation to Chriſt and his bleſſed bloud then this is. For if Saintes bee neceſſary to bee mediatours for vs, then is Chriſt vnſufficient: for phyloſophers did neuer put ỹ. cauſes where as one was ſufficient: and if any thing bee geuen vs of God for ſayntes ſakes then bee not all thinges geuẽ for Chriſtes ſake, ỹ which is plainely againſt S. Now is there any ſaynt that hath this name? if there be none that hath the name, then is there none that can vſurpe this office, without blaſpheming of Chriſt.

Farthermore hee hath redeemed vs onely without the helpe of ſaints, and why ſhal hee not bee onely mediatour without ſaintes? is not redemptiõ the chief acte of a mediatour? Alſo the holy ghoſt ſayth, He ſhall bee cal-

Eſay. 7. led Emanuell the which is as much to ſay as God with vs, what is this

How God by Chriſt is euer with vs. God with vs, is hee with vs but as one man is with an other? And as my cote is with my backe? Nay, hee is an other wayes with vs, That is to redeeme vs, to ſaue vs, to keepe vs, to defend vs from all euell: yea and is with vs, that is, hee is on our ſyde, he holdeth with vs, hee ſpeaketh for vs, hee excuſeth vs, hee maketh our cauſe good: briefly hee obtayneth all thinges for vs. Of what ſaynt can this be ſpoken? What doe ſayntes now for vs? Alſo S. John ſayth, If a mã doe ſinne we haue an aduocate by the father Chriſt Ieſus, what is this? hee is our aduocate to the father? and here bee none aſſigned but Chriſt Jeſus, and by hym haue we onely remiſſion of our ſynnes. 1. Iohn 2.

Now what ſhall the Saintes obtaine for vs? what ſhall they deſire for vs? if our ſinnes bee remitted, then hath the father of heauen no diſpleaſure agaynſt vs, what ſhall they then pray for vs? Alſo S. Paule ſayth. The ſpirite of God maketh interceſsion mightyly for vs with mighty deſires, that cã not bee expreſſed with toung. Marke how the ſpirite of God deſireth and prayeth for vs, and that no man ſhould recken that we had neede of other mediatours, hee ſayth that hee prayeth mightyly for vs, and with great feruẽcie that it can not bee expreſſed. Saintes cã obteine nothyng for vs.

Now is not hee able to obtaine all things for vs, and hath taken this office on him for vs? it were doubtles a great rebuke to him, that Saintes ſhould bee ſet in his ſteade, & ioined vñ him in his office as though hee were vnſufficient. You thinke to doe ſaints a great honour when you make them Gods, and ſet thẽ in Chriſts ſteade: but you can not doe them a great diſhonour nor diſpleaſure, for they will bee but Saintes, and no Gods, yea & that by Chriſtes helpe & not by their owne. Alſo S. Paule ſaith, Chriſt ſit- Roma 8.

teth on the right hãd of the father the whiche doth alſo praye for vs, marke that hee prayeth for vs, can the father of heauẽ deny any thyng of his prayer? Doth not hee aſke all thinges neceſſarie for vs? And as Scripture ſayth? He is our wiſedome, he is our 1. Cor. 1.

iuſtice, he is our ſatisfactiõ, and our redemption made of God.

Now what reſteth for Saintes to aſke? what will you deſire more then wiſedome, iuſtice, ſanctificatiõ and redemption? all theſe hath Chriſt obteined for vs, yea and hee alonely thereunto was ordeined of God: which of all the Saintes can ſay that, but hee & Chriſt is all in all for vs, and therefore wee neede not ỹ helpe of Saints.

if

if all saintes & all the world would say the contrary, yet hee him selfe stãdeth fast against them all, & cõdẽneth them for lyars & blaspheners, saying, No man commeth to the father but by me, note these wordes. First he saith, no man. &c. Ergo, as many as euer shall come to the father of heauen hee here cõteined: then addeth hee, but by me, hee not all saintes, all your fayned mediatours with merites & all other thinges cleane excluded in this word, but wherfore it is plaine that what so euer hee bee ỳ maketh any other mediatour or goeth about by any meanes (sẽme it neuer so holy) but by Christ onely to come to the father of heauẽ, first he despiseth Christ, & if he despise Christe, hee despiseth also hys father whiche hath alowed him onely to bee our mediatour & way to him, as it is writtẽ. I am the way onely in the father, therefore let thẽ bee sure ỳ seeke any other waye or any other mediatour, but Christ alonely to heauẽ, that they (according to the word of ỳ veritie which cã not lye) shall neuer come there, but as many as trust in him onely, let thẽ not doubt but they shall not onely obteyne to come to heauen, but also what soeuer they desire bee side in his name according to his own promise & word, which cã not deceiue vs, What soeuer (saith hee) yoũ aske in my name the father shall geue it you. Marke these wordes, what soeuer, & that we should runne to no other hee addeth also, in my name.

Iohn. 14. Saintes can not bryng vs to the father of heauen, but it must bee Christ onely.

Iohn. 14.

Iohn. 16.

Here is nothing excluded, but all thinges freely bee geuen vs, and that for his names sake: not for no saintes name, not for none of our holynes or merites, but for Christes name. Now what is it to runne from thys sweete promise of our most louing Sauiour, redemer, and onely mediatour Iesus Christ, to saintes, & to other workes, but a playne and an euydent token of our infidelity, of our vnthankefulnes, yee that we thinke hym vntrue, and will not fulfill hys promise, yee that he is not able to do it, and to make hym a lyar, & vntrue in his worde. Also S. Paul saith. He hath geuen his onely sonne for vs, how can it bee ỳ hee shall not geue all things with him? Marke he saith with hym, & not with saints, he saith all thinges, and not certaine things, hee that saith all, excludeth not the tenth ake, & leaueth it to S. Appolyne. &c. but hee excludeth nothing.

Now you Infidelles and mistrusters of Christ, what will you haue of the father of heauen? or what cã your hartes desire, that Christ is not able to obtaine for you? if you beleeue him able. It is his office, and thereunto onely appointed of ỳ father, & none other, yea all other bee excluded wt manifest scriptures. Moreouer, will you or bee you so foolish to aske a thing of one ỳ hath it not to geeue, nor cã not geue it, yea hath nede of it hymselfe, & leaue hym that hath aboundaunce, yea and that hath made an open proclamation, that freely without gould or siluer, or any marchandise, hee will geeue the selfe same thing to as many as come and aske of him, whatsoeuer they bee. Now the Lord hath not alonely goodnes, but hee is all goodnesse himselfe: and all Saintes haue sinned and neede of his goodnes: and he hath made this proclamation by his blessed and euerlasting worde, that whosoeuer commeth vnto hym, shall haue of his goodnes aboundauntly: now will you leaue him and goe to the saintes? the which if they euer had any goodnes, they receaued it of the father, as S. Iames saith: All good giftes cõmeth from the father of lyght. Marke how hee saith all good gifts.

If wee aske in Christes name wee shal obteine but so shall wee not in any other name.

Luke. 18.

Iaco. 1.

But here haue you a distinction, ỳ onely God is good of his own nature, and Saintes are good by receauinge goodnesse of him. Well to doe you a pleasure, I will allow your distinctiõ to bee good, for of it can you make no more with all your subtiltie, but that Saintes haue no more goodnes then they haue receaued. Now the goodnes that they haue receaued, was for thẽselues onely, yea and they can geeue none of it to you: for they receaued it not for you, but for themselues, yea and no more then was necessary for them, and that but alonely of mercy, as it is open in Mathewe in the parable of the fiue wise virgines, and the fiue foolishe: where as the wyse vyrgins had not so much oyle to lend the foolishe virgins as would kindle their lampes: finally, they had nothing at all that they coulde spare them, and yet were they wise virgins, and yet were they Saints, and yet were they admitted to enter into heauen.

Saintes receaued Gods goodnes for thẽselues and not for vs.

Farthermore, doe you not openly against God when you desire any thing of saintes, whether it bee prosperitie, wealth, health, remission of sinnes, or in aduersities consolatiõs, or comfortes, or any other thynge: seeing that Scripture onely knowledgeth all these thynges to bee receaued of him, and that hee is the onely geuer of them, yea and that all the prophets and fathers in all their tribulation cryed aloncly to hym, as Dauid Psal. 119. testifieth of him selfe in these wordes, When I am troubled, I will cry vnto the Lord and hee will helpe me. Hee cryed not to any Saint to speake to God for him, but sayth: I will cry vnto the Lord, yea and hee doubted not that hee woulde not heare hym because hee was a man and a sinner, but faithfully said, hee will helpe mee, as hee testifieth in an other place, saying: Psal. 120. my helpe is of God that hath made heauen and earth.

Now will you runne from God, and aske of Saints, comforte, prosperitie, health, or wealth, or any other thyng: seeing it belongeth alonely to God, to geue: seing hee alonely is the fountayne and auctor of all goodnes: and not Saintes which haue no more but their parte, and that, that is geuen vnto them. Also our L. Christ teaching al creatures to pray, biddeth them not to goe to any other thynge, but alonely to the father of heauen, hee maketh no mention of Saintes, no not so much as to bee a meane betweene them and the father, but commaundeth them that pray, to pray thẽ selues to the father. The which thing I doubt not but hee would haue done if hee would that there shoulde haue beene other mediatour, or geuers of any goodnes. Moreouer is not this a madde manner of prayer that men vse to our Lady: O our father which art in heauẽ halowed be thy name. &c

Thus doe you learne men to mocke our Lady when you learne them to say our Ladyes Psalter. You infidels and mockers both of God & man, are you not ashamed of these open blasphemies? Doubt you not (if you call not for grace to ỹ Lord that you may amẽde yea and that shortly) but God shall straitly auẽge this blasphemy on you, hee hath suffered long & no doubt but of his infinite mercy. Notwithstãdyng I will neuer beleue that hee will much leger suffer, seeyng that hee hath brought so graciously his glorious beritie into the world and that so openly, and so clearely that you can not deny it nor withstand it, neither by reason, nor by learnyng: but your owne consciences bee confounded and marked with hote yrons, notwithstãdyng you persecute it by tyranny to the increase of your damnation. Our Lord bee mercyful vnto you. But now that you may bee knowen what you bee, when you deceiue the people with these wordes fathers fathers, holy Doctours holy doctours: I shall recite certeine of your fathers and doctours sayinges, that you may be knowẽ not alonely open lyers and blasphemers of God and his blessed eternal word, but also of his holy saintes & fathers, vnto whom hee hath reuelated by the Scriptures his beritie.

A fond prayer made to our Lady.

First S. Augustine sayth these wordes. Let vs haue no deuotion in honoring of dead men, for if they lyued well, they may not be coũted for such men, as to desire such honours, but they will that God shall be honored of vs, by whose lightening they reioice, that we are made cõpaniõs of their glory. Wherefore Saintes must be honored by folowing them, but not by honoring thẽ of deuotyon &c. Bee not these plain wordes? S. Augustine was a father and a doctour, And hee sayth, ỹ saints will not bee honoured of vs, but that God shall bee only honoured. Secondarily, we may folowe their godlyuing, and so honour them, but in no wise to pray to them, or honour them of deuotion. It foloweth in S. Augustine, wherfore we doe honour them, by loue, or charitie, but not by seruice. nor we build no temples vnto them. For they wil not so be honored of vs, for they know well that we (if we bee good) bee the temples of God. Wherfore it is well written. That man was forbidden of the angell to worship hym, but all onely to worship one God, vnder whom the angell was also a seruanut &c. Can you desire any playner wordes then these? we cā no more doe but loue sayntes of charitie, but in no wise to serue them: we may also build no temples to the honour of them. Marke also how he bringeth scripture for hym, how the Angell of God would not be honored of man. How cā you auoyde this saying of S Augustine, & his example of scripture? Also Chrisostomes saying on this text, woman thy fayth is great. Doost thou see this woman which was vnworthy, but by her perseueraunce was made worthy? wilt thou learne also, that we praying vnto God in our owne persons, doe more profyt, then when other men doe praye for vs. This woman did crie, and the disciples came and praied him that he would speed her for shee cryeth on vs. But to them he aunswered, I am not set but vnto the sheepe whiche are perished of the house of Israell. But when shee came her self and did perseuer crying and saying, Yes lord, for the whelpes doe eate the crūmes that fall from their masters tables: then did he geue her the benefyt & said, bee it vnto the as thou wilt. Doost thou not se how he did repelle her, whē other men prayed for her? but when shee came her selfe and cried, hee did graunt her. Vnto them hee said, I am not sent but vnto the lost sheepe. But vnto the womā he sayth bee, it vnto thee as thou wilt, &c.

Mat. 15. tom 6. ho. de profect. Euange.

An authoritie declaration that Christ heareth vs for our selues and not the Apostles for vs.

Heare you not playnly how we do sooner obtayne our petityon of God our owne selfe, thē by any other mīdlers? Marke also how ỳ Apostles did pray for this woman, and they repelled: and shee was heard. Also the same Doctour wrighteth these wordes. We haue no need of Patrōs afore God, nor nede of much processe to speak fayre vnto other men, but though they be alone and want a patrō, but prayest God by thy selfe, yet for all that shalt thou haue thy desire. God doth not so lightly graūt, when other men pray for vs, as whē we pray our selfe, yea though we bee full of sinnes &c. Bee not these wordes playne, that we haue no neede of patrons? but God heareth vs soner, when we pray in our owne persons, then when other mē pray for vs. Wherefore they that make other mediators then onely Christ, doth mistrust Christ, and beleueth that he is not omnipotēt God, nor mercifull Lord, and therefore flye they vnto this Saint, and vnto that Saint, trusting to fynde more mercy at their handes, then they could fynde at Christes. But a trew Christen man leaueth his fantesye, and remembreth these wordes of holy scripture. Heare thou mā, I am thy God, and therfore he setteth all his trust, and his confidence, all his belief, all his hope, all his harton him onely. And if he wil haue any thing necessary to body, or soule of him, hee asketh it all onely, as the prophet Dauid learneth vs saying, I will pray vnto the Lord, and in the morning thou shalt here my voyce, what is this in the morning but shortly, quickly. Thou art so mercyfull, that thou wilt not prolong the tyme, but shortly here me. And therefore when I am in any distres of body, or soule, to thee I call for deliuerāce, and trust to obtayne it of thee onelye. For thou Lord, thou hast set me, in thy hope onely.

We neede no patrons for God heareth.

an other helper, to ſéke an other deliuerer then Chriſt: for with him bée they not ſatisfied, yea they reckē him to bée ſo proude and ſo ſtately, and ſo cruell and ſo hygh, that they dare not ſpeake firſt to him, nor deſire him, for they clearely miſtruſt him, that is the ſame therof. And for that cauſe ſeeke they to this Saint, and to that Saint, and deſire of one riches, of an other health: of one they will holpen to heauen, & of an other they will bée deliuered frō hel. Of one they wil haue frō ſhyp of this worlde, of an other long lyfe, of one they will bée ſaued from ſickneſs, of an other they wil bée made whole, & all this is bycauſe they miſtruſt Chriſt, & reckē ỹ hée is either not able, or that hée wil not obtaine theſe thinges for them. This is the very grounde of their hartes, let them lye with their mouthes what they will, & of this are they compelled to flye frō Chriſt. Is not this making of many Godes? S. Paule ſaith that in couetouſnes is Idolatrie, bycauſe that mās hart is ūt his gods, how much more is here Idolatrie whereas mās faith, hope, and truſt is ſet ſo much on creatures. Trueth it is that Saintes bée holy, and worthy to bée béloued in in Chriſt, and for Chriſt, but yet bée they but creatures, and no Godes. I loue them as wel as you doe & prayſe and magnifie them, but wherfore? by cauſe they haue Chriſt in them which is the author of all goodnes whiche if hée were away, I would ſpit at them and deſpiſe thē. But I doe not make them Chriſt (that is my Sauiour, my redéemer, my cōforter my truſt & my hope) bycauſe ỹ Chriſt of his mercy & of his grace dwelleth in them, but I ſéke alonely to him ỹ hath made thē holy, & hath alſo alonely power both me and all men likewiſe to make.

If we miſtruſt not Chriſte, there is no cauſe why we ſhould runne a gadding to this Saint for any thyng that is neceſſary for vs.

Saints are holy, but yet are they no Godes.

Chriſt is our onely interceſſor.

Wherfore deare brethren, if you wyll bée Chriſtes, make hym alonely your mediatour and your interceſſour to the father of heauen, and all thynges that you deſire, deſire them in hys name onely. Make hym firſt your frende, and then haue you all Saintes on your ſide. For they can not chuſe but bée your frendes. Wherfore, ſet all your truſt, hope and confidence in Chriſt onely, and directe all your deſires, all your petitions, all your prayers vnto hym onely. And as for Saintes, you ſhall loue them, fauour them, and magnifie them, & praiſe them for Gods ſake, and to Gods honour: and where they liued well after Chriſtes worde, therein ſhall you folow them, but in no wyſe ſhall you béléeue, hope, or truſt in them, or make any prayers vnto thē, or deſire any petition of them: nor their lyuing ſhall bée any rule to lyue by farther then they folowed ỹ word of Chriſt, for you bée cauled Chriſten men of Chriſt, and not of Saintes.

But now will I anſwere to their carnall reaſons. Firſt they haue a lawe whoſe wordes bée theſe: Chriſten men doe not call worſhipfull Images Gods, nor they doe not ſerue them as Gods, nor they ſet no hope of their ſaluation in them, nor they doe not ſoke for of them the iudgement that is to come: but they doe worſhip them, and effectually pray vnto them in remembraunce and recordation of the firſt fruits, but they doe not ſerue them, nor yet any other creature with godly honour. &c.

The Papiſtes carnall reaſōs.

Let euery Chriſten man conſider well in his conſcience the wordes of this lawe, and call alſo to remembraunce what God is hymſelfe: that is to ſay, how omnipotent hée is, how liberall hée is, how mercifull hée is, how gracious hée is vnto vs: and thē I thinke hée ſhall well perceaue, that this decrée is neyther made wyth faith, with learning, nor yet with reaſon, but an open blaſphemy agaynſt God, and a great miſtrulting of our mercifull maiſter Chriſt Jeſus. Briefly there is nothing, but an heape of blinde and vnfaithfull wordes, inuēted to bégeuile ſimple men thereby.

God onely is omnipotent and almighty.

To the firſte worde venerabiles, what faith, what learning, what reaſon will that Images ſhoulde bée iudged worthy veneration (this doth ỹ lattin worde venerabiles ſignifie) ſéeing they bée but deafe, dumme and dead, what reaſon is it then to call them venerabiles? Maiſter Doctour Rydley will say that no mã is so mad to worship and to honour the stocke and the stone, and yet his owne law caulleth them venerabiles, that is as much to say as worthy to bée worshipped & honoured. Call you them one thing by name, and recken them vnworthy in déede? It followeth, Christen men call them no Gods, what néede these wordes? All the worlde knoweth that they bée no Goddes in déede: But then why call you them venerabiles?

Farthermore, I would knowe of all my maisters ỹ lawyers, why they bée such blasphemers of God, such infidelles, and such mortall enemyes vnto God, as to suffer, yea and to compell simple men, to géeue to those stockes and stones such exteriour honour, as belongeth onely to God, séeing you call them no Goddes? What maketh it matter for ỹ name, so long as you géeue them the very thynge? Assigne you what exteriour worshipping and honouring belongeth to God, or that wée may doe or can doe to God, and I will proue that yee compell men to geeue that same to stocks and stones, and yet you thinke your selues sufficiently discharged, because that men call them no gods. It followeth: they set no hope in thẽ. Then what neede men to pray vnto them? what néede men to aske petitions of them? what néede men to offer vnto them? what neede men to bowe to them? what néede men to runne to them barefoted and barelegged, and to kisse them and licke them? doe they aske that thyng of them which they haue no hope to receaue by them? then doe they mocke them.

The Papistes geeue the saints ỹ worshyp to stockes and stones that we should geue to God.

It followeth, but they pray vnto thẽ and worship them, how thinke you by this? You say they be no Godes & yet men pray vnto them & worship them, adde to this that the Latine word signifieth as much as to aske forgeuenes of them, and fully and effectually to pray to them. If this stãd with fayth, and with the honour of God, let euery Christen mã iudge. But how standeth it with your decrée, where in you call them no Godes? this is as much to say as you bée very hypocrites and dissemblers with God and man, for you say one thing in wordes and compell the people to doe the contrary in déedes, that is to honour them as Godes Is not this contrary to these wordes of Scripture, thou shalt honour thy Lorde God and serue hym onely?

Marke the holy ghost sayth, Thou shalt serue God onely. Here is the selfe Latin word, adorare, that your decrée hath, Scripture will it shall all onely bée geuen to God, and you will geue it to your worshypfull Images. Marke also the occasion that our M. Christ spake these wordes. The deuil required that hée should fall downe and honour him, hée required no fayth nor no hope on him, nor yet that hée should make any prayers, or desire any petition of him, or licke or kisse his foote, or make any oblation to him, but alonely to fall downe, and so with exteriour seruice to honor him, but our maister sayd that ỹ belongeth alonely to God, & neither to the deuill nor yet to your worshipful images. Now say of your conscience doe not you that same thing to your stockes & stones, that the deuil required of our maister Christ? how can you auoyde thys? but now commeth your glose with a distinction and will learne our maister Christ how that hée shall honour the deuill, and excuse hym with an idle and a dãmnable distinction, whose wordes bée these: there is cultus latriæ, which includeth three things in him, loue, multitude of sacrifice, and veneration: this belongeth onely to God saith hée. There is an other worshipping which is cauled dulia, & thys hath but one thing in him, that is veneration, and it hath neither loue nor multitude of sacrifice in it, and thys belongeth to all creatures. &c. What bée these but an heape of idle wordes without any sentence inuented of the deuill to deceaue simple men.

Math. 4.

Glosa de cõsec. Dist. 3. Venerabiles.

Here saye you that Cultus Latriæ which includeth loue, multitude of sacrifyce, and veneration, belongeth to God onely. Tell mée of your cõsciẽce, are you not ashamed of these wordes?

Feare

Fere you not the vengeance of God? that thus mocke and trifle both with God and man? There can be nothing more agaynſt you then theſe wordes bée. For ſyrſt do you not loue your Images, and your ſayntes? Secondarily doe you not offer vnto them? cal you that no ſacrifice? yea it is ſo much that you can hange no more on them. Thyrdly, doe not you geue veneratiõ vnto them, yea, and that with al your hartes? or els bée you hipocrites and diſſẽblers. So that you geue to your ſtockes and ſtones, Cultum Latriæ, which by your owne diſtinction bée longeth to God onely. How can you now auoyde Idolatrie? Now to the ſeconde parte of your diſtinction, you ſay that you do to ſaintes, & to all creatures ỹ worſhipping of Dulya, which is without loue, and without the multitude of ſacrifice. What cal you this? what meane you by this? what worſhipping is this that is without loue, and without ſacrifice? Is not this opẽ hipocriſye to honor a thing outwardly, and neyther to loue it, nor to fauor it inwardly? nor yet to offer any ſacrifice vnto it? this is nothing els but open mocking, and I may well compare you vnto the wicked Iewes that crouched, & knéeled vnto Chriſt, but they did it neyther of loue, nor fauour, but of mockage, as you doe honour your ſayntes, and Images. This commeth all wayes to thẽ that will mocke, and trifle with gods holy word, that whẽ they thinke to auoyde it with a damnable diſtinction, then is it moſt agaynſt them, ſo that all chriſtẽ men may ſée, that the hand of God is heare. Alſo an other baulde reaſõ you haue, which is of M. Rychard. If ſaintes when they were here, and not confirmed in grace, did of their charitie pray for vs. Therefore now muſt they pray much more, ſeing they are now confyrmed in charitie &c.

The blindnes & ignorance of the malicious Papiſtes.

Math. 27.

De media Villa. 4. ſent

Is not this a goodly bauld reaſon to cal at a byſhops cure? How can hée proue this? what ſcripture hath hée for hym? I heare well his carnall reaſon, but I heare no probation, I will make him a lyke reaſon. The ſayntes when they weare heare, did of their charitie, cloth naked men, and fede the hungrey, and gaue drinke to ỹ thirſty, and viſited them that were in priſon: therefore much more now, for they be confyrmed in charitie, and theſe bée déedes of charitie.

A papiſtical reaſon, well aunſwered & confuted.

Lykewiſe. S. Paule when he was heare, dyd of hys charitie, wryte epiſtelles to declare the veretie, therefore now muſt hée much more wryte: ſo ỹ, where afore hée wrot but one epiſtell, now muſt hée at ỹ leaſt write three, or els hée is not confyrmed in charitie. & I thinke hée dyd neuer a greater dede of charitie, then now to wright an epiſtell, and to declare his owne piſtels, for all the words is at variaunce, for vnderſtãding of them. You blynd gydes, who hath learned you to declare, wherein the charitie of ſayntes doth ſtande? who hath geuẽ you auctoritie, to geue a déde of charitie vnto ſayntes, that ſcripture doth not geue. Wherefore is it a déde of charitie for one to pray for an other? is there any other cauſe then that the holy Ghoſt ſo declared it in his word? Wherfore that is charitie in this lyfe, that the worde of God byddeth you doe, and as for the workes that charitie ſhall haue in an other lyfe, it belongeth not to you tg iudge farther then the word of God.

Alſo you haue an other reaſõ, God ſheweth myracles in this place, and in that place, to the honouring of this ſaynt, and that ſaynt, therefore we muſt lykewiſe honour them. I aunſwere as to your myracles, though I haue aunſwered to them béfore, yet will I adde this vnto it, that God is no God of ſuperſtition, nor that fauoreth one place more then an other, or that hath any affectiõ to this place, more then to that, wherefore this is your ſuperſtition inuented of the deuill, for God will neyther bé honored in the mountayne, nor yet in Ieruſalem, but in mens hartes. And as to your myracles the great Godes Diana did alſo myrackles, as you may reade in ſcripture, conſyder her honour, that ſcripture ſpeketh of, and compare it to the honour of your Images, & you may sée they doe agrée. Farthermore Apollo, Castor, Aesculapius and such other did also greate myracles, as stories doe make mention, and also many men which were both wyse, well learned, and also many men of a great reputation and honour as you bée, yea and mē of great holynes doe beare witnesse of ỹ same. Therfore by this reason we must also honour them. Also an other reason you haue out of Iob. Conuert thy selfe vnto some of the sayntes. Of this you conclude that we must pray vnto sayntes. I aunswere of this you may conclude that you bée blinde, and dull Asses, and vnlearned stockes, peruerters, teasers, renters, of holy scripture. I pray you what sayntes dyd ỹ old fathers know before Christes comming? whom did they recken to be in heauen before Christes assention? why did they desyer so sore his cumming if they beléued that they should haue ascended vp to heauen? But this is the sentence of that place, Elephas reproued Iob, and sayth ỹ hée is not Gods seruaunt, and therefore God punished him sayth hée, and to proue this hée biddeth Iob call to memory all holy men, and seruaunts of God, and recken one if hée can among them all, whom God did so punish: wherefore hée concludeth that Iob is not the seruaunt of God, but a folyshe man (which in scripture is the enemye of God) whom God shall slaye in his wrath. This is the sentence of that place.

Iob. 5.

Papistes are wrestters of the scriptures of God.

Fynallye you haue an other reson, you shall praise God in his sayntes, therefore sayntes must bée honoured. I aunswere is not this a good consequent? I must praise God in Beares and Apes, therefore Beares, & Apes, must bée worshipped. Adde that ỹ followeth in ỹ text, you must praise God in timbrels, in organs and in pypes, therefore after your consequent timbrels, organs, and pypes, must bée worshipped, but if you weare learned in scriptures, you should fynde an other sentence in the holy Psalme then this is for the very trewe text is Laudate dominum in sanctitate sua. Praise God in his his holynes, but let vs graunt that hée sayth, prayse God in his sayntes, doe not you knowe that scriptures say, blessed is God in all his giftes: out of this can not follow that we shall worshipp, and pray to Gods giftes, but God shall bée praysed, and honoured in all his giftes, as in saint, man, and Angell.

Psal. 150.

A fooliche & papisticall argument well aunswered.

An other reason you haue of a similitude: Like as a mā can not come to the speach of a kyng, but that hée must haue certayne mediatoures, (as Dukes, Erles, and such men as bée in fauour betwéen him and the king) that may entreate his matter: So likewise béefore God. I aunswere: you Infideiles and mistruster of God, what will you make of God: will you make him a fleshely and a carnall stocke, full of passions and of affections? Vnto a mortall Prince you make mediatours bécause hee knew not your hart, and bécause hée is more affectionat to one man thē to an other, and beecause hee iudgeth after the sight of hys eye, and after ỹ percialnes and affection of his hart. But so doth not God, but alonely of mere mercy and grace. But to your similitude: you can not haue no Dukes to speake for you, excepte you géue them rewardes, excepte they haue carnall affection to you: therfore by your similitude you must likewyse doe to Saintes.

A fooliche reason of ỹ papistes.

But S. Ambrose answereth clearly to this damnable reason of yours, saying: Men are wonte to vse this miserable excusation, that by these thinges may wee come to God, as we may come to the kyng by Erles. I aunswere, wee doe come vnto the kyng, by the meanes of Dukes and Erles, beecause that the kyng is a man, and knoweth not to whom hee may committe the common wealth, but vnto God (from whom nothing can bee hidde) hee knoweth all mens merites, wee neede no spokesman nor no mediatour but alonely a deuoute mynde. &c.

your lawe, that Images bee vnto vnlearned men, that ſame thyng that letters and writinges bée vnto them that bee learned, that they may thereby learne what they ought to folow.

If your Images bee no more to vnlearned men then writinges be to learned men, therefore they may no more doe to them then learned men doe to their letters: woulde you ſuffer learned men to come and kneele, and offer to my booke, and ſette vp candels before it, and to make vowes to come yearely thereunto: and to deſire petitiõs bée fore my booke of thoſe Saintes ẏ bée written therein? Sée how your owne example maketh agaynſt you, and all thing that I can bringe. Wherefore, if there bée any grace in you, or if there bée any ſhame in you of the worlde, for Chriſtes ſake leaue of this falſe learnyng and colouring of Idolatrie. For you doe not onely deceaue your ſimple brethren, but you doe alſo blaſpheme the immortall God of heauen, which doubtles will auenge shortly this rebuke on you, if you doe not amende: whoſe violẽce and might you are not able to withſtand. Wherefore I exhorte you in ẏ bleſſed name of Chriſt Jeſus, that you repent in tyme, and take vpon you to learne the veritie: which is, how God is onely to bée honoured, and onely to bée ſacrificed vnto, hée is onely to bée prayed vnto, of hym onely muſt our petitions bee aſked, it is hée onely ẏ géeueth wealth & proſperitie, & hée only muſt deliuer and comforte vs in all aduerſities, & hée onely muſt helpe vs out of all diſtreſſe, vnto whom as Saint Paule ſayth, be alonely glory and honour for euer. Now moſt excellent and noble Prince, I haue here after the power gifte that God hath géeuen mée ſet out vnto your grace certain articles, which though they ſéeme at the firſte ſight to bee newe, yet haue I proued them openly with the euerlaſtynge worde of God, and that not wronge, nor wreſted after my lyghte brayne, but after the expoſition of clarkely doctours, yea and that of the oldeſt & of the beſt. Wherefore moſt excellent Prince, moſt humbly, & moſt méekely I beſéeche your grace, that I may finde ſo great indifferencie at your graces hand, as that the Byſhoppes ſhall not condemne this booke, after the maner of their olde tyranny: excepte they can with open Scriptures and with holy Doctours, refell it as I haue proued it.

Doctour Barnes concluſion.

But I would it ſhould pleaſe your grace to call them bée fore you, and to commaunde as many as will condemne this booke, euery one of them ſeuerally without others counſell, to write their cauſe, why they will condemne it, and the ſcriptures whereby they will condemne it, and to bryng them all to your grace, and your grace may iudge betwéene both parties.

I doe not doute but they wil bring your grace marualous probations, and ſuch as were neuer heard. And if three of them agrée in one tale (if they bée deuided) let mée dye for it, and that your grace ſhall well ſée.

Of the originall of the Masse and of euery part therof translated into Englisth out of his booke De Doctorum Sententijs.

¶ De consecratione. Dist. 1. Cap. Iacobus ex 6. Synodo.

IAmes the brother of the Lorde, as concernyng the flesshe, vnto whom was firste cõmitted the Church of Ierusalem, & Basilius the Bysshop of Cæsaria gaue vnto vs the celebration of the Masse. Sayth the glose, that is to say the manner how to celebrate ỳ Masse. For the wordes by the which the body is made, were deliuered frõ the Lord him selfe. But afterward, others also added some one pẽce, some an other, for comlynes, and solemnitie. And thus much sayth hẽ.

God Christian reader what can these men, wholy addicted to lyes, otherwise doe, but beguile & deceaue. For this is their onely endeuour, whiche although it may bẽ manifest vnto thẽ by many of their dẽdes, notwithstanding by this one (of ỳ which they so greatly boast) it is so manifest that none cã deny it. To attribute the originall of the Masse vnto Iames the Apostle and to Basilius ỳ bishop, is an errour not to bẽ suffered, for asmuch as it is most false, as by that which folowth shall appeare.

Let them declare (if they can) what Iames made thereof, and what Basill added thereto? Let them bryng forth one of the Apostles that euer sayd Masse, & they shal haue ỳ victory. Iames died about the yeare of our Lord 62. And of Masse (as they vnderstand it) there was no mention made in the Churche by the space of 200. yeares. Moreouer then this, Basill dyed about the yeare after Christ 380. How then could hẽ agrẽ with Iames aboute the Masse? But what Masse had the Church from after the death of Iames vnto Basiles tyme? & by what authoritie did Basil deliuer to vs ỳ masse? Moreouer these mẽ doe adde their auctoritie out of the bj. Synode, that their lye might bẽ the more notorious. Bring forth the bj. Synode in the whiche these thinges bẽ written. I pray you what was handled in the bj. Synode, The maner of celebrating Masse? Or agaynst whom was ỳ bj. Synode gathered togither? agaynst those ỳ would not say Masse? Nothyng lesse: but agaynst such as wickedly taught that there was one operation in Christ: Read the actes of the Synode and you shall finde it to bẽ so. But let vs graũt in the meane season that this was handled in ỳ Synode, what doth it proue. We do not contende what matters were intreated of in the Synode: but whether Ieames and Basill deliuered vnto vs the maner of celebrating the Masse. How doth the bj. Sinode proue this: Of this is our contention. Where hence was the bj. Synode certified that Iames and Basill deliuered the Masse? Their writinges and workes remaine amongest vs, in the whiche there is not founde one sillable to bẽ read as concerning the Masse. Moreouer the bj. Synode was in Grẽce, who vnto this day doe varye frõ our manner of celebrating. Wherefore it muste nẽdes bẽ that either we or they doe erre from the ordinaunce of S. Iames. But what saye you to this? The bj. Sinode was celebrated after the yeare of Christ. 674. Before this tyme, of whom toke you the manner of celebratyng? not of the tradition of Ieames, for ỳ was as yet vnknowen to the world, & now first of all was it by ỳ Synode opened to ỳ world. But that this matter may bẽ the better knowen vnto all the world, I will set agaynst you the auctoritie of S. Gregory who sayth that the Apostles had no peculiar maner in celebratyng the Masse, but that they onely sayd the Lordes prayer. Whose wordes bẽ these. The maner of ỳ Apostles was, that onely at the saying of the Lordes prayer they consecrated the Sacrament. Thus sayth Gregory, where is now the tradition of Ieames? S. Gregory knew it not. Surely if you were Christians, you would bée ashamed at the lest wise (if you reuerence not God) so to persecute, teare, and slay your brethren for your wicked Masse, of which you boast that Christ and all his Apostles were the auctors, when as you can bryng forth not one good man for a testimony therof. For I speake of your Masse as it is pared and not of thé wordes of Christ.

Gayne and aduauntage maketh the Masse to bee the better loued of Papistes.

But that I may briefly finishe this matter. Because the masse is so deare vnto you (and that for good cause, sithens by it you fill your bellyes, you kéepe horses and dogges, you consecrate harlots to Venus, and many other such kynde of good workes,) and yet bé vncertaine of the auctor, I wil describe vnto you the authors of your patched Masse and that out of your owne writers, lest that you should obiect vnto mée that I am a Lutheran.

Cronic. cro. Fasci. temp. First of all Pope Gregory, surnamed the Great, held a generall Councell at Rome about ỹ yeare of Christ. 594. in the whiche hé ordeined the Introitus. Entrance or Introite of the Masse, to bé begon with some Psalme.

Kirieleyson Hé added moreouer that Kyrieleison should bé song ix. tymes.

Dies nostros. Hé also added in the Cannon of the Masse, Dies nostros in tua pace disponas vnto these wordes, Per Christum Dominum nostrum.

Pater noster. Fasc. temp. Hé likewise added Pater noster.

Orationes. Tractus. Pope Gelasius adioyned the Prayers, Hymnes, and Tractes about the yeare of Christ. 482.

Cronic. cro. Gloria in excelsis. Pope Thelesphorus appointed that the Gospell and Gloria in excelsis, should bé songe, about the yeare of Christ. 134.

Cronic. cro. Pope Symmacus enlarged Gloria in excelsis, for first they had nothyng more then that was in the Euangelist. Hé lined about the yeare. 494.

Cronic. cro. Fasci. temp. Pope Marcus appointed that vpō Festiuall dayes immediatly after the Gospell, ỹ Nicene Créde should bé song with a loude voice by the Quier and the people, about the yeare. 334.

Nicene Creede.

Bern. Abbas de officio Misse. This prayer, Veni sanctificator omnipotens eterne Deus, whiche is sayd ouer the host, was taken frō the Frēch order. Moreouer these wordes, Suscipe sancta Trinitas, was onely taken by custome, and not by the ordinaunce of any Pope.

Cronic. cro. Fasci. temp. Sanctus. Pope Sixtus ỹ first ordeined that, Sanctus, should bé song iij. tymes in the Masse, about the yeare. 124.

Ratio. di. Cronic. cro. Fasci. temp. Doct. Crātz Pope Gelasius ordeined, Te igitur clemētissime pater, and appointed that the Priestes should say the Secretes, the Cannon, and the Prefaces with their armes stretched abroad, bé lyued about the yeare. 482.

Fasci. temp. Sanctum sacrificium. Pope Leo the great, added vnto ỹ Canon, Hanc igitur oblationem, & sanctum sacrificium, immaculatam hostiam, about the yeare. 444.

Croni. cro. Fasci. temp. Quorum solemnitas. Pope Gregory the thyrd adioyned, Quorum solemnitas hodie in conspectu diuinæ maiestatis tuæ celebratur, Domine, Deus noster, about the yeare. 754

Cronic. cro. Pope Celestine the first appoynted that the Psalmes of Dauid should bé song in maner of an Antheme of all ỹ people béfore the sacrifice which was not wont to bé done. For after the Epistle and Gospel were read the sacrifice was ended. Hé lined about the yeare of Christ. 424.

Cronic. cro. Ratio. diui. Qui pridie quam pateretur. Fasci. temp. Agnus Dei. Pope Alexander the first added, Qui pridie quam pateretur. Hé lyued about the yeare. 114.

Pope Sergius the first ordeyned that, Agnus Dei, should bé song thrée tymes whilest the Sacrament of Christes body was in breakyng, about the yeare of Christ. 694.

Cronic. cro. The first Latin Masses were song by Iohn Bysshop of Portuence in the vj. generall Councell of Constantinople, about the yeare. 674.

Behold Christen Reader, here nowe hast thou their Masse as it is patched togither and the authours of euery part thereof, whiche our Papistes so wickedly defende to bé a sacrifice. Neither is it any meruaile, if they doe, with tooth and naple defends a thyng so deare, so laborious and that hath bene so longe tyme a makyng. This I dare boldly affirme that that magnificent Temple of Salomon was in a greate deale lesser tyme builded, then this Iopes crow was decked with hys borowed fethers. Neither yet would I haue thys to forgette the Decrée of the Pope which prouveth that Masse was ordained by James and Basill. I praye thée, take away all that whiche was added by these fathers and what then is remaynyng to the Masse? What is lefte that James deliuered, or that Basill commended vnto them? Nothyng at all but the very wordes of Christe. Thus doe these good fathers set them selues agaynst the manifest trueth of God. But what shall bée their glory and reward thou shalt sée, if thou wilt leasurably listen and beholde to the ende of the tragedye. The Lord shall speake with them in his anger and in his heate shall feare them. When hée shall ware hoate in hys sodayne displeasure, then euill shall it bée with these gyauntes, and well shall befall to all that trust in the Lord who may illuminat the hart of the faythfull. Amen.

A generall collection out of Doctour Barnes Woorkes of all the testimonyes, auncient fathers, Councels, and of the Popes owne lawes, alleaged by hym to prooue these articles folowyng, in the maner of a Table or rather an Epitome of all his woorkes that hee hath made.

A Preface of T. G. to the Reader.

FOrasmuch as Maister Doctor Barnes in the first Edition of his Englishe workes, whiche were first corruptlye Printed beyonde the Seas, had collected at the ende thereof all the testimonyes of the Doctours, Councelles, and of the Popes lawes, which he had beefore alleaged, and were confusely myngled with the Table by the order of the Alphabete: and whereas it was thought more expedient by the aduise of the learned, and for the better edifying of the Reader, to haue those testimonyes for euery article collected seuerally by thé selues: I haue therefore accordyng to my simple skill, gathered this Epitome, and haue added also thereunto foure other articles translated into Englishe out of hys Booke De Doctorum Sententijs, whiche bee confirmed in the lyke sorte onely by bare testimonyes of scriptures, fathers, coũcels, & lawes. Which foure articles, and the treatise beefore of the originall of the Masse, were omitted in hys Englisth workes. But as for all the other testimonies in his booke De Doctorũ Sententijs, hee hath in this volume of his woorkes dispersedly alleaged most of them to his purpose, as hee had occasion, which by this Epitome folowing thou mayest perceaue. Now hast thou gentle reader to consider of these auncient testimonyes: desiring thee for the cõfirming and establishyng of thy doubtfull conscience, to compare these sayinges of Doctors, holy fathers, and of the Popes own law, vnto the saying of the Pope and his Papisticall byshops, that bee in these latter dayes, and to their late practises, where their power is, or hath beene receaued: and then geeue sentence howe they doe agree. If they doe accorde, then is it lyke they bee of the true Church, whereof these holy fathers were. But if they agree not, then mayest thou suspect, that they haue gone astray, and that the deuill hath transfigured hym selfe into an Aungell of light, and that they are his ministers. Who notwithstandyng haue fashioned them selues as though they were the ministers of righteousnes, whose end shall bee accordyng to their deedes.

¶ That the keyes of the Church bee the woorde of God and not mans power.

Hiero. in M. c. 16. Hierome sayth oppon these wordes, I shall geue thee the keyes of heauē. This place, the Bysshops & the Priests not vnderstanding haue vsurped vnto them somewhat of the Pharisees pride, so that they thinke that they may condemne innocentes, and loose them that bee giltie: whē beefore God, not the sentence of the Priest, but the lyfe of the giltie is regarded. &c. 257. col. 2

August. ser. 2. de sanc. Augustine sayth, That must bee called a key where by the hardnes of our hartes are opened vnto fayth, & where by ꝑ secretnes of mynded are made manifest. A key it is (sayth hee) the whiche doth both open the conscience to the knowledge of sinne, and also includeth grace, vnto the wholsomnes of euerlastyng mistery. &c. 258. col. 1

Chriſo. in M. c. 15. De doctr. christia. li. 1. c. 15. & 18. This doth Chrisostome well proue in these wordes. The key is the word & the knowledge of Scriptures, wher by the gate of veritie is opened vnto men. &c. 261. col. 1

Super Io. Augustine doth also witnes the same saying. These keyes hath bee geuen to the Church, that what shee bindeth in in earth shall bee bounde in heauē, and what shee looseth in earth shal bee loosed in heauē: that is to say, who soeuer doth not beleeue that his sinnes bee forgeuen hym in the Church, they bee not forgeuen hym: But hee that doth beleeue, and auerte hym selfe from hys sinnes, beyng within the Churche by that same fayth and amendement is he made whole. &c. 261. col. 1

Super Ioan. Trac. 124. c. 21. Augustine doth also testifie the same in these wordes. wherfore the Church whiche is founded and grounded in Christ, of hym hath receiued in Peter the keyes of heauē, that is, to say power to bynde and loose. &c. 261. col. 2

In M. c. 23. Chrisostome sayth, The key bearers are Priestes, vnto whom is commitged the word to teach, and to interprete Scripture. &c. 262. col. 2

Li. de Cain & Abell. Ambrose sayth, Sinnes bee forgeuē by the word of God, whose interpreter is the Deacon. &c. 262. col. 2

Barnarde ſayth, what ſhall we ſay? is this alonely all the merite of freewill, that hee doth alonely cõſent? yea doubt les. Not that, the ſame conſent, in the which is all his merite, is not of God, when that we can neither thinke (the which is leſſe, then to cõſent) any thing of our ſelues, as though we were ſufficient of our ſelues. Theſe wordes bee not myne, but the Apoſtles, the whiche geueth vnto God, and not to his free will, all maner of thinges, that can bee good, that is, to ſay, to thinke, to will, or to perfourme. &c. 267. col. 2

In Ench. ca. 29.

Auguſtine ſayth, what goodnes can hee doe, that is loſt, except that hee bee deliuered from his miſerie? Can hee doe good by his freewill? God forbyd, for man euill vſyng hys freewill, dyd both looſe him ſelfe, and alſo his free wil, and as man beeyng alyue, doth kil him ſelfe, and when he hath killed him ſelfe, hee can not make hym ſelfe alyue ageyne. So likewiſe, when we doe ſinne by freewil, and ſinne hath the victory, then is freewill cleane loſt, for of whoſe a man is ouercome, vnto hym muſt hee bee ſeruaunt. Doubtles, this ſentence is of Peter the Apoſtle, the which ſeeing that it is true, I pray you what maner of freedome cã a bonde ſeruaunt haue? except it bee, when it pleaſeth him to ſinne. &c. 268. col. 1

Auguſtine ſayth, O curſed freewill, without God, we haue experiẽce, what freewil can doe without God, therfore are we miſerable, becauſe we haue experience, what freewill is able to doe, without God. Behold, mã was made good, & by his freewill, was hee made an euill man. When ſhall an euill man by his freewill, forſaking God, make a man good, hee beeyng good, could not keepe him ſelfe good: and now, that he is euill, ſhall hee make him ſelfe good? when that hee was good, hee kept not hym ſelfe good, and now, that hee is euill, ſhall hee ſay, I make my ſelfe good? &c. 268. col. 2

Wilt thou doe of thy ſelfe? wilt thou bee led of thyne owne ſelfe to mortifie the deedes of the fleſh? what will it profite thee? For if thou bee not an Epicure, thou ſhalt be a Stoicke? whether thou bee an Epicure, or a Stoicke, thou ſhalt not be among the children of God. For they that bee guided of the ſpirite of God, bee the children of God: not they that lyue after their own fleſh: not they that lyue after their owne ſpirite: not they that bee ledde of their owne ſpirite: but as many as bee ledde of the ſpirite of God, they bee the children of God. &c. 270. col. 1

Auguſtine ſayth: If mã doe perceiue, that in the commaundementes, is any thyng impoſſible, or els to hard, let him not remaine in him ſelfe, but let hym runne vnto God, his helper, the which hath geuen his commaundementes for that intent, that our deſire might bee ſtyred vp, and that hee might geue helpe. &c. 271. col. 2

De lib. arb. cap. xvi.

Auguſtine ſaith, The Pelagiãs thinke, that they know a wonderous thyng, when they ſay, God will not cõmaund that thyng, the which hee knoweth is impoſſible for man to doe. Euery man knoweth this, but therfore doth he cõmaunde certeine thynges, that we can not do, becauſe we might know, what thyng we ought to aſke of him. Faith is ſhee, whiche by prayer, obtaineth that thing, that the law commaundeth.

De lib. arb. cap. xvi.

Auguſtine ſayth, The Pelagians ſay, that they graunt how that grace doth helpe euery mans good purpoſe, but not that hee geueth the loue of vertue to him, that ſtriueth agaynſt it. This thyng doe they ſay, as though man of hym selfe, without the helpe of God, hath a good purpose, & a good mynde vnto vertue, by the which merite proceedyng beefore, hee is worthy to bee holpē of the grace of God, that folowe-eth after. Doubtles, that grace that followeth, doth helpe the good purpose of man, but the good purpose should neuer haue beene, if grace had not preceded. And though that the good study of man, when it begynneth, is holpen of grace, yet did it neuer begyn without grace. &c. 272. col. 2

De predest. Cap. 8. Augustine sayth, The grace, which is geuen of the bargenes of God, priuely into mens hartes, can not bee despised of no maner of hard hart. For therfore it is geuē, that the hardnes of the hart should bee taken away. Wherfore whē the father is hard within, and doth learne, ỹ we must come to his sonne, then taketh hee awaye our stony hart, and geueth vs a fleshly hart. And by this meanes, hee maketh vs the childrē of promise, and the vessels of mercy, which hee hath prepared to glory. But wherfore doth hee not learne all mē to come to Christ? Bicause that those, that hee learneth, hee learneth of mercy, and those, that he learneth not, of his iudgement doth hee not learne them. &c. 273. col. 1

August. de Verb. Apost. sent. xiij. Augustine sayth, The law was geuē that mā might finde hym selfe, and not to make his sickenes whole, but by his preachyng, the sicknes increased that the Philitian might beo sought. Wherfore the law threatnyng, and not fulfillyng that thing, that hee commaūdeth, maketh a man to bee vnderneath him, but the law is good, if a man doe vse it well. What is that, vse the law well? By the law, to know our sinnes and to seeke Gods helpe, to helpe our health. &c. 275. col. 2

August. Super Ioannem tract. lxxxiij. Augustine sayth: The disputation of them is vayne the whiche doe defend the prescience of God, agaynst the grace of God, and therfore say, that we were chosē beefore the making of the world, because that God knew before that we should bee good, not because he should make vs good. But hee that sayth, you haue not chosen me, sayth not that. For if hee did therfore chose vs, because that hee knew before, that we should bee good, then must hee also know before, that we should first haue chosē him? &c. 279. col. 1

Chrisostome sayth, I beseech you ỹ you will oftentimes come hither, and that you will diligently heare the lessō of holy Scripture, and not all onely whē you bee here, but also take in your handes whē you are at home the godly Bibles, and receaue the thing therein with great stubye, for thereby shall you haue great aduantage. &c. 288. col. 2

In Mat. c. 1. hom. 2. Chrisostome sayth, Which of you all that be here, (if it were required) could say one Psalme without the booke, or any other part of holy scripture, not one doubtles But this is not alonely ỹ worste, but that you bee so slow and so remisse vnto spirituall thinges, and vnto deuillishnesse you are hotter thē any fier, but men will defend this mischief with this excuse, I am no religious man, I haue a wife and children, and a house to care for. This is the excuse wherewith you doe (as it weare with a pestilence) corrupt all thinges: for you doe reckon that the studye of holy Scripture belongeth all onely vnto religious men, when they bee much more necessary vnto you then vnto them. &c. 289. col. 1

In prohe. In Epist. ad Ephes. Li. 1. Hierome sayth, O Paula and Eustochium, if there bee any thing in this life ỹ doth preserue a wise man, and doth perswade him to abide with a good will in the oppressions and the tyraldomes of the world, I doe reckon that specially it is the meditations and the study of holy Scripture. &c. 289. col. 2

Di.38. cap. Si iuxta. The Popes law sayth, If Christ (as Paule sayth) bee the power and ỹ wisedome of God, then to bee ignorannt in scriptures, is as much as to bee ignorannt of Christ. 289. col.1

7. Sinod. c. Omnes et. di.38. The Popes law sayth, in an other place. I will set my meditation in thy iustifications, and I will not forget thy wordes, the which thing is exceeding good for all Christen men to obserue & keepe. &c. 289. col.1

¶ That mens cõstitutions, which are not grounded in Scripture, bynde not the conscience of mã vnder the payne of deadly sinne.

1.Cor.8. S. Paule sayth, meate doth not commende vs vnto God. Also in an other place, the kingdome of heauen is neyther meate, nor drinke. 299. col.1

Roma.15. S. Paule sayth, we ought not to be led with the traditions of men, that say touch not, tast not. &c. 299. col.1

Super Ioan. Tract.46. Augustine sayth by sitting in ỹ chayre is to vnderstand the learning of ỹ lawe of God, and therefore God doth teach by thẽ, but if they will teach their owne doctrine heare it not, doe it not, for such mẽ seeke that is theirs, and not Christes. &c. 297. col.2

Hilarius in M. 3. Cano 14. Hilarius sayth, All maner of plantes that bee not planted of the father of heauen, must bee plucked vp by the rootes that is to say, the traditions of men, by whose meanes the commaundementes of the lawe be broken, must be destroyed, and therefore cauleth hee thẽ blinde guides of the way to euerlasting life, because they see not that thing they promise: and for that cause hee sayth, that both the blinde guidds, and they that bee led, shall fall into the dyke. &c. 297. col.2

Ad Paul. Epist.59. Augustine sayth, Because that those men by such obseruations were led frõ the veritie, by ỹ which they were made free, whereof it is spoken, the veritie shall deliuer you. It is a shame (sayth hee) and vnconuenient and farre from the noblenes of your libertie (seeing you bee the body of Christ) to bee discea ued with shadowes and to bee iudged as sinners if you dispise to obserue these thinges. Wherefore let no man ouercome you (seeing you are the body of Christ) that will seeme to bee meeke in hart in the holynes of Aungels and bringing in thinges which he hath not seene. &c. 299. col.2

Augustine sayth, Seing that we bee made of soule, and of body, as long as we doe liue in this temporall lyfe we must vse to the norysshing of this lyfe, these temporall goodes. Therfore must we of that part that beelongeth to this lyfe bee subiect vnto powers, that is vnto mẽ that doe minister worldly things with some honour, but as concerning that part, whereby we beleeue in God and bee called vnto his kingdome, we ought not to bee subiect vnto any man that will peruert that same thing in vs that hath pleased God to geue vs to eternall lyfe. &c. 300. col.1 Epistre. propo.72.

¶ That all men are bounde to receiue thè holy Cõmunion in both kindes vnder the payne of deadly sinne.

Ad Cornelium Papã. CYprian sayth, How doe we teach, or how can we prouoke men to shed their blond for the confessiõ of Christes name, if we doe denyẽ them the blond of Christ whẽ they shal goe to battaile? Or how dare wee able them vnto the victory of martyrdome, if wee doe not firste by right admitte them to drinke the cuppe of our Lord in the congregation. &c. 306. col.2

Eccleſiaſti. ca hiſt. Ambrose sayth, to ỹ Emperour Theodosius, how shalt ỹ lift vp thy handes out of the which doth yet droppe vnrighteous blond? how shalt thou with those handes receaue the body of God? with what boldnes will thou receaue into thy mouth the Cuppe of the precious blond, seeing that through ỹ woodnes of thy wordes, so great blond is shed wrongfully, &c. 306. col.2

This doth S. Ciprian learne vs saying, what thing so euer it bee that is ordeyned by mans maddenes, where by the ordinaunce of God is violated, it is whordome, it is of the deuill and it is sacrilege. Wherfore flye from such contagious aesse of men and auoid their wordes as a cancar, and as pestilence. &c. 308. col.1

De conſecr. di.2.c.com- perimus. The Popes law sayth, we vnderstand that certayne men receauing allonely the portion of the blessed body, doe abstaine from the chalice of the holy blond, the which doubtles (seeing I can not tell by what superstition they are learned to abstaine) let them eyther receaue the whole Sacrament, or els let them bee forbidden from the whole Sacrament, for the deuision of one and of the same misterie can not bee done without great sacrilege. &c. 305. col. 1

De Consecr. di. 2. c. cum frangimus. The Popes law sayth, when the host is broken, and the blond shed out of ỹ chalyce into ỹ mouthes of faithfull men, what other thing is there signified, but the immolation of our Lordes body on the crosse, and the shedding of his blond out of his side. &c. 306. col. 1

De consecr. de. 2. c. Si quoscf - cumq. The Popes lawe sayth, If that the blond of Christ be shed for remission of sinnes (as often as it is shedde) then ought I lawfully for to receaue it. I which doe alwaies sinne, must alwaies receaue a medecyne. &c. 306. col. 1

¶ That by Gods word it is lawfull for Priestes that hath not the gift of chastitie to marry wiues.

Athanasius super. 1. Cor. 7. Athanasius vpon the first Epistle of S. Paule to the Corinthians in the 7. chapter sayth, that the Apostle would compell no man to keepe virginitie against his will, nor he would not make virginitie a thing of necessitie. 314. col. 1

Ciprian Epist. 11. Ciprian sayth, Thou doest aske what we doe iudge of virgines, the which after they haue decreed to liue chastly, are afterward founde in one bedde with a man. Of the which thou sayst that one of them was a Deacon. We doe with great sorow see that great ruine of many persons, which commeth by the reason of such vnlawfull and perilous cõpaning together. Wherfore if they haue dedicated them selues vnto Christ, out of fayth to lyue purely, and chastly, thẽ let them so remayne without any fable, and strongly, & stedfastly, to abyde the reward of virginitye: But if they will not abyde, or els cã not abide, then is it better to marry, thẽ for to fall into the fier of concupiscence, and let them geue vnto the brethren and sisterne none occasion of sclaunder. &c. 318. col. 2

Aug. de bono coniugali ad Iulianum. Augustine sayth, Certaine men doe affirme those men to bee aduoulterers, that doth marry after they haue vowed chastitie: but I doe affirme, that those men doe grenously sinne, ỹ which doth seperate them. &c. 319. col. 1

Ambro. 32. quest. cap. 1 Integritas. Also blessed S. Ambrose, writeth of virginitie in this maner: Chastitie of body ought to bee desired of vs. The which thing I doe geue for a counsell, and doe not commaund it imperiously. For virginitie is a thing all onely, that ought to bee counsayled, but not to be commaunded, it is rather a thing of voluntary will then of precept. &c. 319. col. 2

Hie. d. 37. cap. Legans S. Hierome also sayth, Let Bishops and priestes reade this thing (hee speaketh agaynst mispending of goodes, ỹ is offered to helpe poore men with) the whiche doth teache their children prophane letters, and maketh thẽ to read commedies, and to sing bandy songes of iesters, and these children they finde of the charges of the church. &c. 319. col. 2

Ex tripertita historia. Dist. xxxi. ca. Nicena. The Councell of Nicene, willing to reforme the lyfe of men, dyd set certaine lawes, the which we call Canones: among the which certaine men would haue had a lawe to bee brought in, that Bysshops, priestes, Deacons, and subdeacons, should not lye wt their wiues, which they had maryed, before their cõsecration. But Paphnutius a confessour, did withstand them and sayd, that their mariage was honorable, and it was pure chastitie for them to lye with their wyues. So that the counsell was perswaded, not to make any such law, affirmyng it for to bee a greuous occasiõ both vnto them, and also vnto their wynes of fornication. And this thing dyd Paphnutius, though that hee hym selfe was vnmaryed. The Councell did alowe this sentence. So that nothing was decreed, as concerning this thing, but euery man was left vnto his free will, and not bounde of any necessitie. &c. 320. col. 1

Canon Apost. The Popes lawe sayth, If any man doth teach, that a Priest by the reason of his order ought to forsake his wyfe, cursed bee hee. &c. 321. col. 1

Concilium Gangrens. Canon. 4. We reade in the counsell of Gangrens, how they made this decree. If any mã doth iudge or condemne a Priest that is maried, that hee may not, by the reason of his mariage do sacrifice, but will abstayne from his masse by the reason thereof, cursed bee hee. &c. 321. col. 1

6. Sinodus. We doe reade in a counsell, that is called the sixt Synod, these wordes: Considering that it is decreed amongest the lawes made by them of Rome, that no Deacon, nor Priest, shall company with their wiues. Therfore we notwithstanding that decree, folowing the rules of the Apostles, and the constitutions of holy men, will that from this day forth, maryage shall bee lawfull, in no wise dissoluing the matrimonye betweene them, and their wiues,

nor not depriuyng them of their familiarytie in time conuenient. Whosoeuer therfore shall bee founde able of the order of Deacon, Subdeacon, or of Priesthode, we will that no such men be prohibited to ascend the dignities aforesaid for the cohabitatiō of their wiues: Nor that they bee constrayned at the receite of their orders, to professe chastitie, or to abstayne from the company of their lawfull wiues. &c. 322. col. 1

Dist. xxviij c. Diaconi. The Popes law sayth, It is open ỹ neither Deacons, nor subdeacōs, ought to bee forbidden from maryage. &c. 322. col. 2

De vita & honest. clericorum. Pope Innocent the thirde, writeth in his decretalles on this maner: Those Priestes that after the maner of the countrey, hath not forsaken the coniunctiō of maryage, if they doe breake their wedlocke, ought greuously to bee punished, seeing that they may vse lawefully matrimony. &c. 322. col. 2

Magister Sententiarum. lib. ij. Dist. xx. The master of sentences, writeth on this maner: Our weaknes is prone to fall into filthynes, but it is helped wt honest maryage. And the thyng that is vnto whole men an offence, is vnto sicke men a remedye. &c. 323. col. 1

Extra. lib. i de filijs presbyterum. c. Ad hac. Ex lege Papal. Thou doest aske of vs (sayth the Pope, to the Bysshoppe of Lincell) whether that these men that hath Priestes to their fathers, may bee promoted to holy orders or not, if they bee of good, and honest demeanour, and well learned. To this we aunswere (sayth the Pope) that if they bee gotten of lawfull mariage, & there be none other Canonical impediment, then may they lawfully bee promoted vnto holy orders, and may enioy that same benefice, which their fathers had before. &c. 324. col. 1

Ibidem. cap. Litteras. Also in that same title, the Pope sayth we haue vnderstanded, that N. Borne and gotten in Priesthod of a lawfull wife, hath alwayes had an affection to serue God in the office of a spirituall man. &c. 324. col. 1

Imperator Constan. lege. Omnis Pa. Ad perangariam. Codice de Epis. & cle. The Emperours law sayth of priests wyues. We will (sayth hee) that all maner of spirituall men shall haue this, prerogatiue, that their wyues, & their children, and their seruauntes, that is for to say, both male, and female, shall bee free from an homage, which is called Perangariam. 324. col. 2

Ex tripertita historia. lib. 9. cap. xxxviij. We doe reade in Tripertita Historia, these wordes: All Priests in ỹ orientall Church doth abstayne with a free will, and of no necessitie from wiues. For many of them, in tyme when they bee Bysshoppes, haue had of their lawfull wiues children. 325. col. 2

Li iiij. ca. xxij. We doe reade in Ecclesiastica Historia, that Penitus, Bysshop of a cytye called Gnoseos, would haue made a decree, that priests should haue vowed chastitie, But Dionisius Bysshop of Corinth, wrote agynst hym, and required hym, that hee would not lay no necessitie of cōpulsed chastity on other mēs neckes, Penitus, followed his counsell. 325. col. 2

Libro 5. ad Iacob. Clement sayth, we doe honour visible Images to the honour of the invisible God, the which is a false thyng: but if you will honour the Image of God in doing well to man, in him shal you honour the true Image of God. wherefore if you will truely honour ỹ Image of God, we will opē that thing vnto you that is of trueth, so that you must doe well vnto man the which is made vnto the Image of God: geue hym honour, and reuerence: geue hym meate when hee is hungrye: geue him drinke when hee is thyrsty: Cloth hym when he is naked: serue hym whē hee is sicke: geue hym lodgyng when hee is a straunger: and when hee is in prisō minister to hym necessaries. This is the thing that shall bee counted to be geuen God truely. What honor is this of God to runne about foolishly to stonye and wooddy Images, and to honour as Gods Idle and dead figures, and to despise man in whom is ỹ very true Image of God. wherefore vnderstand you that this is this the suggestion of the Serpent that lurketh within the which doth make you beleeue that you bee deuoute when you doe honour in sensible thinges. And maketh you to beleeue that you bee not wicked when you hurt sensible and reasonable men. &c. 346. col. 1

Hierome was afterward preferred aboue the statute of the Councell as it is proued. 36. q. 2. Tria, for in thinges cōcernyng the faith is the saying of a priuat persō to bee preferred before the saying of the pope, if hee haue better reasōs & scriptures of the new, & of the old Testamēt for him then ỹ Pope. Nor it can not helpe, to say that the Councell can not erre, because that Christ dyd pray for his Church that her fayth should not fayle. For I aunswere to this, that though the generall Councell doe represent the whole vniuersall Church: neuertheles in very deede there is not the very vniuersall Church, but representatiue. For the vniuersall Church standeth in the election of all faythfull men: and all faythfull men of the world make that vniuersall Churchs, whose head and spouse is Christ Jesus, and the Pope is but the Vicare of Christ and not the very head of the Churche, this is the Church that nā not erre. &c.

TUrne vnto me with all your hart and I will turne vnto you. By turnyng is ment the turnyng vpsidedowne of the hart. For if our hart bee turned thoroughly from euill vnto God, it forthwith deserueth the fruite of conuersion, that God beyng turned from wrath to mercy, may pardõ our offences, which beefore hee intended to reuẽge. Whereby it is geuen vs to vnderstand that without any confession of mouth we may bee forgeuen. By this meanes also these leppers whom the Lord willed to shew them selues to the priestes, were made whole and soũd in the way before they came to the Priestes. By which fact it is geuen vs to vnderstãd, that before we shewe our faces to the Priest, that is before we confesse our sinnes, we are clensed from the lepry of sinne. It followeth: by this also that the Lord would declare, that not by ỹ sentence of the Priest, but by the gift of diuine grace, the sinner is made cleane. He cleãsed the lepour by touching, & afterward according to the law cõmaunded him to offer sacrifice. It followeth, but before hee came to the Priest hee is clensed, whilest that by the contrition of his hart, before the confession of the mouth, remission of sinne is graunted. Therfore onely cõtrition in the which is made a renuing, taketh away sinne. Hee hath therfore his reuenour present with him, and dwellyng within hym.

I dee not say that thou shouldest confesse to thy cõpanion or felow seruaunt, who may obrayed thee: declare thẽ to God who hath regarde of them. But if thou declare them not, is God ignoraunt of them? or will hee learne them by thee? When thou dydest thẽ hee was at hãd: whẽ thou cõmittest them hee had perfect knowledge.

¶ The same Chrisostome vpon the Epistle to the Hebrues.

LEt vs therfore persuade our selues that we haue sinned, not let the toung onely pronounce it, but the inward conscience also: Neither let vs onely say that wee bee sinners, but let vs specially accompt euery singulare offence. ¶ S. Augustine lib. 10. cõfession. cap. 1.

THerfore to thee Lord am I manifestly knowen what soeuer I am, & what profiteth me then to confesse my selfe vnto thee. Neither doe I it with wordes of the flesh or with voyce, but with the wordes of my soule and with clamour of my thought which thy eare vnderstandeth. For whereas I am euill, to confesse my selfe vnto thee, is nothyng els but to mislike of my selfe. And when I am godly, to confesse me vnto thee, is nothyng els, then not to attribute the same to my selfe. Because thou Lord doest blesse the iust, but first thou doest iustifie hym beeyng wicked. My confession therfore my God, in thy sight, is made vnto thee both secretely and not secretely. For it is secret in speach, but crieth out in hart. Neither doe I say any good thyng vnto men which thou hast not first heard of me, neither thou also shalt heare any such thyng of me, which thou hast not first shewed vnto me. what therfore haue I to doe with men that they should heare my confession, as though they should heale all my sorowes & griefes, who commonly are wont to bee curious to know an other mans lyfe, and slow to amende their owne. Why demaũd they of me to heare what I am, which will not heare of thee who they them selues are? And how know they that they heare of me to bee true? Forasmuch as no man knoweth what is done in man, but the spirite of mã that is in man.

¶ De Pœnitentia Distinc. 1. Cap. Quinatus.

FOrasmuch therfore (as it is proued) that before our confession wee are quickened by grace and made the children of light, it manifestly appeareth that onely by the contrition of the hart without confession of the mouth sinne is remitted.

¶ In the same place. Cap. Omnes qui.

THerfore confession is made for the vtteraunce, and not for obraynyng of pardon. And euen as Circumcision was geuẽ to Abraham as a signe of iustice and not as the cause of iustificatiõ: So the confession to the Priest is offered as a signe of pardon already had, and not as a cause of remission to bee receaued.

S. Chrisostome Tomo 6. Sermone de confessione.

Auricular confession is not necessary to saluation.

BVt now is it not necessary that our sinnes should bee confessed before witnesses. Let thy offences be searched out in thy inward thought, and let that shewyng bee without a witnesse, and let God onely heare thy cõfession. S. Ierome vpon Math. 16.

Is not this offensiue to godly eares: slaunderous, seditious, and contumelious agaynst our fathers of the Churche? what is a reproche if thys bee not? To the fire to the fire with hym, without any farther hearyng, for wee must not dispute with heretickes.

TO thee I will geue the keys &c. This place the Bysshops & Priestes not vnderstandyng, doe arrogate vnto thẽ selues some thyng of the Pharisees pride: forasmuch as they thinke they may condemne innocentes, & release sinners: where as beefore God the sentẽce of the priestes is not regarded, but the lyfe of the offenders is considered. We read in Leuiticus of the lepers, where as they are willed to shew them selues to the Priestes. And if they had the lepry then by ỹ priest were they made vncleane: not that the Priestes did make men lepers & vncleane, but because they had the knowledge who were lepours, & who were not, and could discerne who were cleane, and who were vncleane. Lyke as therfore the Priests dyd there make the lepour cleane, or vncleane: so doth our Bysshop or Priest loose, or bynd, not those which bee sinnefull or innocent, but accordyng to his office, when hee hath heard the varieties of the sinnes, hee knoweth who is to bee bound, and who is to bee loosed.

IT was therefore truely sayd to Peter. Thou art Peter. &c. Notwithstandyng it semeth to bee sayd also to all the Apostles, and to all perfect faythfull men, because they bee all Peters & rockes and vppon them all is the Church of Christ builded, & agaynst no one of those that bee such, shall the gates of hell preuayle. Notwithstandyng by that which foloweth let vs see farther. Doest thou thinke that to Peter onely were geuen the keyes of the kingdome of heauẽ? and shall no other of the blessed Saintes receaue them? If it be cõmon to all, that was sayd, I will geeue thee the keyes, why should not all that was referred to Peter before, seeme to bee common to all the Apostles. For in the Gospell of S. Iohn Iesus geuyng the holy Ghost to his Disciples by breathyng, sayd these wordes, Receaue the holy ghost. &c. as though hee said it to all such so affectionated as Peter was. For all which bee folowers of Christ in like maner are named rockes Thou art Peter &c. But because they which do chalẽge the place of a bysshop doe vse this text as Peter dyd, & teach vs that they haue receaued the keyes of the kyngdome of heauẽ from Christ, because that who soeuer bee bound by them, they bee bound in heauen also, & they which bee loosed by thẽ, ỹ is, haue receaued remission of their sinnes, bee loosed in heauen also: we must say that they say well, if they haue those good workes for the which it was sayd vnto Peter, Thou art Peter: and if they bee such as Peter was, that on them may bee builded the Church of Christ, if the gates of hell shall not preuayle agaynst thẽ. Otherwise it is a vayne iest to say, that he which is tyed with the bondes of sinnes, and draweth his sinnes after hym as a long rope, and his iniquities be as the hoofes of a calfe, for that onely, that hee is a called Bysshop should haue such power, that they which bee loosed of hym, bee also loosed in heauen, or who so bee bounde in earth by hym, bee bounde also in heauen. Let the Bysshoppe therefore whiche doth bind, or loose an other man, bee irreprehensible him selfe. Hee that is worthy to bynd or lose in heauen, must bee the husband of one wife, sober, chast, comely apparelled, a louer of hospitalitie, apt to teach, not geuẽ to ouer much wyne, no striker, nor greedy of filthy lukre, but gentle, no quareller, abhorryng couetousnes, one that ruleth well his owne house, hauyng children in subiection, in all chastitie. If hee bee such a one hee shall not vniustly bynde vpon earth, neither shall hee lose without good aduisement. For if there shall bee ¶ Tripartita historia lib. 9. cap. 35. Verba Sozemeni.

BEcause it is knowen to bee a diuine thyng and aboue mās nature neuer to sinne, God commaunded remission to bee geuen to sinners that doe repēt. But they which refuse to acknowlege their sinnes, they heape vnto thē selues a greater burthen of sinnes. wherfore it seemed good to the aūciēt Bysshops, that as it were vpon a stage vnder the testimony of the Ecclesiasticall people their sinnes should be opened. And for this purpose they appoynted a Priest of good conuersation, a wise man, and a keeper of secretes, vnto whom they commyng that had offended confessed their owne sinnes. But hee accordyng to euery mās offence assigned a penaltie. which custome also hitherunto is obserued in the Weasterne Churches & especially at Rome, where there is also a certaine place appointed for repentaunt sinners. For the offenders stand amongest the penitētes and mourners. For when as the holy celebration is a doyng, they not participatyng the communion, prostrate them selues vppon the earth with mournyng and lamentation, vnto whō the Bysshop repayring, hee also prostrateth him selfe with spirituall teares and groneyng, and all the common multitude in the Church fall on weeping. After this, first ariseth the Bysshop and taketh vp those which lay on the ground. Thē when hee hath competently prayed for them whiche haue repented, hee demisseth them all. But they of there owne accorde afflictyng them selues, either with fastyng, or abstinence from washyng, or forbearyng of meates, or by other like things which they bee commaūded, doe looke for the generall day which the Bysshop assigneth. The tyme beyng appoynted and they hauyng as it were fulfilled certaine dutyes and tendred the penaltie for their sinne, then are they admitted to communicate with the people. And this custome, the aūciens bysshops of Rome haue obserued euen vntil our dayes. Moreouer at Constantinople there was a minister appoynted to attend vpon the penitēt vntill that time, that a certaine noble woman, when she had confessed her sinnes, and the minister had cōmaūded her that she should fast and praye vnto God with good workes, when she had this obserued, she confessed that she had often tymes leyen with the Deacon. when the people vnderstoode this they raged at the Priestes as though they had beene iniurious to the Church. Then Nectarius the Bishop remoued the wicked Deacon, and certaine persuadyng him, that hee would leaue free for euery mans conscience to communicate when they thought good, appoynted no more any Deacon to attend on the penitēts. And from that tyme, that auncient custome was taken away. when as I thinke lesse offences were committed for the shame of confession and the subtill examination.

Here you haue the originall of your secret confession whiche the Church of God knew not by the space of 300. yeares I say not this as vtterly condemning it: yea rather as approuyng it: but I doe teach it not to bee necessary to our saluation.

For we haue the tyme of Lent cōſecrated to faſting, and we haue the fourth, and the ſixth ferye of the weeke, in the whiche we doe ſolemnlye faſt. But Chriſtians

haue libertie to fast at any time, not by superstitious obseruances, but by the vertue of continencie.

¶ De consecra, distinc. 5. Cap. Ieiunium

THe great and generall fast is to abstaine from iniquities, and from vnlawfull pleasures of ỹ worlde, which is the perfect fast in this worlde &c.

¶ Athana. vpon S. Paules Epist. to the Hebru. Cap. 13.

IT is good that the hart be stablished with grace, and not with meates, &c. Hee reprehendeth those which brought in the iudaicall abstinence, and obseruance of meates. For you (sayth hee) are to be stablished by fayth, and to bee certified that nothing is vncleane, and that to the beleeuing all thing is pure. Therefore this fayth, and not the obseruaunce of meates is necessary. For they whiche haue sinned through meates, ỹ is, which be alwayes busyed in such obseruances of meates, it is manyfest that these haue nothing profited, &c.

That the vniust excommunication of the Pope doth not hurt the excommunicated: translated into Englishe, out of his booke, De docto sent.

¶ 11 Queest. 3. Cap. Illud plane.

THey sayd not that without good aduisement, that if any of the faythfull shall be vniustly excommunicated, it shall be rather hurtfull vnto him that doth, then to him that suffereth the iniury. For the holy ghost dwelling in the saintes, by whome euery man is bounde or loosed, doth punish no man wrongfullye, for by him is loue poured into our harts, which doth not amisse. The peace of ỹ Church forgeueth sins: & can hee that is out of the peace of the church, detaine his sinnes? Not according to the sentence of men, but according to the will of God, the lock retaineth sinnes, and the rocke remytteth thē. The doue retaineth, & the doue forgeueth. In like maner sayth Salomon euen as a bird flying to an vncertayne place, and as any sparow flying in the ayer, so a curse in vayne cast out, commeth on him, who sent it. Prou. 26.

¶ In the same place, Verba Augustini cap. qui

HEe that is iust, and is vniustly cursed, ỹ him is it turned for a reward

¶ In the same place. Cap. Cui est illata. Gela.

OF whome sentence is geuen, let him geue ouer his errour, and it is voyded: but if the iudgment bee vniust, for so much hee needs not to care, for as much as before God, and in his church wrongfull iudgment can hurt no man. Therfore let hym not desyer to be absolued of that, whereby hee perswadeth hym selfe to bee nothing bounde.

¶ In the same place. Cap. Cepisti. Verba Aug.

THou hast vndertaken to accompt thy brother as a publicā, or infidel and thou bindest him on earth: but see that thou binde hym iustly, for iustice will breake vnlawfull bondes.

¶ In the same place, Cap. Temerarium iudicium, Verba Augustini.

RAshe iudgment for the most part neuer hurteth him which is rashlye iudged: but to him that iudgeth rashly, his rashnes must needes bee hurtfull.

¶ In the same place. Cap. Quid. Verb. Aug.

WHat harme is it to a mā, though humane ignorāce doth blot him out of that table, if his wicked conscience do not blot him out of the booke of life?

¶ In the same place. Cap. Et si. Verba Aug.

ALthough for a time thou bee condemned of a man, and the procon sull hath geuen iudgmēt vpon Ciprian, thy earthly seate is one thing, the heauenly iudgmēt seate is an other: from the inferiour seat he hath receiued iudgment, from the superiour, he receiueth a crowne.

So ye do here condemne those for heretickes whō Christe crowneth for saintes.

¶ 11. Queest. 3. Cap. Custodi. Verba Augusti.

KEepe thy innocencye secret vnto thy selfe, when no man doth oppresse thy cause: false witnesse shall preuayle agaynst thee, but that onely with men: for shall it bee of any force before God, where thy cause is to bee heard? when as God shall bee the iudge, then shall bee no other witnesse then thy conscience, betweene the iust iudge and thy thy conscience: therefore feare nothing but thy owne cause.

¶ 24 Queest. 3 Cap. Si quis. Verba Hieronimi.

IF any man bee excōmunicated with vnrighteous iudgment of thē which bee rulers of the Church, if hee before hath not gone out thereof, that is if hee hath not so done that deserued to be excommunicated, he is nothing hurt in that hee seemeth to bee expelled of men by vniust iudgment: and so commeth it to passe that sometime hee which is cast out, is within, & hee is without which seemeth to bee kept within.

¶ 24. Quest. 3 Cap. Non in verba Rabbani.

WE are not perpetually damned when as we are vniustly iudged according to the saying of Dauid, Neither shall hee damne him when hee is iudged. Many of the Priestes doe professe, ỹ they persecuted a faulte of a zeale to Godward: but whilest that this is vndiscretly done, they incurre the wickednes of sacrilege & whilest they rūne hedlonge to amend others, they themselues doe also much rather fall into a worser mischiefe.

☞ In the same place, Cap. Cum aliquis. Verba Origē.

And you onely cast out ỹ faithfull, and beleeuyng: but whoremongers, and adulterers you blesse. For if you should cast out all thē, your church would bee but small.

WHen as any man doth goe out from the trueth, from the feare of God, from fayth, and from charity, hee goeth out of the tentes of ỹ Church, although by the sentence of the Bishop, hee bee not cast out. So contrary wise one is with vniust iudgment cast forth, if before hee hath not gone out of him selfe, that is if hee haue not by hys doeing deserued to goe forth, hee is no thing at all harmed. For sometime hee that is cast forth is within, and hee that is without, it semeth that he is within.

☞ The councell of Meldens 11. Questi. Cap. Nemo Episcoporum.

LEt no Bishop (without certaine, and manifest cause first knowen) forbid any man the ecclesiasticall communion. And let no man accurse anye one, without the knowledge of ỹ Arch bishop, or Bishops, but so farre as the Canon auctoritye doth teache, because a curse is eternall damnation of death, and it ought to bee enioyned, but onely for a deadly sinne, and vpon those which could not otherwise bee amended.

¶Cum gratia & Priuilegio Regiæ Maiestatis.

A liuely picture deſcribyng the authoritie and ſubſtaunce of Gods moſt bleſſed word, veyghing agaynſt Popiſh traditions.

How light is chaffe of Popiſh toyes, if thou deſire to trye, Loe Iuſtice holdes true beame without reſpect of partiall eye:
One ballance holdes Gods holy word, and on the other parte,
Is layde the dregs of Antichriſt, deuiſde by Popiſh arte:
Let Friers and Nunnes and baldpate Prieſtes, with triple crowne of Pope,
The Cardinals hatt, and deuill him ſelfe, by force plucke downe the rope:
Bryng bell, booke, candle, croſſe, & beades, and mitred Baſan bull, Bryng buls of leade and Popes Decrees, the ballance downe to pull:
Yet ſhall theſe tares and filthy dregs, inuented by mans brayne,
Through force of Gods moſt mighty word, be foũd both light and vayne.

Magna eſt Veritas & prtualet, Great is the trueth and preuayleth. 3. Eſdra. 4.
